BENNY GOODMAN ? ?

TUESDAY evening 8:30 P. M. Columbia Broadcasting System:

"Good-evening, students.

Our "killer-diller" of the evening is the Internationale.

Our special guest of the evening is that prince of "jitterbugs," Earl Browder.

"Swing it, Brody."

"Arise ye members of starvation,

Arise ye wretched of the earth," . . .

"Well students that was Earl Browder who came up to collect the proceeds of the program for the support of the Loyalist cause in Spain."

"Thanks to you, Camels."

In Washington, D. C. the other week the society leeches "beat it out" to the tune of several thousand dollars when Benny played there and donated the proceeds to the Communistic cause in Spain.

Ben, the congenial professor, donated the proceeds of that affair for the Loyalist to continue blood-letting of a losing battle. How much did Ben give to the cause when he was guest of Philadelphia not so many weeks ago? Did the thousands of school kids who "dipsey-doodled" in the aisles pay to kill similar young people who are fighting on the fronts in Spain? How much has he contributed throughout the course of the war? How much has he given to the Communistic organization in this country?

ODDS and ENDS

By Rene Cailliet

ONCE again at the keys of a weary typewriter, with tears in my eyes as the year is drawing to a close and final exams are rearing their ugly heads over the horizon.

Congratulations are again in order but this time they belong to an ever-ready group of "friends" that came through by writing this column last week and were very successful in reviving the old pan.

Very noticeable beside the beefing concerning coming exams is Buzz "Broken" Hart claiming that he and a certain Germantown female have come to a parting of the ways. Have you told her yet Buzz?

The woman situation is even more involved when we are informed that a certain ex-columnist for the VILLANOVAN is slowly but surely being replaced at Rosemont by a local boy. Also Toby Greco is getting technical again.

Lost: All the cars parked last week on the campus. Twenty four hour service to have tickets fixed. See Ginny.

Five stars given to "Winterset" for a professional performance. Too bad not more students saw the rain fall on the stage.

As this is the last column of the year and the last attempt of this writer for many years lets take a turn to the serious.

Throughout four years of a college man's life—many things crop up which provoke his dissatisfaction and cause him to find fault with the surrounding elements. When graduation day comes around these unpleasant memories give way to the many happy hours spent on the campus. What little faults he may have found are greatly overshadowed by the warmth of the friendships he has gained and by the irreplaceable fun he has had at the social functions. The wealth of his classroom training remains with him all through his life.

These things are lost in the introvert hustle bustle of the underclassmen, but remember that the four years spent at Villanova will remain as the best part of your life. College life is what you make it, so play your little game here in a way that when the sheepskin is tacked to the wall it will cause not a bad taste, but a smile covering an empty spot in your heart.

PHILADELPHIA'S WFIL had arranged last week with local light promoters to air a spelling bee between five boxers and five wrestlers.

Shortly before broadcast time all of the boys had assembled in one of the studio rooms. A little spelling practice was tried. Almost immediately there was an argument as to the spelling of a certain word, and the boys began to settle it in their customary way.

Net result was three swollen jaws, two of the boys in the hospital, the program called off.

Gene Krupa came to town last week and really "went to town" at Phila's Arcadia.

Gene has surrounded himself with some very able instrumentalists, especially in the light saxes and brass departments, and though his renditions need a little tightening yet, his band is top-notch.

Two steals from Goodman help much. They are Vito Musso, tenor sax, and Willard Mundy, former Goodman arranger.

..Those little tom-toms erected on the top of every musicians' stand are very appropriate. On some numbers, notably "Blue Rythm Fantasy" the entire band use them together.

Krupa's business manager, Music Corp. of America, is demanding, and getting (with plenty of kicking) $300, for one nighters for his band, and up to $600. from promoters and operators.

How long he can hold up physically under the present pace he is setting should cause Krupa some worry. He has to maintain grueling rate now that he is the show, and not alternating with others.

Reason why Rene Cailliet announced that Gene Krupa would be at the Arcadia last Friday when the Juniors held their Dinner-Dance, now known!

Rene knew that Krupa would start at the Arcadia on May 7th. May 7th was Saturday, a day after the dinner dance, but Rene couldn't be expected to know that. He is still operating on last year's calendar, when the 7th fell on Friday.

Pix of the week is "Adventures of Robin Hood" with Olivia de Havilland and Earle Flynn. Now at Phila's Stanley. Don't miss it!

Universal will depict four years of college life in coming pix entitled: "Freshman Year," "Sophomore Year," "Junior Year," and "Senior Year." Same lead actors will be used in each.

Clark Gable, in "It happened One Night," had an effect on New York bus trade, it is claimed, increasing business 40 per cent. This picture also apparently had an effect on another business, an adverse effect.

In one scene of the picture Gable removes his shirt, exposing his manly torso, sans an undershirt. The sale of under-shirts in New York where the pix was first shown, dropped off to such an extent that manufacturers went to Columbia and asked that the scene be deleted.

W. C. Fields has parted company with Paramount. His contract, calling for one more picture, has been mutually terminated.

Claimed that W. C. had been feuding with the studio over the story content of his proposed pix "Mr. Bumpus Goes To Town." He will probably free-lance.

Paul Whiteman, dissatisfied with the efforts of his business manager, Consolidated Radio Artists, Inc.; in digging up radio business for his band, set out himself and signed up Chesterfield to his present program. Paul has now out himself away from CRA management.

WFIL, by quick thinking on the part of an engineer, saved itself last Tuesday from charges of political skull-duggery.

Out-let was airing a speech by Margiotti, Governor Candidate, when a transformer blew out at its trans-mitter and station went off the air. (As noted in this column last week, WFIL is erecting a new transmitter. The old one is probably pretty well on its last legs, with no repairs being made in view of the new "mitter" to be placed in use next month).

..Margotti's address was also being aired by WIP at the time. An engineer hurriedly switched the reception from WIP into a studio recording machine.

Later, when it returned to the air, WFIL continued the speech, by using the recording.

More Phila. News. Theatre business has dropped about 30 percent lately. Operators blame it on ban of games, so-so crop of pix, daylight saving, and ban of double features. This territory and Washington are the only two in the country that have held to a one feature policy. Independents run double features in both cities . . . Leith Stevens and band (Villanova Senior Prom) at the Earle this week . . . Circus comes to town next Monday—more headaches for the theatre owners . . . WDAS announced this week that since no one is interested in hearing the Phila. WELL, with exams started, senior seeing their finished theses accepted by the faculty, and the freshmen beginning to feel important, we end another school year. Yes, it has gone by fast. Many things have been done, but as we look back over the past year we have to admit that we have let many opportunities slip by.

As we look back at last September, we remember that we made quite a few resolutions. One went after the first month of school: that was when we cut a language class. In November, we let our studies go to the night before the exams. We knew it was wrong, but it was easier . . . then.

When New Year's came around, of course, we made the usual set of pious resolutions: (1) less smoking (never kept that); (2) cut down on the drinking (broke that in February); (3) Attend Mass daily (broke that during examination week); (4) Study (never did keep that very well).

We made others, and broke them all. We had chances to our for extra-curricular activities, but quit after the first few tries. Then, the curse of college life, we spent the evenings playing poker or just "shooting the bull."

Sure, we got a lot of extra knowledge out of it at that time, but did it make any difference? Did it improve our character?

Did we get full benefit out of our courses by discussing wine, women and politics? Were the movies so important that we had to talk about them during study hours? Did we get the full benefit from the facilities offered here? Did we really get our parents' money's worth out of our year here?

Give that a thought and we'll all find we missed something . . . many things.

Now is the time to prepare for next year. Bear down so that we can be sure we'll go through next year with flying colors.

We hear that Jack Eldracher picked up a few grammar school girls. Leave the cradle alone, Jack. You ought to be able to do better than that.

From those who went to the Mount or Immaculata last Friday, we hear that that lovely moon which we saw coming up over Austin Hall was eclipsed by four-thirty A. M. Saturday morning.

Too bad, boys. I guesss that did cramp your style. Here we have a nice full moon for after the dance . . . and then what do we find? By some freak of nature, the very night on which we are going to the Prom there is an eclipse to add to the distraction.

But more than the moon was eclipsed.

What about it, Pete Mackin?

There is one consolation. Those who saw thes eclipse (we do not mention Pete) thought that to be more romantic than just the moon alone. Seems to me that it would spoil the evening to have the moon show up with a chip on its shoulder.

Along the same line, the old "Friday the Thirteenth" jinx was proven to those who wish to believe in it.

Jerry Livingston, "the talk of the town," had a flat tire on the way over to the Mount last Friday evening. Not daunted, Jerry and his friends continued bravely on to their destination (Boy, that's high). Just as Jerry got out of the car, at the Mount, Bingo! he slipped, fell, and was carried away to the hospital.

Tough luck on the girls! Maybe they aren't supposed to have even a middle rate name band. Try the Villanovans next time.

Note: The Belle Air for 1938 has some interesting sidelights.

On page 222, upper right hand corner, we find a notable of the College. I heard that this picture was taken at a party. Am I right, Mr. Cooke? As the party was in the mid-Winter, I doubt if they were just flies that Charles was catching.

Also on page 222: second picture on the top of the page. Some of the Frosh are rather hurt. They say that their class pride has been injured. That is an orderly desk in Mendel, not Fediganite. Who ever heard of a Fediganite even buying that many books, let alone keeping the desk orderly.

Page 223: a miracle has happened! I have always thought of "Loole" as a hand reaching out to receive. For once we see "Loole" handing out something.

Page 111: Here we find our two enterprising business men, Cadran and Mackin. I wonder if they were the sweet innocent Freshmen as they appear to be. Personally, I'd say they need wings to fly away.

Hi, Pete! Hi, Franny!

Dr. Hartman in class the other day announced to all those eager little Freshmen who cluster at his knees that he could tell the difference between Carlton J. H. Hayes' writing and theirs.

It seems as though Dr. Hartman says he would rather have a book by Carlton J. H. Hayes and know exactly what the statement was rather than read it on a term paper without quotation marks or notes. What's the matter, Doc, don't you think the fellows here can read straight?

As a personal favor to Pete Mackin, I promised to announce that several of his "customers" still owe Pete for the beautiful gardenias, tea roses, etc., that touched the lady friend's heart last year.

What about it fellows? Why not give him a break? There are too many pages in his credit book.

Let's all start the money rolling in the right direction.

(Pete: I ought to get a commission for this. The Observer.)

FLASH: A special bulletin came in just as we were going to press that the Lower Merion Township police wear special shoes to keep them from getting flat feet. You can't call those flat-foots "flatfoot." Along with that flash came another to the effect that there is a new nickname for Joe Pagano. We were tempted to put it in this issue, but we're saving it for a scoop for the first issue next year. Even Joe hasn't heard it yet. Have a nice Summer. So long.

Introducing—

JOSEPH J. TOLAND

By JOHN L. SIMONS

It was a lucky day for Villanova College and in particular for the class of 1938 when Joe Toland entered this illustrious institution of learning. For in the four years he has spent here at Villanova College Joe has done perhaps more than anyone else to advance the class and the school. Always a booster, always a loyal supporter and hard worker, he has been active in many activities and the leader in most of them.

Won Many Friends

In his four years' stay Joe has won many friends on the campus, and is one of the most popular men in the College. Because he has ideals and lives up to them, there are some "sophiticate" gentlemen who think him too 'strait-laced." Yet most of the boys value his friendship highly and will long remember him as a true and unselfish friend whom it was a privilege to know and be associated with.

Joseph James John Toland, 3rd, was born in Philadelphia on May 5, 1916. He grew up in that section of Philadelphia known as Frankford and went to St. Joachim's School there for one year.

At the tender age of seven years Joe began his boarding school education, when he was registered as a second grade pupil at Waldron Academy in nearby Narberth. Under the careful guidance of the good Sisters Joe grew up, gaining in strength and knowledge and at the same time developing an appetite for food that is the talk and envy of the campus. (Joe says there are only two things he won't eat: sweet potatoes and cucumbers.)

In September of 1930 Joe left the sheltered walls of Waldron to go to Northeast Catholic High School in Philly. In this school, which has a student body of over two thousand, Joe was very outstanding and is always regarded by the powers that be at Northeast Catholic as one of the most illustrious alumni of that school.

Entered Dramatics

During his high school days Joe ranked exceptionally high in his studies, finishing in the first ten in a class of 368. In addition he was at the time the best actor at the Falcon institution and the hit of every show.

From his very first days at Villanova Joe has been active in extra-curricular activities. He became a candidate for the college staff of the VILLANOVAN and soon gained a permanent position on the staff. During the freshman year also he became a cheer leader. The Student Council, the Catholic Press Apostolate, the Belle Air, the Mendel Bulletin, the Glee Club, and the Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity are some of the many other activities in which he engaged.

By the time the Junior year rolled around Joe had worked himself up to the unofficial post of Maloney's chief assistant. Late that year he took over the office of the Editor-in-Chief, and he was one of the best editors the VILLANOVAN ever had. His ability is shown by the fact that the VILLANOVAN rated 19th in the country's list of over 500 college newspaper. His efforts were recognized and rewarded recently when he was elected vice president of the Catholic College Press Association.

Summer's at Camp

Ever since his grammar school days Joe has spent his Summers in White Mountain Camp in Maine. There as the years went by he developed a hobby and an art. His hobby was the training of young boys, in which work he is now as a Camp Counsellor in the Summer. And the art was the dramatic narration of Villanova's best ghost stories. Joe's tales in a darkened room have roused the most phlegmatic and blase Villanovans.

Socially he has been active, a very engaging personality and an interesting line of chatter, coupled with his handsome physiognomy and curdly brown hair long ago established him as a favorite with the young ladies. But during the past couple of years Joe has centered his attentions on one of Misericordia Hospital's most charming and lovely nurses. Leave it to Joe to pick out a nurse, and he has made a most excellent choice.

It is Joe's ambition to be a doctor, and as he goes on to Temple to study medicine we know he will be successful. And with that rare combination of a keen brain, a pleasing personality, and a fine set of high ideals we know that Joe will not only be successful, but that he will make this world a very much better place to live in.

at 2 o'clock that afternoon. After the processional march and the invocation John L. Simons, senior engineer, will make his valedictory address. Simons was recently recipient of eight honor awards conferred by the college on deserving students.

Several orchestral selections will be presented between the address to the graduates and the awarding of the medals. Of course, the Recessional will close the exercises but only after the benediction has been given.

Hon. Judge Matthews is a graduate of St. Charles' College of the class of 1901, and received his Ph. D. degree from the St. John's Philosophy House, Boston, Mass., in 1903, and his LL. B. degree in 1911 from the New Jersey Law School. He was appointed to the New Jersey Legislature in 1913 and is a prominent member of the American, the New Jersey State, and the Essex County Bar Associations.

After having been graduated from the Jefferson Medical College in 1912, Dr. Clerf, the other recipient of an honorary degree, later was commissioned in the U. S. Navy and specialized in ear, nose, and throat work. In addition to being an excellent teacher and an ardent student of research, he has materially aided in the publication of several text books dealing with his chosen field and has written ninety monographs and papers on bronchoscopy.

PLANS FORMULATED FOR HUMPHREY FUND

Memorial Honoring Late Dean Will Be Effective Next Year

At its final meeting held last week, the Phi Kappa Pi, under the chairmanship of Anthony J. Cirrito, junior in the School of Technology, announced plans to sponsor a scholarship fund in honor of the late Carl Thomas Humphrey, deceased Dean of the School of Engineering, as an appreciation for his many years of splendid work at the College.

Through the efforts of Joseph J. Quinn, who was appointed chairman of the contact committee, it is expected that the Humphrey scholarship will be effective next year. At present it is undecided as to the procedure that will be followed in selecting participants for this erudition.

Funds will be raised among the alumni and a partial contribution is expected from the proceeds of the 1938-1939 Owl Hop. The departing seniors have agreed to forward the remainder of their breakage fee as a token of their appreciation to the late Dean.

The motion was introduced several weeks ago by James P. Skelly who preceded Cirrito as president of the fraternity. Because of this movement, the Phi Kappa Pi of this year hopes to surpass the fine example set by the preceding yearly chapters as one of the leading organizations on the Villanovan campus.

Orientation Group Plans to Reorganize

why such a step toward reorganization was considered advantageous is that the committees of the past, while progressive, were not rapidly enough approaching the objectives and the ideals set up for them. It was therefore deemed advisable to solicit the co-operation of the more mature upper-classes. This can be achieved through the representation of the various classes on the Council.

"On the basis of these considerations it was determined at a meeting of the Student Council that the Orientation Committee of the future will be composed of a committee of 15 selected members of the Sophomore Class, including the class officers, and the entire membership of the Student Council. The Chairman of the Orientation Committee shall be the Vice-Chairman of the Student Council. The Vice-Chairman of the Committee will be a Sophomore and will be elected or appointed by the Sophomore representation on the Committee. The offices of Secretary and Treasurer will be held by those respective officers of the Sophomore Class."

In the ballots for secretary, nominees were Leo Bicher, Technology; James O'Brien, Commerce and Finance; and secretary-elect Hoil, O'Brien, running for re-election, has held the secretary post for the past two years.

Only one candidate was nominated to oppose Laskin in the election for treasurer, James P. Tofani, Commerce and Finance student, was defeated by his opposing classmate in a close ballot.

Belle Masque Dramatists Render Realistic "Winterset" Performance

With the staging of "Winterset" the Belle Masque players reached a new peak in college dramatics. It seemed incredible that a group with such limited stage experience could present as heavy a play with such gratifying results.

Much of the credit for its successful performance must go to Anthony J. Frayne, Villanova faculty member, who is the director of Belle Masque. Bits of humor which he wrote into the play made it an even more enjoyable entertainment.

Anita Argentieri, Rita Wolfington and Marion O'Brien, of Rosemont College, were of immeasurable value as Miriamme, Dolly, and Molly, respectively. Their portrayal of these characters was of an excellence seldom seen on college stages.

As Judge Gaunt, John Donohue's performance was outstanding. He had all the scholarly reserve of a judge and depicted well the unbalance of a fine mind tortured by the besmirching of an honored name. As Mio, Thomas Haynes was all that could be desired.

To the character of the "Hobo," James Lyons gave a clever interpretation as the scheming halfwit who saw much but kept his mouth suht. Robert Wilderotter and Rober O'Brien gave realism to Shadow, the slow-spoken gunman, and Trock, the dying, revengeful gang leader.

Ralph Floretti, Joseph Pancheri, Italo de Bartolomeis, and Edward Lucente were clever and amusing as the street music-makers.

Murray Zealor gave a sympathetic portrayal of the weak-willed, cowardly Garth

Prepsters Break Records At Villanova Saturday

Ambler Wins in Class A; West Catholic Rallies For Class B Honors; De La Salle Overtakes La Salle High to Gain Class C Laurels

MAHER IS VICTORIOUS IN FEATURE RUN

By HARRY MAZZEI

Despite an incessant downpour that continued all afternoon, Villanova's 11th annual interscholastic track and field meet was run last Saturday on the Main Line Field before a rain curtailed crowd of about 150. After five hours of competition had been contested, the winning teams were Ambler in Class A, West Catholic in Class B, and De La Salle of New York in Class C.

Ambler Wins Two Firsts

Ambler's victorious silksters recorded 39 points on firsts in the pole vault and broad jump, seconds in the mile and 440, and a second and third in the 100. Closest to the victorious Ambler team was Upper Darby who registered 34 markers. Ridley Park was third with 25. In the Class B division West Catholic, the national Catholic track champions, finished with a rush to amass 46 points to beat out South Philadelphia for first place by three points. In the Class C division the La Salle Military runners fell before De La Salle Prep's team, 39-36.

Irregardless of the inclement weather and inundated field, some very fine schoolboy performances were turned in. Three previous records were broken and one was tied. The first record to go by the boards was the Class C mile, when Howie Meel, of Collingdale, turned on the heat and ran the four quar-

Dwyer Loses Second Match; Murcko Comes Through With Win

Fordham University put the finishing touches on a disasterous golf season by trouncing the local linksmen for the second time of the current campaign by a margin of 6-3. The match was played at the Radnor Country Club, Friday afternoon.

For the second time in two years of competition, Captain Jimmy Dwyer lost a singles match. The defeat was sustained at the hands of Art Conaty by a score of 2 and 1.

Dubino, Murcko Win

Villanova victories were turned in by Lou Dubino who won from Kelly 2 and 1 and by Fred Mucko, sensational freshman golfer, who outpointed Jack Burke by scores of 5 and 4.

Charlie Roche, playing his first match since the midseazon tilt with St. Joseph's, was defeated by Leo Tulley, 7 and 6. In the previous match with the Rams, Tulley undefeated at the No. 1 post, lost to Jim Dwyer.

Other losses were recorded by Jack Egan who bowed to Joe Mikita of the visitors, 4 and 3. Cliff Randolph dropped his match to Fordham's Grady, 1 up.

BLUE RACQUETMEN DEFEAT SETON HALL FOR SIXTH VICTORY

Rappleyea, Dunne Turn in Sensational Wins for Villanova

MEET RIDER HOME, FRIDAY

Seton Hall's netmen proved no match for Villanova's court team at South Orange, N. J., on Saturday, as they went down to the tune of 6-3.

Sixth Win of Season

The victory was the sixth of the current campaign for the locals, who displayed a well balanced team despite the absence of several veterans. Rappleyea and Dunne were the standouts for Villanova. Each triumphed in singles matches and then returned to pair in the doubles. They defeated Sullivan and Little, 6-0, 3-6, 6-3.

In other matches, Harry McGrath, playing his first singles of the year for the varsity, turned in a 6-4, 7-5 victory over Dempsey of Seton Hall, while Ed Bannagan, playing number one, lost a close one to Sullivan, Seton Hall's captain, 6-4, 8-6. Da Costa and Wallach turned in other Villanova wins.

Lose to Rams in Exhibition

In an exhibition match on Fordham's courts Friday afternoon, Villanova lost to a well balanced Fordham varsity, 5-4. The absence of Weinfeld, Schermerhorn, Wellenbach, Coueart and Leary was sorely felt as the formidable New Yorkers took four of the singles and one of the doubles to obtain the decision.

Rappleyea and Dunne were the lone victors for Villanova in the singles, Dunne defeating Barth, 6-3, 6-1, and Rappleyea winning over Johnson in a thriller, 2-6, 8-6, 7-5. In the doubles Wallach and Da Costa defeated Owens and Dean, 6-4, 6-3, while Dunne and Rappleyea were topping Fordham's Johnson and Hogan.

Big Jim Schelle overpowered Dickinson on Wednesday, setting the visitors down with a two-hit shutout to win 5-0, while Cliff (K. O.) Choquette portsided Boston College to a 6-3 defeat Friday.

Cats Have Big Fifth

Two safeties, one a single, the other a double, were all that Shcelle allowed in the mid-week encounter, while the Cat batters went wild in the fifth to score all of their runs on four hits and a walk. Bobby Pash strolled to open this canto for the Cats ,and Schelle surprised everyone by banging a curve into right for a single, Leadoff man Crowley then singled, scoring Pash and advancing Schelle to third. Lenny Merullo picked on one of Bernie Keating's offerings for a triple to center, and came home when Captain Ray Stoviak dropped another three-bagger in the same place. Lou Wannemacher's deep fly to left scored Stoviak with the fifth and final run for the Blue.

Schelle was in trouble only twice, and on each of these occasion the Villanova infield helped him out of it with a double play. In the fifth,

ALUMNI WEEK CARD FEATURES OWL TILT

Wildcats Seek to Revenge Previous Cherry and White Defeat

On Saturday, June 4, the Villanova tossers will engage the highly touted Temple aggregation on the Main Liners' field. This game will be played as one of the features of the current Alumni week and is expected to arouse the traditional rivalry which has existed between the two institutions since relations in sports were inaugurated.

Since the Temple ball flingers have been successful in topping the Blue on one occasion this season, the 'Cats are pointing for the coming engagement. "Doc" Jacobs, their able coach, has turned the club into fine shape and it will be up to the players themselves to see to it that the Templers are subdued.

Although the Blue are pointed for this victory partially to avenge the past defeat and also to make a good showing for their coach and themselves under the watchful eyes of the Alumni, the Temple squad should not be taken lightly. In their ranks we find such illustrious stars as Jack Williams, the man who beat the home team in the previous battle, George Nemchik, Nick Mottola, and their hitting pitcher, Vince Kadanay, who are all consistent sluggers. A great battle may be looked forward to by the members of the alumni and all others who may be in attendance,

Sportorial

By JOE PAGANO

SINCE this is the last issue of the Villanovan this semester, we believe that it is fitting for us to pay a tribute to all those men who have engaged in athletic endeavors for the past year at Villanova College. We can say very little, here, that would add to the glory and recognition that they have earned for themselves during their college careers. However, we want those members of the graduating class to know that we hope that greater success is waiting for them out in the world than that which they enjoyed at Villanova.

—V—

After watching our Wildcats out on the diamond we are convinced that Villanova has one of the best double-play combinations in collegiate baseball. Lenny Merullo and Cowboy Crowley certainly do know how to whip that ball around for a double killing. In the Dickinson game they executed no less than three and then turned around and came through with another one in the Boston College game. Incidentally that place hit of Bond's, reliable Blue first-sacker, into right field was a beauty to watch. Walt Sheftie had a lot of fun chasing those fly balls which caromed off the uprights out in right field.

—V—

Do you know that: . . . John Jaroslk, class of '39 and former Wildcat mittman, won the light-heavy weight championship of the Detroit Catholic Youth Organization. . . . Johnny eliminated four men before winning in the finals. . . . Tony Sala and Jim Conroy, former Villanova students, are managing him. . . . Jarosik fought before 10,000 fans in the Alympia A. C. in Detroit to gain the championship. . . . Joe Foley, former Villanova boxing coach, has been signed up as a sparring partner for Max Schmeling in his coming fight for the world's heavyweight championship with Joe Louis. . . . Coach Maurice J. "Clipper" Smith has been invited to be a lecturer at the New York Herald-Tribune's fourth annual football coaching school the week of August 20. The school is under the direction of Columbia's Lou Little. Other members of the staff are, Elton E. "Tad" .Wieman, .Princeton's .new head coach; Robert C. Harlow, of Harvard and Dr .ohn Bain "Jock" Sutherland, of Pittsburgh.

—V—

Efficient and speedy action was exemplified on the part of newspaper and track officials at the Villanova Interscholastics, last Saturday. Kerby Cushing, Villanova's energetic Publicity Agent, informs us that the two star editions of the Ledger and Bulletin carried complete summaries of the track events. This is quite a feat in itself and shows perfect co-operation between our publicity staff and the newspaper men.

—V—

Johnny Maher, Frosh 'whizzking," proved that he was tops as a sprinter in Villanova College when he crossed the tape ahead of Guiteras, Urbellis and Bellew, varsitymen, in the feature century run in the Interscholastics last Saturday. Johnny breezed through in ten flat, which is very good time considering the inclement weather conditions.

—V—

Coach Jumbo Elliott will travel down with the Varsity track team to Washington D. C. to engage a strong Catholic University squad tomorrow. From indications of the last meets with Rider and Juniata the Wildcats should give a fine account of themselves and probably return home with a victory. A win over the Cardinals will do much to heid Villanova become established as a luminary intrack along the Eastern seaboard.

HERE and THERE

By BILL SINNOTT

June, and another generation of Villanova's athletes moves out. To them we say we won't forget. Newspaper make-ups change from day to day and are forgotten. Real thrills, vivid incidents aren't erased so easily. They are written indelibly on the minds of those who saw them and reacted to them. Your thrill was greater than theirs. You lived the thrill. Even if they do forget, you won't. That counts most. So to the seniors we dedicate this column and hope that their great success in college will be equal to only their smallest success outside.

Memoribilia: Johnny Mellus, taciturn and pleasant, holding up one side of the VC line. His punt blocking and tackling turned back more than one opponent when a deterrent was necessary. In the Manhattan game Giant John and his partner, Jumping John Wysocki, provided enough thrills to satiate even an insatiable appetite. Throughout the year we watched Mellus crash through and make tackles. Then, in that peculiar lumbering stride, John would walk quietly back to his tackle slot get down on that one knee in anticipation of the next play. Thanks, John, for the thrills you supplied. We'll remember.

Jord Olivar, scholar and athlete, was in the tackle slot opposite Mellus. Jord was deprived of newspaper brilliance because he was too good consistently. Too much perfection consistently is as bad as not enough of it. We think the most inspiring thing about Jord was his impelling leadership. Thanks, Jord, for your contributions.

There is no need to recount the deeds of Andy Stopper. His running, kicking, and passing gained him national prominence. His campus congeniality gained him many friends. He'll be successful up there in that teaching-coaching job in Reading. He can't miss. Thanks to you, Andy.

Now, to the fellow we always liked to watch carry the ball, Art Raimo, we proffer our greatest thanks. Art was a picture runner. Loose and graceful, he made history repeat itself this past year when he ran rings around those Owls from Temple. Two years previously he did the same thing. Thanks, Art, when betters thrills are made you'll make them. (And we'll be watching.)

Ray Stoviak supplied them in football and baseball. 'Tis rumored he'll be with the Phillies next year. Joe Missar's fine play in the line will be remembered. His shock of biond hair would have looked great if he hadn't worn a helmet. (You'd have been All-America, John.) We won't forget "Jedge" Marquette's play. (Nor his yelling in the hall.)

Mike Garbark, who, we are under the impression, will join the New York Yankee chain, supplied us with thrills and advise. Mike did everything the right way. So did another fellow on this campus —one of the nicest guys, John McKenna. When you own Standard Oil say "Hello" to us, will ya', John. To pitchers Escott and McLaughlin we say thanks and hope your fast one will continue to look like a green split pea to opposing batters.

Jack Earle will be remembered even if he does go to South Africa as he threatened. Alex Bell, who made New Kensington famous, did his share to please us. Franny Nye, may he be as good a coach as a player, has our thanks. We say thanks to all of them. Thanks and best wishes.

The curtain falls on Act 1938. The applause dies with an emptying house. The lights go out. The actors depart into the dark. To what? They're on their own. No Clipper Smith, Al Severance, or Doc Jacobs to guide them.

We stand by our promise—we won't forget.

Merullo and Crawley collaborated on a fast twin killing to erase a runner put on by virtue of a walk, but Keating doubled, sending Harry Wilson, who also had walked, to third. Schelle reared back and struck out Sid Lipson to end the inning.

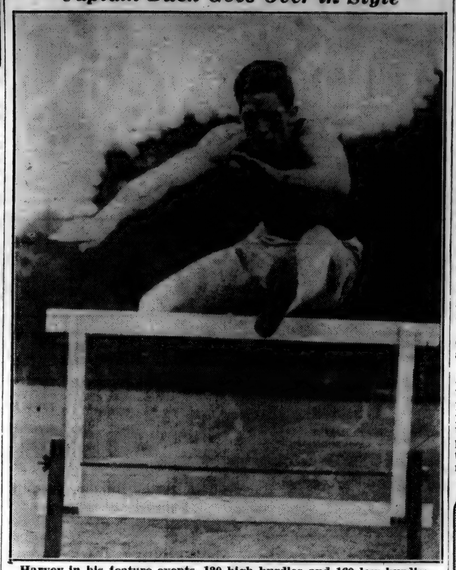
Again in the ninth, Dickinson threatened to score when two Red Devils who had walked advanced to second and third on an infield out. Schelle again turned on the heat and whiffed Reese, who batted for Padjen ,and then got Wilson the same way. Schelle also walked men in the sixth and eighth innings, but Merullo, Crawley and Bond worked two fast double killings to end the threats.

Win number eight for the Cats was turned in by Cliff Choquette, the abbreviated left-hander from Massachusetts, who baffled his home town neighbors from Boston College. Although credited with the win, Cliff was not around at the finish, Joe Desmond finishing the ninth by pitching to one man. With the score 6-3 in favor of the Blue, Choquette allowed the Eagles to congregate on each bag with only one out in the ninth. Here "Doc" Jacobs wig-wagged Desmond to the hill in an effort to put out the fire. The big Chester right-hander tossed up a low curve to second baseman Sharkey who banged into a fast double play, ending the game.

Choquette, in winning his second victory of the season, pitched good ball until he apparently weakened in the ninth. He held the invaders to eight well-scattered hits, struck out six and walked five. He was found for two runs in the third on a pass to Palumbo, Merullo's error, and singles by Sharkey, Goode and Garvin.

The Cats belted Frank Kelly, who worked the first innings, for three markers in the second, and Merullo beat in Crawley from first with a double in the fourth.

Captain Buek Goes Over in Style



Harvey in his feature events, 120 high hurdles and 180 low hurdles, has turned in victories against Rider and Juniata colleges. Captain Buck will be out to garner a few more firsts in the track meet with Catholic U. tomorrow.

with one of the poorest records ever turned in by a Villanova golf team. The Main Linerz won only one match, that being recorded over St. Joseph's. Featuring the match were the scores of 73 turned in by Dwyer and Murcko. Six defeats and a tie complete the record book entree for the season.

Taking the measure of the Dwyer-Lyons combination were St. Joseph's, Fordham, Rider, Temple, and Haverford. In a return match with Rider, the 'Cats managed to garner a stalemate with the persistent Trenton collegians.

Discover Frosh Linksmen

The shining lights of the other wise drab season were the discoveries of several freshman golfers, in particular, Murcko, Dave Morse, Jack Egan, Cliff Randolph, and Sophomore Charlie Roche.

Playing consistent golf was Linden's Lou Dubino, who registered a number of wins this season.

All due credit should be given Manager Jim Lyons for his work with the golf team. Faced with the problem of filling in all but two positions, Lyons proceeded to dig up the best material on the campus available, thus accounting for the number of first year men to make the squad.

The science of the "new dentistry" is still in its infancy. It is a most promising field for constructive thought and work. It calls for the best minds interested in health service careers.

Because of advancing standards, enrollment in Dental Schools in the United States has been reduced during the past thirteen years. Today there is one practicing dentist to approximately each 2,400 of population.

Marquette University Dental School is given the highest rating—A—by the Dental Educational Council of America. Its diplomas to graduates are recognized in all states. The close relationship of dental-medical study proves an advantage to students.

Alumni Wins Lead In Mural Softball League

AUSTIN DETHRONED BY HUSTLING FROSH IN CLOSE CONTEST

Miscues by Megaro, Sandor Help to Turn Tide in Favor of Dunnemen

BOUDON SETS FROSH PACE

Overcoming the most stubborn resistance they have had to face in their current winning streak the Austin powerhouse subdued the boys from Mendel, Monday evening May 9, with a 9-5 victory in one of the hottest battles yet put up by the Penthousers. On the far end of the field Alumni Hall protected a newly acquired winning way by handing out a 13-5 lashing to the Fedigan Gigolos.

Alumni Assumes Lead

On Tuesday, in what was believed to be the best played game of the season, Fr. Dunne's hustling Greenies edged their way to a 4-2 win over Austin Hall. Thrill after thrill was poured on the crowd as both teams battled for the lead. Three errors by Sandor and Megaro proved to be costly because they enabled Alumni to put across the winning tallies.

Again the Mendelites were defeated by an obliging Fedigan host. The contest was marred by the many errors committed by players on both teams but the Gay Lotharios pounded Lad Pasciak in the final canto to secure the victory to the tune of 12-9.

Outstanding is the failure of the Fediganites to come up to expectations. The Gigolos were regarded as heavy contenders for the Softball Crown but recent performances greatly lessened all possibility towards that end.

Fully recovered from its encounter with Alumni, the Austin steamroller got underway and crushed a determined Gigolo squad 10-1 on Thursday evening. The Austinites started a bombardment that left the Lotharios looking rather bewildered, and it did not cease until the last canto was over. Failure to hit at the opportune time left several Fediganites stranded on base during the course of the game.

The Alumni Dwarfs put another one on the shelf when they thrashthe Penthousers, 14-5, in the second fray of the evening. The dazzling play of the Greenies was too much for the sky dwellers but they succeeded in putting five men across the plate. Jim DeLuca, the Alumni twirler, did not allow a Mendelite to score for the first three innings. Lad Pasciak pitched a fine game for Mendel but sloppy fielding and many errors chalked up another loss for him.

The Intramural Softball Championship should be decided this week, possibly on Tuesday evening when Austin Hall meets the Alumni aggregation.

Should it be necessary, there will be a game on Wednesday evening to decide the winner of the Fedigan-Alumni tie played on Wednesday, April 27.

ters in the crack time of 4.44.9. This performance shaved a full five seconds off of the previous record held by Kennedy of Haverford.

Belyea Sets New Time in 880

Bob Belyea, Upper Darby's half mile State champion, then turned in a scintillating performance to win his specialty in 2.02.6. This time broke his own meet record of 2.04.5 set last year. Belyea had clear sailing all the way, as he coasted to victory fully 50 yards in front of his nearest rival, Raysor of Pottsville.

Following Belyea's feat, Dominick Montero, of Salesianum, the Catholic High champions, stepped into the shot put circle and tossed the iron ball 49 feet 6 inches to far exceed the mark held by Landis of Camden, who tossed the ball 48 feet 2 inches last year. Montero's toss ended the record breaking for the day.

Ambler added to her laurels, however, when Hugh Gehman polevaulted 11 feet 6 inches to tie the record set by Ross of Lower Merion in 1934.

Sheppard Double Winner

Other individual honors were won by two South Philadelphia boys, the only double winners of the day, the day. Otha Mooney won both the 100 and 220 yard dashes, while Bob Sheppard swept the hurdle events, both the 120 and 160 yard leaps.

The mile relay, considered by many as the feature race of the afternoon in Class A circles, was won by the fast stepping Upper Darby quartet, which was manned by Ambrogi, Gow, Sherman, and the brilliant Belyea.

West Catholic's lads captured four firsts in Class B competition, running off with the broad jump, mile relay, half mile, and javelin. Bill Carey boosted the Burrs' tally with a second in the low hurdles and a third in the highs. However their margin of victory was gained by seconds in the mile run and in the pole vault. The intense battle between the Burrs and the South Philadelpnia boys was not decided until the last event when Frank McKernan tossed the javelin 153 feet 9 inches to provide the Merriwell finish.

De La Salle Wins in Class C

La Salle Military Academy and De La Salle Prep also waged a ding-dong battle until the concluding events on the card. It was all La Salle until the mile relay and the furlong were run. In these events the Prepsters gained two firsts, thanks to a splendid smooth striding quartet and an equally fine individual named George Tucknott, the national prep school quarter mile record holder. First in these final events enabled De La Salle to first overtake and then pass their Long Island rivals.

Johnnie Maher came through as was expected in the special Villanova College 100 when he breezed the Century in the very fast time of 10 flat. "Blazin" Bill Gulteras pulled up second, only about a yard back, while "Whitey" Urbellis, varsity dash man, was a surprising third. Barney Bellew rounded out the starting quartet and chased the rest of the boys across the finish line.

Alumni Wins Lead In Mural Softball League

AUSTIN DETHRONED BY HUSTLING FROSH IN CLOSE CONTEST

BOUDON SETS FROSH PACE

Overcoming the most stubborn resistance they have had to face in their current winning streak the Austin powerhouse subdued the boys from Mendel, Monday evening May 9, with a 9-5 victory in one of the hottest battles yet put up by the Penthousers. On the far end of the field Alumni Hall protected a newly acquired winning way by handing out a 13-5 lashing to the Fedigan Gigolos.

Alumni Assumes Lead

On Tuesday, in what was believed to be the best played game of the season, Fr. Dunne's hustling Greenies edged their way to a 4-2 win over Austin Hall. Thrill after thrill was poured on the crowd as both teams battled for the lead. Three errors by Sandor and Megaro proved to be costly because they enabled Alumni to put across the winning tallies.

Again the Mendelites were defeated by an obliging Fedigan host. The contest was marred by the many errors committed by players on both teams but the Gay Lotharios pounded Lad Pasciak in the final canto to secure the victory to the tune of 12-9.

Outstanding is the failure of the Fediganites to come up to expectations. The Gigolos were regarded as heavy contenders for the Softball Crown but recent performances greatly lessened all possibility towards that end.

Fully recovered from its encounter with Alumni, the Austin steamroller got underway and crushed a determined Gigolo squad 10-1 on Thursday evening. The Austinites started a bombardment that left the Lotharios looking rather bewildered, and it did not cease until the last canto was over. Failure to hit at the opportune time left several Fediganites stranded on base during the course of the game.

The Alumni Dwarfs put another one on the shelf when they thrashthe Penthousers, 14-5, in the second fray of the evening. The dazzling play of the Greenies was too much for the sky dwellers but they succeeded in putting five men across the plate. Jim DeLuca, the Alumni twirler, did not allow a Mendelite to score for the first three innings. Lad Pasciak pitched a fine game for Mendel but sloppy fielding and many errors chalked up another loss for him.

The Intramural Softball Championship should be decided this week, possibly on Tuesday evening when Austin Hall meets the Alumni aggregation.

Should it be necessary, there will be a game on Wednesday evening to decide the winner of the Fedigan-Alumni tie played on Wednesday, April 27.

ters in the crack time of 4.44.9. This performance shaved a full five seconds off of the previous record held by Kennedy of Haverford.

Belyea Sets New Time in 880

Bob Belyea, Upper Darby's half mile State champion, then turned in a scintillating performance to win his specialty in 2.02.6. This time broke his own meet record of 2.04.5 set last year. Belyea had clear sailing all the way, as he coasted to victory fully 50 yards in front of his nearest rival, Raysor of Pottsville.

Following Belyea's feat, Dominick Montero, of Salesianum, the Catholic High champions, stepped into the shot put circle and tossed the iron ball 49 feet 6 inches to far exceed the mark held by Landis of Camden, who tossed the ball 48 feet 2 inches last year. Montero's toss ended the record breaking for the day.

Ambler added to her laurels, however, when Hugh Gehman polevaulted 11 feet 6 inches to tie the record set by Ross of Lower Merion in 1934.

Sheppard Double Winner

Other individual honors were won by two South Philadelphia boys, the only double winners of the day, the day. Otha Mooney won both the 100 and 220 yard dashes, while Bob Sheppard swept the hurdle events, both the 120 and 160 yard leaps.

The mile relay, considered by many as the feature race of the afternoon in Class A circles, was won by the fast stepping Upper Darby quartet, which was manned by Ambrogi, Gow, Sherman, and the brilliant Belyea.

West Catholic's lads captured four firsts in Class B competition, running off with the broad jump, mile relay, half mile, and javelin. Bill Carey boosted the Burrs' tally with a second in the low hurdles and a third in the highs. However their margin of victory was gained by seconds in the mile run and in the pole vault. The intense battle between the Burrs and the South Philadelphia boys was not decided until the last event when Frank McKernan tossed the javelin 153 feet 9 inches to provide the Merriwell finish.

La Salle Military Academy and De La Salle Prep also waged a ding-dong battle until the concluding events on the card. It was all La Salle until the mile relay and the furlong were run. In these events the Prepsters gained two firsts, thanks to a splendid smooth striding quartet and an equally fine individual named George Tucknott, the national prep school quarter mile record holder. First in these final events enabled De La Salle to first overtake and then pass their Long Island rivals.

Johnnie Maher came through as was expected in the special Villanova College 100 when he breezed the Century in the very fast time of 10 flat. "Blazin" Bill Guiteras pulled up second, only about a yard back, while "Whitey" Urbellis, varsity dash man, was a surprising third. Barney Bellew rounded out the starting quartet and chased the rest of the boys across the finish line.

DR. PARRAN GIVEN AWARD AT DINNER

Receives Mendel Medal at Annual Affair Tomorrow Evening

The Mendel Medal, annually awarded by Villanova College to an outstanding Catholic for work in the field of science will be received by Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, at a dinner tomorrow evening.

The dinner, to begin at 7 P. M., will be held at Villanova College and will be the occasion of the Faculty Dinner at which the clerical, along with the lay members and their wives, will be guests. Also attending will be the Board of Trustees and the Advisory Board of the College, Rev. Edward V. Standford, O.S.A. president of Villanova College, will preside and present the medal to Dr. Parran.

The Mendel Medal is being awarded tc Dr. Parran in recognition of his scientific approach to the problems of public health. He is noted for his encouragement of research in the control of cancer and veneral diseases.

Dr. Parran is the real instigator of the plan by which America is becoming conscious of the evils and effects of venereal diseases. It was he who first brought this subject to the fore by showing the sickness and death which these dangerous social diseases cause. This plan has been very successful and such national magazines as The Ladies Home Journal, The American Magazine along with numerous national civic and women's clubs have taken up the fight against this wreckage of young American manhood and womanhood.

Catholic College Press Association Charges A S U With 'Misrepresentation' In Letter To Union Head

Charging "misrepresentation" and advocating "withdrawal," the Catholic College Press Association recently led an attack against the American Student Union from the CCPA headquarters in Manhattanville College, New York.

Seeks Further Union

The Catholic College Press Association was established this year in an attempt to unite Catholic colleges and universities in releasing opinions to the secular press. Villanova College is among the Eastern institutions included in its membership. A more recent attempt is being made to set up a Philadelphia chapter of the association.

In the following letter addressed to the president of the American Student Union, the Catholic society condemned the ASU and decisively renounced affiliation with it:

Catholic College Press Association
Manhattanville College, Headq't'rs
133rd Street and Convent Avenue,
New York City, New York.

"Mr. Joseph Lash,
"American Student Union,
"New York City, N. Y.

"Dear Mr. Lash:

"Prompted by the recent article in the ASU ADVOCATE, in which you uphold the Loyalists in Spain, the priest-killers in Mexico, and sex-education in schools of the United States, in addition to your news report in the ASU BULLETIN, in which the peace assembly of Georgetown, a member of our group, was wilfully misrepresented, may we take this opportunity to assure you that the Catholic college students in the United States most decisively renounce affiliation with your group.

"It is our belief that the mistaken impression has been created that the American Student Union represents the opinion of all collegians. As Catholics we deny it. We further believe that all truly liberal graduates within your ranks will follow our lead and disown an organization that is obviously under the minority leadership of an extremely radical group.

"We protest against the usurpation of the American Student Union of the title 'American.' No true patriotic American could or would take the 'so-called' Oxford oath. Last year, the members of the American Student Union, by taking this oath, refused to defend with their lives their country in the event of war. This year they are willing to go to war for the collective security of so-called 'democracies' against 'Fascism.' Why did not the Union word its resolution 'collective security for democracies against Fascist and Communism?' Is the omission of the word 'Communism' significant? Are the members of the group willing to die for Communism and not for American Democracy? Since we refuse to believe that these are the sentiments of the vast majority of college men and women of the United States, we protest against this usurpation. We, too, do not want Fascisms, nor do we want Communism. Because the American Students Union is an unpatriotic organization, which, by its activity, has proven itself unworthy of representing American youth, we—the Catholic College Press Association—refuse to have any part with it.

"Sincerely yours,
"HAROLD GRAVES,
"President,
"Catholic College Press Ass'n."

MASTER OF NOVICES CONDUCTS STUDENT RETREAT THURSDAY

Rev. Paul Judson, Formerly Associated Here, Will Officiate

CLOSES FRIDAY AT NOON

The annual one day retreat for all Villanova students will be given on Thursday, October 6. Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., chaplain, has recently disclosed the fact that the Retreat Master will be the Rev. Paul M. Judson, O. S. A., present Master of Novices at the Augustinian Novitiate in New Hamburg, N. Y.

For the resident students this retreat will commence with a conference on Wednesday evening during the time usually alotted for chapel services. The Mass on Thursday morning will be the initial step of the retreat for the Villanova students who daily commute. For all, the Friday morning Mass on October 7, will solemnly bring to a close the 1938 day-retreat.

Was Faculty Member

Fr. Judson will not be a stranger to the Villanova campus. For a number of years he acted as Master of Novices and later as Master of Professed in St. Mary's Hall. Many times he has been called to Villanova to supplement the Mission Band in parish work. The retreat master has always been closely allied with the college activities since he ceased activities as a member of the Villanova faculty.

Due to the brevity of time in which the retreat is to be held, Fr. Judson can treat in the conferences only the more vital topics relative to the interests of Catholic college men. As far as can be determined, the subjects of his discourses will include the didactics of Holy Mother Church upon a fuller appreciation of the Sacraments, Purity, and Catholicism in general.

The chaplain, Fr. Boyle, desires to impress upon each and every student a deep sense of the truly significant seriousness of the approaching retreat and to enter this religious exercise wholeheartedly with a view to the immeasurable benefit to be derived. To quote him: "Our spiritual ranking can not possibly remain fixed or standard. We either further enrich ourselves in God's treasures or graually sink to the level of paupers in His sight. Thus, our annual Fall retreat here at Villanova is intended to be your source of new and greater graces after the long Summer vacation, the supply being lim-

REGISTRATION DATA SHOWS SMALL GAIN IN STUDENT BODY

Part-Time Figures Will Be Released at a Later Date

COMMERCE SCHOOL LEADS

Authorities disclosed today that Villanova College inaugurated its 96th academic year with a total registration of 925 full-time students, an increase of 21 students over the 1937 total.

A general decrease in the number of freshman students matriculating at the college has compensation in the large number of transfer students who have matriculated as upperclassmen. The fresheman class to date is made up of 329 new students, a decrease of 21 from last year's standards.

Upperclasses are proportionately small in comparison with the large freshman class. The second-year students are 248 in number. The junior class has a total of 187 members and seniors are numbered at 149. Twelve special students are not included in the above statistics.

Commerce School Leads

As usual, the School of Commerce and Finance claims the greatest number of students with an enrollment totaling 316. The Commerce School is seconded by the Villanova School of Engineering with 214 in number.

The School of Science ranks third in enrollment with a membership of 210. In the School of Arts and Philosophy, which includes the Department of Education, there is a total of 185.

Registration statistics for the Saturday, Evening, and Part-Time courses will be released through these sources at a later date.

Enrollment at the college for the academic year 1938-1939 has a fair representation in th United States and includes students of three foreign countries.

Among the States, Pennsylvania leads with 518 students enrolled. New Jersey and New York are next with 150 and 139, respectively.

New England States leading in number are Massachusetts and Connecticuit with 46 and 23 enrolled. Delaware is represented with ten students; Illinois, 6; Maryland, 6; Ohio, 4; West Virginia, California, and Rhode Island, 2; Indiana, New Hampshire, Maine and Minnesota, 1. The District of Columbia sends one student to the college.

Among foreign possessions there is a total of eleven students distributed as follows: South America, 1; Cuba, 2; Puerto Rico, 8.

Although registration numbers remained normal this year, there has been a steady movement toward the realization of the 1000-mark. Local, as well as distant

Yearbook Awarded All-Catholic Honor In Large Contest

Plans For 1939 Publication Underway as Editor Organizes New Staff

Bernard J. McHenry, editor of the Belle Air, Villanova College Year Book, has announced that last year's publication under the editorship of Charles J. O'Connor, has been awarded the All-Catholic Rating of the Catholic Scholastic Press Association.

McHenry also revealed that the business manager will not be appointed until at least Christmas. At that time the member of the business staff who has done the best work will be appointed to the post. Other officers will be appointed in the usual manner. These facts will be forthcoming in the near future.

Among the changes planned by Rev. Daniel Falvey, O. S. A., are an increase in the size of all pictures and an enlarging of the intramural section.

All those interested in joining the Belle Air staff should attend the meeting for this purpose when it is called. Freshmen and Sophomores are especially urged to attend because in 1942-43 Villanova will celebrate its hundreth anniversary with a greatly enlarged publication expected.

Sophomore Cotillion Huge Success As "Villanovans" Offer New Style

Setting the pace for this year's socials, the Class of 1941 welcomed incoming freshmen with the presention of the annual Sophomore Cotillion in the College Field House last Friday evening.

Traditional in its success and instrumental in creating a warm interest in Villanova socials, the "Soph Hop," as it is more commonly known on the campus, has won the place in Villanova custom as the initial dance of the scholastic season.

The affair featured the music of the Villanovans under the direction of Bert Passanante. Presenting a style new to the campus orchestra the Villanovans were lauded for their arrangements of popular dance tunes in a sweet swing style. Outstanding among the renditions of the evening were "Stardust" and "Sophisticated Lady." Displaying a change of pace, the band was lauded for its "White Heat" arrangement.

The Sophomore Cotillion Committee, under the direction of Chairman Edward Eichmann, commerce student, handled the capacity crowd of approximately 500 collegiate couples.

The freshmen were aided in enjoying their first dance as members of the student body of Villanova College when the dance committee co-operated with officials at Rosemont College, and other nearby institutions in arranging an escort service for the affair. This policy of introduction early in the scholastic year had been adopted in previous years by Cotillion committees.

The "Villanovans" presented a novel feature in the vocalizations of William Dobbins, senior student. Dobbins was featured with the campus orchestra for the first time at the Blazer Ball presented by the Class of 1939 last May, and since that time has acquired popularity on the campus.

Dancing was continued from 9 to 1 o'clock in the Field House which was gaily decorated with heavy accosstic curtains, soft lights, and the blue and white Villanova banners.

Catholic Press Honors Newspaper For Outstanding Merit In Contest

National recognition has again been brought to the campus by the Catholic Scholastic Press Association in its annual awarding of honor ratings. This marks the second year that the VILLANOVAN has been entered in the competition sponsored by the press group. Each time it has attained the honor of ranking with the best collegiate papers of its class.

All-Catholic honor rating awarded in recognition of merit is the highest honor given by the Catholic Scholastic Press Association. Some of the certificates of awards received in the past by the college newspaper may be seen in the office, 119 Mendel Hall.

Announcement came from Mr. J. L. Sullivan, Dean of Marquette University's School of Journalism and Director of the Catholic Scholastic Press Association.

Only Penna. Winner

Honor ratings by the association are judged on a basis of merit in competition with the Catholic college publications in the country. Outstanding among the many universities and colleges in the nation, Villanova was the only one in Pennsylvania to be so singularly mentioned.

Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., moderator of the VILLANOVAN, expressed public praise for Joseph J. Toland, recent editor-in-chief, who is now continuing his studies at medical school.

The award is made annually by the Catholic Scholastic Press Association and is given only to those publications which are outstanding in the field of Catholic activity.

The critical contests are in answer to the request of hundreds of conscientious editors who seek outside, impartial criticism in addition to that of the studnets and administration at their own institutions.

These contests are contests in the same sense that a teacher in a class room conducts a contest with every student striving for the best record possible. Every paper enrolled is carefully graded with the aid of this score book which is sent to the publication staff as a guide or aid to further improvement.

Sophomore Cotillion Huge Success As "Villanovans" Offer New Style

Setting the pace for this year's social, the Class of 1941 welcomed returning freshmen with the presentation of the annual Sophomore Cotillion in the College Field House last Friday evening.

Traditional in its success and instrumental in creating a warm interest in Villanova socials, the "Soph Hop," as it is more commonly known on the campus, has won its place in Villanova custom as the initial dance of the scholastic season.

[illegible] the music of the Villanovans under the direction of Bert Passamonte. Presenting a style new to the campus orchestra the Villanovans were lauded for their arrangements of popular dance tunes in a sweet swing style. Outstanding among the renditions of the evening were "Stardust" and "Sophisticated Lady." Displaying a change of pace, the band was lauded for its "White Heat" arrangement.

The Sophomore Cotillion Committee under the direction of Chairman Edward Elchmann, commerce student, handled the capacity crowd of approximately 500 collegiate couples.

The freshmen were aided in enjoying their first dance as members of the student body of Villanova College when the dance committee co-operated with officials at Rosemont College, and other nearby institutions in arranging an escort service for the affair. This policy of introduction early in the scholastic year had been adopted in previous years by Cotillion committees.

The "Villanovans" presented a novel feature in the vocalizations of William Dobbins, senior student. Dobbins was featured with the campus orchestra for the first time at the Junior Ball presented by the Class of 1939 last May and since that time has acquired popularity on the campus.

Dancing was continued from 9 to 1 o'clock in the Field House which was gaily decorated with heavy accoustic curtains, soft lights, and the blue and white Villanova banners.

Catholic Press Honors Newspaper For Outstanding Merit In Contest

National recognition has again been brought to the campus by the Catholic Scholastic Press Association in its annual awarding of honor ratings. This marks the second year that the VILLANOVAN has been entered in the competition sponsored by the press group. Each time it has attained the honor of ranking with the best collegiate papers of its class.

All-Catholic honor rating awarded in recognition of merit is the highest honor given by the Catholic Scholastic Press Association. Some of the certificates of awards received in the past by the college newspaper may be seen in the office, 119 Model Hall.

Announcement came from Mr. J. L. Sullivan, Dean of Marquette University's School of Journalism and Director of the Catholic Scholastic Press Association.

Only Penna. Winner

Honor ratings by the association are judged on a basis of merit in competition with the Catholic college publications in the country. Outstanding among the many universities and colleges in the nation, Villanova was the only one in Pennsylvania to be so singularly mentioned.

Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., moderator of the VILLANOVAN, expressed public praise for Joseph J. Toland, recent editor-in-chief, who is now continuing his studies at medical school.

The award is made annually by the Catholic Scholastic Press Association and is given only to those publications which are outstanding in the field of Catholic activity.

The critical comments are an answer to the request of hundreds of conscientious editors who seek outside impartial criticism in addition to that of the editors and administrative of their own institutions.

These contests are conducted in the same way that a teacher in a class room conducts a contest with every student striving for the best record possible. Every paper enrolled is carefully graded with the aid of this score book which is sent to the publication staff as a guide or aid to further improvement.

SOLEMN HIGH MASS OFFICIALLY OPENS SCHOLASTIC YEAR

Rev. John Sheehan, Provincial, Delivers Address to Student Body

Inaugurating the ninty-sixth scholastic year, Villanova College welcomed incoming freshmen students with a Solemn High Mass celebrated by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, on Thursday, September 22, the feast of St. Thomas of Villanova.

The opening Mass was attended by the entire college student body. The Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice-president of the college, was deacon, with the Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., officiating as sub-deacon.

New students were fortunate in being addressed by the Very Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A., provincial of the order. In his welcoming address to the student body, Fr. Sheehan emphasized the necessity of a religious education as a staunch guard against the encroachment of Aetheism in the world of today.

In giving the students an insight on conditions as they exist today, Dr. Sheehan brought in the fact that the patron Saint of the college, St. Thomas of Villanova, preached social justice early in the sixteenth century and was noted particularly for his associations with the working class.

"Education is a wonderful success with man being merely the mechanical machine that brings about its fulfillment. Education must be thought of as a progress rather than a problem as is the case sometimes today," Dr. Sheehan said.

All educators of today are stressing spiritual ideals in education. But in colleges where religion is not an integral part of education there is blaring contrast between the spiritual ideals that are upheld in addresses and the curricula offered to the students.

"Religious education, all facts taken into consideration, is the gradual absorbing, the gradual accumulation, and the general developing of the human personality," Fr. Sheehan said. "That there was an amazing number of aetheists in the world the ratio being three to one. We all can readily see the chaos that this situation would leave. Without the spiritual and moral ideals of a religious character to curtail man there is little chance of his achieving success.

In the concluding portion of his sermon, Dr. Sheehan paid particular attention to the seniors. "When you have completed your studies, go out and be one who will try to supress, overcome and exterminate aetheistic principles and set up a moral court."

After the opening preliminaries the chairman called for the reports of Committees. The Chairman of the Budget Committee presented his report for the fiscal year 1937-38 followed by the report of the Annual Alumni Week-End which was held in June. Other reports including the Treasurer's report and the report of the Committee were also read.

Before the meeting was adjourned extensive plans for the increased activity of the Alumni Association during the fiscal year 1938-39 were discussed. As yet none of these plans have been fully formulated with regard to any amount of the great detail involved in their completion.

L. K. D. FORMULATES FALL DANCE PLANS

Science Fraternity Begins Negotiations Under Newly Elected President

Negotiations for the annual Fall dance presented by the Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity, were undertaken at its initial meeting last Thursday evening. John C. Urie, fraternity president, disclosed that a committee for the social on November 4th will be appointed at the next regular meeting.

This was Urie's first official action in his capacity as president. He unfolded the plans for the current year and these were accepted with approvel by all the members. The total membership at the present time is forty-two.

One of the interesting highlights of the meeting was the proposal to have prominent personages as guest speakers for future meetings. They will speak on subject pertinent to the success of the future doctors.

Various trips to plants of interest in a scientific viewpoint will be arranged. The meetings are called for every other Thursday evening at 7:30 instead of 8:00.

SPANISH CLUB MEETS

On Wednesday, October 12, at 7:30 P. M. there will be an important meeting of the Spanish Club in room 107, Mendel Hall. Rev. Lorenzo, O. S. A., moderator Alferd Ibarguna, president, request the presence of the old members and all students interested in this group.

HISTORY GROUP TO CONVENE THURSDAY

Will Discuss Current International Situation at First Meeting

First topic of consideration of the History Seminar will be the world shaking crises between the Sudetens and Czeckoslovakia. This announcement was made by Dr. Harold F. Hartman and Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S. A., both professors of History at Villanova College and moderators of the club.

This seminar was first introduced to the campus last year and met with immediate favor by the student body. The purpose of its meetings is the consideration of the major events of the present day which are of a political nature and historical consequence. The club does not aim at predicting the possible outcomes of the various problems which arise, but only at studying the nature and historiacl origins of the causes which have engendered them.

Dr. Hartman pointed out that these modern problems do not simply create themselves, but rather are the direct outgrowth of the events of the past. For this reason, these meetings should be of particular significance to those students of history who wish to understand the underlying reasons for the present day situation.

During the meetings the moderators serve to guide the course of the discussion and formulate the thought of the students towards modern events. The seminar will meet in the Reception Room of Mendel Hall on Thursday, October 6, at 4:00 P. M.

Bernard J. Miller, editor of the Mendel Bulletin, quarterly journal of the School of Science at Villanova College, has revealed definite plans for the edition of the publication due next month. Miller will summarize "The Pathogmetic Activity of Human Eggs," part of which had been published in a current medical journal.

It was revealed that two other noteworthy articles, "The Historical Background of the Development of X-Ray Theory and Types of Tubes Used," by Benedict Cusani, and "Autumn Pigmentation of Plant Life," by Alfred Bongiovanni and Marvin Mones are being prepared for the first issue.

The cover of this year's editions of the Mendel Bulletin will be a perspective view of Mendel Hall and the driveway. It was also announced that one page of the coming edition will be dedicated to the Rev. Joseph F. O'Brien, O. S. A., late professor of English.

EDITORS MAKE REQUEST

Student Organizations Urged to Co-operate in Arranging Calendar

Student organization heads are requested to cooperate with the editors of the VILLANOVAN in the arrangement of a weekly "Calendar," to be published.

In order to secure detailed accuracy, it is desirable that campus organizations present a schedule of meetings to the VILLANOVAN editors each Friday prior to its's publication.

It is hoped that the "Calendar" will provide a satisfactory and convenient medium for keeping students in immediate contact with current activities of interest on the Villanova campus.

SENIORS TO USE METALLURGY LAB

New Chemical Laboratory Opened For Engineering Students

Facilities for students of Chemical Engineering in Villanova College have been greatly increased with the addition, during the summer vacation, of a new metallurgical laboratory in the chemistry department.

Seniors to Use

The laboratory was constructed under the direction of Dr. Edward L. Haenish and Mr. William Haltenberger, both members of the chemical department of the college, and will be used, for the most part, by seniors.

The main purpose of the new laboratory is the microscopic analysis of metals. It contains all the equipment necessary for analysis, namely, a heat treating furnace and several polishing wheels. After the samples of the unknown metal are prepared, they are examined under both high-powered and low-powered microscopes, and finally prepared for micro-photographs.

Extension School Officially Begins With 400 Students

Classes Formally Opened Yesterday; Registration Closes October 28

Over four hundred students are enrolled in the Villanova College Saturday and Evening Sessions, which are conducted at Hallahan Catholic High School, 19th and Wood St., Philadelphia.

Classes began on Monday, October 3, but registrations do not close until October 28. Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, is also dean of the Extension Sessions.

The evening sessions are provided by Villanova College for those people who are employed by day, but who wish to receive the benefits of a good Catholic education. Many regular Villanova students also attend these sessions to receive extra courses, or to make up deficiencies in courses.

The Saturday classes are conducted at both Hallahan Catholic High and on the Villanova College Campus. These sessions are conducted chiefly for teachers, thus enabling them to receive credit toward their degrees.

STAFF TO MEET

This afternoon, Tuesday, October 3, at 1 o'clock, there will be an important meeting of the Villanovan staff members. Everyone must be present.

REV. JOSEPH BOYLE ASSUMES DUTIES AS COLLEGE CHAPLAIN

Rev. James Reilly, O. S. A. Appointed to Capacity of Procurator

Recent changes in the Administration department of Villanova have resulted in the appointment of a new Chaplain and Procurator.

Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., has succeeded Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., as spiritual advisor to the college students this Fall.

During the year 1937-38, Fr. Boyle was instructor of Religion, as well as an instructor in the Education department. It was while acting in these capacities that he gained much popularity among the students.

Is Very Active

Moderator of the band was also one of Boyle's accomplishments. No more need be said about the successful season enjoyed by that organization with which the student body is familiar.

The Glee Club is another achievement of Fr. Boyle. It was he who placed it in the spotlight where, today, it is recognized as an outstanding group.

Filling the position vacated by Rev. Charles M. Melchoir, O. S. A., is Rev. James S. Reilly, O. S. A. He has assumed the capacity of Procurator at Villanova College.

Fr. Reilly comes to the college proper from St. Mary's Hall, where he served in the capacity of Master of Professed.

During the Summer months, he went with the Seminarians to Sea Isle City, where he acted in the capacity of procurator.

ENGINEER APPEARS ON CAMPUS OCT. 18

According to an announcement recently made by Joseph J. Quinn, editor of the Villanova Engineer, monthly periodical of the Engineering school, the first issue will be distributed to the student body on the 18th or 19th of October.

Embodied in this issue will be many interesting topics to all Engineering students. Since the present staff is largely composed of upper-class members, the freshman and sophomore classes are strongly urged to join this organization as there will be many important positions vacated at the end of the present year.

STUDENTS CAPTURE SPY

Photographic Evidence Brands 'Culprit As Alien to Campus

Villanova followers were thrown into consternation Thursday morning following the discovery of an enemy spy on the campus. Said spy, hiding on the blackboard ledge of Room 106, was first seen by members of the senior science religion class. After photographic evidence was secured, capture was made.

But it is the unmasking of the group responsible for this outrage that rankles in the breasts of all true Villanova men. For whom but a certain Philadelphia college would send a genuine North American (Temple) Owl on such an errand? Whooooo Knows???

A. I. E. E. TO ELECT SOCIETY OFFICERS AT SESSION TODAY

Electrical Engineer Invite First and Second Year Men

Francis J. Mozzi, chairman of the Villanova Chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, has recently announced that election of officers for the ensuing scholastic year will be conducted by the group today at 1:00 P. M.

The capacities of vice chairman and treasurer will be filled as a result of today's election proceedings, and will be formally announced in the next edition of the VILLANOVAN on Tuesday, October 11.

It is also expected that plans for the future activities of the A. I. E. E. group will be discussed. Chairman Mozzi expressed the belief that a definite schedule for the year will be formulated at this session.

According to the custom of the society in past years, various trips are conducted at intervals to places of interest to students of electrical engineering. The first trip to be made by the group will in all probability be to the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia.

Alternate meetings of the club will be open to freshmen and sophomore members, it was disclosed by A. I. E. E. officials. This will make the first time that such a proceeding has been followed by the electrical engineering society. In preceding years only juniors and seniors were incorporated in the group.

Chairman Mozzi has requested that all members of the society be present for the elections. He also extended a welcome to the Freshmen and Sophomore students in the electrical engineering department to attend this first meeting in Room 213, Mendel.

SPANISH SEMINAR PROPOSES ALLIANCE WITH PHILA. GROUP

President Ibarguen in Favor of Relationship with International House

CLUB TO ATTEND MUSICAL

A proposed alliance of the Spanish Seminar with the International House, a society devoted to furthering relations of good-will between the United States and her South American neighbors, is one of the leading questions to be discussed tomorrow in the business part of the first evening meeting for the seminar of the new year.

President Albert E. Ibarguen is in favor of such a step by reason of the numerous cultural and social advantages he sees as derived from the activities sponsored by the movement at its 39th and Spruce Sts. headquarters in Philadelphia. Here one may meet other young people with similar interests as well as securing information from authorities. Forums and lectures concernong South American conditions are a major part of the program. Dances are held for the members every Friday night.

Two highlights to be discussed and arranged on the ensuing year's calendar are a dinner of the seminar and attendance at the Spanish Festival at Immaculata College.

The dinner is tentatively set for December, though details are not as yet arranged definitely. An outline of the plan will be made tomorrow night.

Last year the club was invited to attend an entertainment of Spanish instrumental and choral music at Immaculata where there are twenty-seven Spanish girls enrolled. The members are looking forward to being present again this year.

NEW HYDRAULIC LAB INSTALLED

Completion of a new and modern hydraulics laboratory, the construction of which began last spring is the latest addition to the Villanova School of Engineering in the mechanical and electrical departments.

Definite and rapid progress in this school, under the guidance of Professor Morehouse, acting dean of the engineering school, now enables it to be classed on a par with the other leading colleges in the country.

Careful planning, exact estimate, and excellent supervision are the chief qualities responsible for this magnificent laboratory. Since the inception of this plan, great strides have been taken to achieve its perfection.

Equipment, modern in every instance, has replaced the old. An interesting addition is the Pelton Wheel otherwise known as the impulse turbine.

WILLIAM A. CONLEY SELECTED TO HEAD NEW ALUMNI GROUP

Montgomery County Chapter Recently Organized by Local Graduates

Outstanding in the activity program as sponsored by the National Alumni Association of Villanova College was the recent establishment, on September 13, of the Montgomery County Chapter of the Alumni club. The officers elected to head this new group are: president, William A. Conley; vice president, Henry I. Fox, Esq.; secretary and treasurer, John Tole.

The most important matter at hand now is the increase of membership. In order to obtain this unity arrangements are being made for several elaborate social functions to be held in the near future. The above-mentioned officers trust that these affairs will serve much more effectively to bring together prospective members than would an ordinary meeting.

This Montgomery County Chapter of the Alumni has received the official recognition of the National Association and has its support. Those interested in becoming members of this organization will kindly contact any one of the newly elected officers or one of these members of the Board of Governors: George Wilson, Manuel Gallagher or Francis Dennis, Esq.

It has been announced by the president of the National Alumni Association, J. Stanley Smith, Esq., that the organization of such a chapter as that of Montgomery County is part of the plan to organize various county chapters and thus increase the numerical strength of The Villanova Alumni Association. A feature to be noted in these chapter groups is the fact that the undergraduates of Villanova College will be permitted participation in the chapters' social functions.

Rev. John Sheehan, Provincial, Delivers Address to Student Body

Inaugurating the ninty-sixth scholastic year, Villanova College welcomed incoming freshmen students with a Solemn High Mass celebrated by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, on Thursday, September 22, the feast of St. Thomas of Villanova.

The opening Mass was attended by the entire college student body. The Rev. Hildebrand Alpers, O. S. A., vice president of the college, was deacon and the Rev. Vincent A. Mechan, O. S. A., sub-deacon of the Mass.

New students were welcome in being addressed by the Very Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A., provincial of the order. In his welcoming address to the student body, Fr. Sheehan emphasized the necessity of a religious education as a staunch guard against the encroachment of Aetheism in the world of today.

In giving the students an insight on conditions as they exist today, Dr. Sheehan brought in the fact that the patron Saint of the college, St. Thomas of Villanova, preached social justice early in the sixteenth century and was noted particularly for his associations with the working class.

"Education is a wonderful success with man being merely the mechanical machine that brings about its fulfillment. Education must be thought of as a progress rather than a problem as is the case sometimes today," Dr. Sheehan said.

All educators of today are stressing spiritual ideals in education, but in colleges where religion is not an integral part of education there is lacking contrast between the spiritual ideals that are upheld in addresses and the curricula offered to the students.

"Religious education, all facts taken into consideration, is the gradual absorbing, the gradual accumulation, and the general developing of the human personality," Fr. Sheehan said. "Thus there was an amazing number of aetheists in the world . . . existing there to one. We . . . readily see the cross that . . . satan would leave. We . . . deserted and . . . abandoned . . . to . . . on . . . of his . . . particular . . . When . . . studies, and . . . we will try to . . . up a . . .

MEMBER OF VILLANOVA FACULTY DIES

REV. DR. JOHN F. O'BRIEN, O. S. A.

Rev. John O'Brien, O. S. A. Succumbs After Illness of Severel Weeks

Rev. John F. O'Brien, O. S. A., S. T. L., Litt. D., one of the outstanding Augustinian fathers on the campus and known to students of literature at Villanova and elsewhere for his book "Philosophy of Composition," died September 19, at St Mary's Hospital. He was 46.

Fr. O'Brien had long been ill and for several weeks had been confined at St. Mary's Hospital, Philadelphia.

He entered his novitiate of the Augustinian Order in 1915 and graduated from Villanova in 1919 with an A. B degree after taking his simple and final vows. He was ordained in the Church of Saint Thomas of Villanova in 1922. The following year he received his Master of Arts degree from Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C.

Appointed to the faculty of Villanova in 1925, he became associate professor of English. He was honored in 1928 with the degree of Doctor of Literature, which was conferred on him by Dayton University, Dayton, Ohio.

Solemn services began Tuesday afternoon when the body was removed from Villanova monastery to the Church of St. Thomas of Villanova. Divine office was recited by members of the community immediately after the procession.

With Fr. Caffrey presiding, the lessons of the office were recited by the following: Rev. John H. Crawford, O. S. A.; Rev. F. J. Ludwig, O. S. A.; Rev. Jerome A. Mahoney, O. S. A.; Rev. Edward Dwyer, O. S. A.; Rev. Bernard Albers, O. S. A.; Rev. Thomas C. MacLeod, O. S. A.; Rev. Robert Fitzgerald, O. S. A., and the very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., LL. D.

Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated at 10 o'clock by the very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, O.S.A., D.D. assistant general of the Augustinian Order and former president of Villanova. Rev. George S. Walker, O. S. A., was deacon and Father Caffrey sub-deacon. The position of master of ceremonies was filled by Rev. James S. Reilly, O. S. A.

Father Hickey gave final absolution of the body. In accordance with the expressed wish of the deceased, there was no formal sermon but the Very Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A., J. C. D. provincial, spoke a few words to the bereaved family. Due to the rainy weather the Benediction was sung in the church. The Augustinian Seminary Choir rendered the music for the mass.

L. K. D. FORMULATES FALL DANCE PLANS

Science Fraternity Begins Negotiations Under Newly Elected President

Negotiations for the annual Fall dance presented by the Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity, were undertaken at a recent meeting in Patterson Hall. John C. Urie, fraternity president, disclosed that a committee for the social on November 4th will be appointed at the next regular meeting.

This was Urie's first official action in his capacity as president. He unfolded the plans for the current year and these were accepted with approval by all the members. The total membership at the present time is forty-two.

One of the interesting highlights of the meeting was the proposal to have prominent personages as guest speakers for future meetings. They will speak on subject pertinent to the success of the future doctors.

Various trips to plants of interest in a scientific viewpoint will be arranged. The meetings are called for every other Thursday evening at 7.30 instead of 8.00.

SPANISH CLUB MEETS

On Wednesday, October 12, at 7.30 P. M. there will be an important meeting of the Spanish Club in room 107, Mendel Hall. Rev. Lorenzo. O. S. A., moderator Alferd Ibarguna, president, request the presence of the old members and all students interested in this group.

HISTORY GROUP TO CONVENE THURSDAY

Will Discuss Current International Situation at First Meeting

First topic of consideration of the History Seminar will be the world shaking crises between the Sudetens and Czeckoslovkia. This announcement was made by Dr. Harold F. Hartman and Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S. A., both professors of History at Villanova College and moderators of the club.

This seminar was first introduced to the campus last year and met with immediate favor by the student body. The purpose of its meetings is the consideration of the major events of the present day which are of a political nature and historical consequence. The club does not aim at predicting the possible outcomes of the various problems which arise, but only at studying the nature and historical origins of the causes which have engendered them.

Dr. Hartman pointed out that these modern problems do not simply create themselves, but rather are the direct outgrowth of the events of the past. For this reason, these meetings should be of particular significance to those students of history who wish to understand the underlying reasons for the present day situation.

During the meetings the moderators serve to guide the course of the discussion and stimulate the thought of the students towards modern events. The seminar will meet in the Reception Room of Mendel Hall on Thursday, October 6, at 4:00 P. M.

New Appointments Change Augustinian Order Here

Revs. Melchior, Brown, Voan, Lanin Receive Appointments to Important Positions at Other Institutions

FR. GRIMES GRANTED LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Due to the recent Provincial Chapter, a number of changes were made in the Augustinian Order throughout the country, some of which affected the faculty at Villanova College.

Rev. Charles M. Melchior, O.S.A., formerly Procurator of the college, was moved to St. Augustines' Parish in Detroit, Mich. Rev. Francis X. Coan, O.S.A., who had taught Biology for a number of years in the Science Department was changed to St. Rita's High School at Chicago, Ill. Rev. Stephen Lanin, O.S.A., who taught English in the Business and Engineering Departments, was transfered to St. Nicholas' Parish, Flushing, Long Island, N. Y. Rev. Charles Patrick Brown, O.S.A., formerly the Chaplain, was changed to St. Nicholas' Parish in the Bronx, N. Y. C.

Another item affecting the faculty was the granting of a leave of absence to the Rev. Edwin Grimes, O.S.A., who will pursue high studies at Oxford University, England.

The students will miss these professors who have been with them for a number of years. The VILLANOVAN, in the name of the students of Villanova College, wish to extend to them their heart-felt appreciation of what they have done for them and wish al of them the best of luck, success and happiness in their new positions.

INITIAL ISSUE OF SCIENCE BULLETIN NEARS COMPLETION

Editor Miller's "The Pathogenic Activity of Human Eggs" Featured

Bernard J. Miller, editor of the Mendel Bulletin, quarterly journal of the School of Science at Villanova College, has revealed definite plans for the edition of the publication due next month. Miller will summarize "The Pathognetic Activity of Human Eggs," part of which had been published in a current medical journal.

It was revealed that two other noteworthy articles, "The Historical Background of the Development of X-Ray Theory and Types of Tubes Used," by Benedict Cusani, and "Autumn Pigmentation of Plant Life," by Alfred Bongiovanni and Marvin Mones are being prepared for the first issue.

The cover of this year's editions of the Mendel Bulletin will be a perspective view of Mendel Hall and the driveway. It was also announced that one page of the coming edition will be dedicated to the Rev. Joseph F. O'Brien, O. S. A., late professor of English.

Last year's Bulletins received many favorable comments from outstanding authorities all over the United States and in several foreign countries. Several of the articles were reprinted in other publications. Pictures taken by the students have been acclaimed by many universities and scientific journals. Outstanding among last year's pictures were those of "Diatoms."

In conclusion it was announced that any member of the staff will gladly arrange to have each edition forwarded to those interested.

MUSIC SEMINAR OPENS CONCERTS

Tschaikowsky's Overture To Be Heard Tomorrow Evening

Beginning it's second year of activities under the direction of Rev. John Vrana, O. S. A., the Music Seminar will inaugurate a short series of concerts tomorrow evening.

The initial program will be presented at 7.30 o'clock in Room 102, Mendel Hall and will consist of selections which are usually classed as "program" or "descriptive" music. Such numbers as Tschaikowsky's "1812 Overture" and the "On the Trail" movement from Ferde Grofe's Grand Canyon Suite will be included.

During the course of the concert the interesting development of Rudolph Friml's "Fire Fly" music will be demonstrated. This, together with other program numbers should go to make a pleasant evening's entertainment.

All students, particularly the freshmen, are urged to take advantage of the cultural benefits derived from attending these concerts.

EDITORS MAKE REQUEST

Student Organizations Urged to Co-operate in Arranging Calendar

Student organization heads are requested to cooperate with the editors of the VILLANOVAN in the arrangement of a weekly "Calendar," to be published.

In order to secure detailed accuracy, it is desirable that campus organizations present a schedule of meetings to the VILLANOVAN editors each Friday prior to it's publication.

It is hoped that the "Calendar" will provide a satisfactory and convenient medium for keeping students in immediate contact with current activities of interest on the Villanova campus.

SENIORS TO USE METALLURGY LAB

New Chemical Laboratory Opened For Engineering Students

Facilities for students of Chemical Engineering in Villanova College have been greatly increased with the addition, during the summer vacation, of a new metallurgical laboratory in the chemistry department.

Seniors to Use

The laboratory was constructed under the direction of Dr. Edward L. Haenish and Mr. William Haltenberger, both members of the chemical department of the college, and will be used, for the most part, by seniors.

The main purpose of the new laboratory is the micro-copic analysis of metals. It contains all the equipment necessary for analysis, namely, a heat treating furnace and several polishing wheels. After the samples of the unknown metal are prepared, they are examined under both high-powered and low-powered microscopes, and finally prepared for micro-photographs.

Extension School Officially Begins With 400 Students

Classes Formally Opened Yesterday; Registration Closes October 28

Over four hundred students are enrolled in the Villanova College Saturday and Evening Sessions, which are conducted at Hallahan Catholic High School, 19th and Wood St., Philadelphia.

Classes began on Monday, October 3, but registrations do not close until October 28. Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, is also dean of the Extension Sessions.

The evening sessions are provided by Villanova College for those people who are employed by day, but who wish to receive the benefits of a good Catholic education. Many regular Villanova students also attend these sessions to receive extra courses, or to make up deficiencies in courses.

The Saturday classes are conducted at both Hallahan Catholic High and on the Villanova College Campus. These sessions are conducted chiefly for teachers, thus enabling them to receive credit toward their degrees.

STAFF TO MEET

This afternoon, Tuesday, October 3, at 1 o'clock, there will be an important meeting of the Villanovan staff members. Everyone must be present.

REV. JOSEPH BOYLE ASSUMES DUTIES AS COLLEGE CHAPLAIN

Rev. James Reilly, O. S. A. Appointed to Capacity of Procurator

Recent changes in the Administration department of Villanova have resulted in the appointment of a new Chaplain and Procurator.

Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., has succeeded Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., as spiritual advisor to the college students this Fall.

During the year 1937-38, Fr. Boyle was instructor of Religion, as well as an instructor in the Education department. It was while acting in these capacities that he gained much popularity among the students.

Is Very Active

Moderator of the band was also one of Boyle's accomplishments. No more need be said about the successful season enjoyed by that organization with which the student body is familiar.

The Glee Club is another achievement of Fr. Boyle. It was he who placed it in the spotlight where, today, it is recognized as an outstanding group.

Filling the position vacated by Rev. Charles M. Melchoir, O. S. A., is Rev. James S. Reilly, O. S. A. He has assumed the capacity of Procurator at Villanova College.

Fr. Reilly comes to the college proper from St. Mary's Hall, where he served in the capacity of Master of Professed.

During the summer months, he went with the Seminarians to Sea Isle City, where he acted in the capacity of procurator.

ENGINEER APPEARS ON CAMPUS OCT. 18

According to an announcement recently made by Joseph J. Quinn, editor of the Villanova Engineer, monthly periodical of the Engineering school, the first issue will be distributed to the student body on the 18th or 19th of October.

Embodied in this issue will be many interesting topics to all Engineering students. Since the present staff is largely composed of upper-class members, the freshman and sophomore classes are strongly urged to join this organization as there will be many important positions vacated at the end of the present year.

STUDENTS CAPTURE SPY

Photographic Evidence Brands Culprit As Alien to Campus

Villanova followers were thrown into consternation Thursday morning following the discovery of an enemy spy on the campus. Said spy, adding on the blackboard ledge of Room 106, was first seen by members of the senior science religion class. After photographic evidence was secured, capture was made.

But it is the unmasking of the group responsible for this outrage that rankles in the breasts of all true Villanova men. For whom but a certain Philadelphia college would send a genuine North American (Temple) Owl on such an errand? Whoooo Knows???

A. I. E. E. TO ELECT SOCIETY OFFICERS AT SESSION TODAY

Electrical Engineer Invite First and Second Year Men

Francis J. Mozzi, chairman of the Villanova Chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, has recently announced that election of officers for the ensuing scholastic year will be conducted by the group today at 1:00 P. M.

The capacities of vice chairman and treasurer will be filled as a result of today's election proceedings, and will be formally announced in the next edition of the VILLANOVAN on Tuesday, October 11.

It is also expected that plans for the future activities of the A. I. E. E. group will be discussed. Chairman Mozzi expressed the belief that a definite schedule for the year will be formulated at this session.

According to the custom of the society in past years, various trips are conducted at intervals to places of interest to students of electrical engineering. The first trip to be made by the group will in all probability be to the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia.

Alternate meetings of the club will be open to freshmen and sophomore members, it was disclosed by A. I. E. E. officials. This will make the first time that such a proceeding has been followed by the electrical engineering society. In preceding years only juniors and seniors were incorporated in the group.

Chairman Mozzi has requested that all members of the society be present for the elections. He also extended a welcome to the Freshmen and Sophomore students in the electrical engineering department to attend this first meeting in Room 213, Mendel.

SPANISH SEMINAR PROPOSES ALLIANCE WITH PHILA. GROUP

President Ibarguen in Favor of Relationship with International House

CLUB TO ATTEND MUSICAL

A proposed alliance of the Spanish Seminar with the International House, a society devoted to furthering relations of good-will between the United States and her South American neighbors, is one of the leading questions to be discussed tomorrow in the business part of the first evening meeting for the seminar of the new year.

President Albert E. Ibarguen is in favor of such a step by reason of the numerous cultural and social advantages he sees as derived from the activities sponsored by the movement at its 39th and Spruce Sts. headquarters in Philadelphia. Here one may meet other young people with similar interests as well as securing information from authorities. Forums and lectures concernong South American conditions are a major part of the program. Dances are held for the members every Friday night.

Two highlights to be discussed and arranged on the ensuing year's calendar are a dinner of the seminar and attendance at the Spanish Festival at Immaculata College.

The dinner is tentatively set for December, though details are not as yet arranged definitely. An outline of the plan will be made tomorrow night.

Last year the club was invited to attend an entertainment of Spanish instrumental and choral music at Immaculata where there are twenty-seven Spanish girls enrolled. The members are looking forward to being present again this year.

Tickets For Game On Sale at Gym; P&W Cooperates

Student Reduction Offered For Muhlenberg Battle at Allentown

Villanova students desiring to attend the Muhlenberg game at Allentown on Saturday, October 8, may secure tickets at a fifty-cent reduction at the athletic office in the Field House. These tickets, selling for a dollar ($1.00), may be obtained from today until Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The matriculation card must be presented at every purchase.

The P & W officials are offering a special offer regarding transportation to the game. A round trip ticket directly to the Muhlenberg Stadium may be had at seventy-five cents, ($.75). The train will leave the P & W Villanova Station at 12:07 o'clock on Saturday and will arrive at Allentown at 2:00 o'clock. These transportation tickets may be obtained from Francis Cadran, in room 225, Austin Hall.

NEW HYDRAULIC LAB INSTALLED

Completion of a new and modern hydraulics laboratory, the construction of which began last spring is the latest addition to the Villanova School of Engineering in the mechanical and electrical departments.

Definite and rapid progress in this school, under the guidance of Professor Morehouse, acting dean of the engineering school, now enables it to be classed on a par with the other leading colleges in the country.

Careful planning, exact estimate, and excellent supervision are the chief qualities responsible for this magnificent laboratory. Since the inception of this plan, great strides have been taken to achieve its perfection.

Equipment, modern in every instance, has replaced the old. An interesting addition is the Pelton Wheel otherwise known as the impulse turbine.

WILLIAM A. CONLEY SELECTED TO HEAD NEW ALUMNI GROUP

Montgomery County Chapter Recently Organized by Local Graduates

Outstanding in the activity program as sponsored by the National Alumni Association of Villanova College was the recent establishment, on September 13, of the Montgomery County Chapter of the Alumni club. The officers elected to head this new group are: president, William A. Conley; vice president, Henry I. Fox, Esq.; secretary and treasurer, John Tole.

The most important matter at hand now is the increase of membership. In order to obtain this unity arrangements are being made for several elaborate social functions to be held in the near future. The above-mentioned officers trust that these affairs will serve much more effectively to bring together prospective members than would an ordinary meeting.

This Montgomery County Chapter of the Alumni has received the official recognition of the National Association and has its support. Those interested in becoming members of this organization will kindly contact any one of the newly elected officers or one of these members of the Board of Governors: George Wilson, Manuel Gallagher or Francis Dennis, Esq.

It has been announced by the president of the National Alumni Association, J. Stanley Smith, Esq., that the organization of such a chapter as that of Montgomery County is part of the plan to organize various county chapters and thus increase the numerical strength of The Villanova Alumni Association. A feature to be noted in these chapter groups is the fact that the undergraduates of Villanova College will be permitted participation in the chapters' social functions.

PENNIES AND POUNDS

FOR a modern entrepeneur to extract riches from a foreign power immune from the legislation of the nation possessing the resources and, in defiance of local authority, even going so far as to renege on taxes, requires that he be strong enough to crack the whip over the nation.

Apparently our compatriot exploiters of Central America, desiring to have more privileges than the citizens themselves, have that power. Witness the current pressure being brought to bear on Mexico by our State Department.

Economic pressure is followed by economic war and often military force. Mexico is a weak nation. A tyrannical Uncle Sam could reduce her to vassalage. That is why her standing up to certain imperialistic United States capitalists is courageous.

If we pursue the present policy with regard to this situation it will force into power a movement far worse than the present administration. Calles, the anti-religious vulture, is waiting his opportunity to swoop down on Mexico with another revolution. When the Catholic Church uttered warnings as to the trend in Mexico, she was shushed as endangering the good neighbor policy, but now, in a situation far less serious from a humanitarian view point, wire-pullers cast the big brother cloak to the winds.

If Secretary Hull is impartial, he will grow apoplectic over other foreign nations, for example Great Britain and France, who owe us so much more. Moreover, no profit has accrued from our loan to Britain, whereas the interest from the Mexican investments has amounted to many times the principle. Furthermore, our trans-oceanic debtors are spending our money on armaments, while Mexico is devoting what little she has to developing her resources in attempts at social welfare. The "idealistic" Mr. Hull, however, is afraid to be consistent.

Possible solution would be for Britain to consider the debts Mexico owes her as paid and strike the amount from the account of Britain's war-debt to us. Such a generous act on our part would not only solidify friendship with Southern neighbors but make it possible for Mexico to recover sufficiently to pay us something by reducing her burden.

IN MEMORIAM

TEACHING by his example the Divine Lessons of Christ, Whom he served faithfully throughout his lifetime, the late and beloved Rev. John F. O'Brien, O. S. A., associate professor of English at Villanova College, remains in the memories of those who knew him as the model of Catholic devotion and religious zeal.

Foremost in his interests as an Augustinian Father were his students, who will long remember the kindly priest who taught them, primarily, to live in keeping with their Eternal Destiny, and secondarily, the history and philosophy of their mother-tongue.

In his classes he never forgot that in education there must always be an impelling and cognizant manifestation of the Creator and the subsequent bidding to His Command. His students remain consoled with the knowledge that, with exception of his God and his own, the love of Father O'Brien was for his student. May those whom he loved, and who benefited by his teaching repay to him that love in prayer and memory.

Members of the faculty were ever appreciative of his charity of thought and lightness of mood. Even those not of Villanova, saw Villanova through him.

Administration, faculty, students and alumni unite in prayer and loyal tribute to his name, his memory. May his soul rest in peace.

HELLO, FROSH

VILLANOVA welcomes you. Here you will discover a new world of opportunities. An extensive program of activities is laid out before you, as it is for every freshman class. Co-operate, and you will enjoy not only an education, but a lot of fun. You are co-operating when you do your assignments, avoid breaches of discipline, and participate in the college affairs.

Yes, we mean college. Remember that. Discard that provincial high school attitude. Keep your ears open. Learn all you can about Villanova history, customs, campus, personnel, and students. Don't be taken in by rumors. Get your knowledge from authority, be it professor, dean, councilor, officer, newspaper, catalog, or books. Don't talk commonplaces. Take your cue from upper classmen rather than other freshmen.

Incipient leaders will arise in your ranks, many of whom deal in sophistries. Keep your head. Join in the fun, but don't be misled. Many of your comrades will feign a wordly wisdom indorsed by prurient talk. Do not choose your friends from among them.

Say HELLO! to everyone you meet. Let yourself be known to other Villanovans. An acquaintance with your predecessors will make it pleasant for you. If there are alumni from your high school here or if you have fellows' names from other sources, look them up and introduce yourself. Greet everyone, whether you have seen his face before or not, with "Hello!" Upon you depends to a great extent the preservation of the democratic environment at Villanova.

"In the event of a hostile air raid," says a writer, "some of the public statues would be the first things to suffer." Even so, we're still in favor of peace.—Montreal Star.

The Historian's Dilemma

BY
Dr. Harold F. Hartman

IN this era of political confusion and governmental instability the task of the professional historian has become relatively acute. The prolific generation of new political situations has created many new historical problems. But of more important significance there have evolved other new situations, which are essentially non-political in character, influencing the complexity of these new historical problems.

It is indeed true that the incessant motivation of perplexing economic trends has greatly modified the basic elements which once confronted the historian. Moreover, social upheavals have tended to positively distort the fundamental historical movements which were formally marked by relative simplicity and peculiar normalities. Even the intellectual and religious developments of this modern era have greatly aggrevated the instant problems. Consequently the problems associated with a study and understandnig of history have developed into embarrassing complexities.

Truly then, history no longer consists in the simple recording of political events, an unrelated narration of political movements. But the man in the street, the student in the college class have quite frequently failed to realize this modified situation produced by the progressive evolution of our modern contemporary civilization. Or may I better assert, if the individuals in question have taken cognizance of the altered situation they have been derelict in estimating the consequences affecting the work of the historian. Indeed, and this is exceedingly difficult to explain, many regard the contemporary historian as an individual cloaked with the attributes of an ancient prophet. His extraordinary powers to foretell the distant future are amazingly sought. His divinely inspired predictions are being continually invoked. Certainly the reason for this apparent glorification of the historian's faculties remains the product of intellectual mystery.

Now the recent crisis, or may I preferably say, the current crisis in Europe provoked by the Sudeten problem, is a case in point. As the historian-analyst well knows, the circumstances and movements responsible for the production of that particular problem (i.e. the Sudeten problem) are not so easy to ascertain. Marked by perennial developments, questions relating to the determination of the origin of the problem become exceedingly difficult. Nevertheless the man in the street or the student in the college class expects from the historian predicitions as to the imediate future. In order to illustrate practically let me submit the following as examples of questions commonly sub itted. All of them, you will easily observe, invit prophetic assertions. And here are but a few:

When is the next European war to become an actuality? Will the German chancellor be satisfied with the enforcement of the diplomatic settlement accomplished at Munich? How long before Europe and the world is confronted with another crisis jeopardizing international peace?

Seldom then, and this seems to me to be extremely significant, is the man in the street or the student in the college class particularly interested in the historical facts which have produced the actual problem. Factors which have basically contributed to the origins of the problem are not their immediate concern. Nor are their individual interests aroused by a study of movements or trends affecting the early developments of the problems Indeed the curiosities of these same individuals are often unconcerned with an analysis of the pertinent facts which constitute the elements of the problem. Consequently as a result of these scholastic deficiencies, or may I better say, in spite of them, such questions as the following remain unsubmitted. All of these questions relate to the same instant problem (i.e. the Sudeten problem) and are far more important than the previous ones, categorically noted. They read as follows:

What are the essential provisions of the treaty of Versailles relating to the present situation in Czechoslovakia?

What is the correct meaning of this principle "the self-determination of nations" which the German chancellor asserts is inoperative in the Sudetenland? Are there any elements present in the current crisis which were causative factors of past European crises?

It then appears evident that the historian is primarily concerned with an appreciative analysis of the facts which have generated our present civilization. He is not interested in making glaring predications as to the future. His field of endeavor, although an extremely extensive one, must admit of acad-

(Miss Barrett is a bit of alright, too) . . . tho it looks like Frosh Rick Fry holds the upper hand in the blond's league . . . Also noted, Frosh Gray and Gallagher doing alright by themselves . . . also looks like Buzz Mowen took a powder . . . Foug long years and Buzz Hart is still attending freshmen teas ? ? ? Don't give up Buzz . . . Did anyone notice that smooth little Rosemont senior from Texas with the new hair-do? . . . Payoff—the upper classmen moving the tables back after the dance. All in all, thanx for a swell afternoon, Rosemont.

I WONDER WHY:

Art B. S. Somers had such a hard time getting a date for the dance? Maybe the U. of P. had something to do with it . . . Mr. William Sinnot is so egotistical about his writing ability. Could it be a front to cover up his shyness . . . Berwyn has such an attraction to Montgomery? Pretty young, Monty . . .

STORY OF THE WEEK:

Once upon a time, there were two little college boys who had dates with two beautiful Princesses, to take them to the Soph Cotillion.

It happened that these Princesses ruled in the Kingdom of Germantown, which fact made it difficult for the boys to get them to the ball, as they lacked a royal carriage. In order to clear this obstacle from their path, the Princesses and the little boys decided to hold a conference. This was to be held on a Wed. nite in the palace of the famous Greek.

Now it seems that the little boys arrived at the scene a little early and if one looked closely one could notice an insignificant third person. This person turned out to be a columnist on the college paper. The three of them looked quietly around and then sat down . . . and sat . . . and sat . . . and sat . . . and no Princesses!!! Woe...Woe...Whoa ...the little boys left!!

A short time later the Princesses came fluttering in and sat gracefully down . . . with two other MEN.

Moral: Messrs. Brady, Quinn and Sinnot (yes, the great) should never trust their best friends.

MEMOIRS OF SUMMER

With the coming of Fall also comes the memories of the passing Summer. It would be a faux pas indeed for a returning columnist not to dwell awhile on a few episodes of that pleasant time . . . One of the most touching stories that I have ever had the good fortune to be told came to me this past Summer . . . Of course it's a boy and girl . . . the boy, our own Gerry Holland . . . the girl, Peggy, of E. 29th St., Brooklyn . . . the places . . . Bell Harbor and Brooklyn . . . The story . . . our Gerry rolling and bowling down the Avenue all equipped with a beautiful shiny watch (bought from Bud Lawrence on credit) and a great big bottle of 'Christmas Night.' Woo . . . Woo . . . I'm going to see Peggy . . . Peggy . . . Daddy buy me one of those . . .

THAT FINISHES ME 'TILL NEXT WEEK.

Quiz headquarters have announced that no matter what answers are turned in for the following pix, they will be marked correct: "The Texans," "The Crowd Roars," "Girls on Probation," "Give Me a Sailor," and "Getaway."

Obvious reason for the comparatively easy questions asked in this contest is to encourage a large number of persons to participate. Many hundreds-of-thousands doubtlessly will take part.

It is only natural to suppose, in view of other National Contests of a much more difficult nature, that many thousands of the contestants will submit all correct answers. Then the final decision of the judges will be based on a 50-word letter to be sent in with each set of answers. Some letters could probably be eliminated promptly. The others might just as well be shaken up in a giant receptical, and a raffle held.

Is this $250,000 "Contest" a National Lottery, in disguise?

INTRODUCING

Senior Prexy — Sans Robes Revealed As Informal Personality

By JAMES F. HAUGHTON

THE USUAL group of chow time jitterbugs was gathered about Lanie's nickelodian waiting for some innocent "Frosh" to part with some of his carfare, when out of the center of the cluster came the remark, "Aw, Artie Shaws' got B. G. beat all hollow; and say did you hear Clem Williams' new outfit at he shore this Summer."

Forcing our way into the group we finally found that this interesting remark eminated from a gent who'd have a hard time looking over a rain barrel, but we had to admit he was very convincing. The gent in question, in case you don't recognize his picture in the center of this ditty, is Bill Ward the new stroke of the Senior crew.

Now don't get the impression that Bill Ward is a dyed in the wool jitter bug, for that's not the case. But you know how it is, busy executives have to have some relaxation.

Attended West Catholic

This gent named Ward landed on the local acreage back in the Fall of '35, after doling out sugar, smiles and smirks as a manager of a chain store for four years. He garnered his necessary 16 credits at West Catholic High for entrance into Father Dougherty's group. While at the Burr's bailiwick, Bill got in some practice for his Villanova expedition by attending the meeting of the student council and using his spare time to advantage on the class magazine.

But back to '35 we roll. During his Frosh year "Will" insists he was primarily a student and secondarily a student, too.

But in his year of sophistication, as Esquire calls the Sophomore stretch, the mighty mite got into the groove and had himself initiated into the L. K. D. frat which harbors the important medico men. Oh yes, he also managed to work in a little time between labs on assignments for the Campus sheet, thus making him a member of the college staff. He's held this same position for two years and Tofani-Hows Co. are counting on our subject for some brilliant work this collection of semesters.

Majors in Biology

The space between our Bill's second and third year of enlightment was quite an eventful period and our boy must have chanced upon a copy of Dale Carnegie's best seller ,for he was a changed man when the Fall of '36 popped up. Bill decided his interest lies in the education field and packed up his locker and left Father Dougherty's boys for Doc McHugh's pedagogues. But he wasn't to forget his old friends, so he decided to major in biological studies. Then, too, Bill's executive ability came to the attention of the Junior politcos who ushered him into the student council. The latter group, not to be outdone, selected him as their treasurer.

With all this executive experience it was natural that our boy had to have some place to use his talents to advantage, so the gentlemen who are now called seniors, selected Bill Ward as their prexy to guide the ship of '39.

For a gentleman who has so many duties you may query as to how he does it, but "Wee Willie" also has a romantic interest. This fair part of the narration hails from Rosemont via West Philly and she answers to the name of Claire. No. we didn't get her phone number.

With the war scare providing the editors of daily journals with plenty of glibber, it may interest you to know that Bill is a "War Baby" who put in his appearance on Oct. 15, 1914, right in Billy Penn's town.

Bill has garnered a vicarious fame as a radical philosopher on the why's and wherefore's of college men. On hearing one of his monologues in dialect one might suspect a daffy "Schiepperman" but it's all in fun. In future years high school students will probably model their conduct after that cynical Biology prof — our erstwhile Pres.—the dapper, impeccable Mr. Ward.

Approximately 10 per cent of the new girls entering the University of Wichita this Fall showed a positive reaction to the tests for tuberculosis. Similar figures for the male enrollment have not yet been complied. The test which is now this year is based on sensitivity resulting from serum induced into the skin of the forearm.

A positive reaction does not necessarily indicate that a student is now infected with tuberculosis. Positive reactions are shown by all who have ever carried the germ. Those responsible for the tests have pointed out, however, that because one has sound lungs is no proof that the disease may not be lurking in his joints, trachea, or bones.

RINGSIDE BEDS

Colleges, whose football bowls stand empty between grid seasons, are watching with interest the program of building low-cost dormitories in the "under seats" area of the University of Ohio's stadium. A growing number of students have been eating and sleeping in the horseshide dormitories at a cost of only $3.25 a week. Recently another section of the stadium's insides was converted into living quarters for 120 men, making a total of about 300 student residents.

It is estimated that more than 2000 students could live within the concrete walls if all available space were used. Under the co-operative plan the students pay about $125 a year, a co-operative board handles the buying, and all the residents share the work. The only paid employees are two cooks. On football Saturdays, most of the residents work selling programs, collecting tickets, or helping on the field.

Over 1500 people have earned cerdits towards a degree at N. Y. U. by studying what is perhaps the most fascinating subject in the world—themselves. In a course on the personality improvement, they watch motion pictures of themselves and listen to phonograph records of their own voice to discover unpleasant mannerisms.

They take a dozen different tests of initiative, thoroughness, concentration, observation, adaptability, knowledge, leadership, powers of expression, organizing ability, and the impression they make upon others. On the basis of the results, as analyzed with the aid of psychologists, they plot their own "profiles," noting their strong and weak points.

FOR a modern entrepeneur to extract riches from a foreign power immune from the legislation of the nation possessing the resources and, in defiance of local authority, even going so far as to renege on taxes, requires that he be strong enough to crack the whip over the nation.

Apparently our compatriot exploiters of Central America, desiring to have more privileges than the citizens themselves, have that power. Witness the current pressure being brought to bear on Mexico by our State Department.

Economic pressure is followed by economic war and often military force. Mexico is a weak nation. A tyrannical Uncle Sam could reduce her to vassalage. That is why her standing up to certain imperialistic United States capitalists is courageous.

If we pursue the present policy with regard to this situation it will force into power a movement far worse than the present administration. Calles, the anti-religious vulture, is waiting his opportunity to swoop down on Mexico with another revolution. When the Catholic Church uttered warnings as to the trend in Mexico, she was shushed as endangering the good neighbor policy, but now, in a situation far less serious from a humanitarian view point, wire-pullers cast the big brother cloak to the winds.

If Secretary Hull is impartial, he will grow apoplectic over other foreign nations, for example Great Britain and France, who owe us so much more. Moreover, no profit has accrued from our loan to Britain, whereas the interest from the Mexican investments has amounted to many times the principle. Furthermore, our trans-oceanic debtors are spending our money on armaments, while Mexico is devoting what little she has to developing her resources in attempts at social welfare. The "idealistic" Mr. Hull, however, is afraid to be consistent.

Possible solution would be for Britain to consider the debts Mexico owes her as paid and strike the amount from the account of Britain's war-debt to us. Such a generous act on our part would not only solidify friendship with Southern neighbors but make it possible for Mexico to recover sufficiently to pay us something by reducing her burden.

IN MEMORIAM

TEACHING by his example the Divine Lessons of Christ, Whom he served faithfully throughout his lifetime, the late and beloved Rev. John F. O'Brien, O. S. A., associate professor of English at Villanova College, remains in the memories of those who knew him as the model of Catholic devotion and religious zeal.

Foremost in his interests as an Augustinian Father were his students, who will long remember the kindly priest who taught them, primarily, to live in keeping with their Eternal Destiny, and secondarily, the history and philosophy of their mother-tongue.

In his classes he never forgot that in education there must always be an impelling and cognizant manifestation of the Creator and the subsequent bidding to His Command. His students remain consoled with the knowledge that, with exception of his God and his own, the love of Father O'Brien was for his student. May those whom he loved, and who benefited by his teaching repay to him that love in prayer and memory.

Members of the faculty were ever appreciative of his charity of thought and lightness of mood. Even those not of Villanova, saw Villanova through him.

Administration, faculty, students and alumni unite in prayer and loyal tribute to his name, his memory. May his soul rest in peace.

HELLO, FROSH

VILLANOVA welcomes you. Here you will discover a new world of opportunities. An extensive program of activities is laid out before you, as it is for every freshman class. Co-operate, and you will enjoy not only an education, but a lot of fun. You are co-operating when you do your assignments, avoid breaches of discipline, and participate in the college affairs.

Yes, we mean college. Remember that. Discard that provincial high school attitude. Keep your ears open. Learn all you can about Villanova history, customs, campus, personnel, and students. Don't be taken in by rumors. Get your knowledge from authority, be it professor, dean, councilor, officer, newspaper, catalog, or books. Don't talk commonplaces. Take your cue from upper classmen rather than other freshmen.

Incipient leaders will arise in your ranks, many of whom deal in sophistries. Keep your head. Join in the fun, but don't be misled. Many of your comrades will feign a wordly wisdom indorsed by prurient talk. Do not choose your friends from among them.

Say HELLO! to everyone you meet. Let yourself be known to other Villanovans. An acquaintance with your predecessors will make it pleasant for you. If there are alumni from your high school here or if you have fellows' names from other sources, look them up and introduce yourself. Greet everyone, whether you have seen his face before or not, with "Hello!" Upon you depends to a great extent the preservation of the democratic environment at Villanova.

"In the event of a hostile air raid," says a writer, "some of the public statues would be the first things to suffer." Even so, we're still in favor of peace.—Montreal Star.

The Historian's Dilemma

BY

Dr. Harold F. Hartman

IN this era of political confusion and governmental instability the task of the professional historian has become relatively acute. The prolific generation of new political situations has created many new historical problems. But of more important significance there have evolved other new situations, which are essentially non-political in character, influencing the complexity of these new historical problems.

It is indeed true that the incessant motivation of perplexing economic trends has greatly modified the basic elements which once confronted the historian. Moreover, social upheavals have tended to positively distort the fundamental historical movements which were formally marked by relative simplicity and peculiar normalities. Even the intellectual and religious developments of this modern era have greatly aggrevated the instant problems. Consequently the problems associated with a study and understandnig of history have developed into embarrassing complexities.

Truly then, history no longer consists in the simple recording of political events, an unrelated narration of political movements. But the man in the street, the student in the college class have quite frequently failed to realize this modified situation produced by the progressive evolution of our modern contemporary civilization. Or may I better assert, if the individuals in question have taken cognizance of the altered situation they have been derelict in estimating the consequences affecting the work of the historian. Indeed, and this is exceedingly difficult to explain, many regard the contemporary historian as an individual cloaked with the attributes of an ancient prophet. His extraordinary powers to foretell the distant future are amazingly sought. His divinely inspired predictions are being continually invoked. Certainly the reason for this apparent glorification of the historian's faculties remains the product of intellectual mystery.

Now the recent crisis, or may I preferably say, the current crisis in Europe provoked by the Sudeten problem, is a case in point. As the historian-analyst well knows, the circumstances and movements responsible for the production of that particular problem (i.e. the Sudeten problem) are not so easy to ascertain. Marked by perennial developments, questions relating to the determination of the origin of the problem become exceedingly difficult. Nevertheless the man in the street or the student in the college class expects from the historian predicitions as to the imediate future. In order to illustrate practically let me submit the following as examples of questions commonly sub itted. All of them, you will easily observe, invit prophetic assertions. And here are but a few:

When is the next European war to become an actuality? Will the German chancellor be satisfied with the enforcement of the diplomatic settlement accomplished at Munich? How long before Europe and the world is confronted with another crisis jeopardizing international peace?

Seldom then, and this seems to me to be extremely significant, is the man in the street or the student in the college class particularly interested in the historical facts which have produced the actual problem. Factors which have basically contributed to the origins of the problem are not their immediate concern. Nor are their individual interests aroused by a study of movements or trends affecting the early developments of the problems. Indeed the curiosities of these same individuals are often unconcerned with an analysis of the pertinent facts which constitute the elements of the problem. Consequently as a result of these scholastic deficiencies, or may I better say, in spite of them, such questions as the following remain unsubmitted. All of these questions relate to the same instant problem (i.e. the Sudeten problem) and are far more important than the previous ones, categorically noted. They read as follows:

What are the essential provisions of the treaty of Versailles relating to the present situation in Czechoslovakia?

What is the correct meaning of this principle "the self-determination of nations" which the German chancellor asserts is inoperative in the Sudetenland? Are there any elements present in the current crisis which were causative factors of past European crises?

It then appears evident that the historian is primarily concerned with an appreciative analysis of the facts which have generated our present civilization. He is not interested in making glaring predictions as to the future. His field of endeavor, although an extremely extensive one, must admit of academic limitations. He dare not safely transgress beyond its broad domains. That he is continually asked to make these unnecessary encroachments epitomizes the historian's dilemma. Whether this perplexing predicament—which is continually burdening his scholastic endeavors—will ever be solved, the future will tell. Indeed the historian may not even utter predictions concerning this expectancy.

"I'd Rather Be Right," huge Broadway success, starring George M. Cohan, arrived in town yesterday for a two week stay.

No theatrical production in recent years has had as much publicity as this laughable lampoon of the New Deal.

But it must be said, to the credit of those raked by the author's pens, that they have all taken it as good sports.

Members of the President's family, as well as member of his Cabinet, and the Supreme Court, are among those impersonated, and they have all seen and enjoyed the play.

Opening scenes of "I'd Rather Be Right," are laid in Central Park, where a young lover, despairing of getting married because of his low wages, falls asleep in his sweetheart's arms and dreams he meets President Roosevelt.

After hearing the young lover's tale of woe, the President call's a cabinet meeting, colorful musical numbers follow, fire-side chats are held, and finally a riotous budget-balancing dance leads up to the declaration by the President that the trouble with the country is that he doesn't know what the trouble with the country is, and that he will have to have a third term to find out.

INTRODUCING

Senior Prexy — Sans Robes Revealed As Informal Personality

By JAMES F. HAUGHTON

THE USUAL group of chow time jitterbugs was gathered about Louie's nickelodian waiting for some innocent "Frosh" to part with some of his carfare, when out of the center of the cluster came the remark, "Aw, Artie Shaws' got B. G. beat all hollow; and say did you hear Clem Williams' new outfit at he shore this Summer."

Forcing our way into the group we finally found that this interesting remark emanated from a gent who'd have a hard time looking over a rain barrel, but we had to admit he was very convincing. The gent in question, in case you don't recognize his picture in the center of this ditty, is Bill Ward the new stroke of the Senior crew.

Now don't get the impression that Bill Ward is a dyed in the wool jitter bug, for that's not the case. But you know how it is, busy executives have to have some relaxation.

Attended West Catholic

This gent named Ward landed on the local acreage back in the Fall of '35, after doling out sugar, smiles and smirks as a manager of a chain store for four years. He garnered his necessary 16 credits at West Catholic High for entrance into Father Dougherty's group. While at the Burr's bailiwick, Bill got in some practice for his Villanova expedition by attending the meeting of the student council and using his spare time to advantage on the class magazine.

But back to '35 we roll. During his Frosh year "Will" insists he was primarily a student and secondarily a student, too.

But in his year of sophistication, as Esquire calls the Sophomore stretch, the mighty mite got into the groove and had himself initiated into the L. K. D. frat which harbors the important medico men. Oh yes, he also managed to work in a little time between labs on assignments for the Campus sheet, thus making him a member of the college staff. He's held this same position for two years and Tofani-Hows Co. are counting on our subject for some brilliant work this collection of semesters.

Majors In Biology

The space between our Bill's second and third year of enlightment was quite an eventful period and our boy must have chanced upon a copy of Dale Carnegie's best seller ,for he was a changed man when the Fall of '36 popped up. Bill decided his interest lies in the education field and packed up his locker and left Father Dougherty's boys for Doc McHugh's pedagogues. But he wasn't to forget his old friends, so he decided to major in biological studies. Then, too, Bill's executive ability came to the attention of the Junior politicos who ushered him into the student council. The latter group, not to be outdone, selected him as their treasurer.

WILLIAM J. WARD

With all this executive experience it was natural that our boy had to have some place to use his talents to advantage, so the gentlemen who are now called seniors, selected Bill Ward as their prexy to guide the ship of '39.

For a gentleman who has so many duties you may query as to how he does it, but "Wee Willie" also has a romantic interest. This fair part of the nation hails from Rosemont via West Philly and she answers to the name of Claire. No, we didn't get her phone number.

With the war scare providing the editors of daily journals with plenty of glibber, it may interest you to know that Bill is a "War Baby" who put in his appearance on Oct. 13, 1914, right in Billy Penn's town.

Bill has garnered a vicarious fame as a radical philosopher on the why's and wherefore's of college men. On hearing one of his monologues in dialect one might suspect a daffy "Schlepperman" but it's all in fun. In future years high school students will probably model their conduct after that cynical Biology prof — our erstwhile Pres.—the dapper, impeccable Mr. Ward.

College Chatter

By Frank Reale

Approximately 10 per cent of the new girls entering the University of Wichita this Fall showed a positive reaction to the tests for tuberculosis. Similar figures for the male enrollment have not yet been compiled. The test which is new this year is based on sensitivity resulting from serum induced into the skin of the forearm.

A positive reaction does not necessarily indicate that a student is now infected with tuberculosis. Positive reactions are shown by all who have ever carried the germ. Those responsible for the tests have pointed out, however, that because one has sound lungs is no proof that the disease may not be lurking in his joints, trachea, or bones.

RINGSIDE BEDS

Colleges, whose football bowls stand empty between grid seasons, are watching with interest the program of building low-cost dormitories in the "under seats" area of the University of Ohio's stadium. A growing number of students have been eating and sleeping in the horseshide dormitories at a cost of only $3.25 a week. Recently another section of the stadium's insides was converted into living quarters for 120 men, making a total of about 300 student residents.

It is estimated that more than 2000 students could live within the concrete walls if all available space were used. Under the co-operative plan the students pay about $125 a year, a co-operative board handles the buying, and all the residents share the work. The only paid employees are two cooks. On football Saturdays, most of the residents work selling programs, collecting tickets, or helping on the field.

Over 1500 people have earned credits towards a degree at N. Y. U. by studying what is perhaps the most fascinating subject in the world—themselves. In a course on the personality improvement, they watch motion pictures of themselves and listen to phonograph records of their own voice to discover unpleasant mannerisms.

They take a dozen different tests of initiative, thoroughness, concentration, observation, adaptability, knowledge, leadership, powers of expression, organizing ability, and the impression they make upon others. On the basis of the results, as analyzed with the aid of psychologists, they plot their own "profiles," noting their strong and weak points.

First Literary Magazine Proposed For Publication

Administration and Faculty of College Favor Adoption of New Student Journal; All Students Requested to Submit Articles

REV. JOHN McSHEA IS CHOSEN ADVISER

Acting upon the suggestion of Rev. E .V. Stanford, O. S. A., president, a number of Arts students last week took definite preliminary steps to supply the Villanova campus with a literary magazine. The Rev. J. A. Burns, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Arts, has also evidenced high regard for the establishment of such a periodical. A faculty moderator has already been chosen to head the staff of the prospective publication in the person of the Rev. John J. McShea, O. S. A., professor of English.

Suggestions that the administrative organization for this organ be limited to the Departments of Arts and Education have been discarded in favor of a more general type. All students on the campus will be extended the invitation to submit articles for publication and are urged to do so. Faculty articles as well as undergraduate contributions will likewise be solicited and featured.

The general content of this literary magazine will follow the standards as set forth by other leading publications of a similar nature. The universally accepted cultured subjects of history, philosophy, the classical languages, and the like will be attractively set forth in a manner calculated to foster general interest and additional enlightenment among all classes, even the specialists of a certain field remotely removed from the aforementioned class. Original poetry, both of a serious nature and otherwise, along with articles of a lighter vein, of interest to the secular class, will likewise have their respective places. The ideal is not to present a dull, sordid appearance but to bring forth a live, worth-while bulletin of high and permanent literary value.

According to these premature expectations, publication will be made quarterly for the subscribers. As in the case of all satisfactory things of a material nature, progress is slow and quite difficult. Consequently, not wishing to publish an inferior bulletin, the prospective staff plans first to experiment on several mimeographed editions before attempting an official publication. The initial copy in its magazine form will undoubtedly not go to press before the latter part of the present scholastic year.

At present, students in the School of Arts are taking the necessary pains for founding this bulletin. Prices of printing and the paper to be used are being taken by them —and a temporary staff is being selected. It must be stated, however, that all others interested are eligible for permanent staff membership.

BAND WILL MAKE TRIP TO ALLENTOWN

B. A. Passanante to Lead Musicians at Second Seasonal Contest

Villanova College Band will represent the Main Line institution at Saturday's football contest with Muhlenburg at Allentown, Pa. The entire organization of collegiate musicians will make the trip.

Under its new conductor, the Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., the Villanova band exhibited its musical and marching technique in its first appearance at the American International game last week.

Approximately twenty new members reported when the band began organization a few weeks ago. These new musicians were realized from among the freshman applicants.

At the Allentown fray the band will be under the direction of Bert Passanatte, senior science student. Paul D. Teel, director, will be unable to make the trip. Passanante directed the band at the Manhattan and Boston football contests last year. John Eidracher, sophomore science student, will fill the role of drum-mapor for the entire season.

PRESS APOSTOLATE REORGANIZES UNDER REV. EDWARD M'KEE

Increase in Distribution of Catholic Literature Planned by Group

Plans for the reorganization of the Catholic Press Apostolates are now under way for the present scholastic year. Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., its moderator, outlined extensive plans which he hopes will be put into practice in the near future.

In so far as familiarity with Catholic Pamphlets has been one of the aims of the organization, it has been decided to increase the number of pamphlets racks now in use. New pamphlets racks are to be purchased and will be placed in convenient places for the use of the students. The racks will be available in the rear of the dining hall, at the library, day students room, Mendel Hall and pie shop.

700 Pamphlets Sold

Within the past few months over 700 pamphlets have been sold in the rear of the chapel. It is the purpose of the organization to keep the parishioners, as well as students, well supplied with up-to-date pamphlets. Many encouraging remarks have been made by the people of the parish concerning the pamphlet racks in the rear of the chapel.

Leading editorials from Catholic newspapers and magazines will be placed on the bulletin boards as soon as the apostolate is reorganized. The Christian Front, America, and Brooklyn Tablet will be distributed to the students who have subscribed to these magazines and newspapers when the subscriptions are complete.

This organization, under the leadership of its moderator, has undertaken the task of organizing and collecting pamphlets which will be used as collateral reading material based on the courses given by the religion department. These pamphlets will be available to the students at the library.

At present, Father McKee is endeavoring to select a staff of officers for the organization. Any student interested in the aims of the Catholic Press Apostolate should report to its moderator within the next few days. The number of members in the organization is small, due to the nature of its work.

Two Campus Clubs Begin Organization For Ensuing Year

Connecticut and Massachusetts Groups Begin Campus Activity

Two of the four campus locality clubs, the Wilkes-Barre and Connecticut groups, got under way for the new term last Wednesday night with a welcome to all new and freshman members.

The Wilkes Barre Club through its president, Gilbert Knoll, and the Connecticut club through its chairman, Carl Pantelo, extended greetings to the new and prospective members and explained the purpose of their respective organizations.

Included in the business of both clubs was the proposed Inter-Society Basket Ball league, the purpose of which is to promote good will among the campus organizations. The proposal was received wholeheartedly by the members of both clubs. The new league would include beside the above mentioned organizations, the North Jersey and the Massachuesettes clubs, both of which expect to get underway during the coming week.

In order to better acquaint each member of the Connecticut club with the home locality of others, a new idea is to be tried. The plan would have each member prepare a short talk on his home to wn.In this way it is hoped by those in charge to allow for a closer-knit organization since the club embraces the whole state of Connecticut.

ited proportionally to your seriousness of manner and zeal for improvement."

Offered for Students

As usual each Sacrifice of the Mass offered during the retreat will be offered for a specific purpose. Thursday's Mass will have the students of the College as the objects of its benefits while the Mass on Friday morning will be offered up for both the living and deceased parents of the Villanova students.

It is the ideal sought after by Father Boyle to have the majority of the student body to recieve Holy Communion on both days of this retreat. As a result, ample opportunity will be presented to recieve the Sacrament of Penance. Confessions will be heard every morning before Mass, after each conference, and after evening Benediction. It must be noted, also, that October 7, the Friday on which the retreat closes, will be the First Friday of the month, and an additional reason for the reception of the Eucharist.

The schedule to be followed by all residents for the retreat is here listed: Mass at 7:00 A. M.; 9:00 A. M.—Conference; 11:00 A. M.—a second Conference; 3:30 P. M.—Stations of the Cross; 7:00 P. M.—Conference and Benediction.

The non-residents' program of events follows: Mass and Conference at 8:00 A. M.; a second Conference—10:00 A. M.; the third Conference at 12:30 P. M.; Stations of the Cross—1:00 P. M.; and closing at 2:30 P. M. with a Conference and Benediction.

On Friday, Mass for the residents will be at 7:00 A. M., while the non-residents will assist at Mass an hour later, at 8:00 A .M. After both Masses a short discourse will be made, and the Papal Blessing conferred.

Yearlings Arrive With Enthusiasm For Villanova Spirit and Traditions

By TOM O'MAHONEY

From Maine to California, from West Chester to Narberth they come, all seeking knowledge in its purest form.

Villanova's class of 1942, some 290 strong, descended upon this campus three weeks ago to be met by thirty-five upper classmen in the guise of sophomores wearing white hats, a copy of the so-called Freshman Bible, or students handbook, and regs.

Frosh Get Regs

It might be well to dwell upon the regs; or regulation attire, as the literate would say. They consists of one (1) dark blue cap, henceforth known as a "dink," a button, to be worn on the coat lapel, which carries the freshman's number, name and the fact that the wearer is that odd creature, a freshman. These two articles are to be worn at all times.

Among the rules which the frosh are expected to observe are "Get the Hello habit," "Carry matches for the convenience of the upperclassmen," "In a bus, trolley or train, stand until all upperclassmen present are seated." Naturally, the class of '42 wouldn't dream of disobeying these or any other rules—you see, they're different.

It was learned in Freshman meetings that the Frosh are woefully deficient in their musical education. None could sing "Bewildered" when asked to by those white-capped tormentors. However, they made up for that by coining expressive nicknames for one an other, all of which fitted very well For istance, there were "Stinger,' "Snake," "Wolf," "Angel Face, "Little Man,' and even a "Charli McCarthy."

Frosh Warns Montgomery

While it is still too early to judge frosh athletes word has gone around about many promising 42-ers on the football field. Undoubtedly there are some future Blue stalwarts wearing 'Doc" Jacobs' green suits. It is known, too, that there are several good prospects for Coach Al Severance's basketeers on the campus. One, in fact, told Jim Montgomery, lanky senior playing his final year, that he'd better watch his job. Luckily for Jim, freshman rules are in force, and the men of '42 won't be eligible for the varsity this year.

Outstanding among the characteristics of the yearlings was their evident willingness to accept Villanova traditions in a spirit characteristic of Villanova sportsmen. With their cheering and enthusiastic compliance with Frosh regulations this year's crop of novices showed that they were eligible to carry the standards as a unit, as the Class of 1942.

Since Villanova was founded in 1842, this is the centennial class, and much is epected of it. Even now, it seems to be well on its way toward being as fine a class as any within recent years. The sophomores will find that out on Field Day!

Coach Julian Presents a Veteran Team Rated to Win the E. P. Conference Title

GOOD CROWD EXPECTED

A football rivalry that lapsed 12 years ago will be resumed next week when "Clipper" Smith brings his blood-thirsty Wildcats to the Muhlenberg campus, next Saturday afternoon.

The largest crowd ever to witness a football game in Allentown is expected to jam Coffield Stadium to capacity for the game with the Mules.

Interest in the game was shown as early as last June when it was announced that the locals would meet Muhlenberg at Allentown. Since that day orders for tickets have been flooding the Muhlenberg athletic offices.

Game Holds Spotlight

With the exception of two high school games in the Lehigh Valley sector, the football spotlight has fallen upon the coming clash—the first Villanova - Muhlenberg fracas since 1926. Lehigh and Lafayette are scheduled to play on fields outside of Pennsylvania. The Moravian-Lebanon Valley game having been moved up to Friday for a night tussle in Allentown.

Muhlenberg sports a veteran eleven coached by Alvin Julian, former Ashland High mentor, whose teams carried off numerous State interscholastic titles. Julian has been coaching at the Allentown school since the 1936 season.

Although they lost their opener to a strong Upsala club, 14-13, on an intercepted pass in the closing minutes of play, the Mules have evidently found themselves as is

BASCA SHINES IN VICTORY

By TOM CARBINE

With a few Indian braves to lead them, the Wildcats of Villanova outscored- out-fought, out-played and out-yelled the American International eleven 59-0 at the Main LIne stadium last Saturday afternoon.

Displaying power, deception, finesse, and above all, enthusiasm, the Blue and White experienced no trouble at all during the whole session. From the very first play of the game when Harvey Buek intercepted an American International pass, "Clipper" Smith's boys played to perfection. There is no question but that the visitors were playing a team far above their class. So it is difficult to say just how fine a team Villanova has. At no time were they in any predicament where they had to call on their last ounce of courage and stamina. It will take a team of a sort more powerful than American International to prove how deep these qualities lie and whether they can stand the test of fire.

'Cats Score on Line Buck

Within three minutes of the opening whistle Villanova had converted a pass intercepted by Harvey Buck into the first touchdown when Tom McMahon crashed across the final white stripe.

The next score was made in two plays. First "Buzz" Howlett carried the ball for 40 yards on a play that featured some fine down-field interference. The remaining 25

Meaghermen Battle Tulane Outfit to Scoreless Tie

By SAUL WALLACH

From the North, East, South and West, come reports of the deeds of future Villanova gridiron opponents, some cheerful and others bearing ominous notes of what the future has in store for the Wildcats.

Out at Temple Stadium, the country's leading exponents of the art of leather lugging, the Pittsburgh Panthers, found Temple University to their liking and proceeded to shellac the Owls 28-6.

In that defeat, the Owls managed to flash a passing attack which netted them one touchdown. Temple went into the air 18 times Saturday afternoon and completed fourteen of them.

The Owls will not forget Goldberg, Daddio and company for quite sometime, and neither will Allan Sturges, brilliant Temple tackle, who broke his leg in a pile-up late in the first half.

Tulane Stops Auburn

Way down in Dixie, New Orleans to be exact, John Meagher's Auburn express was slowed down a bit by a fighting Tulane team. The Green, flashing speed with a smart defense held the Alabamans to a scoreless deadlock.

Minus such outstanding performers as Jimmy Fenton, Bill Hitchcock, Ralph Sivell, Freddy Holman and Dutch Heath, the minions of Meagher are nevertheless rated the best in the Southeastern Conference, if not in the nation.

New stars have arisen on the Auburn campus in George Kenmore, Milt Howell, "Speck" Kelley and "Piggy" Walker.

CINDERMEN REPORT FOR CROSS-COUNTRY

Gulteras, Bellew, Delate, McCabe to Form Nucleus of Embryonic Squad

This week Villanova finally will see the debuts of one of Track Coach Jim Elliott's pet ideas. For the past few seasons he has been planning to undertake a cross-country schedule at the Main Line institution. Now with the fine material on hand he has decided that the present is an opportune time for presenting a Wildcat cross-country team to the Intercollegiate track world.

To Meet Haverford

After two or more weeks of preliminary work the team will take on the hill and dale team from Haverford College. The backbone of the team will probably be Joe McCabe and Tom Delate.

However, the sprintmen, Barney Bellew and Bill Guilteras, will also be out there giving their best over the longer distance.

If the team shows promise against Haverford, Coach Elliott has indicated that he will arrange for a more extensive schedule. The reason why Coach Elliott has been prompted to organize the devotees of this Fall sport at Villanova into a team is mainly to condition his men for the indoor

BASKETBALL SQUAD REPORTS FOR DRILL

Outlook Bright with Return of Last Year's Entire Varsity Material

Confronted with the task of preparing a basketball squad to face one of the hardest schedules ever arranged for a Villanova court aggregation, Al Severance, varsity coach has wasted little time in assembling his team for the coming season. Roanoke College will provide the opening day competition on December 1.

A schedule of 28 games, rivalling, if not exceeding the calibre of opposition faced by last year's court squad will be met by this year's edition. The minions of Severance turned in a record of 25 victories against five defeats at the close of the season. Included in the list of wins were Temple, national champions and the famed Violets of New York University.

Varsity Intact

Severance is fortunate in having every member of last year's team back again for the coming season. With the addition of several freshman stars, who aided in the 58-31 demise of the Temple yearlings.

Headed by Duke Duxminski, the Philadelphia districts leading scorer; Jungie Jim Montgomery, third in the scoring records; Mike Lazorchak, diminutive guard; Art Vigilante, captain and guard last season, and dependable Johnny Krutulis, ace forward of the Wildcats, Severance has the identical line-up

Temple Frosh Contest Is Highlight of Yearling Schedule

Inaugurating their 1938 season 27 days after the Varsity, the Villanova Freshman aggregation meet for their first opponent the Owlets of Temple University in an arc-light fray to be played at Roosevelt field in Norristown. In the initial meeting of what is expected to be a long series, the Kittens were able to defeat the Temple-men to the tune of 16 to 7.

Villanova rooters may rest assured that the Blue first year men will give a good account of themselves as daily practice with the Varsity has hardened the gridmen to the football grind. After last year's undefeated season, the men of '42 have a reputation to uphold and a win over Temple would do well toward attaining this end.

Play St. Francis Away

Following on the heels of the game with the Owlets will be the coming encounter with St. Francis Frosh who are to be coped with on November 5 at Loretto, Pa., the home oval of the Saints. It is interesting to note that the Frosh do not meet any opponents at their home stadium but are content to travel.

The final game of the Freshman campaign will be played at Lancaster, Pa., on November 11 (exactly five days following the St. Francis tilt) with the Franklin and Marshall Frosh furnishing the competition. This will be a severe test of the stamina of our future varsity timber as the game will be contested after only five days rest.

Byrum Saam Will Give Play By Play Description of Contest

Rivalry, dormant since 1926 between Villanova and Muhlenberg, will be resumed Saturday on the Allentown turf and will be aired by Byrum Saam, via WIP, starting at 2.15 P. M.

Saam, whose style is closely allied with that of Ted Husing, was the broadcaster of Villanova's games last season and will resume his duties this year under the sponsorship of the Atlantic Refining Company.

His efforts during the Summer months dealt with the Philadelphia Athletics from their Shibe Park retreat where the Wildcat's home contests will be staged this Fall.

Following his airing of Villanova's grid tussles in 1937, Saam went South and broadcast several Texas games. His assistant last Fall was Villanova's Kerby Cushing who gave up his radio duties to assume the post of publicity director at the college.

According to these premature expectations, publication will be made quarterly for the subscribers. As in the case of all satisfactory things of a material nature, progress is slow and quite difficult. Consequently, not wishing to publish an inferior bulletin, the prospective staff plans first to experiment on several mimeographed editions before attempting an official publication. The initial copy in its magazine form will undoubtedly not go to press before the latter part of the present college year.

At present a faculty in the School of Arts are taking the necessary steps for forming this publication. Its cost of printing, and the issue to be circulated to each subscriber, and a suggested [illegible]

PRESS APOSTOLATE REORGANIZES UNDER REV. EDWARD M'KEE

Increase in Distribution of Catholic Literature Planned by Group

Plans for the reorganization of the Catholic Press Apostolates are now under way for the present scholastic year, Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., its moderator, outlined extensive plans which he hopes will be put into practice in the near future.

In so far as familiarity with Catholic Pamphlets has been one of the aims of the organization, it has been decided to increase the number of pamphlets racks now in use. New pamphlets racks are to be purchased and will be placed in convenient places for the use of the students. The racks will be available in the rear of the dining hall, at the library, day students room, Mendel Hall and pre shop.

700 Pamphlets Sold

Within the past few months over 700 pamphlets have been sold in the rear of the chapel. It is the purpose of the organization to keep the parishioners, as well as students, well supplied with up-to-date pamphlets. Many encouraging remarks have been made by the people of the parish concerning the pamphlet racks in the rear of the chapel.

Leading editorials from Catholic newspapers and magazines will be placed on the bulletin boards as soon as the apostolate is reorganized. The Christian Front, American, and Brooklyn Tablet will be distributed to the students who have subscribed to these magazines and newspapers when the subscriptions are complete.

This organization, under the leadership of its moderator, has undertaken the task of organizing and collecting pamphlets which will be used as collateral reading material based on the courses given by the religion department. These pamphlets will be available to the students at the library.

At present, Father McKee is endeavoring to select a staff of officers for the organization. Any student interested in the aims of the Catholic Press Apostolate should report to its moderator within the next few days. The number of monks in the organization is necessary to the nature of its work.

Offered for Students

As usual each Sacrifice of the Mass offered during the retreat will be offered for a specific purpose. Thursday's Mass will have the students of the College as the objects of its benefits while the Mass on Friday morning will be offered up for both the living and deceased parents of the Villanova students.

It is the ideal sought after by Father Boyle to have the majority of the student body to recieve Holy Communion on both days of this retreat. As a result, ample opportunity will be presented to recieve the Sacrament of Penance. Confessions will be heard every morning before Mass, after each conference, and after evening Benediction. It must be noted, also, that October 7, the Friday on which the retreat closes, will be the First Friday of the month, and an additional reason for the reception of the Eucharist.

The schedule to be followed by all residents for the retreat is here listed: Mass at 7.00 A. M.; 9:00 A. M. Conference; 11.00 A. M.; a second Conference; 3.30 P. M. Station of the Cross; 7.00 P. M. Conference and Benediction.

The non-residents' program of events follows: Mass and Conference at 8:00 A. M.; a second Conference 10.00 A. M.; the third Conference at 12:30 P. M.; Stations of the Cross 1.00 P. M.; and closing at 2:30 P. M. with a Conference and Benediction.

On Friday, Mass for the residents will be at 7:00 A. M., while the non-residents will assist at Mass an hour later, at 8:00 A. M. After both Masses a short discourse will be made, and the Papal Blessing conferred.

Yearlings Arrive With Enthusiasm For Villanova Spirit and Traditions

By TOM O'MAHONEY

From Maine to California, from West Chester to Narberth they come, all seeking knowledge in its purest form.

Villanova's class of 1942, some 290 strong, descended upon this campus three weeks ago to be met by thirty-five upper classmen in the guise of sophomores wearing white hats, a copy of the so-called Freshman Bible, or students handbook, and regs.

Frosh Get Regs

It might be well to dwell upon the regs; or regulation attire, as the literate would say. They consists of one (1) dark blue cap, henceforth known as a "dink," a button, to be worn on the coat lapel, which carries the freshman's number, name and the fact that the wearer is that odd creature, a freshman. These two articles are to be worn at all times.

Among the rules which the frosh are expected to observe are "Get the Hello habit," "Carry matches for the convenience of the upperclassmen," "In a bus, trolley or train, stand until all upperclassmen present are seated." Naturally, the class of '42 wouldn't dream of disobeying these or any other rules—you see, they're different.

It was learned in Freshman meetings that the Frosh are woefully deficient in their musical education. None could sing "Bewildered" when asked to by those whitecapped tormentors. However, they made up for that by coining expressive nicknames for one an other, all of which fitted very well For istance, there were "Stinger,' "Snake," "Wolf," "Angel Face, "Little Man,' and even a "Charli McCarthy."

Frosh Warns Montgomery

While it is still too early to judge frosh athletes word has gone around about many promising 42-ers on the football field. Undoubtedly there are some future Blue stalwarts wearing 'Doc" Jacobs' green suits. It is known, too, that there are several good prospects for Coach Al Severance's basketeers on the campus. One, in fact, told Jim Montgomery, lanky senior playing his final year, that he'd better watch his job. Luckily for Jim, freshman rules are in force, and the men of '42 won't be eligible for the varsity this year.

Oustanding among the characteristics of the yearlings was their evident willingness to accept Villanova traditions in a spirit characteristic of Villanova sportsmen. With their cheering and enthusiastic compliance with Frosh regulations this year's crop of novices showed that they were eligible to carry the standards as a unit, as the Class of 1942.

Since Villanova was founded in 1842, this is the centennial class, and much is epected of it. Even now, it seems to be well on its way toward being a fine a class as any within recent years. The sophomores will find that out on Field Day!

Two Campus Clubs Begin Organization For Ensuing Year

Connecticut and Massachusetts Groups Begin Campus Activity

Two of the four campus locality clubs, the Wilkes-Barre and Connecticut groups, got under way for the new term last Wednesday night with a welcome to all new and freshman members.

The Wilkes Barre Club through its president, Gilbert Knoll, and the Connecticut club through its chairman, Carl Pantelo, extended greetings to the new and prospective members and explained the purpose of their respective organizations.

Included in the business of both clubs was the proposed Inter-Society Basket Ball league, the purpose of which is to promote good will among the campus organizations. The proposal was received wholeheartedly by the members of both clubs. The new league would include beside the above mentioned organizations, the North Jersey and the Massachusesettes clubs, both of which expect to get underway during the coming week.

In order to better acquaint each member of the Connecticut club with the home locality of others, a new idea is to be tried. The plan would have each member prepare a short talk on his home to wn. In this way it is hoped by those in charge to allow for a closer-knit organization since the club embraces the whole state of Connecticut.

BAND WILL MAKE TRIP TO ALLENTOWN

B. A. Passanante to Lead Musicians at Second Seasonal Contest

Villanova College Band will represent the Main Line institution at Saturday's football contest with Muhlenburg at Allentown, Pa. The entire organization of collegiate musicians will make the trip.

Under its new conductor, the Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., the Villanova band exhibited its musical and marching technique in its first appearance at the American International game last week.

Approximately twenty new members reported when the band began organization a few weeks ago. These new musicians were realized from among the freshman applicants.

At the Allentown fray the band will be under the direction of Bert Passanatte, senior science student. Paul D. Teel, director, will be unable to make the trip. Passanante directed the band at the Manhattan and Boston football contests last year. John Eldracher, sophomore science student, will fill the role of drum-major for the entire season.

VILLANOVA RECORD AT STAKE IN CLASH WITH MUHLENBERG

GOOD CROWD EXPECTED

A football rivalry that lapsed 12 years ago will be resumed next week when "Clipper" Smith brings his blood-thirsty Wildcats to the Muhlenberg campus, next Saturday afternoon.

The largest crowd ever to witness a football game in Allentown is expected to jam Cedfield Stadium to capacity for the game with the Mules.

Interest in the game was shown as early as last June when it was announced that the locals would meet Muhlenberg at Allentown. Since that day orders for tickets have been flooding the Muhlenberg athletic offices.

Game Holds Spotlight

With the exception of two high school games in the Lehigh Valley sector, the football spotlight has fallen upon the coming clash—the first Villanova - Muhlenberg fracas since 1926. Lehigh and Lafayette are scheduled to play on fields outside of Pennsylvania. The Moravian-Lebanon Valley game having been moved up to Friday for a night tussle in Allentown.

Muhlenberg sports a veteran eleven coached by Alvin Juliao, former Ashland High mentor, whose teams carried off numerous State interscholastic titles. Juliao has been coaching at the Allentown school since the 1936 season.

Although they lost their opener to a strong Upsala club, 14-13, on an intercepted pass in the closing minutes of play, the Mules have evidently found themselves as is

BASCA SHINES IN VICTORY

By TOM CARBINE

With a few Indian braves to lead them, the Wildcats of Villanova out-scored, out-fought, out-played and out-yelled the American International eleven 59-0 at the Main Line stadium last Saturday afternoon.

Displaying power, deception, finesse, and above all, enthusiasm, the Blue and White experienced no trouble at all during the whole session. From the very first play of the game when Harvey Buck intercepted an American International pass, "Clipper" Smith's boys played to perfection. There is no question but that the visitors were playing a team far above their class. So it is difficult to say just how fine a team Villanova has. At no time were they in any predicament where they had to call on their last ounce of courage and stamina. It will take a team of a sort more powerful than American International to prove how deep these qualities lie and whether they can stand the test of fire.

'Cats Score on Line Buck

Within three minutes of the opening whistle Villanova had converted a pass intercepted by Harvey Buck into the first touchdown when Tom McMahon crashed across the final white stripe.

The next score was made in two plays. First "Buzz" Howlett carried the ball for 40 yards on a play that featured some fine down-field interference. The remaining 25

WIP TO BROADCAST MUHLENBERG CLASH

Byrum Saam Will Give Play By Play Description of Contest

Rivalry, dormant since 1926 between Villanova and Muhlenberg, will be resumed Saturday on the Allentown turf and will be aired by Byrum Saam, via WIP, starting at 2:15 P. M.

Saam, whose style is closely allied with that of Ted Husing, was the broadcaster of Villanova's games last season and will resume his duties this year under the sponsorship of the Atlantic Refining Company.

His efforts during the Summer months dealt with the Philadelphia Athletics from their Shibe Park retreat where the Wildcat's home contests will be staged this Fall.

Following his airing of Villanova's gridd tussles in 1937, Saam went South and broadcast several Texas games. His assistant last Fall was Villanova's Kerby Cushing who gave up his radio duties to assume the post of publicity director at the college.

Villanova is one of the many outstanding colleges in the country selected for broadcasting by the Atlantic Refining Company.

Meaghermen Battle Tulane Outfit to Scoreless Tie

By SAUL WALLACH

From the North, East, South and West, come reports of the deeds of future Villanova gridiron opponents, some cheerful, and others bearing ominous notes of what the future has in store for the Wildcats.

Out at Temple Stadium, the country's leading exponents of the art of leather lugging, the Pittsburgh Panthers, found Temple University to their liking and proceeded to shellac the Owls 28-6.

In that defeat, the Owls managed to flash a passing attack which netted them one touchdown. Temple went into the air 18 times Saturday afternoon and completed fourteen of them.

The Owls will not forget Goldberg, Daddio and company for quite sometime, and neither will Allan Sturges, brilliant Temple tackle, who broke his leg in a pile-up late in the first half.

Tulane Stops Auburn

Way down in Dixie, New Orleans to be exact, John Meagher's Auburn express was slowed down a bit by a fighting Tulane team. The Green, flashing speed with a smart defense held the Alabamans to a scoreless deadlock.

Minus such outstanding performers as Jimmy Fenton, Bill Hitchcock, Ralph Sivell, Freddy Holman and Dutch Heath, the minions of Meagher are nevertheless rated the best in the Southeastern Conference, if not in the nation.

New stars have arisen on the Auburn campus in George Kenmore, Milt Howell, "Speck" Kelley and "Piggy" Walker.

CINDERMEN REPORT FOR CROSS-COUNTRY

Gulteras, Bellew, Delate, McCabe to Form Nucleus of Embryonic Squad

This week Villanova finally will see the debuts of one of Track Coach Jim Elliott's pet ideas. For the past few seasons he has been planning to undertake a cross-country schedule at the Main Line institution. Now with the fine material on hand he has decided that the present is an opportune time for presenting a Wildcat cross-country team to the Intercollegiate track world.

To Meet Haverford

After two or more weeks of preliminary work the team will take on the hill and dale team from Haverford College. The backbone of the team will probably be Joe McCabe and Tom Delate.

However, the sprintmen, Barney Bellew and Bill Gulteras, will also be out there giving their best over the longer distance.

If the team shows promise against Haverford, Coach Elliott has indicated that he will arrange for a more extensive schedule. The reason why Coach Elliott has been prompted to organize the devotees of this Fall sport at Villanova into a team is mainly to condition his men for the indoor

Outlook Bright with Return of Last Year's Entire Varsity Material

Confronted with the task of preparing a basketball squad to face one of the hardest schedules ever arranged for a Villanova court aggregation, Al Severance, varsity coach has wasted little time in assembling his team for the coming season. Roanoke College will provide the opening day competition on December 1.

A schedule of 26 games, rivalling, if not exceeding the calibre of opposition faced by last year's court squad will be met by this year's edition. The minions of Severance turned in a record of 25 victories against five defeats at the close of the season. Included in the list of wins were Temple, national champions and the famed Violets of New York University.

Varsity Intact

Severance is fortunate in having every member of last year's team back again for the coming season. With the addition of several freshman stars, who aided in the 58-31 demlee of the Temple yearlings.

Headed by Duke Duzminski, the Philadelphia districts leading scorer; Jungle Jim Montgomery, third in the scoring records; Mike Lazorchak, diminutive guard; Art Vigilante, captain and guard last season, and dependable Johnny Krutulis, ace forward of the Wildcats, Severance has the identical line-up

Temple Frosh Contest Is Highlight of Yearling Schedule

Inaugurating their 1938 season 27 days after the Varsity, the Villanova Freshman aggregation meet for their first opponent the Owlets of Temple University in an are-light fray to be played at Roosevelt field in Norristown, In the initial meeting of what is expected to be a long series, the Kittens were able to defeat the Temple-men to the tune of 16 to 7.

Villanova rooters may rest assured that the Blue first year men will give a good account of themselves as daily practice with the Varsity has hardened the gridmen to the football grind. After last year's undefeated season, the men of '42 have a reputation to uphold and a win over Temple would do well toward attaining this end.

Play St. Francis Away

Following on the heels of the game with the Owlets will be the coming encounter with St. Francis Frosh who are to be coped with on November 5 at Loretto, Pa., the home oval of the Saints. It is interesting to note that the Frosh do not meet any opponents at their home stadium but are content to travel.

The final game of the Freshman campaign will be played at Lancaster, Pa., on November 11 (exactly five days following the St. Francis tilt) with the Franklin and Marshall Frosh furnishing the competition. This will be a severe test of the stamina of our future varsity timber as the game will be contested after only five days rest.

AMBITIOUS MURAL PROGRAM PLANNED FOR THIS SEASON

Features Baseball, Basketball, Boxing, Swimming, Tennis and Golf

AUSTIN HALL DEFENDING CROWN FOR SECOND YEAR

By BILL SINNOTT

Intra-mural athletics, after five years adolescence, reach maturity this year with the most extensive and ambitious program ever attempted.

Basketball, the King pin of the whole schedule, starts October 18 and ends its first half at Christmas. The second half starts in January and ends on March 1, when the playoffs for the championship will begin. Austin Hall, defending champs, find themselves in a rather unusual spot. The entire Austin Hall quintet has been transferred to Fedigan Hall. Who could forget last year's hectic playoff with field goals scored on the wrong baskets, irate prefects, and befuddled officials?

Softball, enjoying the innovation of being played in the Fall as well as in the Spring, will find each team meeting twice in the course of the season. This year's softball campaign has already gotten under way with last year's winners, Austin Hall, winning two from Fedigan.

On December 12 the Thespians have their opportunity to shine. For on the 12, Alumni Hall's personality kids have their chance to defend the championship they won last year in the annual amateur night.

Alumni again has to defend another title on January 16 when the boxing and wrestling exhibition is staged. This is always a big hit on the program.

Mendel Day Hops will have a chance to defend their swimming crown some time in March. A definite date has not been designated for the natatorial contest.

Late in the Spring, after the most promising golfers have been selected for the varsity, the hall divot diggers tee off for their big matches. Austin Hall is defending champ in this one, too.

From April 15 to the middle of May the baseball (hardball) enthusiasts have their inning. With most of Austin's athletes residing in cloistered, select Fedigan Hall, the outlook for Austin is not too bright. However, the intra-mural pitching ace, Frank Castles still lives down at Austin with the "Firemen." Most of the baseball contests are Sunday affairs. Austin won this title last year too.

With the advent of Daylight Saving comes a return of softball. The softball tournament continues right up to the close of school for the Summer vacation. Again, Austin had the loud voice when the season closed last year.

An unusual situation exists in the tennis division for last year's winner has not yet been designated. Two tournaments will be played out this year. Inclement weather deferred play last year until it was too late to resume. The outlook is bright for Austin in tennis. It seems that all the racquet wielders excepting the varsity, are in Austin Hall.

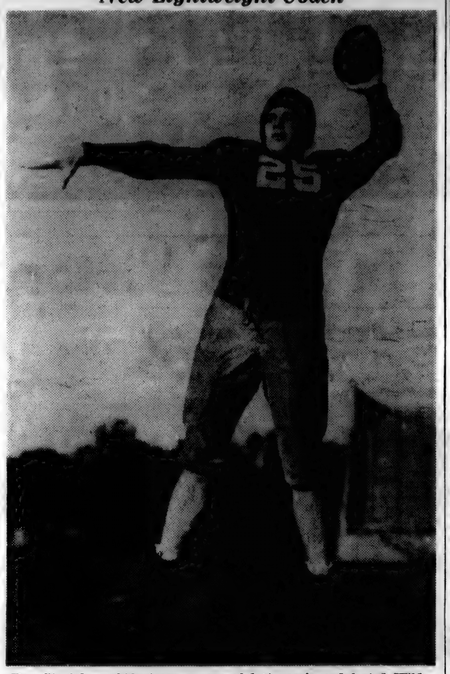
The Austinites chances of regaining the entire league championship are not half so strong as they were last year. Mendel Day Hops will undoubtedly offer much competition. Fedigan Hall, who started fast last year and faded in mid-season has an outside chance of finishing up among the first three.

FARKAS WITH REDSKINS

Remember Andy "Anvil" Farkas? The former Detroit University football star, who always caused the Wildcats a heap of trouble, is now a member of the Washington Redskins, World's Professional Champions last year.

At present Andy is leading the league in scoring with 19 points, and has gained 81 yards from scrimmage, although he has played in only two games. It will be interesting to see him perform against our own Johnny Mellus, now a member of the New York Giants, when the two teams clash in Washington this Saturday.

New Lightweight Coach



Ray Stoviak, ambidextrous passer of last year's undefeated Wildcats, will try to place Villanova's lightweight team as a threat in the Eastern 150-Pound loop this gridiron season.

Ray Stoviak Appointed Mentor Of Lightweights; Prospects Bright

Sincerity of Coach, Aid of Athletic Council, Enthusiam of Aspirants Point to a Successful Grid Campaign

With the announcement of a new coach for the lightweight team, one-fifty pound football is looked upon as a sports event which should do much to bring recognition to the Villanova campus.

Taking over the duties as head coach will be none other than an individual who has done much to place the Main Line Institution as a national football threat. The name of Ray Stoviak is familiar to all students who attended Villanova in the past three years for he was an outstanding halfback for the past three seasons on the grid team.

Former Two-Letter Man

He and Andy Stopper were running mates on last year's undefeated Wildcat squad. In addition to being a stellar performer on the gridiron Stoviak roamed the right field pastures for Doc Jacobs' and was elected captain in his senior year.

Anxious to put out a winning football team Villanova athletic authorities selected a man whom they think has the necessary ability to bring lightweight football from a state of mere existance to a place of prominence in Villanova's athletic program. Progress in this direction was started last year when, under the tutelage of Don Bangert, the one-fifties really rose to unknown heights and romped over Penn by a score of 20 to 0.

Clipper Promises Aid

It is the intention of Coach Stoviak to keep the ball rolling in this direction and at the present he is doing much to whip his candidates into condition. Ray has been assured aid from head coach of the Varsity "Clipper" Smith and is quite sure that if the candidates show the proper attitude and enthusiasm Villanova will present a well rounded squad on the field for the first game with Rutgers.

A squad of some fifty odd men reported for the intital practice session last week. As they went through their drills Coach Stoviak undoubtedly recognized aspirants who should do much to ease that task of whipping a team into condition.

Many Regulars Return

Having lost only about four men by graduation and a number of last years' men reporting, supplemented by a group of ambitious freshmen the squad seems to be shaping up well. However there is no doubt that the absence of Captain Paul Kerrigan and Bart Cousart will be hardly felt. Cousart developed to be a fine passer towards the end of the season. Kerrigan always loomed as a threat on the defense and really was a dependable man on the offense.

Among the backfield candidates are Brad McManus, Frank Lombardo, Carl Pentaleo, Harold Murphy, "Reds' 'Brown and Joe Pagano. These men all saw action last year and should form the nucleus of this year's squad. The most prospective back among the Frosh is Lattanzia, formerly of Overbrook.

Veteran wingmen returning this Fall are Vic Domenick and Don McGuirk. McGuirk scored one of the touchdowns against Penn last year on a forward pass from Frank Lombardo. Other seasoned linemen returning include Al Woods, a tackle, Charlie Timmins at center and Widman at guard.

Must Develop Linemen

It seems that Coach Stoviak will have to concentrate his attention to developing running guards and dependable tackles. Other Villanova lightweight clubs have failed to have more than two tackles, as a result substitution was almost impossible. However Ray may find enough material in the Freshman ranks to make up for this deficiency.

New equipment has been ordered so that the one-fifties will make a fine presentation on the gridiron with some of the Ivy League teams. All the support that can possibly be afforded will be at the disposal of this rejuvenated unit which will face the stiff opposition that it has had in the past, with the exception of Cornell which is a newcomer to the league.

Other members of the league are Rutgers, Yale Princeton, Pennsylvania and Lafayette. Last year the lightweights won only one of their games, but really made remarkable progress towards the end of the season.

Coach Stoviak has cut the squad to thirty five candidates and has really set to work in earnest to prepare a working combination for the first game.

SPORTS STAFF MEETING

There will be an important meeting of the Sports Staff in the VILLANOVAN office, Mendel Hall, at one o'clock today. All members as well as freshman candidates for the Sports Staff, must attend.

SPORTORIAL

By JOE PAGANO, Sports Editor

Adhering to the precedent already established by former VILLANOVAN Sports Editors, we'll start off this column by greeting the Freshman Class. At the same time we'll try to give them a word of encouragement so that they will be able to get into the swing of things around the campus and make their stay at Villanova one which will never be forgotten.

—V—

To the Frosh athletes we have this to say: You probably are aware of the fact that Villanova has been making rapid progress in gaining national recognition as a threat in college athletics. It is the intention of the Institution to keep the ball rolling in that direction. We know that you will fall in stride with the rest and contribute to this movement. However, there may be dark moments in your lives and you may think that you aren't getting the attention and consideration which you may think you're worth. But please remember that as Freshmen "You must learn to crawl before you can walk." Take the bumps good-naturedly and you'll find that rough road to success a little easier to travel over.

—V—

For those students who cannot participate in varsity sports the administration has instituted an extensive intramural program. Included in this program are hard and softball contests, basketball, an annual boxing tournament, an annual swimming carnival, an annual golf tourney an amateur night. In addition to these activities an annual bowling and billiards contest may be held, depending on student enthusiasm and entrance. It can be readily seen that with such a program as this no student will find idle moments at Villanova if he will enter whole-heartedly and do his utmost to put this program over in the manner for which it was intended.

—V—

Word came to us that Johnny Maher, Barney Bellew and Bill Guiteras, stellar members of last year's Wildcat track squad and which is destined to go places this season, participated in the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. Championships this Summer. The boys didn't do too bad out there . . . winning a first second and third.

Barney Bellew won the championship in the 880 yard dash, beating out an old rival, Ray Harker, from Temple. Bill Guiteras ran into some fast competition in the 440 and although he covered the distance in 50.8 (which isn't bad time) he had to be content with third place. Villanova's brilliant sprinter, Johnny Maher, ran second to Barney Elwell in the century feature. A break at the start cost Johnny the championship. At the finish Johnny was only a foot behind Ewell who has already run the 100 yard dash in the splendid time of nine and six-tenths seconds. Incidentally the time for this dash was nine and nine-tenths seconds.

—V—

Look like Wysocki is wasting no time to prove that he still has some of that stuff left which made him of All-American caliber last season . . . Johnny started his bid for nation wide fame by going down and making the first Wildcat tackle of the season . . . "Wy" also cleared the path for several of the Blue's touchdowns . . . One incident which is still fresh in the mind of the writer is when Johnny came from nowhere and smacked the safety-man as Harvey Buck stepped over the last white stripe. Nice going John, only eight more games to prove to many of the football skeptics that you didn't shoot your bolt last season.

One might have thought, judging from the way the American International gridders threw that pigskin around, that the object of this football game was to try to see which team could throw the ball away the quicker . . . Incidentally, did you take notice that as soon as Clem Andrews went in the game the American International quarterback called the play right through tackle (hoping to make a gain). This gave Clem a chance to make a tackle on the first play that he was in . . . "Nickels" Basca not only snake hipped his way through would-be tacklers Saturday, but also played a bang-up ball game to win the admiration of every spectator out there . . . Nice work Nick . . . keep the ball rolling.

Somthing else that really impressed the fans was the manner in which the three Blue squads that saw action went about their business with the old vim and vigor. . .typical of "Clipper" Smith's football in "swing-time" . . . It seemed as if everybody but the waterboy saw action in the Villanova lineup . . . Good thing the last two quarters were cut to ten-minute periods for the Wildcats were in a scoring mood. . .it seemed as if there was no stopping the boys who were eager to present their wares to local interested rooters.

That noise you heard booming across the field in the second half was no other than Villanova's one-man cheering section . . . a former Villanova student . . . a per-that carried Villanova to prominence in basketball circles.

Other lettermen available and who may sneak into the picture before the opening gun is sounded are Bill Sinnott, sterling all-court player whose appearance in pinch roles staved off many a defeat. Lou Dubino, a starter in his sophomore year, substitute last season should blossom out again this season, his last. Possessing all the qualifications of a basketball star, the Linden boy will be heard from this campaign.

Freshman Promising

"Chuck" Yund, Jack Nugent, Tony Vinci, Joe Colbert, freshman stars, are expected to give the veterans plenty of anxious moments together with Bobby Pash and Lloyd Rice for starting posts.

Things look rosy on paper, but a lot may happen to a team which must meet such teams as Temple, Kentucky, St. Josephs, N. Y. U., C. C. N. Y., and a host of small college fives ever on the alert to dump a major team season. However, he also hopes that the nature of cross country will appeal to all those students that have ever had any desire to put on the spikes.

Coach Elliott has also planned to organize the Freshmen into a team that could represent Villanova against several of the surrounding high schools.

Practice To Begin Soon

Practice will begin immediately for all who are interested. Some equipment will be furnished, but for practice, personal equipment has been suggested.

For the past several years the Blue track and field team has prospered under the direction of Coach Elliott and the cross country team will undoubtedly be successful under his capable management.

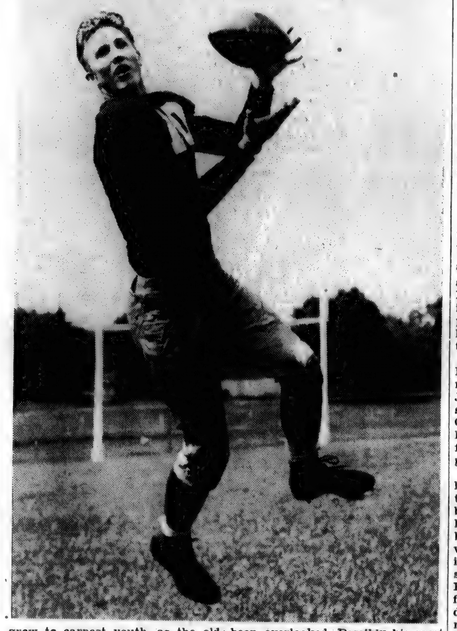
In the Sportlight

By TOM O'MAHONEY

THIS chap Wysocki is misnamed — they should have called him Why-sock-us!" With these few words of lament Chick Meehan, erstwhile coach of Manhattan's football forces, nicely biographed the tall senior who holds down left end on the Villanova varsity.

The records, "Chick" to the contrary, show us that John Wysocki was born in Hanover Township, a small Pennsylvania town near Wilkes-Barre, on the eighth day of June 1915. And it was in Hanover Township that our subject grew to earnest youth, as the old stories have it. Like the rest of us, he attended grammar school when it became necessary, showing no startling aptitude for sports, despite the fact that he engaged in all the customary sandlot games.



Acclaimed All-American

As a junior, John saw himself sky-rocketed to national prominence and All - America honors on virtually every one of the mythical "11 best" teams in the country. As the highest scoring end in these United States, wih 42 points, six blocked punts, and a mark of 23 consecutive successful points after touchdowns, he could hardly have been overlooked. Possibly his most publicized feat occurred in New York, when he single - handedly beat Manhattan, scoring 19 out of the 20 Wildcat points; but undoubtedly his most important deed of the season was catching a pass from Andy Stopper for the first of the six touchdowns scored against Temple.

Hoped To Be Crooner

However, when the final grade in elementary school had been hurdled, John entered Hanover Township High School, where he speedily became known as an athlete, engaging in basketball and baseball, as well as his first love, football. (According to his friends, "Wy" wanted desperately to become a crooning orchestra leader, a passion which has not left him even to this day — but we'll still call football his first love.) Working in the coal mines of his native black hills kept our young hero in fine condition for football, and in his final year he was elected captain. It was here that the famed team of Mellus and Wysocki got its start—and continued until the Fall of 1937, when between them, they averaged one blocked punt a game.

John likes to recall the many college stars who played with and against him during high school days, Curly Thomas, now at Syracuse, Len Pomecter, Joe Migdal and Walter Brunoff, of Manhattan, all played through four years of scholastic ball at Hanover, while Frank Bukofski, now John's team mate, and Jim Connell, of Penn, struggled for dear old Nanticoke, Hanover's big rival.

After remaining out of school for a year, John decided to matriculate at Villanova College, and entered the Main Line school as a humble frosh in September, 1935. As a member of Coach "Doc" Jacobs greenies in '35, John impressed at left end, the position at which he had starred in high school, and clicked sufficiently to merit second string end as a sophomore, trying to beat out Captain Tony Sala. In the Boston U. game in '36, John first made himself known to the fans by his savage blocking and sound end play, that

Donaghue, Yednoch, Howlett, Famagletti Loom as Threats to Frosh Opponents

Gaily bedecked in their green jerseys, the Villanova Frosh may be seen daily in their practices with the Varsity at the Blue oval. Several fine prospects have made their appearance in the ranks of the first year men and are making the varsity timber move fast to keep up with them.

Foremost among the Freshmen candidates is "Freckles" Donaghue, a resident of Phila., who hails from Northeast Catholic High. In his prep school days he was captain of the team in his senior year and played on three championship squads. He is a center by trade and has played with such footballers as our own "Buzz" Howlett and Penn's Frank Reagan.

Yednock Looks Promising

Another outstanding addition to the Kittens is a left-handed back, Yednoch, who is an expert passer and hails from Phoenixville. He is a cousin to the varsity marksman Nick Basca. Along with his hurling ability, Yednoch possesses a pair of shifty hips which have helped him shake off pursuing tacklers in his prep school days.

Bill Howlett, brother of "Buzz" Howlett, has registered at Villanova and is practicing with the Jacobsmen. He is a halfback who starred in the Catholic league at Catholic High School in Phila. Both he and his brother have attained fame through the aid of this league.

The up-state gridmen — Famagletti and McMonica—have surged to the fore as contenders for the fullback and end positions respectively. Famagletti is a hard hitting ball carrier and a fine line backer when on defense, while McMonica is an adept pass snatcher and should hold up the honor of the Blue ends in future years. Also fighting for the end post is a resident of New York City, Napoletemor, who is an end of no mean ability.

Pivot Position Strong

Furnishing outstanding competition for Donaghue is a Hartford, Conn., boy named Koriski who shows much promise at the center post. In future seasons it appears that the Varsity will have adequate strength at the pivot position.

HERE and THERE

By BILL SINNOTT

A six-year-old mystery on the Villanova campus has finally been solved.

The President's Cup has been located!

Back in 1932, Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, recognizing the value of an extensive intra-mural organization, donated a silver cup to be given to the winner. The cup was designated the President's Cup.

Ostensibly the cup was given with the intention that it was to be given to the intra-mural winner annually. Alumni Hall won the cup that first year and the cup went into the possession of Father Ludwig. What happened to the cup in the few years after that is conjecture.

However, we do know that Father Ludwig does not have the cup at present. After investigation among the priests we learned that Father McKee, Major domo of intra-murals, has been trying for the past five years to regain the cup and put it back into circulation. We also learned that the location of his endeavors is a room in Alumni Hall. The room happens to be occupied by Father Lunney who is apparently, too apparently, blissfully unaware of the cup's presence.

We promised our informant that we would produce the cup on the day this paper goes to press. Father Lunney has his own ideas on what should be done with the cup. That's why he keeps it hidden. But . . . we know where it's hidden and that's where our operative is supposed to steal it from. That is if he can get into Father Lunney's room when Father isn't there. So, if fortune favors us we'll have the cup in the VILLANOVAN Office Tuesday when the paper is distributed.

Old timers will remember the cup. It stood on Father Ludwig's desk for awhile in '32. He guarded it too zealously to steal. (I wonder if any member of that prospective class of '36 are still with us.)

With this issue we hope we'll bring about the culmination of a six-year feud. We'll bet that there weren't more than five of the undergraduates who knew about it.

While we hope for peace this revelation might bring about a crisis. Then we'd have Der Feurher Father Lunney holding a Nuremburg Congress in the Basement of Alumni, Father McKee issuing ultimatums at the rate of three a day. Perhaps Prime Minister Father Albers would fly over to Alumni a few times this week and be prepared for another quick flight if Der Feurher Father Lunney decides to hold a four power peace conference. President Benes Ludwig is watchfully waiting.

Peace, Fathers, at any cost!

Thought aside from sport . . . How can a former paperhanger lower the destiny of the world to his own small destiny when there are millions of intelligent people involved . . . He does not confuse intelligent people with quick, passionate flights of oratory . . . yet, they follow where he leads . They're playing with gas masks and bomb proof shelters over there . . . we're getting ready to play with footballs over here . . . Their papers feed them inflammatory war talk . . Ours tells us that Hank Greenburg is pushing Babe Ruth's record and that the National League pennant race is getting hot . . . Black and white propaganda . . . By the way, why is it that now H. V. Kaltenborn has been switched by his net work from the Spanish War to the Central Europe Tinder box; his announcer no longer precedes him with, "The views of Mr. Kaltenborn are his own and do not reflect the opinion of this station?" Kaltenborn was rather decisive as to which side he was with in the Spanish Situation and he was definitely not with the rebels.

Eastern College All-Star Elevens Represented By Villanova Gridders

Andy Stopper Wins Award For Stellar Exhibition Against N. Y. Giants; Raimo, Missar, Mellus, Olivar, McKenna and Bell Play Brilliant Ball; Blue Well Represented in Pro Games

Eastern College All-Star teams playing against pro grid elevens seemed to be in the vogue over the Summer. Carrying the colors of Villanova in these contests were no less than seven versatile performers of last season's undefeated Wildcat squad. Villanova rooters can well be proud of them for their performances were of the Wildcat nature and all the football that they assimilated at Villanova under Harry Stuhldreher, Bob Reagan, "Clipper" Smith and Vince McNally was made well use of.

Bell in addition to performing well on the defense was on the receiving end of about a 40 - yard aerial which threatened the Eagles' goal line.

Another Eastern All - Star team which met the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds in New York was represented by Villanova's triple-threat Andy Stopper and All-American Johnny Mellus. Mellus playing against his teammates to-be, stood out as a luminary on the defense for the All-Stars and really gave an accreditable account of himself. Stopper was dubbed "The Flying Dutchman" in this tilt and really passed and ran the ball in such a manner as to be awarded the prize for being the most valuable All-Star performer because of his offensive ability. They're still talking about "The Flying Dutchman" up New York way and it is my belief that Andy couldn't have possibly brought more fame and glory to Villanova, his coaches and to himself than going out there and accomplishing such a feat. It really shows that Villanova is able to and does put out gridders who can hold their own with the best of them. It took two field goals by Cuffs, averaging over 45 yards to down the scrappy aggregation of collegian grid stars, handled by Andy Kerr of Colgate and Fred Swan, assistant to "Pop" Warner of Temple University.

On September 1, Raimo, McKenna, making his first appearance in an All-Star uniform, teamed up with an All-Star eleven coached by Pat Hanley, of Boston University, to engage the Chicago Bears in an interesting contest held in Providence, R. I. In this fracas the Villanova boys ran into familiar company for on the opposite line was no other than a former Villanova captain and All-American, Eddie Michaels. Johnny McKenna played almost a whole game at center for the Collegians and played defensive game. The Bears won the Byron "Whizzer" White, All-American back from Colorado scoring one of the six-pointers for the college gridders.

In the only game won by a college All-Star eleven in the East, Raimo and Johnny McKenna played decisive roles.

Bell and Olivar teamed up with a whale of a game 26-14 with Incidentally, the Jordan Olivar and Art "The Rabbit" Raimo. Working out on the Main Line gridiron for three weeks under the tutelage of "Heinie" Miller, mentor of St. Joseph's College, and Ray Crowther, of Penn, the All-Stars were primed for the contest against the Eagles which took place at Temple Stadium. After a bitterly-fought contest the Eagles won out by a score of 14-7. Standing out on the defense for the All-Stars was little Art Raimo who played almost a sixty-minute bang-up game.

Joe Missar and Jordan Olivar played well on the line both offensively and defensively. Alex evidenced in the victory over strong Dickinson College, 19-7. The Red Devils are one of the leading small college football aggregations.

The who round out the well backfield are Zalt Stavateran cailer, and Charlie rin, blocking halfback of Tyre, Pa. Stamus is a Phillipsburg, New Jersey, schoolboy star.

On the line it is a different story. Veterans man every available position. Adam Matusa, of Swoyerville, and Russ Ryker, of Newtown, New Jersey, hold down the terminal posts. Matusa captains the Muhlenberg team. Tackles are Johnny McKee, of Merchantville, N. J., and Johnny Munchak, of Scranton. Warren Everly, of West Lawn, and Mel Paul, of Shamokin, are the guards. Lou De Rosa, of Patterson, N. J., holds the center position.

Against the stubborn Mules, Clipper Smith is expected to toss in the same formidable array that ripped to shreds American International, 59-0, without exception.

Back in 1925, Harry Stuldreher, present Wisconsin coach, took his Villanovans to Allentown and returned with a 23-9 victory. The following year, Muhlenberg with one of the greatest teams in its long history dropped another game to the Wildcats by the top-heavy score of 54-0.

With everything in the world to gain and little if anything to lose, the Muhlenbergers will be gunning for an all-important win and a major upset.

ETTEN VISITS HERE

Nick Etten, formerly of Villanova College, and now playing first base for the Philadelphia Athletics, was a spectator at the Villanova-American International game on last Saturday.

Etten, who recently came up to the big time from the minor league, gives every promise of being the regular first baseman for the Athletics next year, and Manager Connie Mack is counting heavily on him.

On American International

DESPITE the apparent ease with which we scored 59 points on American International College in the opener on Saturday, I am convinced that it will be necessary for the team to show great improvement in many important departments of play if we are to enjoy a successful season.

It was particularly surprised by the fact that the line showed little speed in putting pressure on the passer when on defense. The ends, especially, failed to hurry their man on passes, and our secondary must become more alert to the threat from the air. On the other hand, our own passing was sloppy and used too seldom against a team that was pulled in to stop line plays.

There has been some criticism of American International; but it seemed to me that they are on a par, nearly so, with our former opening day foe, Pennsylvania Military College. The reason for our high score this year, then, can be laid to the fact that the boys made fewer mistakes against the Aces than they did against P. M. C. last year.

Rizzo Shows Well

On the credit side of the ledger were the performances turned in by Val Rizzo and Tony Periera at guard, and Ronnie Tornwall, at center, was a very pleasant surprise. Next to Andy Chisik, he turned in the best game of the day. Big Ed Killian also played well at his tackle slot in his first varsity appearance. Art Murphy has won a place in the second team backfield for keeps by virtue of his hard, aggressive play, while Nick Basca and "Buzz" Howlett must fight it out for a starting berth during practice this week. And don't overlook rugged Dave DiFilippo — his offensive blocking was a revelation in its crispness and efficiency. Clem Andrews and Sam Monaco win recognition as the hardest workers on the field on the basis of their continuous hustle and pepper in the game Saturday.

And now, for fear you'll think all was smooth and letter-perfect Saturday, I'd like to point out a few glaring weaknesses. For instance, the defensive play of the tackles and fullbacks was definitely below standard; Harry Mazzei's game was not up to his usual quality — a fact that he recognized, incidentally, thereby saving me the necessity of stressing it. Harvey Buek's performance at safety in catching punts and running them back made up for that, however.

Play Timing Off

The timing of our plays must change for the better if we are to have a good running-game this year. At times, our backfield was the victim of its own deception far more than the American International team. And while we're on that point, let me say that indiscriminate lateraling the ball must stop. Several times we nullified gains by tossing lateral passes which merely changed the point at which the ball was downed — changed for the worse, in fact. The downfield blocking was spotty; at times it went fine, but too often the ball carrier had to make his own way through the Ace backfield. Accuracy and split-second timing is essential here as elsewhere, and the team had better realize it.

While the opener was little more than a workout for the first team, it nevertheless showed flaws which must be ironed out not only for the "so called" major games on our schedule, but for the affair with Muhlenberg this week. Make no mistake; the Mules are big, willing and primed for the Wildcats. They have a heavy, smart team, and within five minutes of creating a major football upset against Purdue last week, Detroit came from behind to score a touchdown and wipe out a 2-0 deficit against Western State.

Titans Lose Thriller

A week ago, in their initial test with powerful Purdue, the Titans held a 7-6 advantage over the Boilermakers, with little more than five minutes of playing time remaining. Beautiful open field running and passing brought the Purdue eleven a hard-earned 19-7 win.

Detroit has lost Andy Farkas, "Handy" Andy, who for three years gave Wildcat followers many anxious moments. Many sophomores do the Titan line this year. Detroit fans are shouting of Ed Palumbo, Jack Halpin, Clint Barrett and Bob Filliatrault backfield, aces. On the line they still have Alex Chesney, a sterling end.

Centre College made it two straight, bowling over Chattanooga College, 19-7. In their opening tussle the "Prayin' Colonels," coached by Quin Decker, defeated Mississippi College. In Leo Gruskowski of Jersey City, the Hillbillies have a powerhouse fullback.

South Carolina Loses

Boston University, with fleet-footed Solly Nechtem, immovable Johnny Walker, Milt Miller and Leo Biazynski, all remembered by the present Wildcat squad failed to repeat their victory over Lehigh. The Bethlehem Engineers stayed off two touchdown threats, one a goal-line stand in the fourth period and salvaged a 6-6 deadlock with the Terriers.

South Carolina found the University of Georgia a hard nut to crack. After four periods of fighting football, the one point that separated them from a tie score, looked as big as one hundred. The final score, Georgia, 7; South Carolina, 6. It was the first defeat for the Carolinians in three starts.

The Gamecocks are considered by many experts in the South as the dark horse of the Southern Conference. Rex Enright former Notre Dame great under the late lamented Knute Rockne is in his first year as Gamecock coach.

The Notre Dame system has been installed on the Columbia campus for the first time in many seasons. In Larry Craig, a beau ideal of an end; Dick Little, fleet and fiery back, and Ed Clary, classy punter and field goal kicker, the South Carolina fans can boast of a trio that would be welcome on any football squad.

Niagara just happened to meet Herb Koph's Manhattan College team at the wrong time. The Jaspers smarting from an unexpected 7-6 reversal at the hands of little St. Bonaventure, just went to work on the Niagarans bowling them over by four touchdowns.

Koph who succeeds Chick Meehan as coach of the Jaspers has brought from Columbia the well-known Lou Little attack, employed so successfully by Lion elevens in the past years. It will be spinners, fakes, and plenty of razzle-dazzle when the locals go to New York, Thanksgiving Day.

A veteran squad plus several outstanding freshmen are carrying the Manhattan colors this season. Al Caruso a brilliant ball carrier of last season; Len Pomecter, a center of no mean ability; Ed Tellier, blocking guard; Tony Shonis and Walt Brunoff are the tackles, and at end the veterans Mitchell, Dorsey and Farabough are waging a dog fight for starting posts.

A sophomore Joe Migdol has cheered the Manhattan partisans. For the aforementioned Migdol is the triple threat man of the Jaspers' backfield.

Saturday's program finds:
Villanova at Muhlenberg.
Transylvania at Centre.
Catholic at Detroit.
Wake Forest at South Carolina.
Auburn at Tennessee.
Texas Christian at Temple.
St. Lawrence at Boston University.
Manhattan at Holy Cross.
St. Mary's at Loyola of the West.

Of the nine games scheduled, Muhlenberg, Temple, Manhattan and Loyola may run into plenty of trouble. Texas Christian, Holy Cross and St. Mary's are favored over the future Villanova rivals. As a warning don't sell Temple and Manhattan short, both clubs are tough and will be on the rebound.

AUSTIN WINS TWICE ON SUNDAY TO LEAD INTER-DORM LEAGUE

Pantaleo Leads Blue Shirts to Victories with Brilliant Defensive and Offensive Play

BOUDON DISPLAYS ABILITY

By PHIL DUNN

Growing interest in the game of softball is responsible for a bigger and better intramural schedule for the school year of 1938-39. A split season has been inaugurated in softball; and twice as many games of this sport will be played.

No time was lost in getting the season underway, the first games being played on Sunday, Sept. 25. In the morning of that day the upperclassmen proceeded to show the Frosh how to do things — Austin showing them how to win and Fedigan demonstrating the opposite technique. Bob Boudon won a close 9-6 decision over his pitching opponent Fred Stellar in the morning; then he came back and routed the Fedigan ites in the first afternoon game. Boudon was the best thrower in the league last year and bids fair to repeat his performance as a Freshman.

Frosh Play Two

After the second game between the upperclass dorms the Freshmen took the field and engaged in a double-header that was packed full of action. The scores of these games have been forgotten; but it will suffice to say that both teams gave a good account of themselves and came away from the battle with a victory each.

As it was impossible to play any games after chapel services in the evening as was planned, the past Sunday saw more action on the intramural front. In two very closely contested games Austin was returned the winner over Mendel's Penthousers. The scores of these games were 9-8 and 4-3, which is good enough evidence of the brand of ball that was being played.

Alumni Wins Pair

In the other afternoon doubleheader Alumni had little trouble in the first game as they took the Gigolos into camp to an 11-4 tune. The nightcap was more closely tested, however, and turned out to be a whale of a ball game with the Greenies finally emerging on top by the narrow margin of one run, 7-6.

It is expected that the final four games of the first softball season will be played next Sunday, when the Austinites meet Alumni and the West Enders take on the boys from the main building.

It might be interesting to point out Coach "Clipper" Smith's pet and favorite superstition . . . the Wildcat mentor always enters a strange football stadium backwards. Yet rest assured there is nothing backward about "Clipper" when it comes to turning out winning football teams.

—V—

Students may see not only present-day Wildcat stars in action, but also many former wearers of the Blue in the persons of John McKenna, Joe Missar and Art Raimo, members of last year's undefeated eleven, who disport themselves for the glory of Sun Oil; and Jordan Olivar, now assistant coach at Radnor High School, is a mmber of the Conshohocken team.

—V—

Among the more surprising scores which flashed into the VILLANOVAN office last Saturday night (we use parcel post) was one from New Orleans, to wit, Tulane 0, Auburn 0. Since the Green Wave had been defeated by Clemson the previous week, we looked for the Plainsmen to wallop the New Orleans entry. At present there is not an undefeated, untied opponent on the 'Cat schedule. Boston University surprised by being held to a 6-6 tie against Lehigh, Temple lost, so we hear, to Pittsburgh, Detroit was bounced by Purdue, 19-7, and Manhattan fell before the merciless surge of St. Bonaventure's, 7-6.

—V—

It is no longer Andy Stopper—he's now Assistant Coach Stopper at Reading High School, and doing very well, thank you. Reading has won two games so far this season —and the point is that they have played only two.

And Franny Nye, '38, is also a successful mentor, being head coach as well as a chemistry teacher at Wildwood (N. J.) High School.

While the cheering and singing at the American International game was good, there is no doubt that there is room for improvement. Noticeable, too, was the fact that only the freshman exercised their vocal cords except on that perennial favorite, "College Days." That number seems to inspire the whole stands into song.

—V—

The football team might do well to beware of Muhlenberg. The word is out from Allentown that the Mules, far from being push-overs, are loaded. 'Nuff said.

we'll never move them with the slipshod brand of ball we showed American International. Remember, this game has been the principal topic of conversation in Allentown this Fall, and the Mules will not lack incentive to paste us. They have everything to gain and nothing to lose by throwing the whole works, including the bench, at us.

Linemen Must Improve

So next Saturday will tell the story. This week I intend to stress timing, pass defense for both the line and backs, and pass offense. Our ends must begin to play their positions with a little savvy, and must guard their own flanks more expertly than they did Saturday. Our tackles must learn to dig in and wreck plays directed at them; and we must remember that games are not won in the newspapers on the day before the game. There's always the chance that we'll meet some boys who don't read the same papers.

Varsity Football

yards to the goal was then reeled off by Harvey Buek in the best Salome fashion.

Nick Basca scored the third touchdown on a short scamper through the line. He then set up the fourth by passing 25 yards to Jerry Nerri and then personally carried it 28 yards to make the score-board change again.

The final score of the first half came when Gordon Shader drove through for 15 yards to the three where the pigskin was given to Art Murphy to carry across the line.

With the first team on the field again as the third period opened, Buzz Howlett got off on a 36 yard run for the sixth touchdown for the 'Cats. A little later the Blue and White put the ball in play seven times and after covering 50 yards the goal was crossed the seventh time by Mike Sabrinski.

For the eighth score Nick Basca flashed and dodged his way run. The final score of the game came as a result of a 20-yard pass from Romanowski to Monaco, a three-yard plunge by Pete Yankauskas and a seven-yard run to the goal by Murphy.

Basca and Shader Shine

In their first varsity intercollegiate appearance that smooth-working combination of Basca and Shader should gladden the heart of any coach. The way Gorden Shader crashed through the opposing line and the way "Nick" Basca passed, punted and ran the ends definitely marked them as All-American possibilities.

Johnny Wysocki also turned in his usual Johnny-on-the-spot game. Wherever something was happening that big number 10 was always in the thick. Even though the American International forward wall were laying for "that All-American," he fought them off in the true Wysocki style.

Andy Stopper Wins Award For Stellar Exhibition Against N. Y. Giants; Raimo, Missar, Mellus, Olivar, McKenna and Bell Play Brilliant Ball; Blue Well Represented in Pro Games

Eastern College All-Star teams playing against pro grid elevens seemed to be in the vogue over the Summer. Carrying the colors of Villanova in these contests were no less than seven versatile performers of last season's undefeated Wildcat squad. Villanova fosters can well be proud of them for their performances were of the Wildcat nature and all the football that they assimilated at Villanova under Harry Stuhldreher, Bob Reagan, "Clipper" Smith and Vince McNally was made well use of.

Representing the Inquirer All-Stars against the Philadelphia Eagles were Alex Bell, Joe Missar, Jordan Olivar and Art "The Rabbit" Raimo. Working out on the Main Line gridiron for three weeks under the tutelage of "Heinie" Miller, mentor of St. Joseph's College, and Ray Crowther, of Penn, the All-Stars were primed for the contest against the Eagles which took place at Temple Stadium. After a bitterly-fought contest the Eagles won out by a score of 14-7. Standing out on the defense for the All-Stars was little Art Raimo who played almost a sixty-minute bang-up game.

Joe Missar and Jordan Olivar played well on the line both offensively and defensively. Alex Bell in addition to performing well on the defense was on the receiving end of about a 10 - yard aerial which threatened the Eagles' goal line.

Another Eastern All - Star team which met the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds in New York was represented by Villanova's triple-threat Andy Stopper and All-American Johnny Mellus. Mellus playing against his teammates to-be, stood out as a luminary on the defense for the All-Stars and really gave an accredited account of himself. Stopper was dubbed "The Flying Dutchman" in this tilt and really passed and ran the ball in such a manner as to be awarded the prize for being the most valuable All-Star performer because of his offensive ability. They're still talking about "The Flying Dutchman" up New York way and it is my belief that Andy couldn't have possibly brought more fame and glory to Villanova, his coaches and to himself than going out there and accomplishing such a feat. It really shows that Villanova is able to and does put out gridders who can hold their own with the best of them. It took two field goals by Cuffs, averaging over 45 yards to down the scrappy aggregation of collegian grid stars, handled by Andy Kerr of Colgate and Fred Swan, assistant to "Pop" Warner of Temple University.

On September 1, Raimo, McKenna, making his first appearance in an All-Star uniform, Bell and Olivar teamed up with an All-Star eleven coached by Pat Hanley, of Boston University, to engage the Chicago Bears in an interesting contest held in Providence, R. I. In this fracas the Villanova boys ran into familiar company for on the opposite line was no other than a former Villanova captain and All-American, Eddie Michaels. Johnny McKenna played almost a whole game at center for the Collegians and played a whole of a defensive game. Incidentally, the Bears won the game 26-14 with Byron "Whizzer" White, All-American back from Colorado scoring one of the six-pointers for the college gridders.

In the only game won by a college All-Star eleven in the East, Raimo and Johnny McKenna played decisive roles.

ETTEN VISITS HERE

Nick Etten, formerly of Villanova College, and now playing first base for the Philadelphia Athletics, was a spectator at the Villanova-American International game on last Saturday.

Etten, who recently came up to the big time from the minor league, gives every promise of being the regular first baseman for the Athletics next year, and Manager Connie Mack is counting heavily on him.

On American International

DESPITE the apparent ease with which we scored 59 points on American International College in the opener on Saturday, I am convinced that it will be necessary for the team to show great improvement in many important departments of play if we are to enjoy a successful season.

I was particularly surprised by the fact that the line showed little speed in putting pressure on the passer when on defense. The ends, especially, failed to hurry their man on passes, and our secondary must become more alert to the threat from the air. On the other hand, our own passing was sloppy and used too seldom against a team that was pulled in to stop line plays.

There has been some criticism of American International; but it seemed to me that they are on a par, nearly so, with our former opening day foe, Pennsylvania Military College. The reason for our high score this year, then, can be laid to the fact that the boys made fewer mistakes against the Aces than they did against P. M. C. last year.

Rizzo Shows Well

On the credit side of the ledger were the performances turned in by Val Rizzo and Tony Periera at guard, and Ronnie Tornwall, at center, was a very pleasant surprise. Next to Andy Chisik, he turned in the best game of the day. Big Ed Killian also played well at his tackle slot in his first varsity appearance. Art Murphy has won a place in the second team backfield for keeps by virtue of his hard, aggressive play, while Nick Basca and "Buzz" Howlett must fight it out for a starting berth during practice this week. And don't overlook rugged Dave DiFilippo — his offensive blocking was a revelation in its crispness and efficiency. Clem Andrews and Sam Monaco win recognition as the hardest workers on the field on the basis of their continuous hustle and pepper in the game Saturday.

And now, for fear you'll think all was smooth and letter-perfect Saturady, I'd like to point out a few glaring weaknesses. For instance, the defensive play of the tackles and fullbacks was definitely below standard; Harry Mazzei's game was not up to his usual quality — a fact that he recognized, incidentally, thereby saving me the necessity of stressing it. Harvey Buek's performance at safety in catching punts and running them back made up for that, however.

The timing of our plays must change for the better if we are to have a good running game this year. At times, our backfield was the victim of its own deception far more than the American International team. And while we're on that point, let me say that indiscriminate lateraling the ball must stop. Several times we nullified gains by tossing lateral passes which merely changed the point at which the ball was downed — changed for the worse, in fact. The downfield blocking was spotty; at times it went fine, but too often the ball carrier had to make his own way through the Ace backfield. Accuracy and split-second timing is essential here as elsewhere, and the team had better realize it.

While the opener was little more than a workout for the first team, it nevertheless showed flaws which must be ironed out not only for the "so called" major games on our schedule, but for the affair with Muhlenberg this week. Make no mistake; the Mules are big, willing and primed for the Wildcats. They have a heavy, smart team, and within five minutes of creating a major football upset against Purdue last week, Detroit came from behind to score a touchdown and wipe out a 2-0 deficit against Western State.

Titans Lose Thriller

A week ago, in their initial test with powerful Purdue, the Titans held a 7-6 advantage over the Boilermakers, with little more than five minutes of playing time remaining. Beautiful open field running and passing brought the Purdue eleven a hard-earned 19-7 win.

Detroit has lost Andy Farkas, "Handy" Andy, who for three years gave Wildcat followers many anxious moments. Many sophomores dot the Titan line this year. Detroit fans are shouting of Ed Palumbo, Jack Halpin, Clint Barrett and Bob Filiatrault backfield, aces. On the line they still have Alex Chesney, a sterling end.

Centre College made it two straight, bowing over Chattanooga College, 19-7, in their opening tussle the "Prayin' Colonels," coached by Quin Decker, defeated Mississippi College. In Lee Gruskowski of Jersey City, the Hillbillies have a powerhouse fullback.

South Carolina Loses

Boston University, with fleet-footed Solly Nechtem, immovable Johnny Walker, Milt Miller and Leo Blazynski, all remembered by the present Wildcat squad, failed to repeat their victory over Lehigh. The Bethlehem Engineers staved off two touchdown threats, one a goal-line stand in the fourth period and salvaged a 6-6 deadlock with the Terriers.

South Carolina found the University of Georgia a hard nut to crack. After four periods of fighting football, the one point that separated them from a tie score, looked as big as one hundred. The final score, Georgia, 7; South Carolina, 6. It was the first defeat for the Carolinians in three starts.

The Gamecocks are considered by many experts in the South as the dark horse of the Southern Conference. Rex Enright former Notre Dame great under the late lamented Knute Rockne is in his first year as Gamecock coach.

The Notre Dame system has been installed on the Columbia campus for the first time in many seasons. In Larry Craig, a beau ideal of an end; Dick Little, fleet and fiery back, and Ed Clary, classy punter and field goal kicker, the South Carolina fans can boast of a trio that would be welcome on any football squad.

Niagara just happened to meet Herb Kopp's Manhattan College team at the wrong time. The Jaspers smarting from an unexpected 7-6 reversal at the hands of little St. Bonaventure, just went to work on the Niagarans bowling them over by four touchdowns.

Koph who succeeds Chick Meehan as coach of the Jaspers has brought from Columbia the well-known Lou Little attack, employed so successfully by Lion elevens in the past years. It will be spinners, fakes, and plenty of razzle-dazzle when the locals go to New York, Thanksgiving Day.

A veteran squad plus several outstanding freshmen are carrying the Manhattan colors this season. Al Caruso a brilliant ball carrier of last season; Len Poinecter, a center of no mean ability; Ed Tellier, blocking guard; Tony Shanis and Walt Brunoff are the tackles, and at end the veterans Mitchell, Dorsey and Farabough are waging a dog fight for starting posts.

A sophomore Joe Migdol has cheered the Manhattan partisans. For the aforementioned Migdol is the triple threat man of the Jaspers' backfield.

Saturday's program finds:

Villanova at Muhlenberg.
Transylvania at Centre.
Catholic at Detroit.
Wake Forest at South Carolina.
Auburn at Tennessee.
Texas Christian at Temple.
St. Lawrence at Boston University.
Manhattan at Holy Cross.
St. Mary's at Loyola of the West.

Of the nine games scheduled, Muhlenberg, Temple, Manhattan and Loyola may run into plenty of trouble. Texas Christian, Holy Cross and St. Mary's are favored over the future Villanova rivals. As a warning don't sell Temple and Manhattan short, both clubs are tough and will be on the rebound.

AUSTIN WINS TWICE ON SUNDAY TO LEAD INTER-DORM LEAGUE

Pantaleo Leads Blue Shirts to Victories with Brilliant Defensive and Offensive Play

BOUDON DISPLAYS ABILITY

By PHIL DUNN

Growing interest in the game of softball is responsible for a bigger and better intramural schedule for the school year of 1938-39. A split season has been inaugurated in softball; and twice as many games of this sport will be played.

No time was lost in getting the season underway, the first games being played on Sunday, Sept. 25. In the morning of that day the upperclassmen proceeded to show the Frosh how to do things — Austin showing them how to win and Fedigan demonstrating the opposite technique. Bob Boudon won a close 9-6 decision over his pitching opponent Fred Stellar in the morning; then he came back and routed the Fediganites in the first afternoon game. Boudon was the best thrower in the league last year and bids fair to repeat his performance as a Freshman.

Frosh Play Two

After the second game between the upperclass dorms the Freshmen took the field and engaged in a double-header that was packed full of action. The scores of these games have been forgotten; but it will suffice to say that both teams gave a good account of themselves and came away from the battle with a victory each.

As it was impossible to play any games after chapel services in the evening as was planned, the past Sunday saw more action on the intramural front. In two very closely contested games Austin was returned the winner over Mendel's Penthousers. The score of these games were 9-8 and 4-3, which is good enough evidence of the brand of ball that was being played.

Alumni Wins Pair

In the other afternoon doubleheader Alumni had little trouble in the first game as they took the Gigolos into camp to an 11-4 tune. The nightcap was more closely tested, however, and turned out to be a whale of a ball game with the Greenies finally emerging on top by the narrow margin of one run, 7-6.

It is expected that the final four games of the first softball season will be played next Sunday, when the Austinites meet Alumni and the West Enders take on the boys from the main building.

It might be interesting to point out Coach "Clipper" Smith's pet and favorite superstition . . . the Wildcat mentor always enters a strange football stadium backwards. Yet rest assured there is nothing backward about "Clipper" when it comes to turning out winning football teams.

—V—

Students may see not only present-day Wildcat stars in action, but also many former wearers of the Blue in the persons of John McKenna, Joe Missar and Art Raimo, members of last year's undefeated eleven, who disport themselves for the glory of Sun Oil; and Jordan Olivar, now assistant coach at Radnor High School, is a member of the Conshohocken team.

—V—

Among the more surprising scores which flashed into the VILLANOVAN office last Saturday night (we use parcel post) was one from New Orleans, to wit, Tulane 0, Auburn 0. Since the Green Wave had been defeated by Clemson the previous week, we looked for the Plainsmen to wallop the New Orleans entry. At present there is not an undefeated, untied opponent on the 'Cat schedule. Boston University surprised by being held to a 6-6 tie against Lehigh, Temple lost, so we hear, to Pittsburgh, Detroit was bounced by Purdue, 19-7, and Manhattan fell before the merciless surge of St. Bonaventure's, 7-6.

—V—

It is no longer Andy Stopper—he's now Assistant Coach Stopper—at Reading High School, and doing very well, thank you. Reading has won two games so far this season—and the point is that they have played only two.

And Franny Nye, '38, is also a successful mentor, being head coach as well as a chemistry teacher at Wildwood (N. J.) High School.

While the cheering and singing at the American International game was good, there is no doubt that there is room for improvement. Noticeable, too, was the fact that only the freshman exercised their vocal cords except on that perennial favorite, "College Days." That number seems to inspire the whole stands into song.

—V—

The football team might do well to beware of Muhlenberg. The word is out from Allentown that the Mules, far from being push-overs, are loaded. 'Nuff said.

we'll never move them with the slipshod brand of ball we showed American International. Remember, this game has been the principal topic of conversation in Allentown this Fall, and the Mules will not lack incentive to paste us. They have everything to gain and nothing to lose by throwing the whole works, including the bench, at us.

Linemen Must Improve

So next Saturday will tell the story. This week I intend to stress tinging, pass defense for both the line and backs, and pass offense. Our ends must begin to play their positions with a little savvy, and must guard their own flanks more expertly than they did Saturday. Our tackles must learn to dig in and wreck plays directed at them; and we must remember that games are not won in the newspapers on the day before the game. There's always the chance that we'll meet some boys who don't read the same papers.

yards to the goal was then reeled off by Harvey Buek in the best Salome fashion.

Nick Basca scored the third touchdown on a short scamper through the line. He then set up the fourth by passing 25 yards to Jerry Nerri and then personally carried it 28 yards to make the score-board change again.

The final score of the first half came when Gordon Shader drove through for 15 yards to the three where the pigskin was given to Art Murphy to carry across the line.

With the first team on the field again as the third period opened, Buzz Howlett got off on a 36 yard run for the sixth touchdown for the 'Cats. A little later the Blue and White put the ball in play seven times and after covering 50 yards the goal was crossed the seventh time by Mike Sabrinski.

For the eighth score Nick Basca flashed and dodged his way run. The final score of the game came as a result of a 20-yard pass from Romanowski to Monaco, a three-yard plunge by Pete Yanauskas and a seven-yard run to the goal by Murphy.

In their first varsity intercollegiate appearance that smooth-working combination of Basca and Shader should gladden the heart of any coach. The way Gordon Shader crashed through the opposing line and the way "Nick" Basca passed, punted and ran the ends definitely marked them as All-American possibilities.

Johnny Wysocki also turned in his usual Johnny-on-the-spot game. Wherever something was happening that big number 10 was always in the thick. Even though the American International forward wall were laying for "that All-American," he fought them off in the true Wysocki style.

PLAN NEW SEATS FOR GRID CONTESTS

Villanova Student Section will Face Shibe Park Grand-Stand

Villanova College Board of Athletics disclosed recently that it has accepted plans for the construction of a new seating section for home football games at Shibe Park in Philadelphia.

According to latest reports from the board the proposed section will be used by the student body and the Villanova College Band at the opening game with Centre College, Saturday, October 15.

The new section will consist of bleacher seats erected on the east side of the stadium facing the grandstand. Last year and in preceding years it was the custom to arrange seating facilities in a reserved section of the main grandstand for the student body and band. Under the new plan the same position will be occupied on the other side of the field.

Because this section will be the only structure on the east side of the gridiron it is believed by the Athletic Board to be the solution to the problem of seating students in a unified section. Many colleges have found that an arrangement similar to this adds to the color and spirit of the student cheering section during the game.

The Villanova College Band will be seated directly on the fifty-yard line unless alterations are made in the present proposal. On each side flanking the band there will be ample seating capacity for the Villanova student body.

ALUMNI QUARTERLY TO BE DISTRIBUTED

Second Issue of "Alumnus" Will Appear October 3

Official publication of the Villanova College Alumni Association, the "Villanova Alumnus," will make its second appearance on Monday, October 3. The "Alumnus" was first published in May 1938.

The editors of the Alumni quarterly, which include Edmond P. Reiley, '35; John J. Steil, '35; and Louis P. Marechal, '35; have compiled an interesting assortment of feature articles in the second issue of the "Alumnus."

Among the features to be published in the October issue will be articles by R. W. Sailor, former president of the American Alumni Council of which this publication is a member; Maurice "Clipper" Smith, Villanova College football coach; Dr. Hickey, assistant general of the Augustinian Order; and John P. Keffer, second vice-president, and chairman of the Alumni Budget Committee.

The "History of Villanova Songs" is another feature of an interesting nature highlighted in the "Alumnus." Among other items to be published are Class and Alumni Club notes, editorials, and recent faculty changes at Villanova College.

Present members of the senior class of Villanova will receive complimentary copies of this second issue of the "Alumnus" so that they might become familiar with the facilities afforded by such a publication.

Approximately 3500 copies of the "Alumnus" were distributed when it was first published last May.

The final selections will rest entirely upon the efficiency and competeney of the several candidates as shown prior to that date.

Plans Underway

Preliminary business in reference to the publication of the annual is rapidly being cleared and is giving way to actual progress upon the year book proper. The layouts for both the opening or introductory section and the school section have been completely designed and proven satisfactory. Such work as this will continue until the entire book is thus planned. Acutal literary work cannot possibly begin until the editors as named above select men to fill out the rosters of their staffs.

The photographic program has likewise already gotten under way. The class and many of the athletic pictures have been taken for the Belle Air. Individual pictures of Seniors are scheduled for October 18, 19, 20 and 21. Each Senior

Rev. James J. Donnellon, O. S. A., moderator of the Research Seminar, disclosed that a chairman will be elected at its initial meeting this Thursday evening. All former members are urged to attend and invitations are extended to any science student who is interested in the field of research. The meeting is called for seven o'clock.

Fr. Donnellon put forth his views on research very clearly in a recent interview. He expressed that most students entering a pre-med school overlook the excellent future in research. He stated, "the medical students admitted, each year are comparatively few compared with the applicants. Therefore a field should be open to those with a science degree who fail to enter med-school. The field is research.

"A student after receiving a B. S. in Biology may go further and command a Ph.D. in a few years. This entitles him to teach ,and most important of all, to get in on the top floor of research."

Fr. Donnellon expressed his belief that research is as good a field as the medical profession. The research seminar launches the students in that direction. The members review papers on scientific subjects and report on them. Reports on individual research projects are also submitted. The students usually specialize on a subject of interest to them.

SOCIOLOGY SEMINAR ORGANIZED UNDER REV. V. A. M'QUADE

Group to Discuss "Juvenile Delinquency," "Crime," Like Problems

STUDENTS GIVE OPINIONS IN "ROUND-TABLE" PLAN

Upon his return to the Villanova College faculty, Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., Ph. D., has taken preliminary steps toward the organization of the firs tSociology Seminar at this institution.

Present plans for the new addition to extra-curricular program at Villanova call for meetings on a bi-monthly basis. Meetings will be conducted in an informal manner with a probable "round-table" discussion plan adopted.

Pertinent social questions and problems of the day including such topics as "Juvenile Delinquency," "Crime," "Society Relationships," will be discussed, Fr. McQuade expressed the intention of permitting each student to elucidate his opinion on a current sociological problem and then present the topic to the seminar for discussion.

Discuss Catholic View

The Catholic view-point in all social matters discussed will be definitely asserted at the meetings. Fr. McQuade believes that much valuable information concerning our fellow man could be secured through such meetings. It is the opinion of the new moderator that many doubts will be cleared up and a better understanding of present-day situations impregnated in the minds of students interested in the field.

Although a definite place has not as yet been designated for the meetings of the Sociology Seminar, it is likely that Mendel Hall will be selected for the sessions. The seminar will be open to all students. Membership may be secured by sophomore, junior, and senior students by submitting names to the moderator. All students are urged to attend the first seminar on Monday, October 17, at 7:30 P. M.

RAYMOND MANAHAN NAMED TO COUNCIL IN SENIOR ELECTION

In a special election conducted at the usual polling place last Wednesday, Raymond G. Manahan, of the School of Commerce and Finance, was elected senior member of the Student Council. Announcement came from Francis J. Mozzi, chairman.

The election was necessitated by the resignation of Mr. Robert J. Barrett, of the school of Arts, who tendered notice of his resignation prior to the opening of the present semester. Mozzi, chairman of the council, announced that the election was the closest ever to be conducted for this coveted office.

Mozzi, speaking for the entire membership of the council, wished to thank all those who actively took part in Saturday's successful send-off of the football team. Although refusing to disclose further plans the chairman stated that he expects to make an important announcement in the very near future which will affect all the members of the student body.

Manahan will be inducted into office at the next regular meeting of Student Council to be held next week. At this time he will be introduced to his fellow officers and given a comprehensive outline of his duties for the ensuing year. Manahan's election brings the total senior representation up to its full quota and makes that body a compact unit for all future plans.

It is the wish of the Student Council Chairman to bring about a greater unity within this representative student group. Now that its membership has been made complete, action can be taken to effect such an improvement, Mozzi stated: "Without unity nothing can be accomplished."

L. K. D. TO MEET

John Urie, president of the Lamda Kappa Delta fraternity, announced today that there will be a very important meeting Thursday evening, October 13, in the Mendel Hall Amphitheater. Urie urges all members to attend as important plans will be formulated for the coming social season.

CONNECTICUT CLUB HOLDS NOMINATIONS

Other Campus Organizations Invited to Hear Speakers at Meetings

Nominations of officers for the coming term in the Connecticut Club held last Wednesday evening in the amphitheater found Francis Mozzi, Philip Messer, and Carl Pantaleo heading the list of presidential nominees.

Other nominations: vice-president, William Duffy, Mathew Phalen; secretary-treasurer, James Mullarky, Richard Frey and Frank Pimpinella.

Following the nominations the club heard the first of a series of talks which the Connecticut Club, in line with its policy to better acquaint its members with the various cities of its state, has planned to present to its members through the coming term.

The speaker for the evening was Matthew Phalen, Hartford. In as much as Hartford is the capital of the State, a lengthy discussion of the state government buildings was included in the talk which also high-lighted the various industries, parks, athletic plant and numerous other points of interest in the Connecticut capital.

A proposal was made that an invitation be extended to the members of other campus organizations to attend the meeting tomorrow night in the amphitheater.

The speaker for the coming meeting will be William Duffy, also of Hartford. Duffy will speak of his own experiences encountered while travelling and boxing in the New England state.

PLAN NEW SEATS FOR GRID CONTESTS

Villanova Student Section will Face Shibe Park Grandstand

Villanova College Board of Athletics disclosed recently that it has accepted plans for the construction of a new seating section for home football games at Shibe Park in Philadelphia.

According to latest reports from the board the proposed section will be used by the student body and the Villanova College Band at the opening game with Centre College, Saturday, October 15.

The new section will consist of bleacher seats erected on the east side of the stadium facing the grandstand. Last year and in preceding years it was the custom to arrange seating facilities in a reserved section of the main grandstand for the student body and band. Under the new plan the same position will be occupied on the other side of the field.

Because this section will be the only structure on the east side of the gridiron it is believed by the Athletic Board to be the solution to the problem of seating students in a unified section. Many colleges have found that an arrangement similar to this adds to the color and spirit of the student cheering section during the game.

The Villanova College Band will be seated directly on the fifty-yard line unless alterations are made in the present proposal. On each side flanking the band there will be ample seating capacity for the Villanova student body.

Sailor, former president of the American Alumni Council of which this publication is a member; Maurice "Clipper" Smith, Villanova College football coach; Dr. Hickey, assistant general of the Augustinian Order; and John P. Keffer, second vice-president, and chairman of the Alumni Budget Committee.

The "History of Villanova Songs" is another feature of an interesting nature highlighted in the "Alumnus." Among other items to be published are Class and Alumni Club notes, editorials, and recent faculty changes at Villanova College.

Present members of the senior class of Villanova will receive complimentary copies of this second issue of the "Alumnus" so that they might become familiar with the facilities afforded by such a publication.

Approximately 3500 copies of the "Alumnus" were distributed when it was first published last May.

The layouts for both the opening or introductory section and the school section have been completely designed and proven satisfactory. Such work as this will continue until the entire book is thus planned. Acutal literary work cannot possibly begin until the editors as named above select men to fill out the rosters of their staffs.

The photographic program has likewise already gotten under way. The class and many of the athletic pictures have been taken for the Belle Air. Individual pictures of Seniors are scheduled for October 18, 19, 20 and 21. Each Senior

MOBILIZE FOR PEACE

AMERICA hates war. This is the most fertile land for peace societies. Yet in the World War the peace societies were among the most persistent lobbyists in favor of our entrance. Thank God that Chamberlain did not whip up these organizations to a frenzy of hatred for Hitler, as he could easily have done.

Their diabolical feature is the attempt to bring about reasonable conditions through unreasonable means, carrying on a campaign of hatred inspired by righteousness. One of their pet suggestions is the chimerical collective security. As an agency for peace it is the balance of power in a new guise. It does not work for the footing-out of war-provoking causes much as for the throttling of those who air their grievances too loudly. Yet it is widely advocated by the peace societies that confuse economic isolation with military isolation.

Let us remain martially isolated from Europe, conserving our neutrality and power for peace until the time comes when Europe is ready to receive it. Butting in now only further agitates an already confused situation. Brought up in an entirely different atmosphere, it is extremely difficult for Americans to understand the configurations of European morbidity. We must not fix our foreign policy to that of any single nation in Europe because our fundamentally different problems do not move in consonance.

DESIGN ON N. R. L. B.

CURRENT propaganda to have the Wagner Labor Relations Act overhauled is undertaken with the hope of wrecking it in the scrimmage. Neutral competent investigators have determined that it is doing a heroic job. If its decisions favor the CIO more than the AFL it is because the CIO has been more active in organization during the disputes.

Collective bargaining is a right deserving of protection by law. An agency must enforce the law. That work is undertaken by the National Labor Relations Board. It is its reason for being. Its province is protection of this one right of human labor. It does not go out of its field any more than a governmental slum inspector clears out museums.

If protection for employers is desired, a new law must be passed dealing with the specific grievance, whatever it may be, and if it is not protected by existing laws. The NLRB should not be attacked for failing to look after a side of labor disputes which is outside its province.

"Fortune's" hard-boiled conservative ace reporter, after having investigated the job the Board was doing, was filled with enthusiastic admiration for the law and administration. On hearing of this the publisher had the article rewritten by an attorney for one of the corporations the NLRB had chided. Of course, much material in favor of the NLRB and damaging to certain corporations was left out. That is an example of the concerted ganging-up of the reactionary controlled press against this beneficial and emancipating piece of social legislation.

TOWARD BETTER SPEECH

ALTHOUGH it is characteristic of the higher faculties of man, habit may be placed side-by-side with his baser possessions when it assumes functions derogatory to man's mentality and moral well-being.

We must admit, that, even among college students, bad habits may be the cause of more serious evils in later life. The close association of college students, or perhaps the mental strain involved in the acquisition of higher learning tending toward greater relaxation, gives rise to a freeness and familiarity. Unconcern follows, and we no longer give man his due respect. Our conversation becomes slovenly. We are too lazy to guard our speech; too unconcerned to speak with thought.

One of the factors distinguishing the Catholic college is the presence on every campus of a group which aspires to purity of speech . . . the Holy Name Society. College men on every Catholic campus join together monthly in a demonstration of adoration, humbly imploring the Blessed Savior to guard them against blasphemy of His Holy Name. They give warning to the world of the seriousness of transgressing against His Will in this Commandment.

Taught to guard against this hideous sin, the Holy Name member is constantly aware of his speech, lest some chance expression lead to more serious habit. His object is to give praise to the Sacred Name of the Savior. The moral he teaches is obvious.

Freshmen, the existence of a strong Holy Name Society at Villanova is testimony that numerous men before you have found it worthwhile. Join, to experience the spiritual joys that are derived from the organization. Monthly Communion will form a habit that should be invaluable in later life. Constant association with the Name of Jesus Christ will turn your ears from speech that degrades it.

ALL VILLANOVA

VILLANOVA College makes her seasonal debut in Philadelphia football circles this Saturday at Shibe Park. College athletic authorities and "Clipper" Smith are endeavoring to give the Quaker City a football team of which she can be proud. Whether Philadelphia will accept the "Wildcats" is a matter yet to be determined.

Freshmen, upperclassmen, old grads, get behind your Alma Mater Saturday. Show Philadelphia that there is a college on the Main Line that reveres her traditions and is willing to proclaim her name to the world. Show this by your high-spirited backing. Show Philadelphia, the "Clipper," and the team that ALL Villanova will be ALL VILLANOVA, always.

Revolt in Antigonish
BY
Rev. William J. Lunny, O.S.A.

THERE'S a revolution going on in Nova Scotia. True, we've heard little or nothing of it in our daily newspapers. But then, it must be remembered that this radical change has furnished no "sensations" in the sense in which our city editors are wont to interpret the word.

There have been no dead men to bewail, and no wounded to be cared for as a result. In fact, in this strange upheaval, the very opposite is true—dead men are beginning to live again, and the wounded are caring for themselves!

Take another look at the map of North America. Follow the Atlantic seacoast northward to Maine and beyond to the point where the Bay of Fundy almost severs an elongated strip of land from its mother-country, Canada. Extending eastward and then to the southwest, this peninsula, together with the adjacent island of Cape Breton, forms the Canadian Province of Nova Scotia.

Now take a larger scale map of this area, and along the coast line which faces the Gulf of St. Lawrence, not far from Cape Breton Island, look for the name ANTIGONISH. Found it? No? Well, the map-makers are as far behind the times as the newsgatherers, for Antigonish is definitely "on the map."

In point of size, Antigonish is a small city, but its importance seems to be in direct contrast with its tiny area and the relatively small number of its inhabitants. And it is the modest University of St. Francis Xavier (Villanova has over twice the number of full-time students) which is the very heart of this disturbing and challenging movement. Here is an enthusiastic and energetic group of Catholic priests, sisters, and laity who, with their brethren working out among their people, in the classroom, rostrum, parochial meeting-places, and chance conversation, have brought about this bloodless revolution which is so radically changing the economic and social life of Eastern Nova Scotia, and which bids fair to affect in similar fashion the whole of Canada and even the United States.

Two groups from various parts of our own country (the second of these in late August numbering close to three hundred) visited Antigonish this Summer, listened to lectures on the various phases of the co-operative movement, and saw the actual results already achieved in the northern sections of the peninsula and Cape Breton Island. What they beheld is the CO-OPERATIVE REVOLUTION.

The inhabitants of this portion of the province, for the most part of Scotch ancestry, are mainly employed in fishing, farming, and mining. They are a thrifty and hard-working people whose kindliness and hospitality can scarcely be surpassed. It is difficult now to appreciate fully the hardships which these good people experienced at the hands of their exploiters before the advent of the co-operatives. The stories of conditions a few short years ago can, however, be readily verified.

Our own southern share-croppers were not in a more pitiable condition. Communism was increasing even among the Catholic elements. Right now the picture is of a different hue; for Communism is dying out, and the discontent which was its breeding ground has given place to hope, and the hope to vision in the very concrete and tangible results already attained, which give promise of a security and well-being that had long been despaired of.

And how was this brought about? Not so much by theorizing about depressions and subsequent recessions, but by a philosophy of action based on the essentially Christian concepts of the Brotherhood of Man and of Charity one for another; not by governmental dole, but by self-help and mutual co-operation. There have been established over 170 credit unions and 29 co-operative stores. Various communities have built and now own their lobster canneries and fish processing plants. Other co-operative projects are housing and pulp exportation.

A co-operative community of miners is now being erected with others planned for the near future. Over 175 co-operative organizations of various kinds have been set up thus far in the eastern section of the province, the members of which carried on a total business of $3,000,000 last year.

Considering that this movement was established only in 1930, we can readily appreciate the relative magnitude of the results already attained. They have only begun their work, the men of Antigonish relate. Their program, outlined in the Calendar of the University, is "to assist in promoting the material, spiritual and cultural well-being of their people." With the study club as its chief instru-

"Wrong-Way" Corrigan Signs For Leading Role In Pix — "Born to Fly"

FLASHED ON THE screen at Brooklyn's "Belle" theater last week:

"It is evident that the people of this neighborhood cannot afford to support a high class theater.

"We therefore ask you to tell your friends that unless they patronize this theater we will be forced to turn it into a public market or garage. We thank you. Sam Silver, Manager."

Doug ("wrong way") Corrigan has been signed for the leading role in "Born to Fly."

Under the proper direction Doug should go a long way in pictures. He is a natural if there ever was one. "Born to Fly" will tell the tale, however.

Sequel to "A Tisket, A Tasket" appeared last week. It is written by the same writer and is entitled, "I Found My Yellow Basket."

Jack Benny program last Sunday was up to its usual top form.

For pure, outright wit this half-hour has few equals.

A comparison between the Bergen-McCarthy act, for instance, and the Benny set-to last Sunday eve, resulted in a runaway for—Benny.

The once potent Bergen-McCarthy is fast slipping.

Benny has returned to his old time, seven P. M., Sunday evening, over N. B. C., locally over KYW.

Zazu Pitts has divulged the source of her initial moniker. She was named after two aunts, Eliza and Susan.

Benny Goodman has been tending toward the "blues" lately. For years it has been his favorite color in suits. Now he's going in for it hot and heavy in music.

Don't over-do it, Benny. Better men than you have fallen prey to some pet personal fancy, becoming blind to the trend of the times.

Drawback of a government owned broadcasting system (to the exclusion of all private companies) was vividly illustrated last week when the "crisis" address of Great Britain's deposed foreign minister, Anthony Eden, although heard in America, was not carried over the British owned radio system. Eden is not in the favor of the present English Government System.

Pix of the week is "Marie Antoinette," 'starring Tyrone Power and Norma Shearer. Don't miss it.

Joe Rossi, '39, submits the following, (not his own):

"Man comes into this world without his consent, and leaves it against his will. If he is active in politics, it is for graft; if not interested in politics, he is no good to his country. If he makes a lot of money, he is dishonest; if he is poor, he is lazy. If he needs credit, he cannot get it; if he is prosperous, everyone wants to do something for him. If he is religious, he is a hypocrite; if he doesn't go to Church, he is a hardened sinner.

"If he gives to charity, it is for show; if he does not, he is a stingy cuss. If he is affectionate, he is a soft specimen; if he does not care for anyone, he is cold-hearted. If he dies young, there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age he missed his calling. If he saves money, he is a tightwad; if he spends it, he is a spendthrift."

Getting back to "wrong way Corrigan,

He received $3500 for that brief spot on the Al Jolson program last week.

Plenty of chuckles in the lesson to Doug on making love. Good finale when in leaving he mistook a window for the door.

After a lapse of two years, Paul Whiteman began recording for Decca last week. First time he has appeared on the 35 cent discs. Used to be an exclusive Victor artist, refusing to appear on that concern's Bluebirds (35c records).

Guy Lombardo is another Victor mainstay now swinging over to Decca.

Popular Campus Figure Combines Editorial Ability With Technical Study

By JAMES F. HAUGHTON

LISTEN, KID, get at least eighteen inches on this egg, and make sure it's good stuff, or back to circulation you'll go." These charming words came from the petite end of the Howe-Tofani combination which heads the local campus sheet.

So with shivering thoughts of wrapping paper, sticky glue and bundles, yours truly hopped th trusty typewriter carriage and went in search of the subject of this edition. With a hop, skip and a trip, my trusty steed and I slid down the second floor of Mendel Hall (till we only had the wall to pass through) and glanced to our left to find a large brown gate labelled "Villanova Engineer."

Knocking in our best Emily Post, we were pleasantly greeted with a noise which sounded like "Come in," So we took heed of the announcement and paraded in through the gate, but to our utter surprise no one was in sight. Suddenly the same voice echoed from behind a stack of graphs, blueprints and slide rules and said, "Well, son, what's yer trouble?"

"Whoops the thing's alive," we blurted when the desk began to move. From behind it stepped a thin be-spectacled gent. Yep, we were now face to face with "Villanova's Man of the Week," Joe Quinn.

Editor of "Engineer"

Mr. Quinn proved to be quite an interesting conversationalist, especially when the subject of the "Villanova Engineer" was brought up. It seems our subject first came in contact with engineering journalism through the efforts of Joe Sanborn, the lad who last year headed the journal. One day while "Quinny" was trying to waste away some of that spare time which engineers are noted to possess, Sanborn nabbed him with an invitation to "Come up and look the place over." So pleased was he with the surroundings that he's been there since last October. Germantown's gift to the Main Line campus began his journalistic career by copy-reading and re-writing, but in no time at all he was really in the swing of things. His work so pleased Sanborn, that he was recommended to Father Vrana, moderator of the mag, and the kind Father appointed him as head man of the editions for this year.

Joe's planning some new features and hopes to bring the Engineers favorite journal to new heights this year. He said: "We're going to run a series of articles on the Villanova College Labs and the part they play in our education Also, we expect to have another series on successful Villanova engineering grads."

But enough of this editoralizing, as Father McKee has named it. Joe, who is a native of Germantown, crammed for his years at Villanova by attending St. Joe's Prep. He claims he was never active there, but did try his forensic ability in the debating contests during his junior and senior years, to no avail.

Active in Campus Life

His Villanovizing began in '35, through the courtesy of Pennay's Paoli Local, but he had such a time trying to catch trains that he didn't get any chance to get going in his first year. Ah, but in his second year the kid really got in the groove and helped out the Vigilance and Soph Hop Committees. Being chairman of affairs etc., is the lad's hobby, for he was sub-chairman of the Decorations at last year's Prom and is also permanent chairman of the Humphrey Memorial Scholarship Fund. Also remember he's vice president of the senior class.

Joe likes to number among his personal accomplishments the fact that he is one of the few engineers who doesn't carry a camera, carries his books in the crook of his arm, (You know the old school girl style) and last, but not the least of his virtues, is the fact that he's the punchies oft the punchy engineers and takes personal pride in this. We'd also like to remind Judge Arthur H. James, Republican candidate for gubernatorial honors in the Keystone State, that Quinn is a staunch 100% backer of the G. O. P. If that means anything.

When the matter of favorite telephone numbers was discussed, Mr. Quinn became very reluctant and evaded the point with "I love 'em all." But let me remind you that he is quite a prom goer and numbers Immaculata and Rosemont on his conquest list.

As for the future, Germantown's Joe won't predict, but admits he'd like to get located with an engineering firm that wants a Class A Mechanical Engineer. All replys should be addressed to the Villanova Engineer.

A devoted secular clergy, the good sisters, and the laity of eastern Nova Scotia have united to give the world an outstanding example of Catholic Action. MOBILIZE FOR PEACE

AMERICA hates war. This is the most fertile land for peace societies. Yet in the World War the peace societies were among the most persistent lobbyists in favor of our entrance. Thank God that Chamberlain did not whip up these organizations to a frenzy of hatred for Hitler, as he could easily have done.

Their diabolical feature is the attempt to bring about reasonable conditions through unreasonable means, carrying on a campaign of hatred inspired by righteousness. One of their pet suggestions is the chimerical collective security. As an agency for peace it is the balance of power in a new guise. It does not work for the footing-out of war-provoking causes much as for the throttling of those who air their grievances too loudly. Yet it is widely advocated by the peace societies that confuse economic isolation with military isolation.

Let us remain martially isolated from Europe, conserving our neutrality and power for peace until the time comes when Europe is ready to receive it. Butting in now only further agitates an already confused situation. Brought up in an entirely different atmosphere, it is extremely difficult for Americans to understand the configurations of European morbidity. We must not fix our foreign policy to that of any single nation in Europe because our fundamentally different problems do not move in consonance.

DESIGN ON N. R. L. B.

CURRENT propaganda to have the Wagner Labor Relations Act overhauled is undertaken with the hope of wrecking it in the scrimmage. Neutral competent investigators have determined that it is doing a heroic job. If its decisions favor the CIO more than the AFL it is because the CIO has been more active in organization during the disputes.

Collective bargaining is a right deserving of protection by law. An agency must enforce the law. That work is undertaken by the National Labor Relations Board. It is its reason for being. Its province is protection of this one right of human labor. It does not go out of its field any more than a governmental slum inspector clears out museums.

If protection for employers is desired, a new law must be passed dealing with the specific grievance, whatever it may be, and if it is not protected by existing laws. The NLRB should not be attacked for failing to look after a side of labor disputes which is outside its province.

"Fortune's" hard-boiled conservative ace reporter, after having investigated the job the Board was doing, was filled with enthusiastic admiration for the law and administration. On hearing of this the publisher had the article rewritten by an attorney for one of the corporations the NLRB had chided. Of course, much material in favor of the NLRB and damaging to certain corporations was left out. That is an example of the concerted ganging-up of the reactionary controlled press against this beneficial and emancipating piece of social legislation.

ALTHOUGH it is characteristic of the higher faculties of man, habit may be placed side-by-side with his baser possessions when it assumes functions derogatory to man's mentality and moral well-being.

We must admit, that, even among college students, bad habits may be the cause of more serious evils in later life. The close association of college students, or perhaps the mental strain involved in the acquisition of higher learning tending toward greater relaxation, gives rise to a freeness and familiarity. Unconcern follows, and we no longer give man his due respect. Our conversation becomes slovenly. We are too lazy to guard our speech; too unconcerned to speak with thought.

One of the factors distinguishing the Catholic college is the presence on every campus of a group which aspires to purity of speech . . . the Holy Name Society. College men on every Catholic campus join together monthly in a demonstration of adoration, humbly imploring the Blessed Savior to guard them against blasphemy of His Holy Name. They give warning to the world of the seriousness of transgressing against His Will in this Commandment.

Taught to guard against this hideous sin, the Holy Name member is constantly aware of his speech, lest some chance expression lead to more serious habit. His object is to give praise to the Sacred Name of the Savior. The moral he teaches is obvious.

Freshmen, the existence of a strong Holy Name Society at Villanova is testimony that numerous men before you have found it worthwhile. Join, to experience the spiritual joys that are derived from the organization. Monthly Communion will form a habit that should be invaluable in later life. Constant association with the Name of Jesus Christ will turn your ears from speech that degrades it.

Revolt in Antigonish

BY

Rev. William J. Lunny, O.S.A.

THERE'S a revolution going on in Nova Scotia. True, we've heard little or nothing of it in our daily newspapers. But then, it must be remembered that this radical change has furnished no "sensations" in the sense in which our city editors are wont to interpret the word.

There have been no dead men to bewail, and no wounded to be cared for as a result. In fact, in this strange upheaval, the very opposite is true—dead men are beginning to live again, and the wounded are caring for themselves!

Take another look at the map of North America. Follow the Atlantic seacoast northward to Maine and beyond to the point where the Bay of Fundy almost severs an elongated strip of land from its mother-country, Canada. Extending eastward and then to the southwest, this peninsula, together with the adjacent island of Cape Breton, forms the Canadian Province of Nova Scotia.

Now take a larger scale map of this area, and along the coast line which faces the Gulf of St. Lawrence, not far from Cape Breton Island, look for the name ANTIGONISH. Found it? No? Well, the map-makers are as far behind the times as the newsgatherers, for Antigonish is definitely "on the map."

In point of size, Antigonish is a small city, but its importance seems to be in direct contrast with its tiny area and the relatively small number of its inhabitants. And it is the modest University of St. Francis Xavier (Villanova has over twice the number of full-time students) which is the very heart of this disturbing and challenging movement. Here is an enthusiastic and energetic group of Catholic priests, sisters, and laity who, with their brethren working out among their people, in the class room, rostrum, parochial meeting-places, and chance conversation, have brought about this bloodless revolution which is so radically changing the economic and social life of Eastern Nova Scotia, and which bids fair to affect in similar fashion the whole of Canada and even the United States.

Two groups from various parts of our own country (the second of these in late August numbering close to three hundred) visited Antigonish this Summer, listened to lectures on the various phases of the co-operative movement, and saw the actual results already achieved in the northern sections of the peninsula and Cape Breton Island. What they beheld is the CO-OPERATIVE REVOLUTION.

The inhabitants of this portion of the province, for the most part of Scotch ancestry, are mainly employed in fishing, farming, and mining. They are a thrifty and hard-working people whose kindliness and hospitality can scarcely be surpassed. It is difficult now to appreciate fully the hardships which these good people experienced at the hands of their exploiters before the advent of the co-operatives. The stories of conditions a few short years ago can, however, be readily verified.

Our own southern share-croppers were not in a more pitiable condition. Communism was increasing even among the Catholic elements. Right now the picture is of a different hue; for Communism is dying out, and the discontent which was its breeding ground has given place to hope, and the hope to vision in the very concrete and tangible results already attained, which give promise of a securit, and well-being that had long been despaired of.

And how was this brought about? Not so much by theorizing about depressions and sunsequent recessions, but by a philosophy of action based on the essentially Christian concepts of the Brotherhood of Man and of Charity one for another; not by governmental dole, but by self-help and mutual co-operation. There have been established over 170 credit union and 29 co-operative stores. Various communities have built and now own their lobster canneries and fish processing plants. Other co-operative projects are housing and pulp exportation.

A co-operative community of miners is now being erected with others planned for the near future. Over 175 co-operative organizations of various kinds have been set up thus far in the eastern section of the province, the members of which carried on a total business of $3,000,000 last year.

Considering that this movement was established only in 1930, we can readily appreciate the relative magnitude of the results already attained. They have only begun their work, the men of Antigonish relate. Their program, outlined in the Calendar of the University, is "to assist in promoting the material, spiritual and cultural well-being of their people." With the study club as its chief instru-

"Wrong-Way" Corrigan Signs For Leading Role In Pix — "Born to Fly"

FLASHED ON THE screen at Brooklyn's "Belle" theater last week:

"It is evident that the people of this neighborhood cannot afford to support a high class theater.

"We therefore ask you to tell your friends that unless they patronize this theater we will be forced to turn it into a public market or garage. We thank you. Sam Silver, Manager."

Doug ("wrong way") Corrigan has been signed for the leading role in "Born to Fly."

Under the proper direction Doug should go a long way in pictures. He is a natural if there ever was one. "Born to Fly" will tell the tale, however.

Sequel to "A Tisket, A Tasket" appeared last week. It is written by the same writer and is entitled, "I Found My Yellow Basket."

Jack Benny program last Sunday was up to its usual top form.

For pure, outright wit this half-hour has few equals.

A comparison between the Bergen-McCarthy act, for instance, and the Benny set-to last Sunday eve, resulted in a runaway for—Benny.

The once potent Bergen-McCarthy is fast slipping.

Benny has returned to his old time, seven P. M., Sunday evening, over N. B. C., locally over KYW.

Zazu Pitts has divulged the source of her initial moniker. She was named after two aunts, Eliza and Susan.

Benny Goodman has been tending toward the "blues" lately. For years it has been his favorite color in suits. Now he's going in for it hot and heavy in music.

Don't over-do it, Benny. Better men than you have fallen prey to some pet personal fancy, becoming blind to the trend of the times.

Drawback of a government owned broadcasting system (to the exclusion of all private companies) was vividly illustrated last week when the "crisis" address of Great Britain's deposed foreign minister, Anthony Eden, although heard in America, was not carried over the British owned radio system. Eden is not in the favor of the present English Government System.

Pix of the week is "Marie Antoinette," starring Tyrone Power and Norma Shearer. Don't miss it.

Joe Rossi, '39, submits the following, (not his own):

"Man comes into this world without his consent, and leaves it against his will. If he is active in politics, it is for graft; if not interested in politics, he is no good to his country. If he makes a lot of money, he is dishonest; if he is poor, he is lazy. If he needs credit, he cannot get it; if he is prosperous, everyone wants to do something for him. If he is religious, he is a hypocrite; if he doesn't go to Church, he is a hardened sinner.

"If he gives to charity, it is for show; if he does not, he is a stingy cuss. If he is affectionate, he is a soft specimen; if he does not care for anyone, he is cold-hearted. If he dies young, there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age he missed his calling. If he saves money, he is a tight-wad; if he spends it, he is a spend-thrift."

Getting back to "wrong way Corrigan,

He received $3500 for that brief spot on the Al Jolson program last week.

Plenty of chuckles in the lesson to Doug on making love. Good finale when in leaving he mistook a window for the door.

After a lapse of two years, Paul Whiteman began recording for Decca last week. First time he has appeared on the 35 cent dises. Used to be an exclusive Victor artist, refusing to appear on that concern's Bluebirds (35c records).

Guy Lombardo is another Victor mainstay now swinging over to Decca.

Bing Crosby (Decca) is the top earner when it comes to sale of records. Last year his income from this source alone was estimated at close to $10,000.

Connie Bennett is required to wear a bathing suit for a French Riviera scene in a coming picture. She protested, but finally gave in. "If I must wear one, I guess I'll have to. The director will give me the privilege of cleaning the suit that I will wear in the scene. I am going to spend a lot of time with the designer, and maybe we can whip up one that will do the trick."

Popular Campus Figure Combines Editorial Ability With Technical Study

By JAMES F. HAUGHTON

LISTEN, KID, get at least eighteen inches on this egg, and make sure it's good stuff, or back to circulation you'll go." These charming words came from the petite end of the Howe-Tofani combination which heads the local campus sheet.

So with shivering thoughts of wrapping paper, sticky glue and bundles, yours truly hopped th trusty typewriter carriage and went in search of the subject of this edition. With a hop, skip and a trip, my trusty steed and I slid down the second floor of Mendel Hall (till we only had the wall to pass through) and glanced to our left to find a large brown gate labelled "Villanova Engineer."

Knocking in our best Emily Post, we were pleasantly greeted with a noise which sounded like "Come in," So we took heed of the announcement and paraded in through the gate, but to our utter surprise no one was in sight. Suddenly the same voice echoed from behind a stack of graphs, blueprints and slide rules and said, "Well, son, what's yer trouble?"

"Whoops the thing's alive," we blurted when the desk began to move. From behind it stepped a thin be-spectacled gent. Yep, we were now face to face with "Villanova's Man of the Week," Joe Quinn.

Editor of "Engineer"

Mr. Quinn proved to be quite an interesting conversationalist, especially when the subject of the "Villanova Engineer" was brought up. It seems our subject first came in contact with engineering journalism through the efforts of Joe Sanborn, the lad who last year headed the journal. One day while "Quinny" was trying to waste away some of that spare time which engineers are noted to possess, Sanborn nabbed him with an invitation to "Come up and look the place over." So pleased was he with the surroundings that he's been there since last October. Germantown's gift to the Main Line campus began his journalistic career by copy-reading and re-writing, but in no time at all he was really in the swing of things. His work so pleased Sanborn, that he was recommended to Father Vrana, moderator of the mag, and the kind Father appointed him as head man of the editions for this year.

Joe's planning some new features and hopes to bring the Engineers favorite journal to new heights this year. He said: "We're going to run a series of articles on the Villanova College Labs and the part they play in our education. Also, we expect to have another series on successful Villanova engineering grads."

But enough of this editoralizing, as Father McKee has named it. Joe, who is a native of Germantown, crammed for his years at Villanova by attending St. Joe's Prep. He claims he was never active there, but did try his forensic ability in the debating contests during his junior and senior years, to no avail.

His Villanovizing began in '35, through the courtesy of Penney's Paoli Local, but he had such a time trying to catch trains that he didn't get any chance to get going in his first year. Ah, but in his second year the kid really got in the groove and helped out the Vigilance and Soph Hop Committees. Being chairman of ad-biz etc., is the lad's hobby, for he was sub-chairman of the Decorations at last year's Prom and is also permanent chairman of the Humphrey Memorial Scholarship Fund. Also remember he's vice president of the senior class.

Joe likes to number among his personal accomplishments the fact that he is one of the few engineers who doesn't carry a camera, carries his books in the crook of his arm, (You know the old school girl style) and last, but not the least of his virtues, is the fact that he's the punchies oft the punchy engineers and takes personal pride in this. We'd also like to remind Judge Arthur H. James, Republican candidate for gubernatorial honors in the Keystone State, that Quinn is a staunch 100% backer of the G. O. P. If that means anything.

When the matter of favorite telephone numbers was discussed, Mr. Quinn became very reluctant and evaded the point with "I love 'em all." But let me remind you that he is quite a prom goer and numbers Immaculata and Rosemont on his conquest list.

As for the future, Germantown's Joe won't predict, but admits he'd like to get located with an engineering firm that wants a Class A Mechanical Engineer. All replys should be addressed to the Villanova Engineer.

ment and the establishment of ecconomic co-operatives as its immediate aim, it has since carried on a program of adult education.

The success thus far attained by the Extension Department of the University is best appreciated in the light of the recent public praise bestowed upon it by none other than His Holiness Pope Pius XI. A devoted secular clergy, the good sisters, and the laity of eastern Nova Scotia have united to give the world an outstanding example of Catholic Action. ONE-DAY RETREAT BROUGHT TO CLOSE WITH SOLEMN MASS

Rev. Paul Judson Conducts Annual Exercises Held in Chapel

Students at Villanova dispensed with classes on Thursday, October 6, to participate in the annual retreat held in the college chapel and conducted by the Rev. Paul M. Judson, O. S. A., Master of Novices at the Augustinian Novitiate in New Hamburg, N. Y.

This day of religious reflection began for the resident students on Wednesday evening at a conference delivered by Fr. Judson, while the non-resident students formally opened the retreat at Mass on Thursday at 8 o'clock, celebrated by the Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A.

The retreat master, a former member of the Villanova faculty, delivered a brief discourse after the Mass on Thursday. It was his initial address to the day students. His sermon, "The Purpose of Life,' emphasized the application of the truths of our faith to practical life. The duration of the exercises was an enumeration of this topic and his following lectures developed in a clear and logical sequence explained how we might attain and fulfill this purpose aided by the facilities the Church places at our disposal.

Warns Against Sin

Fr. Judson's second lecture treated of "The Malice and Nature of Sin." He presented such striking illustrations of the effects of sin that every student at the conclusion of his sermon was undoubtedly aware of the hatred and abhorrence with which God views evil.

"The Remedy for Sin,' subject of Fr. Judson's next lecture, stressed the necessity of confession if we are to accomplish our end in life. He explained the requisites of a worthy confession and that the peace and comfort derived from confession should alone induce u to frequent the Sacrament. Following this sermon Stations of the Cross were said by the Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., chaplain of the college.

Fr. Judson, in his final address of the afternoon, dealt with "Communion and Frequent Reception of the Holy Eucharist." All were urged to join the Holy Name Society of their respective parishes. Benediction of The Most Blessed Sacrament was offered by Fr. Boyle, and this service concluded the days exercises.

Mass Concludes Retreat

Intervals between confessions during the day offered ample opportunity for the students to go to confession in preparation for the reception of Holy Communion the following morning.

Retreat solemnly closed Friday morning at Mass celebrated by Fr. Vrana and attended by the students who received Holy Communion in a body. After the Mass, Fr. Judson bestowed the Papal Blessing on the entire student body. Students are indebted to Fr. Judson for this retreat, which will enable all to approach the coming year with a clearer view of just what benefit can be derived from 'a Catholic college education.

PRIESTS OBSERVE GOLDEN JUBILEES

Augustinian Fathers Celebrate Anniversaries With Solemn Mass

Rev. Richard A. Gleason, O.S.A., celebrated the golden jubilee of his ordination to the priesthood yesterday with Solemn High Mass in the Church of St. Thomas of Villanova at 9 o'clock.

After having labored with the Augustinian Missionary Band throughout the United States Fr. Gleason is now stationed at the monastery at Villanova College.

He was born on February 5, 1865, at Radnor, Montgomery County, and entered the Augustinian Order on February 2, 1882. Fr. Gleason was ordained to the priesthood on October 10, 1888, in the Cathedral, Philadelphia, with Archbishop Ryan officiating.

Another member of the Order of St. Augustine also celebrated his 50th anniversary as a Catholic priest on Monday. The Rev. John J. Hogan, O. S. A., observed his golden jubilee with Solemn High Mass in the Church of St. Augustine, Philadelphia, where he is stationed.

PRESS APOSTOLATE SOLICITS MEMBERS

All Students Eligible for Membership; Freshmen on Probation

All Villanova College students who are interested in joining the Catholic Press Apostolate have been asked to report to Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., as soon as possible.

All seniors, juniors, and sophomores are eligible for active membership, while freshmen are eligible only after they have satisfactorily fulfilled a period of probation of one semester. No dues are charged in this organization, and the membership is limited to fifty students. The Apostolate meets on the first Wednesday of each month, immediately following chapel services.

In order that the student body might have a better understanding of this organization, it was deemed necessary to publish the particulars of its make-up.

The main purpose of the Catholic Press Apostolate is to encourage among Villanova students the reading of current Catholic literature, especially Catholic newspapers and periodicals. The means employed toward this end are the distribution of such literature, the maintenance of "clipping boards," with items of interest from Catholic papers, and the maintenance of a pamphlet rack for the distribution among students of pamphlets on topics of Catholic interest.

It is also the purpose of this organization to supply to the Catholic Press news concerning religious activities at Villanova, to care for the remailing of Catholic literature, and to sponsor an information bureau on matters of Catholic Interest.

fee is $1:50 per couple, and the dancing hours are from nine o'clock to one o'clock. Tickets are now being sold and may be obtained from any member of the listed Owl Hop Committee.

This year's chairman is very prominent among his Engineering classmates, having been appointed to several important dance committees during his first three years at Villanova. Carroll is an active and leading member of the Chemical Engineering Society besides being a luminary in his Fraternity. The president of the Engineer's Fraternity places much confidence in Carroll as can be seen from his quotation: "Frank Carroll is the man to have in charge of the Owl Hop."

Time has beclouded the reason for naming this social event of the Engineering School the Owl Hop, and many of the newcomers to Villanova are not acquainted with the cause. Some years ago this dance was given on the evening preceding the Temple football game. In fitting tribute to this traditional battle, the title 'Owl Hop' was bestowed on it.

The position of the sponsors of this hop is quite high on the Villanova campus. The Phi Kappa Pi Fraternity was organized in 1907, and at the present time boasts a membership of one hundred and fifty students. The college handbook predicates this organization thus: "It has always enjoyed the reputation of being the most active and at the same time the most stable of all such organizations on the Campus."

WIP to Present Campus News Three Times Weekly

"The Philadelphia Varsity Matinee," a 15 - minute program of news, interesting items, and bits of chatter from the campuses of the colleges and universities in and about Philadelphia, presented three times weekly, from 4:45 P. M. to 5:00 P. M., over Station WIP, is going to take the air in several days.

This program will consist solely of local college news drawn from all the schools in this vicinity—Villanova, Temple, Penn, Bryn Mawr. Since the listening audiences will be made up almost entirely of college students, the material used on the program will concern them directly, such as news of dances, and proms, dramatics, sports student elections. In short anything going on around school having news value will be presented.

The program is being sponsored by several prominent local merchants, who are particularly interested in college activities.

will receive private notice of the time of his appointment. It is to be noted, however, that these pictures will be posed, not in Zamsky's Studio as the appointment cards read, but in the Reception Room of Mendel Hall. In order to counteract any errors that may be made in the separate appointment notices a general list will be posted.

McHenry wishes to call to the special notice of all Seniors a matter that is repeatedly neglected in the arrangements for sitting for the individuals. At his appointed time for posing for his picture each Senior Class member must have the dollar assessment. Unless this is paid, the picture cannot be taken.

The supplementary staff of feature writers, copyists, business men, etc., has not as yet been selected.

REV. JOHN O'LEARY ADDRESSES P. K. P. AT ANNUAL SMOKER

"Clipper" Smith, J. Stanley Morehouse Among Guest Speakers

Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity at Villanova College, held its fourth annual smoker at the Commerce and Finance auditorium on Tuesday evening, October 4.

Among the guest speakers were the Rev. John J. O'Leary, O. S. A., faculty moderator of the fraternity; acting dean of the Engineering school, J. Stanley Morehouse; "Clipper" Smith; Paetrus Manmiller; and Anthony Cirrito, president of the Phi Kappa Pi. These gentleman added general interest to the meeting with a variety of topics and digressions in the form of pleasing anecdotes.

Forming an integral part of the audience were many members of the Freshman class who will in future years form the backbone of the fraternity. Also present were a goodly number of upperclassmen and alumni together with many representatives of the college faculty.

A bit of informal entertainment was offered by campus talent in the course of the smoker. In the swing section, Cyril Daly's quartet played several numbers; while John O'Connell, Walter Kelly, Paul Farnsworth, and Aloyious Fitzpatrick, former student, entertained with their singing. Also helping out in the entertaining field was Edward Cierkowski who recited the ballad titled "The Face on the Bar-Room Floor."

Leo R. Bicher was chairman and toastmaster of the affair. The committee that ably assisted him in conducting this social function was composed of John Linsley, Raymond Sheik, George Borus, John Malaspina, John Leary, Cyril Daly, Vincent Baum and Walter Kelly.

Refreshments were served to those present at the end of the evening.

WILDCATS WIN SECOND GAME OF SEASON

BLUE LIGHTWEIGHTS OPEN SEASON WITH RUTGERS SATURDAY

Coach Stoviak Pessimistic About Result, But Expects to Put Out a Fighting Team

TACKLE POSITIONS WEAK

"And please, Santa, bring me a couple of husky fast tackles and guards."

Well might those be the words of Ray Stoviak if the good Saint Nick could arrange to make his annual trip in October this year instead of the customary December 25th. Ray, coach of the Villanova 150-pound grid ensemble, finds himself with a flock of fast capable back and a dearth of linemen capable enought to set those backs loose.

The always powerful Rutgers University lightweight eleven comes to Villanova this Saturday to meet Stoviak's outfit. The New Brunswick lads conquered the Blue last fall, 25-0, so Stoviak wants this game very much. A win would do much toward bringing Villanova into the limelight of 150-pound football, while a loss may hurt the 'Cats much more than is imagined.

Tackle Position Weak

Stoviak says that he is fairly satisfied with the backs but the line is a big question mark and a big headache as well. Tackles—or rather lack of them—are the big trouble. Only Al Wood, a veteran from last year's campaign, stands out to any marked degree. The other tackle job is as wide open as Oklahoma!

Guards are a little more powerful, but like the tackles they are scarce. Tony Sacchetti, a product of Lower Merion, and Jack Widman, are the leading candidates

FOOTBALL TICKETS AVAILABLE EARLY

A. A. Announces New Plan for Advance Reservations and Sales

To clear up the problem of how to get reserved tickets for future Villanova football contests and to facilitate entrance to Shibe Park on football days, the following procedure should be followed:

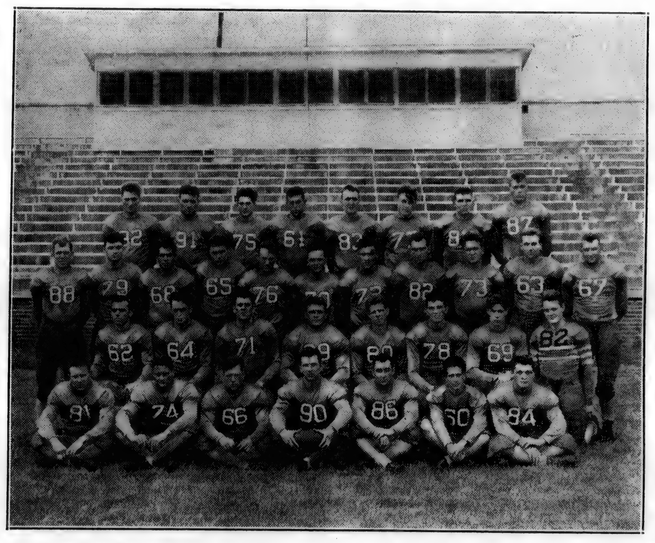
Anyone wanting tickets in advance to any of the games at Shibe Park, or to the Villanova-Temple game, should make application accompanied by cash or by check for the tickets in person, or by mail at the Athletic Association office. Printed form cards for advance application for tickets are available at the A. A. office now.

Reserved tickets for games will be on sale a week or ten days before each game at the Athletic Association office.

For ticket holders (reserved seats and boxes purchased in advance) there will be entrances marked "ticket holders enter here" on Lehigh Ave. and Twentieth St.

It is recommended and strongly urged that this routine be followed so that future complaints and confusion can be eliminated. At the same time officials working in the A. A. office can give Alumni members and the public the satisfaction that they seek.

Eager To Bowl Over The Wildcats



VILLANOVA DEFEATS MUHLENBERG TEAM BY 25 TO 7 SCORE

"Whitey" Kurowski Runs Ninety Yards Against Cats to Tally for Mules

BUCKLEY LEADS WILDCATS

Ten thousand rabid football fans jammed Coffield Stadium last Saturday in Allentown to watch Villanovas' grid machine emerge victorious over a scrappy but outclassed Muhlenberg squad, 25-7.

Unable to display the offensive power that it unleashed a week ago the Cats nevertheless played headsup ball making and capitalizing on breaks to score two of its four touchdowns.

Most of the time the Wildcat play was ragged, but on several occasions the Blue and White really played football in the manner that is typical of a great football team. In such instances the Wildcat backs reeled off long gains.

Cochrane Blocks Punt

Setting the stage for the first Blue tally was a blocked kick by Bill Cochrane with Andrews recovering on the Mules' 30. On the next play "Nickels" Basca flipped an aerial to Walt Nowak who in turn tossed a lateral to Chisick, advancing the pikskin to the three yard line. Skirting right end Basca went over unmolested. Wysocki's attempt to convert was wide of the uprights.

After receiving the kickoff the Mules took to the air, completing a pass for 20 yards, Stamus to Captain Matusa. On the next attempt to pass, Wysocki, playing brilliant ball, rushed the passer, who in his haste to get it away threw the pigskin into Cochrane's hands and Bill raced 60 yards for a tally be-

Contest Inaugurates Centre-Villanova Relationship in Athletics; Colonels' Record Includes Impressive Wins Over Mississippi College, Chattanooga and Transylvania

By SAUL WALLACH

Villanova's hungry Wildcats will be the target of the sharpshooting "Praying Colonels" of Centre College who will be making a bid for new gridiron fame and fortune Saturday afternoon at Shibe Park.

The 1938 edition of the visitors will not be the same Centre College outfit that Philadelphians remembers as having been slaughtered by Temple several seasons back.

Its a new deal at the Danville, Kentucky, college this year, and a very successful one at that. The "Praying Colonels" have taken time out from praying and are playing top notch football as is witnessed by the three vitories turned in this season. Centre is undefeated, unscored upon, and untied.

Decker Centre Coach

The new deal is headed by J. Quinn Decker, a former Tennessee backfield great who assumed the duties of head coach only this year. He was a member of the famed Tennessee backfield combination of 1928 that carried the "Vols" to football fame—McEvert, Dodd, Hackman, and Decker. He is assisted by 26-yearold DeWitt Weaver, who learned his football at Tennessee, coaches the backfield.

"Decker's Dixie Darlings" have turned in commendable performances against Mississippi College, Chattanooga Univeristy, and Transylvania. That they are ready for the Wildcats is evidenced by the thorough trouncing handed Transylvania last Saturday in which the "Colonels" ran wild in recording a 48-0 win.

Enthusiasm is running high in the Blue Grass country this year. Football as ' is now being played on the Danville campus resembles that type once displayed by such great Centre teams that brought football glory to the small southern school back in 1920-21-22. Seasons that saw All-Americans Bo McMullan, "Red" Roberts and "Red Weaver" bring the "Praying Colonels" into National Prominence.

It was back in 1921 that a small squad of Centre College athletes left the Danville station headed for Cambridge, Massachusetts, where on the following Saturday they were to meet the great Harvard team. When th esmoke had cleared Bo McMillan and Co. emerged victorious by a 6-0 count.

In a way this 1938 team compares favorably to that great Centre club of 1921. That year the "Praying Colonels" opened their season with a 14-0 win over Clemson. One week later they defeated Virginia by the same score. Xavier was polished off by a score of 28-6. Then came that fame winning game with the Crimson of Harvard. In that same season Transylvania bowed 98-0. Against Kentucky, Centre proved so powerful that no account could be taken of the score after the first half.

Lettermen Return

The current toast of the Blue Grass boasts of a combination of lettermen augmented by a bevy of sophomores. Chief spark plug of the southerners is a Pennsylvania boy who answers to the name of Joe "Red' 'Smith. The Dunbar athlete is 5' 11' 'and weights 175 pounds. He cavorts in the backfield with Senior Dick Stahl, who alternates between the halfback posts and the quarterback positions. Stahl is the rtipple threat man of the Centre backfield combination. He passes, runs and kicks, and is often called upon to place kick field goals.

Stahl, Watch Charm Barker

Other versatile backs in the interchangeable backfield are Denny van Huss, a fullback and halfback who weighs 175 pounds and is 6' tall. Van Huss plays the halfback post when Stahl is calling signals from quarterback. Jerry German is the fourth man of the Centre quartette. He is a senior and plys his trade at the quarterback position when Stahl is at halfback.

In Bobby Steakly, Centre has the smallest and lightest back in the south if not in the entire nation playing intercollegiate varsity football. Rated as the best ball carrier on the Centre team, Steakly can absorb punishment as well as hand it out. Down in Dixie they call his the "Baby Bronko Nagurski." Steagly weights all of 128 pounds and is 5' 8". Penn State's "Rabbit" Wear is the closest the eastern sector could come to producing a football star with those qualifications.

By THOMAS J. CARBINE

IT WAS A lovely day, that September morn when Mr. Cochrane first received the hoped for word that it was a boy. That was back in 1916. Since then that tiny piece of humanity has grown to a size and shape that even Tarzan, himself, might envy. But what events have taken place while our friend Bill was assuming the aspects of manhood?

Soon after his birth (was it six or seven years?) he faced the world for the first time at St. Aedan's school in Jersey City, where he remained for three years and distinguished his family by receiving honors in his studies. However, he felt he needed a change, so he transferred to Public School, Number 24, where he served three more years in the pursuit of education.

Liked Sports as a Youth

It was during these youthful years that he first turned to athletics. He played first base on the ball team and was a member of his school's relay team that reached the finals in the city championship. Culture also entered our hero's life during these years. Bill remembers that he took the part of a "Big Chief" in some historical play, but outside of the fact that he had to keep yelling "Wahoo" everything else is hazy.

His next educational step occurred when he reached seventh grade and entered the Henry Snyder Junior High School. This school also supplied him with learning for three years. However, at this time he happily combined studies and athletics, for his record shows that while he was an honor student he also was high-scoring center on the basketball team, as well as being a slugging first baseman. During this period he also took part in a light drama of modern family life.

To complete his secondary school education Bill next enrolled at Lincoln High School. After completing one year he considered changing to St. Peter's Prep., also in Jersey City, but on the second day he was there he found out that they wanted him to stay with them for an extra year, so he re- d to the school of his first to finish his high school right, by his Alma earning letters in three orts. In his three years school, our Jersey City id down first base on the ball team. He built up a at reputation as a money play- and in his last year the team won the city title and were runners-up in the county championships. In this latter series he had his greatest batting streak by averaging .750.

Football was a part of Bill's life during his last two years in high school. At right tackle he captained his team against Union Hill when they were both tied for the league crown. With Harry Mazzei at fullback and Gordon Shader at Number One back the opposition proved to be too tough and Bill's team lost.

Former Enemies, Now Teammates

He also played against Monaco who was on the Emerson High School team and Chisick and "Red" Kamen who played for Good Counsel in Newark. This latter game was the one that was cut short by a riot when Bill punched someone for dirty playing. Things became so hot that the Jersey City boys had to leave town in their uniforms under a police escort.

His last year in high school was the one and only time, before or since, that the team won the city title. This was also the year that he blocked enough punts to make his average one a game. This was probably one of the determining factors in making him All-County tackle by unanimous acclaim.

During his last year he also played basketball on the team that won the city title. He played center and worked mainly defensively, feeding Bill Sinnott, the team high scorer.

Slane Sends Bill to Villanova

His football coach, John Slane, Class of '29, one of the best halfbacks in his day, induced Bill to come to Villanova to play under Harry Stuhldreher. So sight unseen, he decided to make Villanova his Alma Mater. As a Freshman he roomed in the penthouse of Mendel Hall with Jack Torpey, the Colorado cowboy. During football season he played right tackle on the Green squad. The team had no games at all. They had to have their fun smearing the Varsity's best plays. In the Spring practice of that year he was converted into a right end. He played this position all through his Sophomore year.

In the Bucknell game that year he hurt his back, but it mended in time for him to play awhile against Temple. The Sophomore year also saw him change from Arts to Education. He also began his residence in Fedigan Hall that year. His room-mate was Chuck Kratochevil. The next year John Costello became his side-kick and the brains of the organization. His football star dimmed for awhile during this, his Junior year; but after he was switched to left tackle he began to feel at home and proved it by blocking a punt as soon as he entered the Temple game.

Plays Next to Wysocki

This year he is still playing left tackle and what is more, he is playing beside Johnny Wysocki, so Clipper need have no worries about that side of the line. Already he has had the honor of captaining the Wildcats in their first game, although he did not play on account of a shoulder injury. Each year he is usually hurt once, so with the injury for this year already checked off he hopes to do better than ever.

But Bill has more in his life than just football. For the past two Summers he has worked for the Board of Education in Jersey City. He hopes to teach some day in some small town in New Jersey close to New York City. As for marriage, he isn't interested until he meets the right girl.

Pinochle Shark

At the present time he is pinochle champion of Fedigan Hall. His football ambition is to kick an extra point sometime and to make a touchdown in the Temple game.

hind some effective Wildcat blocking.

Wysocki Converts

All-American Johnny Wysocki, showing that alertness pays on the gridiron, picked up a poorly handled pass from center and skirted left end for Villanova's only extra point of the day.

For the remaining part of the first half neither team was able to show much with most of the play taking place in Muhlenberg territory. However in the waning minutes of the second quarter Harvey Buek booted one out of bounds on the Mules' three yard line.

Buek Returns Punt for Score

Following this coffin corner kick Buek returned a punt for sixty-five yards behind some spectacular Villanova blocking to send the Blue and White into the lead by 19 points. Once again the point after touchdown failed to appear on the score board.

The Main Liners had a difficult time to get their touchdown drives rolling in the second half, for "Old Man Fate" (Pop Penaltie) intervened, and time and time again ticked off reverses against the Blue and White.

No scores appeared for either side in the third period with both teams stressing pass attacks. The ball changed hands quite often with interceptions stopping the scoring threats that either team could muster.

DiFilippo Intercepts Pass

In the last period with about ten minutes left to play Di Filippo intercepted a Mule pass on Villanova's thirty-four yard line. At this stage of the game the Wildcats began to display some of the ability which seemed latent all afternoon.

"Buzz" Howlett passed to McMahon for a first down, advancing the ball in Mule territory. On the next play Howlett passed to Buek for another substantial gain to the Muhlenberg's twenty-one yard line. Then the Cats were penalized fifteen yards, putting the ball back on the thirty-six.

After the penalty, however, Howlett passed to Nowak who tossed a lateral to Sabrinski. Mike raced the remaining twenty-five yards and shook two tacklers off to cross the last white stripe standing up. Bob Buckley, acting captain of the game, missed the extra point for touchdown, leaving the Blue out in front, 25-0.

Coach Julian's boys were striving and fighting with everything they had to push across a marker and for a while it looked as if their efforts would bring no fruit. But lo and behold the Cats are forced to kick and Verbitsky gets off a beautiful spiral down to the ten yard line.

Kurowski Runs 90 Yards

Big Walter "Whitey" Kurowski gathers the ball in his arms, sees Monaco coming from the right, darts off to the left and scoots ninety yards to score. The second touchdown scored against the Cats in two seasons, Marquette turning the trick last season. Kurowski also converted for the Mules.

This run seemed to awaken the somewhat stunned Wildcat subs. They made a bid to score but their efforts were in vain with the end of the game finding the ball in Muhlenberg territory.

On Muhlenberg

Muhlenberg completed only one pass. Along the ground, our defensive play was good, with the guards and ends especially strong.

THE whole story of the Muhlenberg game lies in individual alertness. As individuals, we played a fine game; but as a team, we still played a good individual game. Lack of teamwork almost caused disaster.

Muhlenberg, however, is by no means a poor team. Big and heavy, they had us well scouted and were prepared for what we had in store for them. They rushed our passes so well that our overhead game looked bad indeed, and their defensive line play against ground attacks was equally good.

Backs Not in Form

To get back to our squad, it was noticeable that the backs are still far from satisfacory form. The ends, Wysocki and Nowak, and center Andy Chisik played fine games, but the tackles were definitely no balls of fire on the field. Val Rizzo showed again that he can be depended upon to play a steady, very capable guard position, as did Big Dave DiFillipo. Senior Matty Kuber's performance was below his usually superior standard, but I am sure that he will return to his customary form during this week's practice.

On Saturday's showing, it seems that there can be lots of work for the backfield men this week. Tom McMahon, carrying on almost alone at fullback, turned in a very polished game, but he can't be expected to do so every week. There will have to be an improvement at the halfback position; but Harvey Buek fulfilled Wildcat hopes by some very nice work. His generalship was sound, and his play at safety when he returned Muhlenberg punts with two of his own caught the Mules napping, and placed them in unfavorable locations well in their own territory.

Passing Game Poor

Our own passing gome, for the second straight week, looked inadequate, even allowing for the fact that they were risking big gains along the ground to rush our passers. Our own pass protection was practically nil. On defense, our pass defense was alert and tight, as is evidenced by the fact that

As I feared, we went up to Allentown feeling that the game was won. Muhlenberg had other ideas, and tried hard, and successfully, to prove that to us. Outside of the previously-mentioned individual alertness, we had little edge on them outside of our gold pants. And the color of your pants won't beat a hustling opponent. I think that the boys realize it now, and it is perhaps fortunate that they do, for Centre College has, apparently, a really tough little club; one that will live up to the fine record of former Praying Colonel squads which came East to hand hometown favorites sundry pastings.

So this week will show a concentrated drill on passing, protecting the passers, defensive and offensive line play. The backs will receive lots of attention in regard to their timing and blocking, and our catalog of plays will be dusted off and examined critically for flaws in operation.

It will be important for us to look good against Centre this Saturday since it will be our initial appearance in Philadelphia this season, and all those doubters must be convinced that Villanova has a football team.

Austinites Assume Lead In Intramural Race

Blueshirts Defeat Alumni Twice To Win First Half

ALUMNI, MENDEL TIE FOR SECOND PLACE

By PHIL DUNN

Austin Hall got off to a good start in the intra-mural race on Sunday when they won the first half softball championship. In two games the Austinites defeated Father Dunne's Alumni group by scores of 9-2 and 6-4.

The first of these games decided the championship; and by dropping the nightcap the Greenies fell into a tie for second place with the Mendel aggregation, who won the two games they were to play by forfeit from Fedigan.

Frosh Play Raggedly

Although it was Bob Boudon's great pitching that held the Greenies powerless in the first game, the play of the Freshmen was ragged throughout most of both games; and this fact aided the Austinites no little.

Boudon gave a very good exhibition of pitching skill as he set the Alumni team down with but two hits, from which they garnered as many runs. Austin's nine runs were the result of 12 hits and several Frosh errors. The losing pitcher in the first game was Reid.

Pantaleo Pitches in Nightcap

The second game saw Carl Pantaleo take the mound for the Austin crew against Nick Nicora of Alumni. The men from the Eastern part of the campus started in just where they had left off and touched Nicora and his Freshmen pals for three runs in the first inning. Blows by Aleo, Pantaleo, and Mullarkey accounted for these scores.

Alumni never stopped trying, however, and in the sixth inning when "Panty" became wild and began issuing passes they showed their spirit. Try as they did, though, they were too far behind to come through and hence suffered their second defeat of the afternoon.

Scores by innings:

WYSOCKI RECEIVES AWARD FROM TERMINAL THEATER

In recognition of his 1937 feats upon the Villanova gridiron, long John Wysocki, senior end of Clipper's current Wildcats, is to be presented the Terminal Theater's Most Valuable Player Award this Thursday night at the 69th Street cinema.

With the whole Blue squad as guests, Ed Pollock, sports editor of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger, will make the presentation on behalf of Mr. George Flicker, manager of the popular Upper Darby movie house. Though not a Villanova alumnus, Mr. Flicker has long followed the Wildcat grid teams through good and not so good seasons.

All students are urged to attend Thursday evening, for in addition to the usual good picture to be shown, there will be a pre-game rally for the Centre College fray to be held in Shibe Park on Saturday.

scholastic star, is a sure starter at the center post. Pryzblick and Anderson are guards; while Numan and Koriski fill the tackle positions. At the ends Napoletano and Murray seem to have the edge on other aspirants for the terminal stations.

With two weeks remaining before the Temple game, many new faces may creep into the starting line up, a possible thing as the competition on the frosh field is keen.

Lightweights

with Bill Nihil, from West Catholic, not far behind. A few other candidates show possibilities of making the grade after a few more sessions of practice.

Charley Timmins, a steady veteran hailing from West Catholic, is back at center, which eases Coach Stoviak's worries in that department. Penman is giving Charley a tough battle for the starting job, giving the one-fifties a well-fortified center of the line.

Wingsmen Look Good

A pair of veterans from last Fall, Don McGurk, and Vic Domenick, and a newcomer, Liscio, are waging a merry battle for the terminal assignments. McGurk and Domenick enjoy a slight edge due to experience but Liscio is making things tough for both. Domenick hails from Radnor High, where he played varsity ball. Lanky George Coupe also looks good.

In the backfield, material is more plentiful and for this reason no job is secure. At least ten men are right in the thick of the battle for starting assignments and it does not appear likely that the opening combination will be named until late this week.

Bill Brown, Tom Haynes, and Joe Pagano are the leading contenders for the signal-calling post. Brown, a regular in last year's battles, has a narrow lead over Pagano and Haynes and it is likely that all will see plenty of action in the Rutgers game with the regular assignment going to the best performer in that meeting.

Lombardo Paces Fullbacks

"Guy" Lombardo, former All-Catholic back at St. Joseph's Prep, leads the race for the fullback job. "Guy" played last fall in his freshman year. Carl Pantaleo, also a veteran, is Lombardo's chief competitor.

At left-half, Brad McManus, who held down the job last season, is being pushed hard by Lattanza, a freshman. The other half-back post is a toss-up between Harold Murphy and Jack Brown, with Boudon providing plenty of trouble for both. Any one of the three is likely to answer the opening whistle for the Rutgers game.

Coach Stoviak, due to the type of material at hand, intends to stress an aerial attack with this year's club. He has several backs, notably Lombardo, who can flip the pigskin and his ends are ball-hawks of the highest calibre. Lombardo to McGurk proved an effective pass combination last season and it is likely that they will be teamed up again in the present campaign. Stoviak himself was one of the greatest passers in collegiate ranks last year and it is believed that he will be able to inculcate some of his ability into the present squad.

Stoviak Pessimistic

Regarding the Rutgers get-together Coach Stoviak is a little pessimistic (a la "Clipper" Smith). However, he does admit a certain amount of satisfaction with the backs. They seem to have what it takes and, above all, they are quite plentiful.

The line situation, although it is quite dark, may be straightened out this week. Lateness in the arrival of equipment delayed the beginning of practice and up to this writing the squad has had little more than eleven days of practice and much less of contact work. With more practice sessions the line labyrinth may straighten itself out. When, and if it does, it is fairly certain that the Blue will show its finest lightweight team in history.

Rutgers is the big question mark. A victory may mean the difference between a successful and an unsuccessful campaign. The material is above average and Ray Stoviak has already proven himself an adept coach. Saturday will tell the tale.

LOOK at what the "Wisebird" (Gene Riger) Sports Editor of the Temple University News has to say:

"STAN BAUMGARTNER, Philadelphia Inquirer columnist and sports writer, has it all doped out that Villanova will humble Temple again this year while en route to another unbeaten campaign.

"If observations of the 'Cats in pre-season drills and against that 'All-American' nobody, American International, and of the Owls in their first two encounters with Albright and Pittsburgh is enough to convince Baumgartner of Main Line superiority, we are grateful to him for pointing this out.

"That Temple will not be anyone's doormat for the balance of the year (Pitt is merely the country's No. 1 team, so why should it humble the Cherry and White?) is a fair supposition when considering that it faces stubborn opposition week in week out.

"When November 12 rolls around the Owls will be a tried combination whereas Villanova, which really rates a more formidable schedule than it can boast of, stacks up against for most part, weak and unimpressive elevens. Auburn, Detroit, and perhaps Manhattan are the only tough ones for Clipper Smith, besides Temple.

"Villanova will be plenty good this season but not the almost-perfect unit of 1937. Some of their pillars have been lost via graduation and it remains to be seen whether new men fill the positions adequately.

"We'll reserve judgment on the possible Owl-'Cat outcome for several weeks."

Take a good look at it Wildcats and we'll expect your reaction to such remarks in future Villanova grid contests, and especially in the Cherry and White contest. As for what we think of it, Mr. Gene Riger can look for it in the next edition of the VILLANOVAN.

—V—

Coach Ray Stovfak makes his debut as a Villanova mentor when his charges take on Rutgers' Lightweights on the Main Line gridiron this Saturday. The spirit of the one-fifties has been good and this contest should prove to be a thriller for football fans. While on the subject of one-fifty football . . .It seems as if this sport is going over big at Cornell . . .only 110 candidates reported for the initial practice. . .this season marks Cornell's admittance to the League and by all indications they are set to make their inaugural an impressive one.

Muhlenberg Freshmen added a lot of color to the Villanova game last Saturday . . .strolling around in their lavendar pajamas. . .under the careful guidance of the Sophomores...How about it, Frosh? Aren't you glad you don't go to Muhlenberg or would you like to do the same at the Centre game this Saturday?

HERE and THERE

By BILL SINNOTT

Our Time at Bat . . .

Strike One ! ! ! ! ! Bill Dyer, Philadelphia sports announcer, blames a disloyal alumni for poor attendance at the football games in Shibe Park. This may be true. There is some basis, too, for labeling this an untruth. In Philadelphia, there is a concentration of Villanova Alumni. This can't be denied. But the concentration is not so large as to warrant Dyer's statement. It would take more than the Villanova alumni in the Philly sector to fill up those stands at the ball park. That the announcer's statement is true cannot be rejected entirely.

We've seen very little of the Alumni at our "run of the mill" games. Naturally, they are present in profusion at our Homecoming Game. Those from New England, New York, and Up-State Pennsylvania make it their business to attend that . (It's the Auburn game this year. November 5.) Those we have seen at the average games seem to be a fair percentage of our local graduates. That their loyalty is questioned is unfair.

They are loyal. That statement is incontravertible. For verification see any of our athletes who have come into contact with them. No name a few, who can think of any more loyal than Messrs. O'Brien, O'Loughlin, Dolan, Connelly and many others too numerous to mention?

They are local. Up in North Jersey, Johnny Slane and Jack McGann work incessantly propagating the interests of Villanova College. Up in New England there are many others. Up-State the same holds true.

Non-attendance at our games, Mr. Dyer, is due to circumstances that we can't explain. Maybe those "savants" on your local papers can explain.

Strike two ! ! ! ! We haven't that cup we promised we'd have. The Cup has disappeared entirely now. No one knows where it is. Father McKee still contends that the cup was to be passed on to the succeeding Intra-Mural winners each week. Father Ludwig insists that the cup was given to him with the intention that it was to be permanently retained. He says a new cup was to be given each year. Obviously, someone is laboring under a delusion. Father Lunney is happily indifferent to the whole thing.

Strike Three ! ! ! ! We have heard nothing of a College Carnival we suggested last year. All local colleges could participate—Villanova, St. Joe's, Rosemont, Chestnut Hill, Immaculata, Ursinus, Swarthmore, P. M. C., and others who wished. We'd like to hear it discussed.

Foul Ball ! ! ! ! Tommy Haynes, who libeled us last week in his Odds and Ends column. We were down the Greeks with Tommy Winterbottom. (Don't laugh. That's his name.) No girls had the chance to stand us up. We were waiting for none. However, O'Mahoney and yourself went out the same way you came in—alone.

SCIENCE FRAT WILL HEAR DR. BELLEW

Noted Lecturer to Address L. K. D. in Mendel Amphitheater

Endocrinology, a comparatively new subject in the field of medicine, will be the topic for discussion by Henry G. Bellew, D. O., at the regular meeting of the Lambda Kappa Delta, science fraternity, in the Mendel Amphitheater on Thursday, October 13.

Included in his lecture will be a description of the important ductless glands of the human body, and the effects of their activity upon the mental and physical reactions of human beings.

Dr. Bellew has already done much work in this field. He has an enviable reputation as an outstanding lecturer, and as an author of several iscientific articles.

Regular business of the fraternity concerning the approaching dance, and the revisement of several rules will be conducted before elections.

All freshmen science students interested in joining the L. K. D. fraternity are invited to attend this special meeting.

In order to accomplish these objectives, the association carries out the following activities: Publishes a quarterly magazine which prints inspiring and educational articles on achievements of Catholic writers, conducts a critical service offering advice and service to faculty advisers of Catholic school publications, conducts an annual survey and rating and confers the honorary title of "All Catholic" on deserving publications, and in general aids the publication of better Catholic school papers.

FACULTY DINNER HELD TOMORROW

Clerical and lay members of the faculty at Villanova College will be honored at the annual Faculty Banquet to be conducted in the college dining hall tomorrow evening. Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president, will officiate.

In former years this occasion was held to supplement the Feast of St Thomas of Villanova, September 22. This year the banquet has been delayed because of the death of the late Rev. Dr. John F. O'Brien. O. S. A.

Holy Name Society Enrolls Students For Ensuing Year

Non-Resident Members Are Urged to Join Parish Branches

First meeting of the Villanova Holy Name Society of the 1938-1939 year will take place this week, the date to be announced shortly, stated Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., moderator of the society.

Fr. Boyle, who succeeds Rev. Charles P. Brown, O. S. A., as chaplain, explained that membership in this thoroughly Catholic organization is open to all resident students, non - residents being requested to affiliate themselves with their respective parish branches. Efforts are being made to enroll every Catholic student in this society and to have all wear the Holy Name button.

The main duties of a member of the Holy Name Society are to abstain from using profane or unbecoming speech, to receive Holy Communion with the members of the society on the appointed day (First Friday for residents; the second Sunday of the month for day students), and to have his name written in the chaplain's official register.

A. S. M. E. TO VISIT WILMINGTON PLANT

Mechanical Engineering Society Plans Smoker Next Month

At the first meeting of the local chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, plans were announced for a trip to Wilmington, Del., where the members will visit a metal-fabrication and welding shop. Here they will be able to view at first hand the workings of a modern engineering plant.

Faculty adviser, Mr. William J. Barber, who was the principal speaker of the evening, announced that these trips to various factories engaged in mechanical engineering would be conducted each month.

As this was the initial meeting of the society the main order of business was the discussion of plans for its activities during the coming year. Besides the trip already announced, it was decided that a smoker would be held the latter part of November. Details will be announced later.

JUNIOR APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED

P.K.P. 'Owl Hop' Features 'Villanovans' Friday Night

Field House Decorated in Autumn Mode For Annual Fraternity Informal; Tickets on Sale at $1.50 Per Couple

DOBBINS TO PRESENT VOCALIZATIONS

This Friday night, October 21, Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, will present its annual Owl Hop. Informal dancing to the music of the Villanovans, college orchestra, will commence at 9 o'clock and terminate at 1 o'clock.

The chairman of this dance, Frank Carroll, has made public several important announcements concerning the management of this year's engineer social. Chief among these is the contracting of William Dobbins, senior in the School of Arts, to fill the role of vocalist.

Amplification Improved

Certain improvements have been made on the amplifying system which will enhance both the quality of the Villanovans' music and the timber of Dobbins' voice in his musical interpretations. Experiments are being conducted, also, as regards the regulation of the volume control of this system and the placing of it in the most advantageous position to amplify the music and the vocals more perfectly.

Carroll, in co-ordination with his activa committeemen and the fraternity president, Anthony Cirrito, outlined the various decoration programs of former dances of this nature only to discard them in favor of an original plan. This new idea will transform the main floor of the Villanova Field House into the perfect Autumn setting. Against the background of the acoustic curtains the Fall colors of red and yellow will be so displayed as to parallel the artistic touch of Nature without sacrificing the naturalness of the scene.

DEBATERS PREPARE FOR ACTIVE SEASON

Begin Activities at Knights of Columbus Hall In Ardmore

Beta Gamma will begin their debating activities on October 18, in the Knights of Columbus Hall, Ardmore, at 3:15 P. M. The national question has been announced as follows, "Resolved that the government should stop spending public funds to assist business."

James F .Donovan, manager of the Villanova chapter of the national debating fraternity, Beta Gamma, has been contacting debates for radio, home, and away, and thus far has engaged Holy Cross, Georgetown and Fordham.

The debate will be conducted between two three-man teams. The affirmative side will consist of John Donovan, sophomore in the School of Arts; John Murray, sophomore in the Commerce and Finance School; and Robert O'Brien, junior, also in the School of Commerce.

The supporters of the negative side will be Witold Krzywicki, senior in the School of Science; Robert Wilderotter, junior in the School of Science, and Robert McManus, junior in the Commerce and, Finance school.

Election of officers of the chapter has not yet taken place but is expected to be held in the near future.

ENGINEERING DEANS EDIT STATEMENTS IN TECH. MAGAZINE

First Issue of "Villanova Engineer" Released This Week

MANY ARTICLES FEATURED

Joseph J. Quinn, editor of the "Villanova Engineer," the monthly periodical of the School of Engineering, announced that the first issue will be distributed to the student body of the technical school this week.

Included in the magazine will be statements concerning the scholastic curriculum by the heads of the various engineering departments: Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, dean of Chemical Engineering; J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of Mechanical Engineering; Thomas J. McCormick, dean of Civil Engineering; Harry S. Bueche, dean of Electrical Engineering. An article introducing Professors Emil Amelotti and John Oakey, newly added to the faculty of the Engineering school, is of interest.

Among the interesting topics embodied in this issue will be the feature article on "Highways" by Edward J. Conneen, discussing the construction of the newly proposed "Super Highway," from Harrisburg to Pittsburgh, that contains many technicalities of the enterprise.

William Robrecht contributes in his write-up on "Halogens" an explanation of the importance and industrial uses of iodine, bromine, fluorine, chlorine, and their compounds.

"Interviewing Charles Meyers, '33 and Edward McBride, '34," by Hymann Malkin, is a well-written article. There is entailed the activities of their work in the engineering field at Westinghouse Electric Company since their graduation. Incidently, Mr. McBride is the recipient of the scholarship awarded to employees each year by the Westinghouse Company, affording the opportunity to take post-graduate work at Harvard University.

ENGINEERING GROUP PLANS MANY TRIPS

Numerous inspection trips were planned by the Villanova chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers at the regular meeting on Monday, October 10. Itinerary discussed would include tours to the Lincoln tunnel, a visit to the New York World's Fair grounds, and the inspection of various sewerage disposal plants in the Philadelphia area.

Members of the society decided to extend invitations from time to time to almuni members to participate in the meetings. The present plan calls for addresses to be made by such alumni in which personal experiences and observations in the field of civil engineering will be made. Certain upper classmen will read technical papers related to the topics on hand at each meeting.

CLUB CONVENES

An outline of the policies of the Spanish Club for the ensuing year will be the topic of discussion at a meeting of the organization to be held tomorrow evening in Room 107, Mendel Hall. All members are urged to attend.

BELLE AIR EDITOR ADOPTS NEW PLANS FOR SENIOR PHOTOS

Individual Sittings Begin Today in Mendel Reception Room

New innovations in the method of presenting the individual pictures of the senior class have been announced by Bernard J. McHenry, editor of the Belle Air, year book, and Harry Matsinger, photography editor.

The new pictures will consist of a three-quarter informal pose of each senior instead of the usual bust picture which have proven so popular in the past in college publications here and elsewhere. Mr. McHenry thinks that this will be a more realistic manner of interpreting the character of each student. This will mark the first time that this idea has been presented in this college and will be quite a novelty.

Individual pictures of the seniors are scheduled to begin today and to continue throughout the week. Each senior has received a time for his appointment and a general list has been posted. All pictures are to be taken in the reception room of Mendel Hall. It is very important that each member of the Senior Class have his dollar assessment at the appointed time for posing for his picture.

The other editors of the staff are completing the selection of the men who are to assist them in their various tasks. Active literary work is expected to begin in the very near future. Work on the Belle Air is expected to progress as does the school year and at the present time everything points to this being a bigger and better issue of the Belle Air than were those of recent years.

CLUB HOLDS REHEARSALS

Selection of Choral Members To Be Made in Near Future

Villanova's Glee Club held its first rehearsal under the direction of Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. A second meeting will be held today for the same purpose.

Each rehearsal period will be divided into sections. The first 30 minutes will be devoted to a study of the musical theory involved. Actual singing practice will constitute the remaining hour. Final selection of members of the organization will be made on the basis of results obtained in these and subsequent rehearsals.

Fr. Handran announced the regular Glee Club activities would begin soon after November 1. No engagements will be made prior to this date.

Charles Cavanaugh Named Chairman Of Promenade

Bradley McManus Chosen to Direct Activities For Colorful Week; Frank Pimpinella Selected to Head Ring Committee

COMMITTEES TO BE RELEASED LATER

Appointees to the three important class positions were revealed today by William V. Sinnott, president of the Class of 1940. Named to the coveted positions were Charles Cavanaugh, chairman of the Junior Prom; Bradley J. McManus, chairman of Junior Week; Frank Pimpinella, chairman of the Ring Committee.

The newly appointed chairman of the Ring Committe, Frank Pimpinella, has been engaged in various activities throughout his three years at Villanova College. He is serving this year as a member of the Student Council to which he was elected last year. In his Sophomore year he was on the Orientation Committee and also the Sophomore Cotillion Committee. The Connecticut Club elected him as their vice president and he has been a driving influence in the club since his entrance. Since his first year at Villanova he has been a member of the Glee Club. He has expressed his fondness for debating by showing his active participation in several of the debates held by the Betta Gamma last year. With consideration of all his activities Pimpinella has been for his three years at Villanova College "the first man in scholastic rating of his class."

Heading the Junior Prom Committee is Charles Cavanaugh, secretary of his class last year and member of many of the student organizations throughout the campus. He has been a member of the Glee Club for his three years at Villanova College, and was last year a member of the quartet that went to New York in the tri-college competition for quartets. During his Sophomore year he was a member of the Orientation Committee

CURRENT PROBLEMS DISCUSSED AT FIRST MEETING OF SEMINAR

Historical Viewpoints Forwarded on International and Labor Topics

SESSIONS HELD WEEKLY

First history seminar of the new term was held in the lounge room in Mendel Hall on Thursday, October 13.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. H. J. Hartmann, professor of History, together with Rev. John A. Dunne, O. S. A., associate professor of History.

At this first meeting two problems were brought up for discussion which will be also discussed at the next few meetings. They were first the International Crisis, which at present appears to be dormant, and a discussion on the merits of the Wagner National Labor Relations Act from a judicial, legislative, and historical point of view.

It was a source of great encouragement to both the moderators to see such a large number in attendance, especially so many seniors, and it is hoped this interest manifested so strongly will be an augury of better and greater things. It was announced that meetings would be held every week until Thanksgiving and that after this time as often as circumstances arose.

The seminar is engaged primarily in research work in elective history and for this reason it was announced that the members would be offered the opportunity to take over the chair if they would prepare, deliver, and provoke discussion on some topic dealing with the work under discussion of whatever topic they wished to choose. It is to be noted that the seminar is a very informal gathering and this tends to bring out the opinions of all present.

Dr. Hartmann announced that the position of secretary would be filled in the next few days.

DALTON ADDRESSES SCIENCE SEMINAR

"Town Crier" Discusses Importance of Radio in Everyday Life

To be a radio commentator is not a simple matter. Hamilton Dalton, known to radio listeners as the "Town Crier," voiced this opinion in an address to the Science Seminar last Thursday.

After emphasizing the importance of the radio in every day life, Mr. Dalton went on to stress the significance of this means of communication as illustrated by the part it played in the recent Czechoslovakian crisis.

In an attempt to show what a powerful instrument of propaganda it has become, the "Crier" spoke a few words on the extreme severeness of censorship placed upon the radio and the commentator by the various governments. Each commentator, he stated, is allowed to comment only upon a special, such as foreign cables, news of the day, and politics. Only in few instances are they permitted to express any sort of personal opinion concerning the events.

Throughout the address the pleasing style of Mr. Dalton held the undivided attention of his audience, and especially interested were they in the descriptions he tendered of such timely events as the occupation of Austria a year ago and of Czechoslovakia recently by Hitler.

ORIENTAL MEDDLING

THE United States policy being pursued in regard to the war of Japan in China signifies an unreasonable outlay for the protection of our meager monetary interests in that section of the Orient. To work, this policy must be backed by the use of force. Hence, the present development of a superpowerful navy along offensive lines rather than defensive is understandable. Adding the public pronouncements of men in key positions such as the President, the Secretary of State, and the Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, one may see a definite intention to impede Japan in China.

Apparently those speaking and acting thus, without authorization from the people or their representatives, are confident that the U. S. will be educated to the proper conditions by the time Congress is asked to vote on war. The whole procedure seems so foolhardy. The cost of the war is in no wise commensurate with the value of what we would be allegedly fighting for. As our holdings over there are only one percent of all our foreign investments, it is readily seen that we would not be fighting for ourselves so much as for Great Britain, the prime interested party.

The argument that we would be fighting for humanity is specious against the fact that the U. S. supplies 55 percent of Japan's war imports, much of what we provide being indispensible for modern war. An even greater danger than the ill feeling and war risks connected with our meddling in the Orient is that this patent alliance of the more wealthy nations in the Eastern situation is a roundabout way of bringing the pressure of the U. S. into the European quagmire.

BENEFITING ALL

THOUGH there are a number of college members who would enjoy using the billiard tables, bowling alleys, and swimming pool down in the gymnasium, the fact remains that these facilities are little used by the general student body.

Reasons are that students have classes, labs, and other work to do in the afternoon, the only time these particular sports are open. Billiard and bowling enthusiasts are accustomed to playing at night. There is a great thrill in taking a swim for relaxation after the day's work is finished.

Allowing entrance to the recreations in the evenings, at least on Friday and Saturday nights, would result in wider opportunities for healthful exercise, keep the students on the campus, and offer an evening's entertainment when funds are low.

A CHALLENGE

IF Freshmen, after due warning, do not abide by the rules and regulations, it shall be the duty of the Student Council, as such, to call the offenders before them for trial."

If there ever was a time when that duty should be discharged, it is now. THE PRESENT FRESHMAN CLASS HAS EXHIBITED MORE VIOLATION OF THE TRADITIONAL FRESHMAN REGULATIONS THAN CAN BE RECALLED. There has been widespread and flagrant negligence regarding matches, seats in public conveyance, priority, "regs," and "Hello."

The Freshmen were overheard thusly, anent "regs": "We don't have to wear them if we don't want to. Father Albers said it was a point of honor and no one could compel us to." Not only is this sort of conversation evidence of poor spirit but also indicative of their ignorance of the handbook, which reads as follows, "Any infraction of the above regulations will be subject to penalty."

Their greatest guilt consists in their reluctance to say "Hello." They salute other Frosh sociably, but refuse to greet the upper classmen. This state of affairs is a big change from other Autumns, but the attitude has been so consistent that, even though upper classmen sometimes mutter among themselves like old men, they have grown inured to it.

Perhaps these Freshmen are a bit shy. It is noticeable that the traditional "wise guy" has been singularly absent from this class. The non-compliance, except in some instances, has been one of passive resistance rather than outright defiance. Cannot this condition be rectified?

AMERICANISM

FIGHT fire with fire! Ism with ism!

Our newspapers and radio broadcasts are cluttered with so much news about the dictatorial and communistic powers of Europe that it is no wonder that Americans have become "ism-minded." It is true that the government is taking definite action toward the eradication of such undesirable elements from our shores, but many patriotic citizens are wondering about the efficiency of these procedures.

But with what means can we fight the isms in our land? To this query there can be only one reasonably sane answer: supplant one ism with another—a desirable one for an undesirable form. Americanism is the solution. Develop a truly patriotic love for our country; know its history; obey its laws; respect its authority; be proud of the heritage handed down to us, a heritage of peace, prosperity, and freedom in all its democratic connotations. Above all, be an active American!

Thus only can the United States be rid of these unwanted invaders. The solution to the problem lies in the hearts of the people themselves. All the dread and fear attending the isms must be suffocated beneath a surge of new-born hope and love for our heritage, and this must be the same type of hope and love of country that impelled our forefathers to shed their blood upon our battlefields to leave for us a free nation, with freedom for all.

Faculty Comments

"Quo Vadis, Education?"

BY
William H. McHugh, Ph. D.

WE AMERICANS have an almost child-like belief in the omnipotence of modern education. So naive is this belief that one who dares to question it is looked upon as an educational heretic, less American than Fritz Kuhn, and a little more crimson than Stalin. Nevertheless, an objective examination of our present educational system will reveal that it is not by any means without fault, and that our belief in its omnipotence to solve all social problems is utterly without foundation.

The fact that, after one-hundred years of universal, democratic education, social, moral, economic, and political problems of the highest magnitude still beset the people of these United States, indicates that all is not well with our educational system. I do not believe that any system of education, however perfect, will solve all human problems, will eliminate all social disorder and lead to an Eutopian civilization. While this earth of our remains populated by weak and finite human beings, problems will always be with us.

But I beg leave to question the popular notion that our universal, democratic education in America has made any sincere effort to minimize these problems. The very fact of universal education itself is an utter fallacy. To begin with, not all human beings are capable of profiting by an education. In the second place, the attempt to provide every child with an education adapted to his needs has caused our educational system to sprawl itself all over the landscape, leaving it effective in no one direction. It is an axiom of philosophy that "the greater the comprehension, the less the concentration." This same law might well be applied to education. In our attempt to provide education to every child without exception, and to adapt such education to every child's particular needs, we have destroyed whatever potency any particular phase of education might possess. It, therefore, happens that, though we boast of education for leadership, we find ourselves pitifully without leaders in our most agonizing moments of crisis.

The blight of objective accreditment, which places maximum emphasis on the material aspects of education, such as libraries, endowments, salaries, pensions, equipment, and buildings, and which disregards results, is merely one example of the numerous fallacies that are the curse of modern education. Another is the credit system, which places a premium on factual knowledge to the utter exclusion of wisdom. Aims in education seem to have been entirely forgotten. Until a few years ago the very term "Philosophy of Education" was sneered at by some of our pseudo-educators as smacking of "medievalism." But "medievalism" has returned to plague them with a vengeance, and the terms "Aims of Education" and "Philosophy of Education" are being used more and more each year in reputable educational circles.

An examination of the curricula of any of our public high schools will reveal the extent to which a lack or an ignorance of aims in education will lead. This writer knows personally of three, large city high schools which offer courses in house-painting and pipefitting. In another large city, not far distant, a complete four-year curriculum in beauty culture is now in the process of preparation. Should this trend continue, I fancy it will not be long until some of our more modern colleges will offer a curriculum entitled, 'Bachelor of Science in Tonsorial Artistry.' I do not mean to be facetious about this matter; it is indeed too serious. I merely wish to point out the shoals of absurdity into which we drift when we destroy our rudder.

To my mind, the plague of modern education is its utter lack of a unifying and co-ordinating philosophy. Until our educators come to realize that education is an art as well as a science; until they recognize that an art must proceed according to certain norms and must be unified by a definite philosophy, our educational system will continue to poke its busy nose into human activities which in no way concern it. Only when educators realize the necessity of a unifying philosophy will education find its rightful function in the control of human affairs. Only then will it begin to be effective in the solution of the problems that now affect American civilization.

That short playlet starring Loretta Young on the Bergen-McCarthy hour last Sunday was an outstanding sore-spot on an otherwise fair program.

Perhaps it was good acting, but it certainly was not good listening.

Ed Loughrey almost decided to send his radio back to Indiana last week.

Cause of it all was a letter received from an electric company, giving the installation charges ($18.50) of an electric meter in his Fedigan Hall room.

Messrs. McGlade, Delate, Kiely, Haynes and Dwyer worked up a hoax that really had poor old Ed bamboozled for a while.

Movie Quiz headquarters announced recently that the titles of two pix included in its contest booklet have been changed. "The Comet" is now called "Private Secretary." "Ranger Code" now "Renegade Ranger."

Pix of the Week is "Drums," now playing at Philadelphia's Aldine. Don't miss it!

Previous "Pix of the Week" selected weekly by this column as the outstanding pictures currently appearing in first run Philadelphia theaters, have been, "Boy's Town," and "Marie Antoinette."

NBC and CBS together shelled out over $160,000 in covering the recent European crisis. In addition to this amount, another $40,000 will have to be paid back to advertisers as "rebates."

Both systems are trying to keep these rebates down to a minimum due to a scheme invoked in the closing days of the European affair. This consisted in a brief announcement before the beginning of a commercial program to the effect that if any important news flashes were received, they would be immediately relayed to the radio audience.

Each radio company claims that such announcements held an audience for the particular program then on the air so that they would not "go dialing" in an attempt to obtain straight newsbroadcasts; ergo, no rebates should be made.

One-third of the entire income of RKO since January first has been derived from its master hit of all time, Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Up to September the picture had returned nearly $4,000,000. At that time it had barely been introduced into foreign marts.

Tremendous success of "Snow White" has undoubtedly proven a godsend to RKO, which has been operating under bankruptcy supervision for past four years.

Last week Paramount Pictures Inc., announced that Doug ("wrong way") Corrigan would star in "Born to Fly."

This week Paramount Pictures, Inc., announces that "Born to Fly" has been shelved; and that a new story entitled "The Flying Irishman" is being written for Doug's first starring vehicle.

This apparent attempt to give Corrigan something worth-while seems to indicate that Paramount does not intend to reap a single harvest on his tremendous popularity by an indifferent or "so-so" picture, and then letting it go at that.

As we mentioned last week, Doug appears to be a natural born actor. Paramount might possibly realize this ,and intend to keep the erst-while aviator as a member of its regualr starring staff.

This Week's Ringer: Jim Schelle, '39, C & F; as Don Ameche.

Contributions for "This Weeks Ringer" are invited. If accompanied by the signatures of five class-mates of the student "ringer" they will be published in the order received.

Please give your "ringers" to any member of the VILLANOVAN staff; or enclose them in an envelope addressed to this column and leave it in the VILLANOVAN office, opposite the book-store in Mendel Hall.

Proprietor of a New Haven theater cooked up a scheme recently to attract attention to a Sonja Heine picture.

He placed several passes in the center of a large block of ice, and placed it in front of his box-office.

Whole idea turned out to be a complete flop when impatient neighborhood toughies began to attack the block with hatchets, ice picks, and what-not. But even before they could reach the tickets, their action had drawn such a crowd that traffic was being blocked.

Police made proprietor take back his ice.

Recent California American Legion Convention was one of largest and nildest in many moons.

The boys just refused to stir things up. Really disappointing to many, especially the out-of-town news reporters whose copy was almost cut to nil.

A decided contrast to the New York debacle.

Something for Chicago to look forward to next annum, when the former soldiers will descend upon that fair metropolis.

Doctor Hartman was busily engaged in conducting a frosh history class over in the Commerce and Finance school.

Some-one knocked on the door.

A frosh answered.

"She wants you!" called out the frosh.

Hollywood, located only a short distance from the site of the affair, was almost totally avoided by the Legionaires.

General opinion seemed to be that prices would be jacked up. They were.

But when the boys failed to come around, everything took a quick drop. Too late to work up any business however.

INTRODUCING

Athlete Undertakes German Translation As Prelude to Law Study

By JAMES F. HAUGHTON

TO THE READERS of this pillar (and I'll bet I can count them without taking my shoes off) this may seem to you like we're pulling an a-la-William Powell. Nope, it's not the parade of "Thin Men." We're just taking the lighter one's first because they're good experience for when we have to defend our remarks about the heavier lads.

The "Thin Man of the Week" is none other than Al Hall who tips the Toledo at the stupendous, amazing weight of 135. But dead, dead is what that tiny frame carries in the way of "grey matter." Yep, the man's either a marvel or he's got a bird on his aerial.

You see Al's decided upon the translation of a German History book as the subject of his thesis for this year. You guys will agree it's pretty hard trying to decipher the average history book, but, wow, when it comes to the work of a "furriner," it's "excuse it please, for me.

Noted as Boxer

Fisticuffs are his pet joy and each intramural boxing show finds the kid from Delaware County's Courthouse town on the material list. He's boxed in Father McKee's annual slugfest for the past three years, and promises to again be on the giving and receiving list this annum. As to his ability with the mittens, Al is rather reticent in speaking of it, but we'll give the kid 100 percent for trying.

That second item of his favorite sports list, bamboo riding, is one of Al's chief avocations and he's been doing it for two years. One with the intramural outfit, and last season with Jumbo Elliot's proteges.

We're stumped, too, on that thing called small game hunting. The nearest our wizardry can bring us to is an animal about five feet, two; eyes of blue; wearing a beaver coat; and called by Danny Webster, a "female."

ALBERT E. HOLL

Being a day-hop is nothing new in the life of our subject. After attending Nativity parochial school in Media, he bought a student's ticket for West Catholic High School. With the Burr group, Al remained his true self and only bustled himself with the interclass track team and the year book. After gathering the necessary college requirements at the Christian Brother's institution, Mr. Holl decided to delay his educational endeavours for two years for the life of a gas station helper.

When the time was again ripe for continuing his pusuits of higher knowledge Al renewed his student's ticket in Father Burns' small but sturdy Arts department. Besides studying his German daily, Mr. Holl doesn't have much to account for in the way of extra-curricular activities in his first year.

It was last year that Al really came to the fore in Villanova activities. As chairman of the Mother's Day coommittee he produced a program that sent all our mothers home with light hearts and happy thoughts of what Villanova is like. Never will they forget that day. And to think that our Mr. Holl ran it. Bravo! To enlighten himself on philosophical thoughts, he also joined the philosophy seminar in his third year.

Spinning around our wheel of fortune and glancing into our turned-over fish bowl, we find that next year at this time Al Holl hopes to be included in the list of students in Quakter Town's University of Pennsylvania Law School. We only hope that German comes in handy when Al goes to court and pleads his case.

STORY OF THE WEEK:

Concerning our prominent senior . . . Mr. Ray, we shall call him . . . It seems that during the year of 1937, Mr. Ray was inflicted with a bad case of heart trouble. He had wooed and won a little girl and everything was very, very smooth and settled. But alas, this little "lite of his life" graduated from one of the local institutions. After a Summer of convalescing from this shock, he decided to forget it all and return to the wars. But here Mr. Ray did a foolish thing; he returned to the site of the former battle. WHICH WAS BAD. For this reason: it seems that the little girl had not forgotten those rash promises so easily. She had a very good scouting system taking care of the league and at the same time doing a little checking on Mr. Ray. But was he discouraged? I should say not. He simply made a very graceful retreat from the danger zone. We hear that he has contacted a very beautiful young deb . . . with a nice car and very nice dinners. But then again he was seen Sunday conversing very earnestly in a very dark booth in the back of the Greek's. WITH THE CHIEF SCOUT FOR THE LITTLE GIRL FROM MISSISSIPPI.

ORIENTAL MEDDLING

THE United States policy being pursued in regard to the war of Japan in China signifies an unreasonable outlay for the protection of our meager monetary interests in that section of the Orient. To work, this policy must be backed by the use of force. Hence, the present development of a superpowerful navy along offensive lines rather than defensive is understandable. Adding the public pronouncements of men in key positions such as the President, the Secretary of State, and the Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, one may see a definite intention to impede Japan in China.

Apparently those speaking and acting thus, without authorization from the people or their representatives, are confident that the U. S. will be educated to the proper conditions by the time Congress is asked to vote on war. The whole procedure seems so foolhardy. The cost of the war is in no wise commensurate with the value of what we would be allegedly fighting for. As our holdings over there are only one percent of all our foreign investments, it is readily seen that we would not be fighting for ourselves so much as for Great Britain, the prime interested party.

The argument that we would be fighting for humanity is specious against the fact that the U. S. supplies 55 percent of Japan's war imports, much of what we provide being indispensible for modern war. An even greater danger than the ill feeling and war risks connected with our meddling in the Orient is that this patent alliance of the more wealthy nations in the Eastern situation is a roundabout way of bringing the pressure of the U. S. into the European quagmire.

BENEFITING ALL

THOUGH there are a number of college members who would enjoy using the billiard tables, bowling alleys, and swimming pool down in the gymnasium, the fact remains that these facilities are little used by the general student body.

Reasons are that students have classes, labs, and other work to do in the afternoon, the only time these particular sports are open. Billiard and bowling enthusiasts are accustomed to playing at night. There is a great thrill in taking a swim for relaxation after the day's work is finished.

Allowing entrance to the recreations in the evenings, at least on Friday and Saturday nights, would result in wider opportunities for healthful exercise, keep the students on the campus, and offer an evening's entertainment when funds are low.

A CHALLENGE

IF Freshmen, after due warning, do not abide by the rules and regulations, it shall be the duty of the Student Council, as such, to call the offenders before them for trial."

If there ever was a time when that duty should be discharged, it is now. THE PRESENT FRESHMAN CLASS HAS EXHIBITED MORE VIOLATION OF THE TRADITIONAL FRESHMAN REGULATIONS THAN CAN BE RECALLED. There has been widespread and flagrant negligence regarding matches, seats in public conveyance, priority, "regs," and "Hello."

The Freshmen were overheard thusly, anent "regs": "We don't have to wear them if we don't want to. Father Albers said it was a point of honor and no one could compel us to." Not only is this sort of conversation evidence of poor spirit but also indicative of their ignorance of the handbook, which reads as follows, "Any infraction of the above regulations will be subject to penalty."

Their greatest guilt consists in their reluctance to say "Hello." They salute other Frosh sociably, but refuse to greet the upper classmen. This state of affairs is a big change from other Autumns, but the attitude has been so consistent that, even though upper classmen sometimes mutter among themselves like old men, they have grown inured to it.

Perhaps these Freshmen are a bit shy. It is noticeable that the traditional "wise guy" has been singularly absent from this class. The non-compliance, except in some instances, has been one of passive resistance rather than outright defiance. Cannot this condition be rectified?

AMERICANISM

FIGHT fire with fire! Ism with ism!

Our newspapers and radio broadcasts are cluttered with so much news about the dictatorial and communistic powers of Europe that it is no wonder that Americans have become "ism-minded." It is true that the government is taking definite action toward the eradication of such undesirable elements from our shores, but many patriotic citizens are wondering about the efficiency of these procedures.

But with what means can we fight the isms in our land? To this query there can be only one reasonably sane answer: supplant one ism with another—a desirable one for an undesirable form. Americanism is the solution. Develop a truly patriotic love for our country; know its history; obey its laws; respect its authority; be proud of the heritage handed down to us, a heritage of peace, prosperity, and freedom in all its democratic connotations. Above all, be an active American!

Thus only can the United States be rid of these unwanted invaders. The solution, to the problem lies in the hearts of the people themselves. All the dread and fear attending the isms must be suffocated beneath a surge of new-born hope and love for our heritage, and this must be the same type of hope and love of country that impelled our forefathers to shed their blood upon our battlefields to leave for us a free nation, with freedom for all.

"Quo Vadis, Education?"

BY

William H. McHugh, Ph. D.

WE AMERICANS have an almost child-like belief in the omnipotence of modern education. So naive is this belief that one who dares to question it is looked upon as an educational heretic, less American than Fritz Kuhn, and a little more crimson than Stalin. Nevertheless, an objective examination of our present educational system will reveal that it is not by any means without fault, and that our belief in its omnipotence to solve all social problems is utterly without foundation.

The fact that, after one-hundred years of universal, democratic education, social, moral, economic, and political problems of the highest magnitude still beset the people of these United States, indicates that all is not well with our educational system. I do not believe that any system of education, however perfect, will solve all human problems, will eliminate all social disorder and lead to an Eutopian civilization. While this earth of our remains populated by weak and finite human beings, problems will always be with us.

But I beg leave to question the popular notion that our universal, democratic education in America has made any sincere effort to minimize these problems. The very fact of universal education itself is an utter fallacy. To begin with, not all human beings are capable of profiting by an education. In the second place, the attempt to provide every child with an education adapted to his needs has caused our educational system to sprawl itself all over the landscape, leaving it effective in no one direction. It is an axiom of philosophy that "the greater the comprehension, the less the concentration." This same law might well be applied to education. In our attempt to provide education to every child without exception, and to adapt such education to every child's particular needs, we have destroyed whatever potency any particular phase of education might possess. It, therefore, happens that, though we boast of education for leadership, we find ourselves pitifully without leaders in our most agonizing moments of crisis.

The blight of objective accreditment, which places maximum emphasis on the material aspects of education, such as libraries, endowments, salaries, pensions, equipment, and buildings, and which disregards results, is merely one example of the numerous fallacies that are the curse of modern education. Another is the credit system, which places a premium on factual knowledge to the utter exclusion of wisdom. Aims in education seem to have been entirely forgotten. Until a few years ago the very term "Philosophy of Education" was sneered at by some of our pseudo-educators as smacking of "medievalism." But "medievalism" has returned to plague them with a vengeance, and the terms "Aims of Education" and "Philosophy of Education" are being used more and more each year in reputable educational circles.

An examination of the curricula of any of our public high schools will reveal the extent to which a lack or an ignorance of aims in education will lead. This writer knows personally of three, large city high schools which offer courses in house-painting and pipefitting. In another large city, not far distant, a complete four-year curriculum in beauty culture is now in the process of preparation. Should this trend continue, I fancy it will not be long until some of our more modern colleges will offer a curriculum entitled, 'Bachelor of Science in Tonsorial Artistry.' I do not mean to be facetious about this matter; it is indeed too serious. I merely wish to point out the shoals of absurdity into which we drift when we destroy our rudder.

To my mind, the plague of modern education is its utter lack of a unifying and co-ordinating philosophy. Until our educators come to realize that education is an art as well as a science; until they recognize that an art must proceed according to certain norms and must be unified by a definite philosophy, our educational system will continue to poke its busy nose into human activities which in no way concern it. Only when educators realize the necessity of a unifying philosophy will education find its rightful function in the control of human affairs. Only then will it begin to be effective in the solution of the problems that now affect American civilization.

Study isn't the only thing that attracts this lad from Media, which incidentally, is known as "Pennsylvania's Gretna Green." The young man includes on his sports list boxing, pole vaulting and small game hunting.

Noted as Boxer

Flaticuffs are his pet joy and each intramural boxing show finds the kid from Delaware County's Courthouse town on the material list. He's boxed in Father McKee's annual slugfest for the past three years, and promises to again be on the giving and receiving list this annum. As to his ability with the mittens, Al is rather reticent in speaking of it, but we'll give the kid 100 percent for trying.

That second item of his favorite sports list, bamboo riding, is one of Al's chief avocations and he's been doing it for two years. One with the intramural outfit, and last season with Jumbo Elliot's proteges.

We're stumped, too, on that thing called small game hunting. The nearest our wizardry can bring us to is an animal about five feet, two; eyes of blue, wearing a beaver coat; and called by Danny Webster, a "female."

ALBERT E. HOLL

Being a day-hop is nothing new in the life of our subject. After attending Nativity parochial school in Media, he bought a student's ticket for West Catholic High School. With the Burr group, Al remained his true self and only bedecked himself with the interclass track team and the year book. After gathering the necessary college requirements at the Christian Brother's institution, Mr. Holl decided to delay his educational endeavours for two years for the life of a gas station helper.

When the time was again ripe for continuing his pusuits of higher knowledge Al renewed his student's ticket in Father Burns' small but sturdy Arts department. Besides studying his German daily, Mr. Holl doesn't have much to account for in the way of extra-curricular activities in his first year.

It was last year that Al really came to the fore in Villanova activities. As chairman of the Mother's Day coommittee he produced a program that sent all our mothers home with light hearts and happy thoughts of what Villanova is like. Never will they forget that day. And to think that our Mr. Holl ran it. Bravo! To enlighten himself on philosophical thoughts, he also joined the philosophy seminar in his third year.

Spinning around our wheel of fortune and glancing into our turned-over fish bowl, we find that next year at this time Al Holl hopes to be included in the list of students in Quakter Town's University of Pennsylvania Law School. We only hope that German comes in handy when Al goes to court and pleads his case.

Belle Masque Society To Present "Room Service"

Outstanding Comedy Hit by Allen Baretz and John Murray Will Be Given by Thespians on April 19-21-23

SOCIAL IS SCHEDULED FOR NOVEMBER 3

"Room Service," outstanding comedy-hit of all time, produced by Allen Baretz and John Murray, will be presented by Belle Masque artists this year, it was recently disclosed by Anthony J. Frayne, moderator of the Villanova dramatic unit.

On October 18, at the meeting of the society presided over by William Kokes, senior of the Arts School and president of the organization, officers for the current year were elected. Those named are: Pershing Calabro, junior Artsman, arts director; Harold Hart, senior in the School of Arts, stage manager; and Witold Krzywicki, senior in the Science School, business manager.

The dates for this year's offering by the college players are April 19, 21 and 23. The chosen play, "Room Service," has enjoyed a long run as such and is now being very well received nationally as a photo-play featuring the Marx Brothers. Its action never lags in regard to the plot and its humor is of such a nature to provoke continuous mirth.

The chosen officers are all of varied experience in the activities of Belle Masque productions. In last year's presentation, "Winterset," and the preceeding one, "Journey's End," these students formed the nucleus of support. Calabro excelled in both acting and scenery designing; Krzywicki was responsible for the financial and business success; and Hart gave his acting abilities and general encouragement.

At the meeting other discussions were held on the remainder of the Belle Masque Society's program for the ensuing year. Lengthy consideration was paid the Dramatic Social which is scheduled for November 3. According to reports this affair will not exactly follow the model of former such affairs. A surprise and entertaining program is in its embyro stage for this occasion. Attention likewise was called to the Dramateurs Reception to be presented on November 22. Nothing definite could be determined concering this social affair as a result of the many other subjects under discussion. Concrete progress upon the latter program will be forthcoming in the near future, it is hoped.

This Dramatic Society of the college is one of the oldest groups on the campus. Annually it sponsors an extensive and varied program which affords the participating students to enjoy experiences in acting, scenecraft, make-up, and other phases of modern play production. All students are eligible for membership providing they have the necessary talent or experience.

CONTRIBUTE TO HUMPHREY FUND

First contribution to the Carl T. Humphrey's Scholarship Fund was made by the Phi Kappa Pi fraternity at its meeting Monday, October 17. The engineering frat established this fund last year as a lasting tribute to the memory of the late dean of the School of Technology. The donation, a sum of $30, was made specifically by the members of the organization who graduated last June.

Committeemen for the Owl Hop reported the advance sale of tickets to be exceedingly good. Final plans for the dance were discussed during the greater portion of the meeting. President Anthony J. Cirrito announced that fraternity pins are now available to all underclassmen desiring to purchase this emblem of membership.

Meeting was closed with a plea for prompt attendance at future meetings and for payment of dues for the present year.

be featured. Carroll refused to state the particulars of this added attraction but emphasized the fact of its entertaining nature for all. In addition, he said that very few dances at Villanova, certainly none of the recent ones, have included this feature in their programs. The time element of the proposed novelty is likewise clothed with secrecy to inculcate greater surprise and suspense in those who will attend.

A last minute drive for tickets is anticipated by the committee and is hoped to be avoided. In order to eliminate the confusion that will undoubtedly result for both committeemen and those endeavoring to secure tickets if such a procedure is followed Carroll urges all to follow his slogan: "Buy tickets as soon as possible, even sooner if it can be arranged."

NAVY DAY HELD ON OCTOBER 27

Acceding to the request of the President of the Navy League, the Secretary of the Navy has decreed that the naval service will assist in the annual Navy Day celebration on October 27. It was on this day that the Continental Congress made provision for the construction of naval vessels for battle in the American Revolution.

Villanova faculty and students have been personally invited to attend this celebration at the Philadelphia Navy Yard by Rear-Admiral W. T. Cluverius, Commandant of the Yard. Many instructive and impressing exhibits will be on display between 9:00 A. M. and 5:00 P. M. and all students are urged to attend.

COLLEGES INVITED TO ANNUAL SMOKER

A. S. M. E. Extends Invitation to Swarthmore, Delaware, and Penn

Students from the University of Pennsylvania, Drexel Institute, Swarthmore College ,and the University of Delaware will be invited to attend the annual smoker of the Villanova branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, on November 30, in the Field House.

Raymond MacGregor, president of the group, has announced that plans are being made to have a speaker of note address the members on a topic of great interest in the field of mechanical engineering. Motion pictures will immediately follow the address.

The group has made arrangements to take a trip every month to one of the local plants. It is felt that this will give the men a great deal of practical experience. In the near future motion pictures of engineering content will be shown in the Field House to which the general student body will be invited. These will be continued at regular intervals if enough interest is shown.

Any freshman interested in joining the group are asked to contact Raymond Mac Gregor or any of the members.

TWO KINDS: WASHABLE AND PERMANENT
The Perfect Combination, Quink PLUS the Parker Vacumatic Pen
Even the Finest Fountain Pen Performs Far Better
When Filled with this Modern Ink . . . A Marvelous Creation!
Created by Parker to guard pens from pen-clogging inks . . . Ends 69% of the fountain pen troubles
There is not—and never has been—any other pen designed to handle all kinds of inks—good and bad—as well as the revolutionary Parker Vacumatic. One reason is that this modern invention has no rubber ink sac, no lever filler, no piston pump. It is filled by a simple diaphragm, sealed in the top, where ink can never touch or decompose its working parts.
And its patented Television barrel lets you SEE the level of ink at all times—see when to refill.
This pedigreed Beauty of laminated Pearl and Jet is everywhere acknowledged to be the grandest pen ever created. Yet even this Guaranteed Mechanically Perfect pen can be plugged up by the grit and gum in ordinary writing inks.
Hence to guard the celebrated Parker Pens from pen-clogging inks, Parker experts developed this utterly new kind of writing ink—called Quink—an ink that actually cleanses any pen as it writes.
This is done by a secret ingredient, wholly harmless. It dissolves the gum and other troublesome particles left in your pen by ordinary inks. It makes your pen a self-cleaner—cleans as it writes.
Parker Quink is full-bodied, rich, and brilliant. Never watery or gummy. And it dries on PAPER 31% quicker than average, due to stepped-up penetration. Yet Quink costs no more than ordinary inks—small bottles, 15c and 25c.
If you use an ordinary pen, you need Quink even more than does a Parker Pen owner to keep it in writing condition. If you use a Parker Pen, you'll be thrilled and surprised by the way it performs when filled with Quink. For until we created Quink and the Parker Vacumatic Pen, there never was a really scientific writing combination.
Those who can afford the best will not rest until they have them both. The Parker Pen Company, Janesville, Wis.

BLUE LIGHTWEIGHTS HOLD RUTGERS TEAM TO TIE IN OPENER

Stoviakmen Display Defensive Ability but Can't Get Offense Clicking

DOMENICK IS STANDOUT

By PHIL DUNN

A depressed Rutgers 150-pound football team left Villanova Field House last Saturday evening after playing a scoreless game against a team they were sure they would beat.

The Rutgers outfit was favored to win this battle of the lightweights; but against the smooth running of Bud Shaw, the Blues pitted the fighting defensive work of Vic Domenick; and against the plunges of Dilatush were thrown the sturdiness of Jerry Holland and those great "backer - uppers" Charlie Timmins and "Guy" Lombardo.

Domenick Stars

The hero of the game from the Villanova viewpoint was the aforementioned Domenick. This lad, a junior in the School of Commerce and Finance, played what can be best described as a typical "Wysocki" game. Crashing in and smearing plays before they started and rushing the passer and kicker were the chief features of the Radnor boy's play, although he played a good offensive game as well. Rutger's "little men" will surely remember Vic for some time to come.

HERE'S that reply we promised to Gene Riger, Sports Editor of the Temple University News:

Joe Pagano

We're not especially interested in Mr. Riger's controversy with Stan Baumgartner. But there are a few statements that we might take issue with. Primarily, we believe that Villanova will be just as tried a combination as Temple for their annual grid classic on November 12. Because Temple is playing so-called strong impressive elevens, it doesn't necessarily prove that she will maintain an edge over the Wildcats.

It isn't the teams that you play that counts but rather how you look against them. Flaws of a grid combination can be detected just as well against a weak opponent as against a strong opponent.

We personally believe that the elevens the Wildcats have met and will meet this year are of the cal-

Capt. Chesney Leads Detroit Against 'Cats

Detroit Titans Invade Cat Lair Prepared To Halt Winning Streak

Rest Since Columbus Day Should Place Doraismen at Peak for Sunday's Tilt; Blue Gridders Must Stop Chesney and Palumbo

Twenty-five years ago this Fall a little, unknown football team came out of the wilds of Indiana, South Bend to be exact, and administered a terrific beating to one of the greatest Army teams in history.

The "little band of unknowns" were later to become the most famous team in the country—the University of Notre Dame! Unlike the present Irish teams, which depend on mass man-power, the 1913 team owed its victories to two men. One was a lanky, slim-bodied end, known to his teammates as Knute Rockne! The other was a back named Gus Dorais.

Rockne is but an immortal memory today, but Gus Dorais lives on, still active in the gridiron world. Gus comes to Philadelphia this Sunday, as coach of the powerful Detroit Univrsity football team. He comes to match his motor - city outfit against the unleashed power of the Villanova Wildcat at Shibe Stadium.

The Titans have had a run of "last-minute luck," all of it bad, this fall; but, as always, they are likey to be at their peak when they meet the Blue and White. Dorais men are bent on evening up the series standing between the Villanovans and themselves. The two schools established football relations back in 1931, when they battled to a scoreless tie. The following year the Detroit Devastators lowered the Villanova Blue to the tune of 28-12 score.

'Cats Lead Series

Relations were suspended in '33, but they were renewed in 1934 when another scoreless tie was played. In the '35 season the 'Cats and the Titans met twice, once in Detroit and once in Philadelphia. The Detroit boys emerged victorious in the first meeting, 19-15, and they haven't humbled the Villanovans since. In the second contest of '35 the 'Cats won, 13-6, when Captain Eddie Michaels played one of the greatest games of his All-American career.

In 1936 the first Villanova team under the tutorship of "Clipper" Smith conquered the Titans, 13-7. Last year's game is still fresh in our memories. A great Detroit team fell, 7-0, at the hands of a greater Villanova ensemble.

This year Gus Dorais is "crying the blues"; he says that his team is a "year away" from victories. True, Gus lost quite a few stars, notably Andy Farkas, from last year's team but he has some able replacements, including an undefeated freshman team of last Fall.

Chesney, Palumbo Outstanding

Under the able leadership of Captain Chesney, a great end, and left halfback Ed Palumbo, a 165-pound passing demon, the Titans present quite an impressive array. So far this season "last - minute trouble" has hurt the Detroit record. Against the powerful "Boilermakers" from Purdue the Titans led, 7-6, throughout, only to fall before a merciless surge in the last five minutes of the game.

Kalamazoo College and Catholic University fell easily in the two following Detroit contests, but in last week's game with the Eagles from Boston College the "last-minute jinx" caught up with the Detroiters again. They led 6-0 until the final quarter when Boston College scored to tie up the ball game. The score remained deadlocked until the final sixty seconds of play when Boston's left halfback booted a field goal to nose out the Titans, 9-6.

Titans Feature Passing

The main forte of Dorais' men is passing. Palumbo ranks with Davy O'Brien, of Texas Christian, in this department. Johnny Halpin, a 185-pound halfback, and Captain Chesney are usually on

Wysocki Paces Smithmen In Brilliant Third Win

All-American End Scores Three Times, Stands Out on Defense; Chisick, Mazzei Also Tally; Piscione, Rizzo Get Credit For Safety

BASCA THROWS TOUCHDOWN PASSES

By TOM O'MAHONEY

Villanova's highly-rated football forces spluttered to a 35-6 triumph over the Praying Colonels of Centre College in Shibe Park last Saturday, as long John Wysocki filled the starring role very nicely, thank you.

With 10,000 sitting in to see the Wildcats in their initial Philadelphia appearance of the year, the Wilkes-Barre All-American end scored three times, twice on passes from Nick Basca, and once on his pet play, an end around run from the six-yard line.

Andy Chisik, clever 'Cat center, turned an intercepted pass into a touchdown on a 60-yard run, and Harry Mazzei, junior quarterback, tallied the other six-pointer in the final canto on a dash around end from the five-yard line. Basca's two conversions and Mazzei's extra pointer, as well as a safety on Harrington, Centre back, by Bill Piscione and Val Rizzo, accounted for the rest of the Main Line total.

Colonels Tally

Centre brought the crowd to its feet late in the second quarter with a 62-yard forward and double lateral to set up their lone score, registered shortly after on a pass from the three-yard line to Smith, Colonel fullback, in the end zone.

After Walt Nowak crashed German, Gold quarterback, to earth on Wyckli's kick - off, the first period became a punting duel between Harvey Buek and Centre's Stahl, with Buek consistently outkicking his rival. Finally, late in the period, Buek ran back a Centre punt to the Gold's 37. McMahon hit tackle for three yards, and on second down Basca threw a short pass to Wysocki over center, and the "Crusher" dashed through the dismayed Southerners for 33 yards and a touchdown. Basca's kick was good, and the Wildcats led 7-0.

The second stanza started out tamely enough, as Clipper Smith inserted his second team, which promptly renewed the kicking duel. Stahl's short punt to Mazzei on the Centre 35 put the 'Cats in striking distance again, but a holding penalty put them back, two passes were grounded, and "Buzz" Howlett kicked out of bounds on Centre's eleven. However, the visitors again booted the ball out of danger, and the quarter approached its end when Villanova's first string returned to the game.

Smith Scores On Pass

A promising 'Cat drive was spiked when, after Basca had run 14 yards off tackle to the Centre 30, Sabrinski's pass was intercepted by German, who was dropped on the Centre 37. Smith hit the Villanova line for two, and then took a short pass from Stahl, lateraled to Lorentson, Centre left end, who in turn lateraled to German, the play moving down the sideline for a 62-yard advance to the Villanova three. Stahl then heaved a short pass to Smith in the end zone, scoring the visitor's only points of the day. Stahl missed the conversion, still leaving the 'Cats in a bad spot.

YEARLINGS TO OPEN GRID SEASON AWAY

DuPont Y. M. C. A. Forms Opposition; Kittens Anxious to Extend Win Streak

Tomorrow night, "Doc" Jacobs will take his untried Frosh team to Carney Point, N. J. in quest of their first victory of the season. Forming the opposition for the yearlings will be a strong du Pont Y. M. C. A. outfit; the game will get underway in the du Pont Y. M. C. A. Stadium, at 8:00

Last year the Kittens won their second game of the year against the same team 13-0 in building up an undefeated season consisting of wins over Dickinson Seminary, Temple and du Pont. This Fall, however, the Frosh have four games to play; affording them an opportunity to extend the Kittens' winning streak to seven straight.

In last year's fray Jacobs' outfit was led to victory by the sensational "Nickels" Basca, who played an important part in the Wildcats' victory over Centre College, Saturday. "Nickels" scored all the points in this contest, running back a punt 50 yards for a touchdown. With but twenty seconds left to play Basca went over from the one-yard line. He then converted to make the score 13-0 in favor of Villanova.

This game will mean much to Frosh and they'll have to be at their best. The Y. M. C. A. boys will be out to avenge last year's defeat and at the same time will endeavor to be recognized as the team that spoiled the Kittens' victory streak.

Coach Jacobs intends to send out a team which will be composed of those men who have showed up best against the Varsity in scrimmage drills. The backfield will be composed most likely of Tommy Morgan, Joey Yednoch, Bill Howlett and Joe Behot.

Bill Howlett and Joey Yednoch will cavort at the halfback positions while Morgan will call signals and Joe Behot will take over the fullback duties. However, game time may find either Worthington or Famagletti at the fullback slot.

At the center position either "Freckles" Donohue or Koriski

In the Sportlight

By SAUL WALLACH

Havana, Cuba—Janduary 1, 1937

An unexpected blocked kick by Matthew Kuber, sophomore guard, gave Villanova a 7-7 tie against Auburn University here this New Year's day afternoon, before a Bacardi Bowl crowd of 15,000, in Havana.

Kuber blocked Jimmy Fenton's kick on the 23-yard line and then raced after the ball to fall upon it as it rolled over the goal line for the score that wiped out a touchdown lead established by Auburn in the first half. Bill Christopher then place kicked the extra point.

Yes, you guessed it. This is the biography of one Matthew Emil Kuber, Villanova science senior, who occasionally (we think Saturday afternoons during the Fall) accompanies "Clipper" Smith and his charges to the gridiron and then proceeds to make merry a la Nemsky, Michaels, Mellus, Routt, et al.

In case you are one of those individuals who buries his nose in a book on these beautiful Saturday afternoons we take this unexpected pleasure to inform you that Matthew Emil Kuber is a guard on the Villanova football team and, according to the Philadelphia newspapers, he is a pretty good one.

Being one of seven boys, we can readily see that little Matthew Emil had a terrific time trying to convince the Kuber family that the eastern part of the state was the land of golden opportunity.

At last he convnced them to leave North Braddock, his birthplace; but they took the long way coming to Philadelphia. It seemed that there was a total eclipse and the motorman on the Reading Railroad crossed over on the New Jersey Central tracks (during the eclipse) and stopped at New Brunswick, New Jersey, before he realized his faux pas.

It so happened that there was an election coming along in New Brunswick, and the politicians of that beautiful city along the banks of the Raritan, seeing nine prospective Democratic votes, decided to give Mr. Matthew Kuber, Senior, the key to the city.

At New Brunswick, Matthew got his first taste of education at St. Ladislaus Parochial School. His great lust for learning was the lone factor which prompted him to learn to spell library with two "r's."

At Ladislaus' they still tell of the Christmas morning our hero fell asleep while serving the mass. Great guy this Kuber.

Philadelphia at last. City of etc. Broad and Vine Sts. Matthew Kuber enrolls at Roman Catholic High. The next four years finds Matthew Kuber making history a' Catholic.

Football in the Fall, track in the Spring, that was the Kuber program. In his sophomore year, he cracked the Cahill line up at halfback. In his Junior year he played fullback. Then that great senior season. Kuber made All-Catholic at the tackle position. Versatile individual, eh.

"Because of his athletic and scholastic prowess our hero won a scholarship to Malvern Prep. In addition to carrying off scholastic honors, Kuber added to his growing list of awards, varsity letters in football, basketball, and track.

Why Malvern? Matthew answers, "Ever since we came to Philadelphia, I imagined myself going to Villanova. My dream came true when my high school coach, Eugene Oberst recommended me to Harry Stuhldreher who then sent me to Malvern because I was only seventeen years old."

Villanova's big moment has arrived (blow the trumpets). Freshman Kuber arrives with the class of 1939. Our hero is undecided whether it should be the Commerce and Finance or the Science school. Our hero decideds when he is assigned a room in Mendel Hall. Kuber looks at his shoes. He thinks—"save wear and tear if I study in Mendel." Kuber and 60 others enroll in the pre-med curriculum.

From a third string tackle on the freshman team, Kuber advanced gradually to the second string in his sophomore season and finally clinched a first string post in his junior season against Bucknell. From then on its Kuber starting at one of the guard positions.

"Making that touchdown against Auburn, in Cuba, is tops above anything that ever happened to me, and about the worst was losing that game to Central when I captained Catholic High, a couple of years ago," claims strong, silent man Kuber.

He rates Andy Stopper the greatest athlete ever to play at Villanova, and no doubt he has many who agree with him on that point.

"I almost had heart failure against Detroit last year when they almost made that touchdown. That was his best fumble that ever was created," avers Kuber.

Professional football is out, for Matty hopes to be in medical school next year. When he goes there will be a vacancy on the Mendel Bulletin staff for some ambitious underclassman.

What we think of Matthew Kuber is well expressed in the dispatch that appears at the head of the column. Touchdowns are made by wide awake fellows, and coupled with the fact that he ranks high scholastically at Villanova and his popularity with residents and day students alike, we gather that Kuber is an O. K. fellow.

INTRAMURAL COURT CONTESTS TO BEGIN TONIGHT IN ALUMNI

C & F-Mendel Day-Hops Meet This Afternoon; Austinites Face Fedigan

BLUESHIRTS ON DEFENSE

The Fall softball schedule having been completed, it now becomes th turn of basketball to occupy the intramural spotlight. The season for this sport opens officially this evening immediately after chapel services; but a game between C. & F. and Mendel Day-Hops is to take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock. in the alumni gym.

As the upperclassmen undoubtedly remember, Austin Hall is the defending champion in this sport. Quite a few of Austin's stand-bys have, however, moved over to the West End and can now be counted upon to "do or die for dear old Fedigan." Since the majority of last year's Gigolo aggregation has returned to that dorm, it appears on the face of things that the Fediganites will put a whale of a ball club on the hardwood floor this year.

Fedigan Looks Strong

Among those expected to turn out as members of the Fedigan team are "Buzz" Hart, Jim Carrail, Brud O'Connell, Jack Dunigan, Hal Murphy, and John Costello of last year's team (which got into the playoff at the end of the season), and "Tex" Connors, Bob Keeler, Vic Sandor, Joe Bochetto, and Meldo LoBalbo of the champions.

Austin, although hard hit by the transfer of some of their players made in dorms, can also be expected to put a strong team on the floor. Mick Cuskey, "Hobbie" Bradshaw, Carl Pantaleo, and the veteran sharpshooter Jim Dwyer will probably form the nucleus of Father McKee's basketeers. They will be surrounded for the most part by sophomores who last year represented one or the other of the freshman halls.

C. & F. Attempts Comeback

Gerry Lynam and some of his buddies from last year, Coupe, McGurk, Wallach, Volz, Dwyer, and Toy will again take the court for the C. & F. Day-Hops, along with, they hope, some promising freshmen. They are determined to make a better showing than they have in the past, and they can do it.

The frosh, as always, are unknown quantities. Both Fr. McQuade and Fr. Dunne can be counted upon to come up with fighting clubs, however, and neither Mendel nor Alumni can be counted out because of inexperience.

Probably the team hardest hit by graduation is the Mendel Day-Student outfit. To our knowledge only two members of last year's starting line-up are ready to take the floor this afternoon. They are Dan Keating, high scorer of the last campaign, and Dalina. Since this team must depend mostly upon new talent, they too are an unknown quantitiy; but it is expected that they will—as they have in the past— come through with a team of championship calibre.

the receiving end of Palumbo's tosses.

McDermott at fullback, does most of the line-crashing and does it impressively. At quarterback Detroit has two top-notch signal callers. Charbenau usually is in the starting line-up, but you will also see a lot of Bob Fillatrault, a little 150-pound wizard.

In the Detroit line Charley Beer, 191 pounds of hard-hitting tackle, stands out. Bill Nienstadt holds down the other tackle job. Nienstadt, a 208-pounder, is almost immovable. Macko and Froelich lead the guards. Jimmy White and Emerison Addison give Coach Dorias plenty of security in the center department.

The ends, beside Captain Chesney, include Harrison, Coyro, and Schauer, all of whom tip the scales at close to 175 pounds.

All in all the Detroiters seem to have a sixteen - cylinder job that will be hard to stop once it gets rolling. Foxy Gus Dorias will have plenty of tricks to spring on the 'Cats and it will take plenty of heads-up football to stop Palumbo, Chesney, Halpin, & Company.

iber that have necessitated and will necessitate all the qualities that a well-balanced club should have and must dispay to come out on top.

When Villanova meets Temple on November 12 we won't say that Villanova will win (who knows?) but we'll give a guarantee that "Clipper" Smith and Vince McNally will put a team out there which will prove the fact that it likes stiff opposition — likes to make a contest interesting — willing to give its all to win the fray.

We have to agree with Mr. Riger that Villanova did have a number of almost perfect players last year. But what our players lack in precision, polish and experience, they'll make up with plenty of fight and grit, which go a long way in any football tussle.

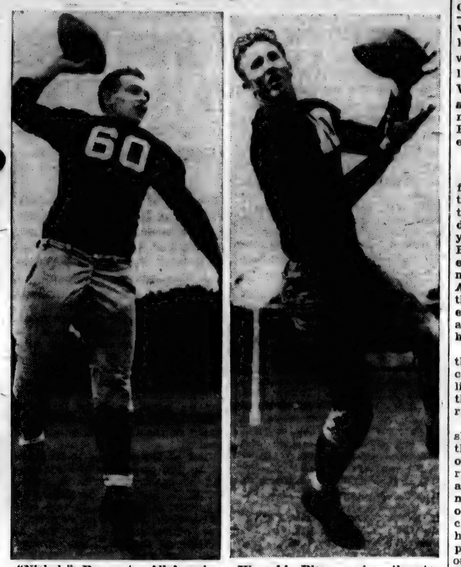
Wildcat Scoring Combination



"Nickels" Basca to All-American Wysocki, Blue scoring threat, responsible for two Villanova touchdowns in the Centre game Saturday at Shibe Park.

Blue Lightweights

after the game Coach Ray Stovlak merely said, "We looked good on the defense, but offensively we were less than fair." In these words Ray summed up the entire situation.

The "buck-and-a-half" boys did quite well when Rutgers had the ball — making vicious tackles, plowing under the line, etc.—, but when they had the ball in their possession they could do nothing with it. The blocking in general, and when used to protect a passer or kicker in particular, was very poor.

Lightweights Threaten

Once, however, they did manage to penetrate deeply into Scarlet territory. Immediately after the second half's kick-off, which Liscio returned to the Blue 48, Lattanzia threw a pass to Jack Brown, who ran the ball to the 22. On the next play Pantoleo faded and tossed the pigskin to Liscio, who inadvertantly lateralled the ball to one of the New Brunswick lads, on the 15-yard line. Thereby the Pussies lost their only real scoring opportunity of the afternoon.

Playing a good game for the men from New Jersey were Shaw and McKinney, the former on the offense — he did the punting as well as some nice running — and the latter on defense. McKinney spent quite a few minutes in the Blue and White backfield.

All in all it was a very good game. Few spectators witnessed the fray because of the varsity game being played at Shibe Park; but those who did see the contest will agree that they saw more than a little bit of football.

This Friday afernoon will find the lightweights pitted against Princeton's one - fifties in search of their first win. The game will be played in the Villanova stadium and is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock.

may start, with "Freckles" having a slight advantage. At the guard positions "Doc' will probably call on Pryzblick and Anderson, two boys who have shown promising defensive and offensive ability in daily work-outs.

At the tackle slots the whistle may find Nieman and Stenn, two hefty boys who like action. Villanova seems to have another real pair of fine wingmen in the making in Napoletano and Murray. These two boys are adept pass snaggers and stalwarts on the defense; their play should do much to make the yearlings dangerous in this game.

This game is the only one which the Frosh will play before they take on their arch rivals, the Owlets, in a game which is to be played at Roosevelt Stadium, Norristown, on Thursday night, October 27. All skuad members will see plenty of action in order to give coaches an idea of just what can be expected from the Greenies under fire.

Villanova-Centre

was not done. After downing the kick-off on the 45, Sabrinski reversed to Basca, who whipped a looping pass long to the left to Wysocki, who outran the Centre secondary from the ten - yard marker for the second score. Basca failed to convert as the half ended.

Wysocki Scores Third

After forcing Centre to punt from her own 15, Villanova's first team again started to move from the Gold's 35. McMahon pile-drived through the line for ten yards, Wysocki took a pass from Basca for seven, Basca went for eight at right tackle, and Buek made first down on the Centre six. After two plays which advanced the ball nowhere, Wysocki wheeled around from his left end slot and scored over the right side for his third touchdown.

Basca missed his first try for the conversion, but got another chance when the 'Cats were penalized 15 yards for holding, and then booted one between the uprights from the 28-yard line.

Centre kept pecking away with short passes, but midway through this period Chisik intercepted one of Stahl's quick passes on his 40, running 60 yards for a touchdown, and Mazzei added the extra point, making the score 27-6. After another flurry of passes and exchange of punts, Howlett stood on his 40 and got away a beautiful punt that rolled out on Centre's one-yard line. Harrington's attempt to kick the ball out of danger failed when the 'Cat line crashed through to nail him in the end zone for a safety, making the score 29-6 as the third period ended.

Periera Recovers Fumble

Villanova took the Southerner's kick-off on the Centre 48, and Howlett got off another beauty, which bounced out on the Gold four-yard line. Centre went into punt formation, but Smith attempted to run the ball from the up-back position, only to fumble, Periera, alert Blue guard, recovering on the five. Mazzei then sped around right end to score as the Centre line bunched close. Periera, back to kick the point, was forced to run the ball when the pass from center bounced in front of him, but was dropped on the one-yard line.

The rest of the fourth quarter was dreary both in execution and in surroundings. A light fog drifted across the park, as if to hide the play on the field, and the game ended with the 'Cats ahead 35-6.

Harvey Buek again kicked from his position at safety, when, early in the first quarter, he took Stahl's punt on his 30 and kicked it back to Centre's 35. Oddly enough, this smart play got little praise in the Philadelphia press, which apparently believes possession, not position, is what counts in football.

ENDOCRINE GLANDS SUBJECT OF TALK BY DR. H. BELLEW

Professor of Osteopathy Addresses Lambda Kappa Delta Fraternity

"Endocrinology constitutes the link between religion and science," stated Henry G. Bellew, D. O., at the Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity meeting last Thursday evening. A professor at the College of Osteopathy in Philadelphia, Dr. Bellew is well known for his work in the modern development of the science of the endocrine glands.

Tentative plans were put forward during the business meeting, for a change of the time of regular meetings. As yet no decision has been arrived at although many members of the fraternity are in favor of changing the meeting nights from Thursday to Wednesday. John Urie, president, has called a special meeting of the dance committee to be held Wednesday at one o'clock, in room 110, Mendel Hall.

Tracing the development of the various glands Dr. Bellew stressed the importance of the hypothalmus as the controlling activator of the human system. The high point in his lecture came when he demonstrated to the members of the fraternity a physical means of toning up the body by stimulating the manufacture of the pituitary hormone .

This was the first of a series of professional lectures proposed by L. K. D. for the present year.

Ella Fitzgerald, Jovial Songstress Of "Swingtunes," Gets Thrill From "Jitterbugs" And College Proms

By LEONARD FLINKMAN

This is a good life we lead. It has plenty of bath-tubs, high schools, open forums, good roads, laundries, and department stores. But in comparison with its own romantic past it is admittedly fuller on sheer enjoyment alone. Witness, for example:

The dressing-room of the Earle Theater is a blaze of lights. The door-way is crowded with admirers. In that room is a headliner who ranks with top-notchers, no longer a contender for public favor, a success in the entertainment world. She is Virginia's contribution to the bright lights.

Lost a Basket

It was twenty-one years ago that Ella Fitzgerald first began to moan about her lost basket, a yellow one. She has never found it, but if she does, Ella has over $100,000 in royalties to put into it.

How did "A Tisket, A Tasket" come about?

"One night during an intermission at a Boston night club, La Vaggi's, it came to me. Since everybody was swinging everything under the sun, why shouldn't I do it with a nursery rhyme? So I sat down and wrote the words of the first one that came to my mind. And, Len, that's how it all started."

No, she didn't think the song would be a success, but music publishers, ever on the alert for an odd syncopation, grabbed it, published it, and as a result for six weeks straight it was number one on the Hit Parade.

Ella's a jovial sort of girl, around the 140 mark on a Fairbank's, unpretentious and easy to get along with. Large brown eyes, a contenance always wreathed with a smile ...one that reminds you of a Harlemite on the eve of a Joe Louis victory.

Never a big eater, Ella is vexed at the rumor that she tips the scales around 170.

'Some publicity man must have had astigmatism,' 'explains Ella.

It must be true. For lunch she has just received a roast beef sandwich and a bottle of soda.

"I never eat more than this, although I do like liver. I can pile into that anytime."

"O. K., Len, (biting into the beef) shoot!"

"Well, now, I can't exactly define a jitterbug, I guess you might say that they enjoy crazy music. It suits them and it suits me." Ella says she has seen them "Doin' It" all over the country and its the same no matter where you go.

Entertained in Harlem

"I got my start with Chick Webb," asserts Ella, "It was in the Harlem Opera House where I did a song and dance act on their Amateur Hour. It was a lot of fun and I liked that type of work. Then Chick was in the audience one night and now we've been together ever since. We've been to a lot of places. Entertainment is a varied thing. I like college proms best. Its a thrill to see the younger generation having a lot of fun. Lets see. We've been to Tennessee, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, North Carolina, Purdue, U. C. L. A., oh, I guess we've been to most of them.

Last August Ella was a guest star on the Swing Session with Leith Stevens, Leith and his orchestra, it will be remembered, attended the Senior Ball for the Class of '39.

And between sips and gulps, she kept right on talking.

"Any superstitions, Ella?"

"Nope, not a one. I don't believe in them. I've got too much to do. An I Ella swallowed a mouthful just then, the management had just sent word to her that six shows a day instead of five was necessary. "See that, now what good is a superstition gonna do me now."

How does it fee lto see your name in lights?

With that her face lit up like a theater marquis. "Well, I'll tell you it feels awfully good. It makes you want to work harder. I just love it. Yes sir, I'm going to keep right on working hard."

Desires Stage Career

Further conversation led to her ambition. Ella says it's to be a radio star and if the opportunity ever presented itself, she would go on the stage too. She isn't particular, it can be comedy or drama or even an in between. She likes to compose music and her new one is "I've Found That Yellow Basket." She doesn't talk much about her private life, maybe she's not enough time for it. But when I asked her if she was married—two brown eyes mirrored an anticipation for the future—a languid sigh—"No, but I have boy friends," a gorgeous smile, "and I love 'em all!"

If it is on harmony and rhythm that the radio and the listening audience put their emphasis, then there is a dynamic personality. A girl that loves swing and dishes it out like a government project. That trips the pulse beat of a nation. Here in one sweep of a glance is a synchronized and syncopated human ingenuity, Ella Fitzgerald.

CHEMICAL SOCIETY TO ATTEND LECTURE BY DR. FARAGHER

Several Inspection Tours Contemplated by Campus Organization

Members of the Chemical Society of Villanova College, and other students interested in chemistry, have been invited to attend a lecture by Dr. W. F. Faragher of the Catalytic Development Company of Philadelphia. The lecture will be given at Haverford College.

It was announced that the meetings this year would be held biweekly, the programs being supplied alternately by the students and faculty. It has also been planned to have at least one evening meeting this fall. Along with this plan an effort is being made to obtain Dr. J. R. Prase, of the University of Pennsylvania, as a guest speaker.

First of the subjects to be studied by the society is the application of spectroscopy in industry. Dr. E. L. Haenisch, Professor of Chemistry at Villanova College, will deliver three lectures on this topic. One lecture, entitled "The Fundamentals of Spectra," has already been completed.

Sometime this Fall the members of the society will make inspection tours to several industrial plants. Included among these will be the Franklin Sugar Company, the Pyrites Company of Wilmington, and the Pennsylvania Salt Company.

Officers of the society are: John Malaspina, president; Edward Cierkowski, vice president; and George Haluszka, secretary and treasurer.

L.K.D. Fraternity Appoints DeBartolomeis Chairman For Annual Dance, Nov. 4

Nine Science Students Will Be Included in Committee to Direct Activities; Affair Is First Since 1936

CAMPUS ORCHESTRA TO SUPPLY MUSIC

By JAMES COLLINS

After a lapse of one year, the Lambda Kappa Delto fraternity, organization of students in the School of Science, will present its annual Fall Dance on Friday evening, November 4, in the Villanova Field House.

Italo DeBartolomeis, senior student, has been appointed chairman of the committee to direct the dance, it was recently revealed by John C. Urie, fraternity president.

Committeemen to support the newly appointed chairman will be named by Urie during the week. Nine members of the pre-medical department will be chosen by the committee which have the explicit duty of arranging ticket sales, decorations, refreshments, and the presentation of the informal on Friday evening.

This L. K. K. dance will follow the custom of all informal Villanova hops and will be given in the Villanova Field House with the "Villanovans," student orchestra, in attendance to furnish the music. Tickets may be procured at one dollar and a half from any of the committeemen, from any fraternity member, or at the VILLANOVAN office. Sale of tickets begins immediately.

With the presentation of the 1938 science fraternity Fall Dance a lapse of one year will have been bridged in which time the annual hop was unavoidedly cancelled. Last year preparations were in full progress and nearing completion for the dance by the science men when a small fire in the gymnasium ruined the acoustic curtains, other decorations, and the general appearance of the dance floor. Consequently, there was no alternative but to announce its cancellation. Thus, November 4, will see the first L. K. D. dance since 1936.

The chosen chairman for the affair, DeBartolomeis, has a well-known reputation for versatality in extra-curricular activities. The hundred-and-fifty pound football team has felt his athletic prowess for the past three years and again is experiencing his talents this year.

A. S. M. E. To Visit Iron Works Today; Plan Other Trips

Smoker Committee Will Be Released in Near Future

Edgemore Iron Works in Chester will be visited by the Mechanical Engineers this afternoon, it was formally announced by Raymond MacGregor, president of the Villanova branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

The committee for the annual A. S. M. E. smoker, to be held in the Field House on November 30, will be announced in the near future. MacGregor also indicated that the Trip and Publicity Committees will be announced at the same time.

MacGregor in speaking of the trip to Chester this afternoon said, "This trip should prove to be very interesting and instructive for the mechanical engineers. They will be able to come in touch with the practical engineering work which will, no doubt, be of use to them in their course of study. All engineers are invited to take part in this activity."

Faculty adviser, Mr. William Barber, is making arrangements with the Westinghouse Electric Company for a trip through the turbine department of the plant. The trip will be made in the near future if the undertaking is successful.

GASTON SELECTED SPANISH CLUB HEAD

Junior Engineering Student to Direct Activities of Campus Group

Melchor Gaston, junior student in the School of Technology, was elected president of the Spanish Club at the initial meeting held under the direction of Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator, on Wednesday, October 19.

Chosen to assist him in his duties for the present year were Manuel Carrera, Frank Quinones, and Albert E. Ibaraguen, to fill the offices of vice president, secretary and general manager, respectively.

As the primary intention of the club is along cultural lines the majority of activities will be planned to that end. The chief aim will be to establish friendly relationships with the Spanish clubs of neighboring colleges.

Father Lozano pointed out that it is his intention to arouse interest in the lectures to be held at the International Students House, in Philadelphia. He declared that this series of lectures would be of special value to those interested in Spanish affairs. Contacts will also be made with the headquarters of

MUSIC GATHERING HEARS BEETHOVEN'S BEST WORK

At the weekly meeting of the music seminar under the direction of Rev. John Vrana, O. S. A., an appreciative audience listened and admired the beauty of several selections from the works of Beethovan, Hayden, Mozart, Grieg and others.

Foremost among the works used was Beethovan's "Moonlight Sonata" which is supposedly written by the light of the moon. Also the Peer Gynt Suite was played and attentively listened to by all members of the organization.

Following his custom, Fr. Vrana made the program more interesting and clear to those persons uninitiated in music by issuing copies of the historical and classical background of each composer and the selection reviewed.

NEGOTIATIONS MADE BY DRAMATIC GROUP FOR SOCIAL, NOV. 3

"Villanovans" to Furnish Music For Dancing at Informal Affair

LOCAL COLLEGES INVITED

Belle Masque is busily rushing through preparations for their big surprise Nov. 3d. Professor Anthony Frayne, moderator, and the members of last year's cast have been working steadily on making this affair a tremendous success. It promises to be all of what they say and even more.

Two innovations will be attempted. First of these is the use of the bare stage. This idea is a comparatively modern one, being at the present used by Orson Wells and his Mercury Theater in the play "Our Town," now being staged in New York. It has also been tried in a number of lesser known plays. This type of setting evolved entirely on suggestion, Professor Frayne explained.

"Let us suppose there was to be represented a wooden fence — a sign is hung on the back of the stage with the word written on it. Or let us say the play calls for a hall with a speakers platform, all these things are designated by signs and the rest is left entirely to the imagination of the audience. This mode puts a little more responsibility on the actor and at 7the same time would bring out any latent talents he might have. It is obvious from the description above that the greater part of the acting is entirely pantomime. In other words the actor must make up in his own pantomime and emotional acting the fact that there is

HISTORIANS DISCUSS VERSAILLES TREATY

Analysis of Motives Behind Dictatorships Planned by Seminar

Evolution and development of the Czechoslovakian crisis was the topic for discussion at the meeting of the History Seminar last Thursday afternoon.

An analysis of the Treaty of Versailles and the problems created by its provisions was presented by Dr. Harold F. Hartmann, co-moderator of the group. Subsequent student discussion pointed out the reasons for the formation of Czechoslovakia and the crisis arising from Germany's present demands on it. The governing principle of the self-determination of nations as applied to the situation was stressed.

Next meeting of the seminar will be held Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the lounge room of Mendel Hall. The motives of dictators, reasons for their apparent success, and the part they play in the present emergency will constitute the topics to be taken into consideration.

Dr. Hartmann also announced the appointment of Thomas Moore, sophomore in the school of Education, as secretary of the organization.

JOSEPH C. SCULLY

Deeply saddened by the sudden death of Joseph C. Scully, member of the Junior Engineering Class, the VILLANOVAN expresses heart-felt sympathy to the parents, friends and associates of our departed fellow student. We feel that we but re-echo the sentiments of faculty and student body as we mourn the death of a beloved and respected member of the Class of 1940.

Three Committee Heads Named By Class Officials To Junior Week Positions

Gerald Cassidy, Francis Fitzpatrick, Joseph Gallagher to Direct Blazer Selection, Dinner Dance and Blazer Ball

OTHER APPOINTMENTS TO BE RELEASED

Recent junior appointments, as announced by William V. Sinnott, class president, include chairmen of three important committees. Heads of the Blazer, Dinner Dance and Blazer Ball committees are Gerald Cassidy, Francis M. Fitzpatrick and Joseph A. Gallagher.

These appointments complete the list of those named in directing capacities for the traditional Junior Week program scheduled for May with exception of Mother's Day and Open House. Committeemen and the remaining chairmen will be released by Junior officials in the near future.

All Junior Week activities will be under the supervision of Bradley J. McManus, chairman of the six-day program of socials. As has been previously announced, the Junior Promenade will be under the direction of Charles D. Cavanaugh.

Negotiations for the selection of a ring to be representative of the Class of 1940 will get underway simultaneously with the appointment of a committee. Frank A. Pimpinella, chairman, revealed that his committee will be named next week.

Class officials stated that the selection of committees at this early date will facilitate smoothness in the operations in preparing for an enviable Junior Week program.

Cassidy, student in the School of Commerce and Finance, will make the necessary negotiations with business houses to secure suitable garment for chairmen. The Blazer, a sports ensemble in blue and white, is characteristic of the junior student at Villanova College.

A committee under the direction of Fitzpatrick, Arts student, will undertake negotiations relative to the conduction of the annual junior Dinner Dance. This formal affair customarily concludes the social activities of the junior class.

Gallagher, student in the School of Technology, has been selected to head the committee for the Blazer Ball. One of the outstanding informals of the collegiate social season, the Blazer Ball marks the first appearance of the traditional blazers. Gallagher served on the student Council and the Cotillion committee during his sophomore year.

Large Enrollment Expected As Holy Name Receives 300

Membership in Campus Society During Week

Over 300 resident students have already enrolled as members of the Villanova Holy Name Society. Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., chaplain, has been greatly pleased with this large enrollment and expects to have an even greater number of members before the end of the week.

Rev. Paul M. Judson, O. S. A., first introduced the Holy Name Society this year during the retreat at which time he suggested that all residents join the society at the first opportunity.

Requirements for membership in the society are very simple. There are two, namely, receiving Holy Communion on the first Friday of every month, and maintaining a constant reverence for the Holy Name of Jesus.

Activities in the society are confined entirely to the spiritual, since it is felt that social activities are sufficiently taken care of by other societies on the campus.

Father Boyle urges all day-students to join the Holy Name Societies in their respective parishes.

FR. STANFORD ATTENDS CONCLAVE AT RICHMOND

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova College, attended a meeting of the Association of American Colleges at the University of Richmond, Va., last Friday and Saturday. Fr. Stanford was one of the principal speakers at the affair.

After attending that parley, Fr. Stanford attended a dinner last Saturday evening. The dinner was sponsored by the Villanova Alumni Club of Richmond and was given at the Hotel Richmond. Fr. Stanford was guest speaker.

The Villanova Alumni Club of Richmond is steadily growing and is one of the most active of all alumni organizations. James P. O'Hara is president and George C. Rankin is secretary of the group.

YEARBOOK STARTS NEW CAMERA CLUB

Prizes Offered by Belle Air for Campus Photos

Plans are being made by the photography staff of the yearbook, Belle Air, to form a camera club. The main purpose of this club is to get an adequate and interesting collection of informal photographs for this year's edition of the year book.

Prizes will be offered for the following types of pictures: best action shot, best classroom shot, best campus scene, best shot of students in their rooms, and best shot of the activities at one of the football games. Each prize will consist of some sort of camera article.

The club is being formed with hopes that it will be continued in future years and develop a large file of pictures. If this proves popular enough, efforts will be made to run it as an independent organization with officers and regular meetings.

Facilities for obtaining motion picture reels from the Department of Agriculture are being arranged. These will be shown in the Field House with the general student body invited. This is one of the

A FINE KETTLE

THE spectacle of a personal feud between the two spoiled labor leaders, "Percy" Lewis and "Douglas" Green, in which neither is patriotic enough to swallow his jealously so that warfare between the unions may cease, is but a sordid page in American history. Despite the fact that the plain man in both factions is desirous of peace, the two irresponsible bosses persist in their senseless rivalry, impeding American labor at a moment propitious to its advancement.

Both men may be indicted in activities not to the best interests of labor in a democracy. Both have built unions along military lines allowing little chance for the member to go against the wishes of the chiefs. High-handed tactics were displayed in Lewis' reinstating of Communists in the United Automobile Workers and again in Green's foisting of his political peeves of the AFL. Poor leadership was evident in entering party politics. Strikes were called losing millions of dollars in wages for a five cent hourly increase. In the first place such a loss was not worth the measly gain, and in the second place they should not ask for a few pennies more an hour but for an annual wage.

The government, seeing the grief caused to the nation, employer, employe, and consumer, has taken steps through the Department of Labor to intervene in the hope of settlement. If peace is brought to the ranks of labor, it will be the greatest gain since the securing of the right of collective bargaining.

HULL-UCINATIONS

MANY Americans have been unable to discover a reason for President Roosevelt's desire for a mammoth navy. During the next few months the reason may be forthcoming.

At Lima, Peru, the eighth Pan-American Conference will be held in December. Most likely Cordell Hull will be present. And again, most likely, he will with one exception chide the ABCP powers for their close cultural connection with Germany, Italy, and Japan. His motive is obvious—the trade of South America with these countries has tremendously increased lately to the detriment of the United States. The one exception is Brazil who has recently discontinued her diplomatic relations with Germany. What positive inducements Mr. Hull and the American manufacturers will offer these countries to return to the fold is their personal concern; but the nature of the punishment he may threaten is the concern of every American—for most of us can join the navy.

And that brings us back to the U. S. and the impending session of Congress wherein the budget, a large slice of which is for the navy, will be discussed. There are certain topics of debate, that will doubtless, arise from a consideration of the naval appropriation. These topics must be thoroughly analyzed and the questions they present categorically and fully answered if the U. S. is to remain out of a major war or enter it materially and psychologically prepared.

We formulate these topics in this question: Does the Monroe Doctrine have reference to the extension of a cultural and economic system by a foreign power to this hemisphere?

FROSH! GET THE HELLO HABIT

THE improvement of some freshmen in the matter of compliance with orientation regulations is offset by others who by continued infringements reflect dishonor on the class. At least the first year men could co-operate to the extent of saying "Hello," but it's not being done.

We repeat: greet everyone you meet on the campus with a HELLO. Don't be shy about this thing. Some of you fellows act as if it hurt to say "Hello." The more you do it, the easier it will become. It is your place to talk first. As you progress in college you will understand more intimately the benefits accruing from this simple greeting. The habit will develop in you a friendly attitude to everybody which is so important not only here but in after life.

If you wish to be absorbed into this institution more quickly, if you wish to increase your contacts with upper classmen, if you wish to add to your social enjoyment, if you wish to meet fellows with mutual interests, continue the upholding of the traditional spirit of Villanova. Toward enforcing the regulations more strictly, many student organizations might well follow the action of some clubs whose upper class members have ruled that freshmen who are not complying with the regulations will not share in the activities of the society.

Frosh, the heritage of the democratic environment at Villanova is your responsibility to preserve. You do not seem to realize that.

KNOW YOUR MIND

IN a world beset with international stress, political greed, and confusing isms, the student of higher learning is required to take a definite course of action to offset the influence of any agent injurious to the principles and creed for which he stands.

Editorials, books, articles in present-day magazines, speeches are all means available to the college student by which he can familiarize himself with conditions and their remedies.

It will be too late after graduation for you to form a plan of attack or defense. You will be confronted with a situation from which you cannot escape unless prepared. The time to act is now. Form your own opinions . . . but be sure they are well-founded.

Do You Have A Philosophy?

BY
Rev. Edward Dwyer, O. S. A.

WE CAN have too much rain, too much land, an excess of food or sentiment, but deep knowledge always seems to be able to find a market. Truth and wisdom are still scarce, although expensive projects have to be carried out to save us from our natural resources and rid us of surplus products. If our little bits of profound knowledge were only showing some vitality, there would be reason for philosophic consolation, but the fact of the matter is that everyone is trying to beat the last breath out of our already gasping brain children.

Philosophers are having their troubles. After some twenty-five hundred years of cultivation, at times diligent, frequently lagging, Philosophy has scarcely fulfilled its consoling promises. Not that the ingenious inaugurators ever expected it to flower so perfectly that we of 1938 would find it full-grown and resting idly in a vase looking pretty; it took lesser minds to conceive of Philosophy so naively. But the first "wise men" did seek ultimate explanations for the universe with a spirit of optimism, well-founded and vigorous. True, in their humility they saw themselves incapable of carrying the great work very far, but they foresaw that others would rise up to take up the search and continue on from the point where they would be interrupted. The work would be endless, no doubt, but still the task would always remain for the edification and spiritual elevation of mankind. They did not reckon with ages such as ours.

Despite the sanguinary hopes of the sages, the promising bud, petalled with big words and bigger thoughts, has turned out to be something of a weed. There is a strong urge to call it a poison ivy since it crawls in all directions and wreaks havoc on the unwary. It is not easy to explain the about-face of Philosophy. Its lack of unity and of interaction is scarcely due to lack of interest.

Pride in the possession of a philosophy is quite prevalent. We might even say that no one cares to confess that he lives without a philosophy, if we accept a less strict meaning of the word. Soldiers living in mud, and eating worse, claim that the sacrifice is made in defense of their philosophy. Perched precariously on orange crates, bristling orators call upon their philosophy to pour champagne in every tea cup and place a cigar in every mouth. The Greeks may have spoken of their philosophic tenets only among the elite, the Romans among their friends in the Forum or seated on benches in the secluded gardens of the sophisticated, but times and terms have changed. I shall pawn my studs and give up golf, but a philosophy must remain.

If the depression would only ease a little, we might devote ourselves to restoring names to their proper owners. Names have wondered afar in the general disappearance of things formerly possessed. Why does Henry insist on having a "philosophy," when he haughtily admits, no, he cries out to all, that his ethical norms are the pure result of examining laboratory reports about hormones and guinea-pigs? Would it not be more honest and likewise more intelligible if he would say, "I have a Biology"? Since the mechanical age has gained such power over many well-meaning though short-sighted minds, a favorite attitude towards life's problems is that of thinking only in terms of the physical sciences.

Instead of speaking of my "philosophy" in such a case, would it not be better to have recourse to my "physics" or even my "gadgets." If Nature's cage of bugs and beasts has impressed me so deeply that I want to live forever in that atmosphere, why must I insist on the queer title of "philosopher"? Dog fancier or plain lover of dumb animals would be far more apt and expressive; any name but that of philosopher.

There are many loves other than that of wisdom. Additional suggestions for fond and life-sustaining affections might be "birds and trees," "gas and velocity," or even "dollars and cents." Make up your own. The one rule of the game is simple, if rigid—avoid the title "philosophy," the love of wisdom. It means too much to be appropriated to sentiment or wishful thinking.

Philosophy, remember, was a science before any of the others were called such. She has not lost her scientific character in the age of new knowledge. She still graces an exalted position in the high-powered organization of the numerous branches of learning. Nor has Philosophy become decrepit through the change. Instead of enclosing all science within herself as formerly, she is now the mother of all,

STYLIST.

The student council has decreed flowing academic gowns as campus and classroom garb for juniors and seniors at Loyola University of Chicago. Faculty members have also been requested to wear gowns in classrooms. The purpose is to perpetuate the glorious tradition of Paris, Bologna, Oxford and Cambridge.

LOST AND FOUND.

A freshman student and admirer of Sir Walter Scott had the following written below his name in his textbook, "And please return this book." You may think this a strange request, but I find that though many are poor arithmeticians, they are nearly all good bookkeepers.

IT'S HAPPENED HERE.

Hitler may not be winning friends but he certainly is influencing people, as was evidenced by the recent display put on by Harvard students. The men paraded around the town "goose-stepping" and giving the Nazi salute till police intervened.

HI-DE-HO.

Ohio State University students recently formed their own night-club, feeling that they have been "taken for a ride" financially by the down town night-clubs. The club is strictly a project for, and by, the students. The admission price of 25 cents entitles the student to play bridge, ping-pong or dance. A floor show is picked from campus talent in weekly try-outs. Refreshments in the form of fruit punch and soft drinks can be bought.

ANY WEEK END.

"ouse Mother: It's 11:15—do you think you can spend the night here?

Collich boy (doubtfully): I dunno now. I guess I'd better call my room-mate first ,huh?

IN THE GROOVE.

The students of the University of Loyola (L. A.) have been moaning about the deep rut that has been dug in the road on the driveway leading to the Arts Building. The rut was placed in the road in an attempt to slow up the drivers as they come roaring onto the campus. Perhaps the following sign at the beginning of the drive would help:

"Slow Down Before You Become a Statistic."

OOPS, MY DEAR.

The burly sport of the 200-pounders has taken a bit of a sissy turn at Temple University, where physical majoring gridders must successfully complete a course in the modern dance.

since they have grown out of her, or at least the healthy ones have. That is why Philosophy is called Wisdom.

The travail which we find in the Philosophy of our times has not been occasioned by the coming of age or the independence of her offspring, but rather from their denial of her. When one of them denies its origin and calls Biology its philosophic mother, it has to seek a new mother more to its liking when it is announced that the Missing Link has just appeared out of the sandy wastes of Arizona. If I find my dog faithful after the rest of my friends have forsaken me, I must abandon my old Philosophy, in which I saw a difference between man and brute. My new interpretation of life must be made according to a new Philos—, I mean Animal Psychology, a deep and prolonged study of which may help me some day to raise my fellow man to the dignity of a dog.

Philosophy is a product of reflective thought about ourselves and the world with which we have much though not all in common. Since it is the science of our attitude toward the All of existence, Philosophy dare not exhaust itself in the investigation of emotions, flesh, blood, or earth, of food, money, the stars, or me. It is the proper science of no one of these things and yet the science of all of them, for it studies the why and therefore of the All of existence.

VARIETIES

Revivals of "Frankenstein," "Dracula" Successful; Zealor "Ringer" For Hitler

By FRED WATERS

INQUESTIONABLE radio fads of the moment, or rather of the year, the those so called "question and answer" programs.

Frankly we think it to be a crying shame that half of these are even permitted to be aired. Many are obviously "fad hangers-on."

Then again there are those which are very worth-while. Among the latter is "Information Please."

This program, heard over NBC (WJZ-WFIL), every Tuesday nite at eight-thirty has real merit — even tho it does lack a sponsor).

Carried on in a fast moving tempo by a very unaffected and matter-of-fact conductor, "Information Please" makes good listening.

Altho totally unprepared, it is frequently humorous.

Conductor doesn't mince any words when one of the "answerees" gets in his hair.

Last week he invited one to resign "now", if he wanted to."

Harpo Marx, silent member of the Marx trio, will appear on to-nite's program as guest of honor.

Gene Tunney acted in that capacity last Tuesday. He spoke in a decidedly effeminate voice, and made free use of such expressions as "oh, goodness!"

To Murray Zealor, '41 goes this week's "Ringer" selection as Adolph Hitler, (sans the misplaced toothbrush.

In reply to a query:

Professor, as well as student, "Ringer" contributions are acceptable, (more so!).

Villanova authorities are to be congratulated on the well-kept appearance of our beautiful campus.

One little defect that has probably thus far escaped attention is the dilapidated condition of the "Villanova" lettering on the metal sign facing the Pennsylvania Railroad, near the Commerce and Finance building.

VillanOvations to Frank Carroll and the "Owl Hop" committee, together with the entire Phi Kappa Pi fraternity for the success of their affair last Friday eve.

Father McNally, lecturing to a senior class, calmly waited sixty seconds for a response to the following:

"It was a cold Winter day.
"A hunter was out hunting.
"He saw a bear.
"The bear saw the hunter.
"'My,' thought the hunter. 'I wish I had that heavy fur to keep me warm.'
"He raised his gun.
"'My,' thought the bear, I wish I could have that hunter for dinner.'
"He rushed at the hunter.
"Both wishes were satisfied."

Quite a bit of contention among Jim Shelle's C. & F., classmates over last week's "Ringer" selection.

They contend that the title of "Don Ameche" should have been bestowed upon — none other than the debonair Arthur Vigilante, '39, erstwhile varsity basket-ball player, scholar par excellance and dresser a-la-Esquire.

"Mickey Rooney, in "Two Gun Fauntleroy."

That was the billing of the Times Square Theater, New York, marquee recently.

As result of Mickey's ever increasing popularity, many of his old pictures are being revived.

Times Square manager obtained "Little Lord Fauntleroy," a former Rooney vehicle, and considering the title too sissified for the boy actor, changed it.

Subject of much criticism lately, the staid B. B. C. (British Broadcasting Company) tried to step out a little last Sunday by playing twenty minutes of jazz, and promptly had its fingers burned. Protests literally poured in.

Most recent bone of contention with the B. B. C. was its failure to air the "war crisis" address of former foreign minister Anthony Eden. Eden is not in the good graces of the present British government. The B. B. C. is government-owned and operated.

It will be remembered that this same speech was heard in the United States.

Time worn expressions: (Zamsky Belle Air photographer, Karl Wolf), "You look good that way."

Al Werner, '42, C. & F., can be seen frequently fraternizing with a certain Reverend Father, one of his instructors.

Frosh section "C" knows why.

Band-leader Bing Crosby will appear together with brother band-leader Bob Crosby in a short series of Decca records to be issued during November.

Philadelphia theaters have proven a very effective and inexpensive substitute for "bank night."

Drawing attraction, the jitterbugs, have to pay admission before entering the theater.

Patrons flock by the turnstiles to view the "king kats," "alligators," jitterbugs," et cetera, do their stuff on the stage.

Some houses are offering nightly prizes. Others are holding elimination contests.

Carl Ed's comic strip "Harold Teen" (Ledger Syndicate) in featuring the current jitterbug craze has made amusing reading of late.

Movement is now afoot to obtain a commercial sponsor for a weekly "Perpetual Novena" service originating from Chicago's "Our Lady of Sorrows" Catholic Church.

Some arrangements will probably be made about donating the proceeds to a worthy charity.

In a survey of 25,000 persons recently, only one per-cent objected to the idea.

Novena services, sans the sponsor, have been broadcast for some time now in this city.

Father James Keane, rector of "Our Lady," is reported to be undecided at the moment. Actual emergence of a sponsor might provide the "last straw" in bringing about his assent.

Pix of the Week is "You Can't Take It With You," now playing at Philadelphia's Stanley. Don't miss it!

Actual camera work on "Gone With the Wind" will begin January first.

INTRODUCING

Big City Lad Pursues Maze of Activities Under Cover of Night

By JAMES F. HAUGHTON

REMEMBER those Horatio Alger stories about the small town boy leaves home, goes to the big city and makes a million. Well, Algers' got paid for writing such appetizing stuff, but me, I'm just a young lad trying to fill up space, but I can tell you such a story about a kid who's a student in this institution of book l'arnin.'

The hero of this eighteen inch tale is a nice, chubby wavy-haired boy tipping the beam at about 175, in round figures, who goes by the nomenclature of Al Laskin.

But in this tale the boy really hails from the big city and does his fortune hunting by night. Ever night finds him clerking in one of Jim Farley's Philadelphia branches. The boy's been doing this little nightly stretch since 1933, the same time he brought his credits to Fr. Bartley's East Side Villanova branch.

Destined to Politics

This hard working lad first made himself known on August 15, 1918 in the third largest city in these 48 states. Incidentally, that makes Al a college grad before he can be sold to the politicians.

Laskin's first touch of book reading was garnered at Bryant Public School and from there he was promoted to Holmes Junior High where he whiled away the time in his adolescent period by heading the thespian group.

Overbrook High was the next spot in his educational itinerary, but his tale of adventure can be summed up in, "Boy! Did we have fun." Al never seemed to quite agree with the gent they call "principal" so he never bothered with activities. It seems they didn't eat the same kind of cake, nor did they butter their bread on the same side.

HAROLD LASKIN

At present Laskin is completing a man's sized job in the local "ledger and balance sheet institution." It seems the lad had a hankering for high finance in his second and third year, but when the Social Security Act increased the demand for accountants, our subject was not to be left and took heed of the opportunity. He's now doing two years of accounting work in one. And to think how the Frosh slave with a mere trial balance.

Each subject discussed thus far in this parade of Villanova prominents has had a set pride and joy, but to Mr. Laskin goes the empty milk bottle as first prize for his selection. He said "I like good clothes and to be well dressed." Well, about 99-44/100% of the boys of these 240 acres have the same favorite.

Potential Barrister

All these tales of hard work won't go for naught if Al has anything to say about it. Because this time next year he hopes to be enrolled in either the Penn or Harvard tribunals of law.

A standard question asked of each subject of our interviews concerns the gent's love life. When putting forth this question I always stand about 4 paces from the gent and wear my best running shoes, which formerly belonged to Johnny Maher. But when I queried Al on the subject he quietly startled me with: "If there are three dances I take three different girls." Never again shall I ask that question.

With his job as Jim Farley's assistant keeping him quite busy, Al hasn't had much time for extra-curricular activities, but he did manage to defeat Democratic Jim Tofani for the treasurership of the Senior Class.

The young man is also journalistically inclined and it is he who covers such events as swimming meets, boxing matches, etc., for Philadelphia's Evening Ledger.

So you guys see we really have a story boy in our midst.

A FINE KETTLE

THE spectacle of a personal feud between the two spoiled labor leaders "Percy" Lewis and "Douglas" Green, which neither is patriotic enough to swallow his jealously so that warfare between the unions may cease, is but a [illegible] in American history. Despite the fact that the plain man in both factions is desirous of peace, the two irresponsible bosses persist in their senseless rivalry, impeding American labor at a moment propitious to its advancement.

Both men may be indicted in activities not to the best interests of labor in a democracy. Both have built unions along military lines allowing little chance for the member to go against the wishes of the chiefs. High-handed tactics were displayed in Lewis' reinstating of Communists in the United Automobile Workers and again in Green's foisting of his political peeves of the AFL. Poor leadership was evident in entering party politics. Strikes were called losing millions of dollars in wages for a five cent hourly increase. In the first place such a loss was not worth the measly gain, and in the second place they should not ask for a few pennies more an hour but for an annual wage.

The government, seeing the grief caused to the nation, employer, employe, and consumer, has taken steps through the Department of Labor to intervene in the hope of settlement. If peace is brought to the ranks of labor, it will be the greatest gain since the securing of the right of collective bargaining.

HULLUCINATIONS

MANY Americans have been unable to discover a reason for President Roosevelt's desire for a mammoth navy. During the next few months the reason may be forthcoming.

At Lima, Peru, the eighth Pan-American Conference will be held in December. Most likely Cordell Hull will be present. And again, most likely, he will with one exception chide the ABCP powers for their close cultural connection with Germany, Italy, and Japan. His motive is obvious—the trade of South America with these countries has tremendously increased lately to the detriment of the United States. The one exception is Brazil who has recently discontinued her diplomatic relations with Germany. What positive inducements Mr. Hull and the American manufacturers will offer these countries to return to the fold is their personal concern; but the nature of the punishment he may threaten is the concern of every American—for most of us can join the navy.

And that brings us back to the U. S. and the impending session of Congress wherein the budget, a large slice of which is for the navy, will be discussed. There are certain topics of debate, that will doubtless, arise from a consideration of the naval appropriation. These topics must be thoroughly analyzed and the questions they present categorically and fully answered if the U. S. is to remain out of a major war or enter it materially and psychologically prepared.

We formulate these topics in this question: Does the Monroe Doctrine have reference to the extension of a cultural and economic system by a foreign power to this hemisphere?

FROSH! GET THE HELLO HABIT

THE improvement of some freshmen in the matter of compliance with orientation regulations is offset by others who by continued infringements reflect dishonor on the class. At least the first year men could co-operate to the extent of saying "Hello," but it's not being done.

We repeat: greet everyone you meet on the campus with a HELLO. Don't be shy about this thing. Some of you fellows act as if it hurt to say "Hello." The more you do it, the easier it will become. It is your place to talk first. As you progress in college you will understand more intimately the benefits [illegible] from this simple greeting. The habit will develop in you a friendly attitude to everybody which is so important not only here but in after life.

If you wish to be absorbed into this institution more quickly, if you wish to increase your contacts with upper classmen, if you wish to add to your social enjoyment, if you wish to meet fellows with mutual interests, continue the upholding of the traditional spirit of Villanova. Toward enforcing the regulations more strictly, many student organizations might well follow the action of some clubs whose upper class members have ruled that freshmen who are not complying with the regulations will not share in the activities of the society.

Frosh, the heritage of the democratic environment at Villanova is your responsibility to preserve. You do not seem to realize that.

KNOW YOUR MIND

IN a world beset with international stress, political greed, and confusing isms, the student of higher learning is required to take a definite course of action to offset the influence of any agent injurious to the principles and creed for which he stands.

Editorials, books, articles in present-day magazines, speeches are all means available to the college student by which he can familiarize himself with conditions and their remedies.

It will be too late after graduation for you to form a plan of attack or defense. You will be confronted with a situation from which you cannot escape unless prepared. The time to act is now. Form your own opinions . . . but be sure they are well-founded.

Do You Have A Philosophy?

BY

Rev. Edward Dwyer, O. S. A.

WE CAN have too much rain, too much land, an excess of food or sentiment, but deep knowledge always seems to be able to find a market. Truth and wisdom are still scarce, although expensive projects have to be carried out to save us from our natural resources and rid us of surplus products. If our little bits of profound knowledge were only showing some vitality, there would be reason for philosophic consolation, but the fact of the matter is that everyone is trying to beat the last breath out of our already gasping brain children.

Philosophers are having their troubles. After some twenty-five hundred years of cultivation, at times diligent, frequently lagging, Philosophy has scarcely fulfilled its consoling promises. Not that the ingenious inaugurators ever expected it to flower so perfectly that we of 1938 would find it full-grown and resting idly in a vase looking pretty; it took lesser minds to conceive of Philosophy so naively. But the first "wise men" did seek ultimate explanations for the universe with a spirit of optimism, well-founded and vigorous. True, in their humility they saw themselves incapable of carrying the great work very far, but they foresaw that others would rise up to take up the search and continue on from the point where they would be interrupted. The work would be endless, no doubt, but still the task would always remain for the edification and spiritual elevation of mankind. They did not reckon with ages such as ours.

Despite the sanguinary hopes of the sages, the promising bud, petalled with big words and bigger thoughts, has turned out to be something of a weed. There is a strong urge to call it a poison ivy since it crawls in all directions and wreaks havoc on the unwary. It is not easy to explain the about-face of Philosophy. The lack of unity and [illegible] is scarcely due to lack of [illegible].

Pride in the possession of a philosophy is quite prevalent. We might even say that no one cares to confess that he lives without a philosophy, if we accept a less strict meaning of the word. Soldier living in mud, and eating worse, claim that the sacrifice is made in defense of their philosophy. Perched precariously on orange crates, bristling orators call upon their philosophy to pour champagne in every tea cup and place a cigar in every mouth. The Greeks may have spoken of their philosophic tenets only among the elite, the Romans among their friends in the Forum or seated on benches in the secluded gardens of the sophisticated, but times and terms have changed. I shall pawn my studs and give up golf, but a philosophy must remain.

If the depression would only ease a little, we might devote ourselves to restoring names to their proper owners. Names have wondered afar in the general disappearance of things formerly possessed. Why does Henry insist on having a 'philosophy,' when he frankly admits, no, he cries out to all, that his ethical norms are the pure result of examining laboratory reports about hormones and guinea-pigs? Would it not be more honest and likewise more intelligible if he would say, "I have a Biology"? Since the mechanical age has gained such power over many well-meaning, though short-sighted minds, a favorite attitude towards life's problems is that of thinking only in terms of the physical sciences.

Instead of speaking of my "philosophy" in such a case, would it not be better to have recourse to my "physics" or even my "gadgets." If Nature's cage of things and beasts has impressed me so deeply that I want to live forever in that atmosphere, why must I insist on the queer title of "philosophia"? Dog fancier or plain lover of dumb animals would be far more apt and expressive; any name but that of philosopher.

There are many Loves other than that of wisdom. Additional suggestions for food and life-sustaining affections might be "birds and trees," "gas and velocity," or even "dollars and cents." Make up your own. The one rule of the game is simple, if rigid—avoid the title "philosophy," the love of wisdom. It means too much to be appropriated to sentiment or wishful thinking.

Philosophy, remember, was a science before any of the others were called such. She has not lost her scientific character in the age of new knowledge. She still graces an exalted position in the high-powered organization of the numerous branches of learning. Nor has Philosophy become decrepit through the change. Instead of enclosing all science within herself as formerly, she is now the mother of all,

STYLIST.

The student council has decreed flowing academic gowns as campus and classroom garb for juniors and seniors at Loyola University of Chicago. Faculty members have also been requested to wear gowns in classrooms. The purpose is to perpetuate the glorious tradition of Paris, Bologna, Oxford and Cambridge.

LOST AND FOUND.

A freshman student and admirer of Sir Walter Scott had the following written below his name in his textbook, "And please return this book." You may think this a strange request, but I find that though many are poor arithmeticians, they are nearly all good bookkeepers.

IT'S HAPPENED HERE.

Hitler may not be winning friends but he certainly is influencing people, as was evidenced by the recent display put on by Harvard students. The men paraded around the town "goose-stepping" and giving the Nazi salute till police intervened.

HI-DE-HO.

Ohio State University students recently formed their own night-club, feeling that they have been "taken for a ride" financially by the down town night-clubs. The club is strictly a project for, and by, the students. The admission price of 25 cents entitles the student to play bridge, ping-pong or dance. A floor show is picked from campus talent in weekly try-outs. Refreshments in the form of fruit punch and soft drinks can be bought.

ANY WEEK END,

"ouse Mother: It's 11:15—do you think you can spend the night here?

Collich boy (doubtfully): I dunno now. I guess I'd better call my room-mate first ,huh?

IN THE GROOVE.

The students of the University of Loyola (L. A.) have been moaning about the deep rut that has been dug in the road on the driveway leading to the Arts Building. The rut was placed in the road in an attempt to slow up the drivers as they come roaring onto the campus. Perhaps the following sign at the beginning of the drive would help:

"Slow Down Before You Become a Statistic."

OOPS, MY DEAR.

The burly sport of the 200-pounders has taken a bit of a sissy turn at Temple University, where physed majoring gridders must successfully complete a course in the modern dance.

VARIETIES

By FRED WATERS

Revivals of "Frankenstein," "Dracula" Successful; Zealor "Ringer" For Hitler

UNQUESTIONABLE radio fads of the moment, or rather of the year, the those so called "question and answer" programs.

Frankly we think it to be a crying shame that half of these are even permitted to be aired. Many are obviously "fad hangers-on."

Then again there are those which are very worth-while. Among the latter is "Information Please."

This program, heard over NBC (WJZ-WFIL), every Tuesday nite at eight-thirty has real merit — even tho it does lack a sponsor).

Carried on in a fast moving tempo by a very unaffected and matter-of-fact conductor, "Information Please" makes good listening.

Altho totally unprepared, it is frequently humorous.

Conductor doesn't mince any words when one of the "answerees" gets in his hair.

Last week he invited one to resign "now", if he wanted to."

Harpo Marx, silent member of the Marx trio, will appear on to-nite's program as guest of honor.

Gene Tunney acted in that capacity last Tuesday. He spoke in a decidedly effeminate voice, and made free use of such expressions as "oh, goodness!"

To Murray Zealor, '41 goes this week's "Ringer" selection as Adolph Hitler. (sans the misplaced toothbrush.

In reply to a query:

Professor, as well as student, "Ringer" contributions are acceptable, (more so!).

Villanova authorities are to be congratulated on the well-kept appearance of our beautiful campus.

One little defect that has probably thus far escaped attention is the dilapidated condition of the "Villanova" lettering on the metal sign facing the Pennsylvania Railroad, near the Commerce and Finance building.

VillanOvations to Frank Carroll and the "Owl Hop" committee, together with the entire Phi Kappa Pi fraternity for the success of their affair last Friday eve.

Father McNally, lecturing to a senior class, calmly waited sixty seconds for a response to the following:

"It was a cold Winter day.
"A hunter was out hunting.
"He saw a bear.
"The bear saw the hunter.
"'My,' thought the hunter. 'I wish I had that heavy fur to keep me warm.'
"He raised his gun.
"'My,' thought the bear, I wish I could have that hunter for dinner.'
"He rushed at the hunter.
"Both wishes were satisfied."

Quite a bit of contention among Jim Sledic's C. & F. classmates over last week's "Ringer" selection.

They contend that the title of "Don Amreche" should have been bestowed upon — none other than the debonair Arthur Vigilante, '39, erstwhile varsity basket-ball player, scholar par excellance and dresser a-la-Esquire.

"Mickey Rooney, in "Two Gun Fauntleroy."

That was the billing of the Times Square Theater, New York, marquee recently.

As result of Mickey's ever increasing popularity, many of his old pictures are being revived.

Times Square manager obtained "Little Lord Fauntleroy," a former Rooney vehicle, and considering the title too sissified for the boy actor, changed it.

Subject of much criticism lately, the staid B. B. C. (British Broadcasting Company) tried to step out a little last Sunday by playing twenty minutes of jazz, and promptly had its fingers burned. Protests literally poured in.

Most recent bone of contention with the B. B. C. was its failure to air the "war crisis" address of former foreign minister Anthony Eden. Eden is not in the good graces of the present British government. The B. B. C. is government owned and operated.

It will be remembered that this same speech was heard in the United States.

Al Werner, '42, C. & F., can be seen frequently fraternizing with a certain Reverend Father, one of his instructors.

Frosh section "C" knows why.

Band-leader Bing Crosby will appear together with brother band-leader Bob Crosby in a short series of Decca records to be issued during November.

Philadelphia theaters have proven a very effective and inexpensive substitute for "bank night."

Drawing attraction, the jitterbugs, have to pay admission before entering the theater.

Patrons flock by the turnstiles to view the "king kats," "alligators," jitterbugs," et cetera, do their stuff on the stage.

Some houses are offering nightly prizes. Others are holding elimination contests.

Carl Ed's comic strip "Harold Teen" (Ledger Syndicate) in featuring the current jitterbug craze has made amusing reading of late.

Movement is now afoot to obtain a commercial sponsor for a weekly "Perpetual Novena" service originating from Chicago's "Our Lady of Sorrows" Catholic Church.

Some arrangements will probably be made about donating the proceeds to a worthy charity.

In a survey of 25,000 persons recently, only one per-cent objected to the idea.

Novena services, sans the sponsor, have been broadcast for some time now in this city.

Father James Keane, rector of "Our Lady," is reported to be undecided at the moment. Actual emergence of a sponsor might provide the "last straw" in bringing about his assent.

Pix of the Week is "You Can't Take It With You," now playing at Philladelphia's Stanley. Don't miss it!

Actual camera work on "Gone With the Wind" will begin January first.

INTRODUCING

By JAMES F. HAUGHTON

Big City Lad Pursues Maze of Activities Under Cover of Night

REMEMBER those Horatio Alger stories about the small town boy leaves home, goes to the big city and makes a million. Well, Alger got paid for writing such appetizing stuff, but me, I'm just a young lad trying to fill up space, but I can tell you such a story about a kid who's a student in this institution of book larnin.'

The hero of this eighteen inch tale is a nice, chubby wavy-haired boy tipping the beam at about 175, in round figures, who goes by the nomenclature of Al Laskin.

But in this tale the boy really hails from the big city and does his fortune hunting by night. Every night finds him clerking in one of Jim Farley's Philadelphia branches. The boy's been doing this little nightly stretch since 1935, the same time he brought his credits to Fr. Barley's East Side Villanova branch.

Destined to Politics

This hard working lad first made himself known on August 15, 1918 in the third largest city in these 48 states. Incidentally, that makes Al a college grad before he can be sold to the politicians.

Laskin's first touch of book reading was garnered at Bryant Public School and from there he was promoted to Holmes Junior High where he whiled away the time in his adolescent period by heading the thespian group.

Overbrook High was the next spot in his educational itinerary, but his tale of adventure can be summed up in, "Boy! Did we have fun." Al never seemed to quite agree with the gent they call "principal" so he never bothered with activities. It seems they didn't eat the same kind of cake, nor did they butter their bread on the same side.

At present Laskin is completing a man's sized job in the local "ledger and balance sheet institution." It seems the lad had a hankering for high finance in his second and third year, but when the Social Security Act increased the demand for accountants, our subject was not to be left and took heed of the opportunity. He's now doing two years of accounting work in one. And to think how the Frosh slave with a mere trial balance.

Each subject discussed this fall in this parade of Villanova prominents has had a set jolt and joy, but to Mr. Laskin goes the empty milk bottle as first prize for his selection. He said "I like good clothes and to be well dressed." Well, about 99-44/100% of the boys of these 240 acres have the same favorite.

Potential Barrister

All these tales of hard work won't go for naught if Al has anything to say about it. Because this time next year he hopes to be enrolled in either the Penn or Harvard tribunals of law.

A standard question asked of each subject of our interviews concerns the gent's love life. When putting forth this question I always stand about 4 paces from the gent and wear my best running shoes, which formerly belonged to Johnny Maher. But when I queried Al on the subject he quietly startled me with: "If there are three dances I take three different girls." Never again shall I ask that question.

With his job as Jim Farley's assistant keeping him quite busy, Al hasn't had much time for extra-curricular activities, but he did manage to defeat Democratic Jim Tofani for the treasurership of the Senior Class.

The young man is also journalistically inclined and it is he who covers such events as swimming meets, boxing matches, etc., for Philadelphia's Evening Ledger.

So you guys see we really have a story boy in our midst.

since they have grown out of her, or at least the healthy ones have. That is why Philosophy is called Wisdom.

The travail which we find in the Philosophy of our times has not been occasioned by the coming of age or the independence of her offspring, but rather from their denial of her. When one of them denies its origin and calls Biology its philosophic mother, it has to seek a new mother more to its liking when it is announced that the Missing Link has just appeared out of the sandy wastes of Arizona. If I find my dog faithful after the rest of my friends have forsaken me, I must abandon my old Philosophy, in which I saw a difference between man and brute. My new interpretation of life must be made according to a new Philos—, I mean Animal Psychology, a deep and prolonged study of which may help me some day to raise my fellow man to the dignity of a dog.

Philosophy is a product of reflective thought about ourselves and the world with which we have much though not all in common. Since it is the science of our attitude toward the All of existence, Philosophy dare not exhaust itself in the investigation of emotions, flesh, blood, or earth, of food, money, the stars, or me. It is the proper science of no one of these things and yet the science of all of them, for it studies the why and wherefore of the All of existence.

DR. JOSEPH TOLAND ADDRESSES SEMINAR ON CODE OF ETHICS

Science Students Hear Surgeon Discuss Catholic Ideals in Medical Profession

PRAISES PRE-MED SCHOOL

"Catholic Ethics and Ideals in th Medical Profession" was the topic chosen by Dr. Joseph Toland for his address to the science seminar last Thursday.

Dr. Toland is head surgeon at St. Mary's Hospital, and on the staff at Northwestern Hospital, both in Philadelphia. For his outstanding work in surgery he received the coveted F. A. C. S. degree. This is the Fellow of the American College of Surgery, a high monor bestowed upon a doctor for an outstanding work in surgery.

"Villanova is a school second to none in the country for a pre-med course," stated Dr. Toland. "The standard of ethics taught at Villanova are the same taught in any other Catholic college in the country. These standards should be carried on through Medical College and into the Profession. The doctor who is clean living and respectable with high ethical standards is the one who commands respect from his patients and the community at large."

Condemns Abortions

Dr. Toland condemned the vicious practices of "quack surgery" dealing mostly with abortions. This was explained to be murder in every sense of the word "as cold-blooded as any premeditated murder you would read about in the papers. However there are cases in which there is no other alternative and it is permissable with all codes of ethics to perform an abortion," stated Dr. Toland.

The regulations for operating in a Catholic hospital were read out by Dr. Toland. These included the definite listing of the operation to be performed and the rule that every patient undergoing an operation must be allowed to make his peace with God according to his religion. The regulation concerning the nature of the operation is to insure the hospital against illegal operations.

Dr. Toland spoke of many cases he has handled. He mentioned two cases, that he handled himself, in which cures were obtained through the medium of faith and prayer. These cases were serious in nature and the complete recovery almost immediate. He asserted that nothing he had done on his part had resulted in these apparent miracles.

"Birth control" was another subject Dr. Toland mentioned dealing intimately with Catholic Ethics. He told how various classes of people in trying circumstances felt as if they had to resort to birth control. He also mentioned those who without any serious reason resorted to various means of contraception. However he maintained that it was against every law of nature to practice birth control.

This dance is the initial social affair to be presented by the Science Fraternity during the current scholastic term. The society itself is composed of those pursuing medicine as their life objective. Membership to the organization is strictly limited.

many features being planned for the club.

In previous years ideas such as this were worked on by members of the year book staff but never were developed because of lack of interest. It is felt that there are many students here at Villanova who are hiding their talents in this field. All men who possess such talents are requested to make themselves known by attending the first meeting of the camera club in the Belle Air office, 51 Mendel Hall, next Friday.

Four Hundred Collegiate Couples Frolic as Frat Conducts "Owl Hop"

Amid a colorful Autumn atmosphere, Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, presented its annual Owl Hop in the Villanova field house last Friday night.

Sweet swing and sway syncopation was provided by Bert Passanante's Villanovans while approximately 400 collegiate couples danced in the softy lighted rustic setting.

Noticeable improvements were made on the amplification system which accentuated the quality of the vocal renditions by William Dobbins, Senior in the School of Arts.

Transforming the field house into a perfect Fall setting was another highlight of the affair. The usual ecru acoustic curtains were hung overhead with a huge pumpkin dangling from the uppermost point. Strewn around the side at different intervals and in the center of the floor were huge shocks of corn, adding a rural odor to the setting. Blue and White banners of previous Villanova classes were also draped in various places.

An original idea of the committee was the furnishing of the stage as a lounge illuminated by soft blue light. This provided a comfortable rendezvous during the brief intermissions.

Additional words of praise are in order for the band's popular arrangements of "My Reverie," "A Tisket-a-Tasket," "Change Partners and Dance" and other well-known song hits many of which were vocalized by Bill Dobbins and Maestro Passanant.

Mioway in the evening's entertainment, the previously announced surprise took place. The huge colorful pumpkin which was suspended for overhead was broken and hundreds of multi-colored, animated balloons were released. On the bottom of each one were two cardboard feet resembling the flat-foot floogie. The one who had the balloon with P. K. P. printed on the feet was entitled to a prize. After a mad scramble which resembled the staccato fire of a machine gun, Miss Mary Connor and her escort, Charles Carey of Philadelphia emerged with the lucky balloon. Before the entire crowd Miss Connor was presented with a beautiful compact.

Dancing continued until one o'clock when the sweet strains of the Villanovans' theme floated away into the brisk night air.

Another Owl Hop was finished and as was unanimously agreed, the best in many a year.

INSPECTION TRIPS CONTEMPLATED BY A. I. E. E. SOCIETY

John B. Gehman Addresses Group on Cathode Ray Tube

Numerous inspection trips were planned by the Villanova chapter of the American Institution of Electrical Engineers at their meeting held yesterday, Monday, October 2

Francis Mozzi, president of the organization, said that a trip was being contemplated to the Paoli yard of the Pennsylvania Railroad where the assembly plant for the multiple unit cars will be inspected. A trip to the Frankin Institute in Philadelphia will be made in the next week or two. The definite date has not yet been selected.

An interesting talk was presented at yesterday's meeting by John B. Gehman on the Cathode Ray Tube. He accompanied his lecture by demonstrating the points discussed.

Freshman and sophomore electrical engineers interested in joining this society were in attendance at the meeting conducted October 20 Details in regards to their participation in the affairs of the Villanova branch were pointed out to the prospective members.

Word has been received from the American Institute of Electrical Engineers headquarters that this year's annual convention will be held at Catholic University, Washington, D. C., on November 4 and 5. It is expected that Villanova will have several members in attendance at this convention.

ENCYCLICAL WILL BE DISCUSSED BY SOCIOLOGY SEMINAR

"Quadragesimo Anno" Basis of Future Discussions by Campus Group

Study of the encyclical of Pope Pius XI on the "Reconstruction of the Social Order" was chosen as the seasonal topic by the Sociology seminar at its initial meeting Monday evening, October 17.

Members agreed that the root of present day social problems lay in the frustrations occasioned by an unbalanced economic situation. "Quadrigesimo Anno" was chosen as the model upon which future discussion will be based not only for its Catholic viewpoint but for the clear, concise way in which the problem is presented. Later meetings will include a presentation of a specific phase of the encyclical and discussions as to its worth and applicability to present situations.

Various ramifications of the discussions will lead into debates on employee and employer relationships, just living wages, poverty, crime, and the international aspects of the problem as portrayed in Communism and Fascism.

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., moderator of the seminar, declared his intention to separarte the rather large group into two smaller divisions to facilitate discussion.

Next regular meeting of the Sociology seminar is scheduled for Monday evening, October 31, at 7:30 o'clock in room 214 Mendel. New members are cordially invited to attend.

AUGUSTIN GIORDANO NAMED CHAIRMAN OF RESEARCH SEMINAR

Senior Science Student Elected to Head Group for Ensuing Year

NEW MEMBERS SOLICITED

Convening for the first time in the present school year, the Research Seminar elected Augustin Giordano, senior in the School of Science, to the position of permanent chairmman. Giordano is also photography editor of the Mendel Bulletin, quarterly publication of the science department.

In the future meetings of the organization will be held on Thursday evenings, at 6:45 P .M., in the amphitheater of Mendel Hall. This change was necessitated so the seminar members will be free to attend the meetings of their fraternities.

Three papers were presented by members dealing with various phases of professional work. Sigmund Sxzlucha, of the freshman class, read a paper on "Chlorophyll. "The Use of Vinylite in Preserving Biological Specimens," was discussed by Bernard Singer, junior student. Chairman Giordano addressed the seminar on "The Reconstruction Models of Embryos."

Sole purpose of the seminar as explained by the new chairman is to excite student interest in problems of the research worker. To further incite this interest the students are urged to do original work and to report their findings at the meetings each week. Any of the science students who have not yet attended these meetings are urged to do so.

Since so many members of the science school have evidenced interest in the project all members are urged to make arrangements early for the presentation of papers to the group. Next week's convening will be addressed by three more members of the group. A paper on "X-Rays" will be delivered by Benedict Cusani, senior science student, Martin Kassell, also a senior, will address the group on the "Development of Intestinal Glands in the Chick" and the final paper, entitled "Adrenalin," will be presented by Albert Freed, of the freshman class.

Princeton Displays Powerful Offense With Bedford, Caney Leading Attack; Domenick, Lombardo, and McGurk Star For Losers

McMANUS TO McGURK NETS TOUCHDOWN

Unable to cope with a well-directed Princeton offensive in a bitterly fought contest last Friday afternoon, a fighting Villanova lightweight team went down to defeat 14-7.

The Blue and White line wilted under the hard charging backs of the Jersey lads and this fault eventually caused the loss. The Stoviak-coached boys, however, more than once maneuvered the ball into scoring position, only to give up possession on downs. Their big assignment of the afternoon was in stopping the flashy, shifty "Horrible" Hamid.

This snakehiped back seemingly advanced at will, completely ignoring the forward line of the Main Liners. In short, the Villanova boys lacked the great defensive powers which they displayed so well last week against the talented Rutgers eleven, whom they held to a scoreless tie.

Bedford Tallies

Early in the first period the Princeton lads threatened, advancing the ball deep into Villanova territory on line smashes with Hamid and Bedford toting the mail. With the pigskin resting on the nine-yard line Bedford, Tiger halfback, darted off-tackle to cross the last white stripe. Semple converted giving the Bengals a 7-0 lead.

Villanova showed a spark of scoring light when Timmins blocked a Tiger kick on the visitors' 40 and recovered on the 29. They lost the ball on downs, however, and once more turned their attention to the defense of their own goal line. The latter part of the second half was more or less

Temple Frosh Anxious to Avenge Last Season's 16-7 Defeat

Villanova's undefeated Frosh eleven will travel to Norristown to engage the powerful Temple University Freshmen in a night tilt under the arc-lights at Roosevelt field on October 27.

Villanova's cohorts, led by Worthington in their last tussle, will be gunning for their second win of the year and their fifth straight in two seasons. Although the Kittens will be fighting hard, Temple offers an impressive line-up and is not to be underrated as may be noted by their 13-0 victory over a good Albright squad.

Most impressive of the Owlet backs is Russel Carter who was largely responsible for the Temple victory in their preceeding frscas. Assisting Carter in his duties as halfback is big Jim McIntire, who,

By virute of their lop-sided victory, the Frosh aggregation have been successful in prolonging the winning streak started by last year's Kittens to four straight.

In place of Nick Basca, last year's freshman sensation, the Jacobsmen now have Worthington who was able to annex two tallies and place a kick through the uprights for a total of thirteen counters. McGonigale and Behot were the proud possessors of a score

Sparked by passing and kicking of Ed Palumbo, Detroit University's Titans threw a scare into Villanova's unbeaten Wildcasts before succumbing 13-6, in a bitter, hard-fought game Sunday afternoon at Shibe Park, before 25,000 fans.

Though out-passed, out-gained and out-kicked, the 'Cats showed they had the stuff when they shook Nick Basca loose for a 60-yard touchdown jaunt in the second period and again as they blocked down-field for Matt Kuber when he scored on an interception in the third.

The first quarter was a battle of two great lines as they shot play after play into the line in the process of feeling each other out. The Titans ripped up the 'Cat line for three first downs. With the ball on the Villanova 41 the period ended. Detroit inserted a whole new team.

Basca Scores

On the first play of the second quarter Nick Basca sliced off left tackle for 60 yards and pay dirt. He had perfect blocking all the way. Johnny Wysocki converted and the score read 7-0.

Wysocki kicked off to Polumbo who returned 25 yards to his own 35. Villanova started to climb all over little Palumbo as he kept dropping back to heave short ones over the center of the line. Perriera broke through and flattened Palumbo as he tried another pass.

The game then resolved itself into a punting duel. Palumbo was sensational as he dropped coffin-corner punts out on the 1-, 3- and 4-yard lines. The period ended as McMahon was dragged down without a gain on an attempted sweep around the Detroit end.

The second half was eight plays

Gamecocks, On Rebound From Clemson Loss, Loom As Threat To Blue Success

"Clipper" Smith takes his Villanova Wildcats down to sunny Dixieland this Friday to meet the "Gamecocks" of South Carolina in the feature attraction of the Orangeburg State Fair. The game will be played under the arclights at Orangeburg's massive stadium.

It's a new deal for the Carolinans this year on the gridiron. They have scrapped the Warner system of football, which was unsuccessful in the past few seasons, and installed the Rockne system, under the tutelage of one of Rockne's greatest pupils, Rex Enright.

Coach Understudied Layden

Rex comes to the "Gamecocks" from the University of Georgia, where he was assistant to Head Coach Harry Mehre for several years. He graduated from Notre Dame in 1926, after winning All-Western honors as Rockne's fullback in the '25 campaign. Before ascending to the heights in 1925, Enright was an understudy to Elmer Layden, fullback of the famous "Four Horsemen."

After graduation from the Notre Dame school of Law, Rex embarked on his very successful coaching career. His first job was at the University of North Carolina. He mentored there for four seasons and then left for the University of Georgia, where he remained until last January. South Carolina needed a first rate coach so their Athletic Council chose Rex Enright. That the choice was an excellent one has been proven by Rex's record with the 1938 "Gamecocks."

The Garnet and Black was expected to be the "weak sister" of the Southern Football Conference this year, but that feeling was quickly dispelled by the showing of the Carolinans in their first few games.

An amazed Erskine University eleven was the first foe for the renovated Dixie-landers. Fifty-three to nothing was the final score as the fans went home raving about their "miracle man," Rex Enright!

After Erskine came Ohio's vaunted Xavier Univeristy team. The "Gamecocks" again showed their prowess and returned to Columbia, South Carolina with another victory under their belts. One of the South's most powerful representatives came to meet the Garnet & Black in the next contest. After a close, thrilling battle the Georgia Bulldogs eked out a narrow victory over the "Gamecocks" by the margin of an extra-point.

Wake Forest's "Demon Deacons" took the cue from Georgia and also stopped the Enrightmen by a one-point margin. Boiling mad from these two heart-breakers the Carolinans opened up their big guns against the Davidson "Wildcats" and, after pushing the "Davids" over Sumpter Stadium, the "Gamecocks" went back to Columbia with a 25-0 win on their record. Last Thursday the South Carolinans met their ancient rival, Clemson University, and bowed to superior manpower after one of the most grueling battles ever waged on a Southern gridiron. The Associated Press attributes the "Gamecocks" reverse to an overdose of bad "breaks."

Defeat Primes Southerners

Thus the Southerners come up with "blood in their eyes" for the Villanova game. The defeat by Clemson is believed by many to mean that Rex Enright's gladiators will snap into near-perfect form for their meeting with the "Wildcats." After meeting Villanova the "Gamecocks" meet, among others, Duquesne and Fordham Universities. Quite an impressive schedule!

As far as theis department is concerned there is hardly any foundation for such a statement. But, inasmuch as it is present we'll have to deal with it. There is no doubt that the Detroit Titans outplayed the Wildcats and were knocking at their goal more than once during the afternoon.

X-COUNTRY TEAM AWAITS OPENER

Veteran Track Stars to Meet Strong Opponents Soon

For the past three weeks "Jumbo Jim" Elliot's cross-country outfit has been rounding into shape for the 1938 campaign. Although no meets are definite as yet, Coach Elliot has several engagements under consideration. Among them is a meet with the always strong runners from New York University.

Haverford College is also tentatively listed on the Blue and White schedule. If th present plans are carried out it is probable that the meet with the Haverford collegians will be held early in November, on or about the tenth of the month.

Harriers Out Three Weeks

The tracksters have been practicing for about three weeks under Elliot's guidance. Most of the practice has consisted in the long and arduous gallop around the Villanova one hundred and fifty acre campus. This drill has been held almost daily and it has done much to bring the Wildcat runners into the peak of condition.

Fleet Tom Delate, a senior from New Jersey, and Tommy McCabe, another Jersey lass, are the pace-

SWISH!!! That or some similar sound was produced on the past Tuesday afternoon when, after six minutes of play, Dan Keating sank a high shot from the middle of the floor to score the first points of the intramural basketball season. One minute later "Bud" O'Connell, formerly of Fedigan, garnered a basket for the C. & F. team to tie the game.

From there the C. & F. outfit forged ahead until they led the Mendel Day-Hops by a 17-14 count at the half. In the second half, however, the teamwork for which the Mendel quintet has always been noted began to click; and in the end they came through to win by a narrow 30-28 margin.

O'Connell Stars

O'Connell was the star of the fray from any angle. Not only did he lead both teams in scoring with 16 markers, but he held Keating to a mere three baskets—quite a feat in itself. Corr, Depersio, and Dalina also chalked up totals of six points.

The official opening of the season took place on Tuesday evening. Father McKee tossed up the first ball and a few seconds later Vic Sandor made the first point—a free throw. Sandor also scored the first field goal and thereafter Fedigan was never headed. From an 11-5 count at the half they climed steadily into a 31-24 victory. Meido LoBalbo sparked the Gigolos attack by gathering 10 markers while for Austin Ralph Fioretti with 8 and Carl Pantaleo with 7 points led the scoring.

Frosh Teams Clash

Next came the game of the year. The first game between the Freshman dorms is always interesting, but seldom—if ever—has anything like this been seen. The game resembled a battle royal more than it did a basketball game, but a good time was had by all and no harm was done.

The Frosh even had cheering sections to spur them on; and amid the resultant tumult, the Mendel team took the measure of the Alumni Greenies to the tune of 35-28. Highlights of the game from a basketball standpoint were the zone defense employed by Fr. Dunne's Alumni aggregation and the offensive work of Crumb of Mendel.

On Thursday afternoon, the old gym was the scene of more activity when the Austinites engaged and defeated the C. & F. team, George Flood, making his first appearance in a blue uniform, rendered a good account of himself by looping in four baskets to tie "Red" Looney in scoring 8 points. Gerry Lynam led the commuters with six markers.

Fedigan Routs Skytoppers

In the evening the Fedigan crew put on a remarkable exhibition when they rolled up a total of 61 points against the hapless Mendel Resident quintet. The Frosh did not do so badly, however, for they did manage to garner 35 points themselves. This total of 99 points in one intramural game looks like some kind of a record—and it may be. Tex Connors and Bob Keeler tossed in 14 points each to lead the Fedigan avalanche, while "Buzz" Hart reached a total of 12. Bob Donovan contributed three field goals to the Mendel cause and thereby led his team's point earners.

Dan Dalina and Dan Keating paced the Mendel Day-Hops to a 40-31 win over the Greenies in the last game of the week. The Alumni lads, still employing a zone defense, put up a strong fight against a very good Day-Hop gang and were trailing by only three points at the half.

The commuters then got busy and began ringing up baskets until they led by 10 markers. Muench and Funabashi led the Green with 9 and 7 points respectively.

leaders. Larry Craig, a 200-pound possible All-American, is the pride of every Southerner. He hails from Six-Mile, a little hamlet in South Carolina, and he has lived up to his hometown's name by paving the way for many "Gamecock" six-pointers in his three years at the University. Southern sportsmen rate him better than All-American Gaynell Tinsley, who starred for Louisiana State a few years back. Besides being captain of the gridmen, Larry also stars for the South Carolina track team.

"Gamecock" Line Tough

"Pop" Howell, the other co-captin, is 205 pounds of the fastest and toughest tackle in the South. A six foot, two inch giant, he is the mainstay and guiding force of the South Carolina line. "Pop's" specialty is breaking up opponent's plays before they start and he has proved very adept at it this Fall, as well as his other two seasons on the varsity eleven.

"Pop's" running mate at the tackle shot is Jack Dorffinger, another two-hundred pounder for the Garnet. He hails from Orange, New Jersey, but when college-picking time came he chose the sunny South. Others who keep Coach Enright smiling when tackles are mentioned, are Irv Granoff and Al Bretz. Granoff is from Brooklyn, New York.

Behind Captain Craig at end are a flock of top-notch terminal protectors. Stan Nowak holds down the left-end post because of his speed under punts and his ball-hawking ability. Frank Urban and Glenn Meyers, a Toledo resident, are Enrights leading replacements. Stan Nowak is one of the horde of sterling sophomores on Enright's squad. Last year's South Carolina frosh went through a five game schedule undefeated, untied and uncored upon!

Wally Craig and "Bull" Durham hold the guard posts, both are seniors. At center is another sensational sophomore, Alex Urban, a six foot, five inch giant from Ohio.

Well Balanced Backfield

The backfield has almost everything, DeWitt Arrowsmith, a soph, is the leading signal-caller. Ed Clary, second leading scorer in the Southeastern conference is the right halfback. At fullback is Jack Henson, a powerful line-plunger and a first-rate blocker. Left halfback is well filled by Al Grygo, a Pennsylvanian. Last year he was the leading scorer of the Frosh eleven. Chief backfield replacement is a sophomore from Philadelphia, Joe Grugan.

In past games with the "Game cocks" Villanova elevens have usually came out on top. The series stands three to one, in favor of the Villanovans.

able outfit as Gus Dorais put out on the gridiron? Under the conditions that the Smithmen found themselves, to our contention, they played the only type of game that was possible, to insure victory.

Striking early in the contest the Blue really clicked on a play which set "Nickels" Basca free on a 60-yard run. When Wysocki converted and later kicked off to the Titans, the 'Cats didn't go on the defensive because they wanted to, but rather because they were forced to by one of the greatest backs to ever face the Blue.

Kicking beautifully and very accurately, not once, not twice, but thrice did Palumbo drive the 'Cats deep in their territory with coffin corner kicks on the one, three and four-yard lines.

Could the 'Cats open up their bag of tricks in such a position, the answer is quite obvious. Let us assume this attitude then. Be grateful that Villanova emerged victorious in a contest which would have tried the resourcefulness of any great grid-combination.

Basketball Sidelights

IT SEEMS that Villanova basketball fans, students, professors and outsiders, are predicting a perfect season. They take this assumption from last year's fine record and the fact that nary a man has been lost through graduation. Let us caution them—dividends are paid on games actually won and not on just predicted results.

"Senioritis" and "Egoitis" are two detrimental diseases of athletes which a coach fears most. An athlete unconsciously takes on a superiority attitude and has a tendency to coast along on past performances. It is wise for each man to examine himself before he has gone too far.

As an example we give you the 1936-37 Duquesne Basketball team, who were rated as one of the best in the East. The team on the whole was composed of Seniors and the always present Sophomore stars led by the All-American Center, Kweller. Riding the crest of the last years reputation, the team came to Philadelphia to play Villanova in what they considered a warm up game. Villanova, composed of three ambitious sophomores and two seniors defeated them to the score of 32-20. To the experts this was an upset, but when Duquesne continued to lose games, the experts diagosed the case as over-confidence.

It is interesting to note that Villanova has been invited to play C. C. N. Y. in a basketball twin-bill at the Madison Square Garden in New York City, on Wednesday, March 1, 1939. It will be the feature attraction with New York University and Temple playing the opening game.

With the opening of formal practice last week, Montgomery, Krutulis, Dubino and Vigilante are on the last leg of their college basketball careers. The quartet has played together since their freshmen year and so far leave a fine record behind them. For the past three years they have taken part in 41 victories and only 13 defeats. They are all looking forward, with the greatest care, to a successful 1938-39 basketball season.

Illinois and Kentucky Universities will be newcomers to the Villanova Schedule. Both games are to be played at the Convention Hall in Philadelphia. Unfortunately the Illinois encounter will take place during the Christmas holidays when most of the students are enjoying a much needed rest.

INTRA-MURAL—Father McKee, who take his intra-mural basketball seriously, had to sit back and watch his former stars, Sandor, Buchetto and LoBalbo aid Fedigan in beating his present conglormeration of basketball players.

On Detroit

Putting it tersely we didnt have much to do about what was happening out there Sunday. I believe that the kicking and passing shown by Detroit this year was the best shown in the three years I have been at Villanova.

Detroit really outplayed us but the funny thing is that the winner is always the team which has the most points when the ball-game is over. I saw Sid Luckman of Columbia, and Sammy Baugh, when at Texas Christian he played against my Santa Clara team, but I believe that this Detroit halfback, Ed Palumbo, surpasses both of these stars, not only in passing, but also in kicking.

We threw only one pass in the entire game. The reason for this is obvious. A pass interception by Detroit might have put us on a bad spot and could have meant the game. We plied up our seven points early in the second quarter and then fell back on the defensive for most of the remaining three periods.

Individually our whole team played a good ball game. Particularly John Wysocki, Matty Kuber, and Dave Di Filippo. Wysocki played his usual whale of a game and was a large factor in our goal-line stands. Matty Kuber and Dave Di Filippo played headsup football in the middle of our line. The work of both was almost flawless.

The play on which Basca scored in the second period was near perfect. The whole team co-ordinated in setting Nick loose on his dash.

As for our backs I thought that their pass defense was very good considering the brilliance of Detroit's passing attack. Very few of their passes inflicted much damage on us. The two passes on which interference was called put us in a tight spot, but that is the break of the game.

Our defense on Detroit's ground attack was hampered by the constant threat of their pass weapon. It was better to allow a slight gain through the line than to take a chance on a pass completion resulting in a touchdown for Detroit.

We feel that we were fortunate in winning and we figure that we have gained a lot of invaluable experience in the game. We fought hard and I thought that the spirit we showed in those goal-line stands was wonderful.

of a "see - saw" affair, with both teams getting nowhere fast, the half ended, Villanova 0, Princeton 7.

Third quarter opened with a sudden attack by the "little Tigers" and before the band could get organized to give melodious assistance to thir squad, Princeton had pushed through the Villanova line till they reached the 15-yard marker. Then on a well executed end run, Coyle, the Tiger fullback, trotted unmolested into the end zone for the visitors' second sextet of counters. Sempie again converted.

Hope was suddenly stirred in the hearts of the saddened studen's when late in the third quarter, Dominic dashed into a pile-up and recovered a fumble on the Princeton 25. A few plays later on a spinner play, Brad McManus hurled an aerial to McGurk, who swiftly journeyed into the promised land of the gridiron "touchdown heaven." Galloping "Guy" Lombardo, galloped up to the ball and converted the extra point.

Trailing by a score of 14-7 with a full quarter to score, the Villanova lightweights reversed their mode of play. They completed passes for short gains and their line held. But the best they could do was to hold the visitors on an even basis.

In the Sportlight

THE Christmas package came five days early at the Buckley household in Baltimer, Md., that momentous year of 1915. Bob was the big surprise, and very welcome too, as are all embyro football players.

Before he could even say his first word he was moved to Wilmington, Del., and there he lived with his grandmother for the rest of his childhood. Naturally he took a look-in at the local school and liked it so much he decided to remain in attendance for eight years. When Bob looks back over these years he recalls nothing especially outstanding in the way of athletics.

Most Valuable Athlete

After he moved, however, to Asbury Park, N. J. and entered high school, he came into his own in the way of sports. He went to St. James High School for four years, and turned out to be a three-letter man and the winner in his Senior year of the award for the most valuable athlete. For the entire four years he was a member of the baseball team.

At shortstop and third base he was always dependable, while at the same time he was clean-up man in the batting order. At one point in the season of his last year the team was short of pitchers so the coach was overjoyed when he sent Bob on the mound against Summit High School and saw our athlete strike out seventeen men in seven innings for a new school record. Incidentally he pitched a few more games for his team and was never beaten.

As a basketball player he was a guard for two years. He also has a distinctive record for his school in this sport, for in the State tournament he had four personal fouls in three minutes.

Grid Captain as a Senior

But his biggest thrills in high school were a part of his football career. For three years he played fullback and finally won all-county recognition in his fourth year. As captain and the team's outstanding passer he caught the eye of Ed Gallagher, former All-American tackle at W. & J., who saw his possibilities and who then dropped a line to Bob Reagan, Stuhldreher's assistant.

In response to Bob Reagan's invitation the Sultan visited Villanova and saw the college in all the enticements of Spring time. That, together with a little pressure from Stuhlie made Bob decide to give up his professional baseball offers and enter Villanova.

As a Freshman, Bob was right halfback on a team that played no games. But in baseball he did see some action against other colleges as a left fielder. His batting average for the year was over .400. During this year at Villanova "Buck" also won all his fights as the heavyweight member of the boxing team.

During his sophomore year Buckley was overshadowed by the steady Ray Stoviak. He saw lots of action, however, and in the Temple game that Villanova lost that year, he took part in that last futile assault on the Owl goal line.

As a Junior he was switched to left end. He quickly found himself in this new position and played in every game. Bob played next to Bill Cochrane and helped him block the kick in the final quarter of the Temple game last year.

Switched to Tackle

So far this year our athlete has been playing right tackle and doing a right good job. He feels at home on the line and only hopes that he has a good year. The biggest thrill for him this year was captaining the team against Muhlenberg.

As to the toughest game he has ever played in, "Buck" ranks the Detroit game of last year at the head of his list.

His selection as the best college football player that he has seen is Johnny Mellus.

The biggest kick Bob ever had out of a game was the incident that occurred in the Manhattan game, when Rizzo weaved through the whole Jasper team on a 45-yard sprint to the goal line that made the officials think it was Raimo carrying the ball.

Likes Kay Kyser

Bob's favorite palate pleaser is fried chicken done Southern style. His favorite band is Kay Kyser's, but he likes to dance at any time.

For his hobby Bob divides his time between deep sea fishing and golf. But his biggest interest is Asbury Park where he has had a weight-guessing concession for the past three years.

As to his future intentions, he seems to have breathed in the atmosphere of an amusement park too much because his only reply to the question, "What do you intend to do when you get out," is: "Amusement."

although not a regular, showed great promise in the Albright game. His 200 pounds are to be reckoned with in the forthcoming fray at the right halfback post where his hard running will be felt.

The Kittens will rely on "Freckles" Donaghue, Worthington and Behot, to stem the tide of these dreadnaughts from the Broad St. institution. Donaghue, former captain of Northeast Catholic High, will fill in at the center post while Behot and Worthington will strengthen the secondary.

The Templers Brain Trust has forecasted a win as have the Villanova coaching moguls. However, the Kitten high command has gone the Temple board of strategy one better by prophesying an undefeated campaign and are well on the way toward attaining this end. With athletes of the calibre of Carter, McIntire, and Ponasic for the Owlets and Donaghue, Worthington and Behot on the home club an interesting and close fracas can be sagely predicted.

old when formidable Matt Kuber intercepted Ghesquiere's forward pass on the 'Cat's 35 and galloped over the goal line. All-American Johnny Wysocki cut down the last man between Kuber and the goal line. Wysocki missed the conversion. Wysocki kicked off to Halpin who returned the ball 25 yards to his own 32.

Detroit, in two plays, made it first down on their own 45. Ghesquiere picked up nine off tackle, but lost three when Kuber broke through. Halpin fumbled and big Andy Chisick recovered for the 'Cats.

Johnny Wysocki was stopped for no gain on an end around. Basca made it a first down on the Detroit 42 when he slid off tackle. Nick was stopped for no gain and then picked up eight yards on a cut back on the right. Buck kicked. Detroit ran three plays into the line and kicked over the line as the period ended. Detroit sent in a new team.

Rizond Recovers for Titans

The 'Cats put the ball into play on their own 20, McMahon got one yard on a buck. Basca tried to quick kick and it was partially blocked by Nienstedt and Rzond. Rzond recovered for the Titans on the 'Cat 30.

Palumbo whipped a 12-yard pass to the great Detroit end, McMillan; that put the ball on the 'Cat 18. Palumbo tried two in a row that were both grounded. McMillan cut from right to left and Palumbo dumped one into his hands over the goal line. Coyro missed the try for extra point.

Wildcats Hold

The Titans smelled blood and tried desperately to even the score up in a tense fourth quarter. Time after time Palumbo shot long ones through the air, but the Cats had them figured out by this time and their defense was airtight.

Villanova's hopes of beating their rivals by two touchdowns was almost realized when Jerry Neri intercepted Palumbo's pass and ran 50 yards for a six-pointer. However the officials ruled Villanova off sides on the play and the score was recalled.

On the next play the Titans again took to the air but their efforts were in vain as the Wildcats' alertness nullified every attempt that the visitors chanced. The game ended with the ball resting on the 40 in possession of Detroit.

Intra-mural basketball games scheduled for Thursday will be played Wednesday. This change has been made so that students will be able to witness the Villanova-Temple Frosh game to be played Thursday night at Roosevelt Field, Norristown.

setters of Elliott's aggregation. Both are veteran trackmen. Coach Elliott finds little to choose between the two men, as they are both past-masters at their art.

Dobbins Reports

Barney Tellew and Bill Guiteras, both from North Catholic High in Philly, are right on the heels of Delate and McCabe. Both are middle-distance men on Elliott's track team. Bill Dobbins, the singing senior from Brooklyn, is also showing up well in the daily drills.

apiece with Behot garnering an extra point from placement.

Worthington scoring the first touchdown for the Villanova first year club was ably assisted by good blocking. Aiding on both defense and offense with his good line-backing and ball passing from the pivot spot, "Freckles" Donaghue is fast becoming a fine prospect along with Worthington, Behot, and several other first year stalwarts.

Living up to the expectations of the coaching body the Kittens were easy winners over the duPont cohorts as may be noted by the fact that every man was entered into the fracas. Although the Freshmen mentor, "Doc" Jacobs could not be present at the tilt, the team was superbly handled by a former varsity man, Ray Stoviak, coach of the one-fifties.

HERE and THERE

By BILL SINNOTT

A MESSAGE TO:

Bill Dooly: Thank you, Bill Dooly, for your spirited defense of Villanova College in your Record column. Despite adverse criticism you have taken a stand that we at Villanov. took a long time ago. We appreciate your effort, though it's our opinion that your shouts will fall on deaf ears. Responses to your statements from Philadelphians seem to indicate that Villanova is to be frowned on by Penn and Temple adherents. Why, we don't profess to know.

Bill Sinnott

We agree heartily with your declaration that Villanova is the best in this section and possibly the best in the country. You are not alone in this contention. Many topnotch sports writers concur, among them the Times' John Kieran. Our chief regret is that we cannot spare you the acerbity of dissenters. We feel this animosity, too. We'd like to explain it, but can't.

Editor of Football Magazine: Villanova College is in Villanova, Pennsylvania—not Pittsburgh. We are not contending with Pitt for the championship of the Smokey City.

Mrs. Tommy Lovett: Your sweater is still our good luck piece. The chairman of the Student Council takes the sweater to each game with the hope that the results of the game will be the same as when you wore it. It has yet to lose one for us.

The Halls on the Campus: The Temple game is not far off. It's time that preparations were made for the Inter-hall competition for the Connelly plaque Fedigan Hall holds the plaque as a result of a "mad russians" genius last year.

Austin Hall Firemen: Buy a shower curtain or something to hang around that 'phone. There's no privavy at all since they took out the booth. Riley, Mackowski, Mawby, and a few others can't get any communiques through to Rosemont. (Haynes will carry the mail over, boys. Old Reliable.)

Bud Lawrence: I won't say a word about it. Unless.....

Tom Haynes: Why don't you try the Glee Club? You seem to be running out of information. Small talk, small people. You know someone might pay attention if you were in the Glee Club. The audience is forced to listen. I'd rite what I know about that Norristown sidetrack you ran into, but it's too petty and small. Wouldn't interest anyone. George Flood was out the night you weren't. Satisfied?

SAFETY MEASURES LISTED BY PORTER

Practical Suggestions Offered to Motorists For Winter Driving

From Evanstone, recognized by safety authorities as the safest city in the world, today came "Winter's Seven Safety Suggestions" for motorists.

Judge Harry H. Porter, chief justice of municipal court and president of the Safe Winter Driving League, listed practical safety measures for coming blizzards as follows:

1. Test brakes for simultaneous gripping.

2. Check condition of windshield wiper, defroster and tire chains.

3. Travel at less than moderate speeds on snow or ice covered highways or city streets and watch for children on sleds.

4. Shift into second gear for more gradual braking on snow or ice, particularly if not safeguarded by tire chains.

5. Take curves slowly and don't try to pass cars ahead of you on hills or curves. Descend steep hills in second gear if icy.

6. Apply brakes with clutch engaged and before you ordinarily would in dry weather—and don't depend on your horn because other car windows may be closed and some drivers (especially in country) wear ear muffs.

7. Exercise greater caution generally and open car windows occasionally to prevent windows fogging up and, in old cars, possible danger from carbon monoxide gas.

Remember: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Freddie Bartholomew Has Ambitions of Portraying "Kim", "Hamlet";Selects "Ivy League" Institutions

By LEN FLINKMAN

ED. NOTE:—This is the second of a series of interviews by Len Flinkman, former editor of "Varieties."

Last week the Honorable Sir Winston Churchill advocated the acquisition of a new foreign policy for the United States, to wit: "England expects every American to do his duty. . ." He has something there!

It took approximately two hours, no more—and little effort, to convince me that he was correct.

How? It was a typical young man with a rapidly diminishing English accent, a rabid football enthusiast, a swell guy that answers to the call of Freddie. Righto—Freddie Bartholomew.

"Hiyah, Freddie?" "Hiyah, Len?" and then we were off for the most enthusiastic period of time that this writer has had in many an Autumn spell. He politely towers five-feet-six, has an unassuming personality, and is a fellow that any partner would say "is in the groove." He possesses all the prerequisites for a real scout—eyes for the lovelorn, rapid chatter, a "V" shaped build and an adoration for his charming Aunt Cissie. Could one expect more. No. Well, get ready to take off your hat.

The premier question, as usual, was "Where were you Born?" And Freddie astutely answered "London, in a suburb called Warminster." And then came the unfolding of an adventurous tale.

It was a few years back that he came here with his Aunt to try his skill in the cinema. Neither he nor his Aunt have regretted that boat ride. So impressed are they with his success and their liking of the U. S. A., that it will be a long time before they return—even for a visit.

The story runs something like this. M. G. M. was searching for a youngster with an English accent to portray the role of David Copperfield, and until the arrival of the boat no contender had received acceptance. Aunt Cissie learned of this and, aware of Freddie's qualities, she rushed to Hollywood. The shoe fit.

David Copperfield was his first try, his first trump card. The remaining hand was played well. Acting is a sixth sense with Freddie. He's been at it since he was a boy of three in London where he performed for charity with recitations and dramatic monologues. Now he is looking forward to his next picture, the pinacle of his ambition, "Kim." Arrangements are in the making and as soon as he finishes his personal appearance tour they will be completed.

When Freddie reaches that eligible age, only a year off, he wants to attend college, and a college right here in the East, probably Yale or Princeton, "Anyone that has a swell football team."

"So your choice is an Ivy League College, Fred?"

"A what? Oh, an Ivy League College. Yes, that's what they call it, don't they?"

During the interview Freddie was called out for a moment, Mr. Cooper and I being left together. Conversation immediately turned to the young Bartholomew. They were revealing minutes. "You know, Fred is at that certain age now," advised his tutor, "where popping off pistols, driving his Aunt's car (he has a license you know), and that infernal game of his, football, mean more to him than anything else. "I believe," he continued, "that this sissy business concerning Freddie is all due to misunderstanding. He's a typical boy, really he is. The public is accustomed to seeing him in Buster Brown collar-roles and it does not reflect his real virtues, especially in comparison with Mickey Rooney.

And his tutor's reflections were accurate. Freddie and Mickey are best of friends. Football is their common link. In fact, both of them have a team on the M. G. M. lot called the "Westwood Terriers," and what a team!

Later, upon his return, I asked Freddie if he liked touch football. "Touch football! Heck no! Tackle! Yes, I have received a few injuries, but they were all minor." Freddie is not as old as Mickey and has not as yet fully acquired that air and tone that every American boy has. But, he's one fellow any back-yard sport would be proud to claim.

He has definitely chosen his career—the legitimate stage and in due time, plus ample experience, Freddie says, "I want to portray Hamlet—that's my ambition." But in interim comedy and drama, he believes, on the stage, will be of valuable experience to him.

Freddie accomplishes much in his spare time. He has no fancy for "sweet swing" nor for Hal Kemp and his style. He likes Louis Armstrong and Benny Goodman and is fond of watching the jitterbugs. "Yes, I do dance, not as a jitterbug, I like to watch them, but that is the extent of swing music with me."

"Freddie, do you have any girl friends?"

"No, I don't have any yet."

"Well, how about Judy Garland?"

"It was a pleasure to work with her in 'Listen Darling,' I enjoyed it very much, she's a sweet girl."

On these answers he seemed somewhat bewildered, exhibiting neutral emotion, probably due to lack of experience with feminine guiles—yet they were manly and straightforward.

"That infernal football," chimed in his tutor, "takes up that time."

"How does it feel to see your name in lights, Freddie?" And with a perplexed reply, "Swell." It hasn't gone to his head.

Here we have a boy born of foreign heritage being rapidly naturalized to American customs, slang and tactics. He doesnt want to return to England, back to Oxford or Cambridge, but wishes to remain here to natriculate in one of our higher institutions of learning, to keep his American friends.

So, Mr. Churchill, you're right. Keep Freddie here as Ambassador, and you can expect every American to do his duty—admonish him.

"Check Everything but the Chesterfields"

You'll find smokers everywhere keeping Chesterfields with them all day long. They add to your pleasure when you're on the job and when you take a night off.

It takes good things to make a good product. That's why we use the best ingredients a cigarette can have —mild ripe tobaccos and pure cigarette paper—to make Chesterfield the cigarette that smokers say is milder and better-tasting.

They Satisfy ..with MORE PLEASURE for millions

HEIDT INVITES VILLANOVA TO RALLY

Science Frat To Present Annual Informal Dance

College Field House Scene of Lambda Kappa Delta Social; "Villanovans" Supply Rhythms For Collegiate "Hop" Friday

With the advent of the first Friday of November the Lambda Kappa Delta science fraternity will sponsor the final informal dance of the present scholastic year. Italo DeBartolomeis, chairman of this Annual Fall Dance, realizing the position of epilogue this affair holds to the sport-dancing season, intends to stress the collegiate spirit in the decorative program.

The chairman and his newly-confirmed committee of nine will collaborate in the preparations for this. Those on the committee follow: Carl Pantaleo, '39; Lawrence Knaphle, '39; Benedict Cusani, '39; Bernard Bellew, '40; Harry Taylor, '40; Francis Thomas, '40; John Eldracher, '41; Joseph Clarken, '41, and Robert Kiley, '41.

Banners or pennants of nearly every conceivable college in the country will be adroitly arranged in the Villanova Field House against the background of the acoustic curtains to create an atmosphere of informality and sociability. Through such a procedure it is hoped that the true nature of the informal dance will be thrown into bold relief. The emphasized collegiate nature of the hop should inject into it the feeling of freedom and easiness which is almost totally lacking in formal socials. Besides being appealing to the eye the decorations should carry this psychological effect of absolute adaptability to the scene with them.

This Annual Fall Dance by the science fraternity sounds the knell to informal dances for the 1938-39 season. All dances during the remainder of the year will be formal. Thus, DeBartolomeis is planning to make of this hop a composite of the best that Villanova has offered so far during the semester in like affairs. Being in a position of retrospect he with his committee intends to glean the outstanding features of the former informal socials and intersperse them with original ideas ,such as that mentioned for

SENIORS TO OBTAIN PROOFS THIS WEEK

Notices Will be Posted Relative to Securing Photographs

Announcement was made recently by Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., moderator, to the effect that proofs of the senior Belle-Air photographs will be distributed throughout the week.

Work on the annual publication is well under way. At present time the entire staff is engaged in composing the individual write-ups procuring ads and patrons, and attempting to organize a novel set-up for the 1938-39 issue. It is the opinion of the editors that with the co-operation now in effect the Belle-Air is in a position to attain the All-American rating this year.

Fr. Falvey also asks that all officers of the various student organizations report to the Belle-Air office in room 51, Mendel hall, as soon this week as is convenient. Pictures of the activities of members of these societies are desired for publication. Officers are also asked to have a detailed account of the proposed program for the coming year.

Notices will be posted relative to the procuring of the senior proofs as soon as they are available. All seniors having paid the required deposit are eligible to receive these photographs.

RISE OF DICTATORS SUBJECT DISCUSSED BY HISTORY GROUP

Reason for Growth Determined at Weekly Gathering of Campus Organization

STUDENTS SHOW INTEREST

"Dictators and Dictatorship" was dicussed by students attending the History Seminar last Thursday when it convened in the Mendel Reception room under the direction of Harold F. Hartman, Ph. D.

It was the primary purpose of the seminar to determine at this session why the dictators of Europe had been successful in their early careers. After intense discussion it was concluded that "before any dictator could arise in a country there must be an emergency either real or fictitious."

Members of the History Seminar stated that the conclusion reached "must not be interpreted as an attempt to belittle the intelligence of the dictators themselves as this and other character attributes are also of importance."

Dictators Not New

Dr. Hartman pointed out that the dictatorial governments of Europe in the present decade have had historical precedents. He mentioned that there were dictators before the time of Christ, and in more recent times Cromwell and Napoleon have held prominent dictatorial positions.

The supposition was advanced by the Seminar "that man must use his intelligence to take advantage of such an opportunity that may be presented by a national emergency. The attitude of the people in regard to dictatorial government is another topic worthy of consideration."

During the coure of the meeting the policies of France and Germany were examined as to poltical, social and economic conditions so that reasons might be found to ex-

ROSEMONT COLLEGE APPEARS IN MASQUE DRAMATIC PROGRAM

Local Thespians to Present One-Act Plays Thursday Evening

STUDENTS, FRIENDS ASKED TO ATTEND INITIAL SOCIAL

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., Appointed Speech Arts Moderator

A series of dramatic programs sponsored co-operatively by Catholic colleges in this vicinity will initiate its season Thursday evening, at 8:30, when a program of one-act plays will be presented by the Jest and Gesture Club of Rosemont College and the Belle Masque Society of Villanova College. As Villanova is among the prime backers of the movement ,the cycle will start in the local gymnasium-theater where Villanova students will play host to visiting members of other participating institutions.

Reciprocally, Villanova students will be welcomed to other auditoriums as the movement gathers momentum. The activities will be held on a different campus each time. An effort is being made to have one such event arranged for each week. Actors and actresses with their stock of plays will make a circuit of the member colleges, all of the associated collegiate dramatic societies being represented on each program.

A conference of the faculty representatives of the schools will be held this afternoon at the College of Chestnut Hill. Among those expected to attend are Miss Ruth Haskell, of Rosemont; Sr. M. Donatus, I. H .M., of Immaculata; Mr. Joseph Sprissler, of La Salle College; Fr. Parsons, S. J., of St. Joseph's College; Miss Marion Gow, of Chestnut Hill, and Mr. Anthony J. Frayne, of Villanova.

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., has been appointed moderator of extra-curricular speech arts, succeeding Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., whose accumulating duties, chief among which may be mentioned those in connection with his office as chaplain, forbid his continuance in the capacity of spiritual director of these fraternities: the Beta Gamma, varsity debating so-

"Hoot Mon!" She's A Bonnie Scotch Lass With A Rare Highland Brogue

By LEN FLINKMAN

Callender, Ontario, makes vaudeville news this week with a sister act, billed simply as the Dionne Quintuplets whose song, dance and comedy are the highlights of the photoplay, "Five of a Kind, at the Earle Theater. A "Quintuplet Feature" for a single admission. But this column reveled in a single worth the price of five any day.

Hoot, Mon, Scotch gusto, and a Hollywood celebrity she is!

It all goes back to one early misty morning in the highlands of Scotland, Glascow exactly, on the sixth of March, one year prior to the "declaration of belligerency" to civilization, the "World War" to this generation, and 1913 to Ella Logan.

Has Fascinating Brogue

We saw no kilts in the closet; no bag-pipes in the corner; no Scotch landscapes on the wall; no, not even a bottle of Scotch. A semblance, yes, of brogue fascinating to the ear. And of beauty—the best we've seen since Harry Lauder conquered this country with his legions of drollery.

For a bonnie lassie, she packs a mean groove of swing. By no standard is she an admirer of "le jazz Hot."

"Ella," says I, "what's a jitterbug?"

"Weel, a jitterbug is a follower of syncopation. Years ago we referred to him as a 'syncopated kid,' or a 'jazz boy,' only today it's more exaggerated. It's only a novelty, and I see no bright future for it."

"And what about swing?"

"Sweet swing is the future for dancing. It still has melody and rhythm to it and I think 'cheek to cheek' style will be the vogue very soon."

So spoke Ella, and she should know. She can't remember here or when she got her start because it's been so long ago.

"It was in London, I do remember that. I think at the ti I was three of age; I just sang and danced the native favorites wherever I was."

"And what do you do in your spare time, Ella."

"I do housekeeping. My only hobby is cooking. I like to cook native dishes wherever I may be,

Smith, McNally, Wysocki Guests Of Popular Band Leader At Earle Friday

Cheers, Baton-Twirling Featured as Wildcats Display Spirit For Auburn Game; Homecoming Dinner-Dance Saturday

WARWICK HOTEL SELECTED BY ALUMNI

LEADS RALLY

HORACE HEIDT

Villanova will be given an opportunity to display its football spirit when coaches, students, and grads gather as guests of Horace Heidt, popular orchestra leader, in a huge pep rally to be directed from the stage of the Earle Theater at 6 P. M. Friday.

Clipper Smith, Vince McNally, and "All-American" John Wysocki will be introduced by Heidt as a feature of the evening.

Assembling in what promises to be the most elaborate of collegiate gatherings in the Philadelphia area, Wildcat fans will witness a colorful competition of banton-twirling with Heidt and Villanova's John Eldracher vieing for honors on the stage.

Villanova's Wildcats will have an opportunity to regain their football prestige which they rightly deserve, in Saturday's contest with Auburn's gridders. But, what is far more important, is that Horace Heidt's invitation affords all Villanova to answer, in fact, refute, a challenge which has permeated this vicinity for too long a period already.

The challenge is that, Villanova itself isn't behind its team as strong as it should be. Heidt's invitation couldn't possibly have come at a more opportune moment. After last Friday's incident our boys really need support, and need it badly. To prove that Villanova students are back of the team wholeheartedly, every student should make it his duty to be present at this great rally, Friday night at the six o'clock show at the Earle Theater.

Heidt's invitation came as a result of wishing to pit his baton twirling against that of our own Drum-Major Jack Eldracher, whom he heard, was possessed of exceptional ability. In addition to this contest Jack will be Honorary Leader of the "Alemite Brigadiers," for the performance.

The rally will also mark the re-

Society Appoints Publicity Group For Ensuing Year

A. S. M. E. Also Releases Trip Committee; Will Visit Westinghouse Company

Raymond E. MacGregor, president of the Villanova chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, announced the Trip and Publicity Committees of the chapter at its last meeting on Tuesday, October 25.

The Trip Committee is composed of John C. Hallinan, Edward J. Hubny, Evan V. Quinn, and Fred A. Bergner. The following men compose the Publicity Committee: Otto Christophe, Joseph J. Quinn, Robert Hattis and Joseph Kelly.

The trip to Edge-Moor Iron Works in Chester, scheduled for October 25, has been postponed till Wednesday, November 2. Trips to the Bantam Motor Car Company, in Butler, Penna., and to the Westinghouse Electric Company are being planned for the near future.

Plans for the annual smoker were discussed at the meeting. The committee for this event is still in the formative stage, but is expected to be announced by the next meeting. Difficulties are being met with as to obtaining a speaker for the smoker. Efforts are being made to develop this year's affair into a memorable one.

MUSIC GROUP INITIATES SERIES OF SYMPHONIES

The Music Seminar will commence this evening a program of symphonic music which shall extend over a period of several weeks. This evening selections will include selections from Schubert, Beethovan, and other short select pieces of symphonic music.

Opening the program will be Symphony No. 8 by Shubert, known to all music lovers as the Unfinished Symphony. The second important selection of the evening is Beethovan's Symphony No. 6 in F minor, the Pastoral Symphon

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR SCULLY

Faculty and Student Delegation Attend Rites at Wildwood

Funeral services were held last Thursday for the late Joseph Scully, junior in the Engineering School who died as a result of injuries in an automobile accident.

On Thursday morning, a Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated in the Church of St. Anne, Wildwood, New Jersey. Approximately forty students attended as representatives of the College. Members of the Faculty who were present include Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., moderator of the junior class, Rev. James S. Reilly, O. S. A., and Rev. John O'Leary, O. S. A.

Last Wednesday in the college chapel, Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, celebrated a Solemn High Mass attended by the students. Many of them receiving Holy Communion in behalf of their departed classmate.

As a fitting tribute to one of their class, the Juniors are having a daily Mass offered for him until Thanksgiving. This service will be held each morning at 7:30 in the Chapel.

From Eastboro, ex-officio be safety authorities as the first city in the world, today cite Winter's Seven Safety Suggestions for motorists.

Judge Harry H. Porter, chief justice of municipal court, ex-president of the Safe Winter Driving League, listed points of safety measures for coming months as follows:

It took approximately two hours, no more and little effort, to convince me that he was correct.

How? It was a typical young man with a rapidly diminishing English accent, a rabid football enthusiast, a swell guy that answers to the call of Freddie. Rigato Freddie Bartholomew.

"Hiyah, Freddie?" "Hiyah, Len?" and then we were off for the most enthusiastic period of time that this writer has had in many an Autumn spell. He politely towers five-feet-six, has an unassuming personality, and is a fellow that any partner would say "is in the groove." He possesses all the prerequisites for a real scout—eyes for the lovelorn, rapid chatter, a "V" shaped build and an adoration for his charming Aunt Cissie. Could one expect more. No. Well, get ready to take off your hat.

The premier question, as usual, was "Where were you Born?" And Freddie astutely answered "London, in a suburb called Wainmister." And then came the unfolding of an adventurous tale.

It was a few years back that he came here with his Aunt to try his skill in the cinema. Neither he nor his Aunt have regretted that boat ride. So impressed are they with his success and their liking of the U. S. A., that it will be a long time before they return—even for a visit.

The story runs something like this. M. G. M. was searching for a youngster with an English accent to portray the role of David Copperfield, and until the arrival of the boat no contender had received acceptance. Aunt Cissie learned of this and, aware of Freddie's qualities, she rushed to Hollywood. The shoe fit.

David Copperfield was his first try, his first trump card. The remaining hand was played well. Acting is a sixth sense with Freddie. He's been at it since he was a boy of three in London where he performed for charity with recitations and dramatic monologues. Now he is looking forward to his next picture, the pinacle of his ambition, "Kim." Arrangements are in the making and as soon as he finishes his personal appearance tour they will be completed.

When Freddie reaches that eligible age, only a year off, he wants to attend college, and a college right here in the East, probably Yale or Princeton, "Anyone that has a swell football team."

"So your choice is an Ivy League College, Fred?"

"A what? Oh, an Ivy League College. Yes, that's what they call it, don't they?"

During the interview Freddie was called out for a moment, Mr. Cooper and I being left together. Conversation immediately turned to the young Bartholomew. They were revealing minutes. "You know, Fred is at that certain age now," advised his tutor, "where popping off pistols, driving his Aunt's car (he has a license you know), and that infernal game of his, football, mean more to him than anything else. "I believe," he continued, "that this sissy business concerning Freddie is all due to misunderstanding. He's a typical boy, really he is. The public is accustomed to seeing him in Buster Brown collar-roles and it does not reflect his real virtues, especially in comparison with Mickey Rooney.

And his tutor's reflections were accurate. Freddie and Mickey are best of friends. Football is their common link. In fact, both of them have a team on the M. G. M. lot called the "Westwood Terriers," and what a team!

Later, upon his return, I asked Freddie if he liked touch football. "Touch football! Heck no! Tackle! Yes, I have received a few injuries, but they were all minor." Freddie is not as old as Mickey and has not as yet fully acquired that air and tone that every American boy has. But, he's one fellow any back-yard sport would be proud to claim.

He has definitely chosen his career—the legitimate stage and in due time, plus ample experience, Freddie says, "I want to portray Hamlet—that's my ambition." But in interim comedy and drama, he believes, on the stage, will be of valuable experience to him.

Freddie accomplishes much in his spare time. He has no fancy for "sweet swing" nor for Hal Kemp and his style. He likes Louis Armstrong and Benny Goodman and is fond of watching the jitterbugs. "Yes, I do dance, not as a jitterbug, I like to watch them, but that is the extent of swing music with me."

"Freddie, do you have any girl friends?"

"No, I don't have any yet."

"Well, how about Judy Garland?"

"It was a pleasure to work with her in 'Listen Darling.' I enjoyed it very much, she's a sweet girl."

On these answers he seemed somewhat bewildered, exhibiting neutral emotion, probably due to lack of experience with feminine guiles—yet they were manly and straightforward.

"That infernal football," chimed in his tutor, "takes up that time."

"How does it feel to see your name in lights, Freddie?" And with a perplexed reply, "Swell." It hasn't gone to his head.

Here we have a boy born of foreign heritage being rapidly naturalized to American customs, slang and tactics. He doesnt want to return to England, back to Oxford or Cambridge, but wishes to remain here to matriculate in one of our higher institutions of learning, to keep his American friends.

So, Mr. Churchill, you're right. Keep Freddie here as Ambassador, and you can expect every American to do his duty—admit him.

"Check Everything but the Chesterfields"

You'll find smokers everywhere keeping Chesterfields with them all day long. They add to your pleasure when you're on the job and when you take a night off.

It takes good things to make a good product. That's why we use the best ingredients a cigarette can have—mild ripe tobaccos and pure cigarette paper—to make Chesterfield the cigarette that smokers say is milder and better-tasting.

HEIDT INVITES VILLANOVA TO RALLY

Smith, McNally, Wysocki Guests Of Popular Band Leader At Earle Friday

Cheers, Baton-Twirling Featured as Wildcats Display Spirit For Auburn Game; Homecoming Dinner-Dance Saturday

LEADS RALLY

HORACE HEIDT

Villanova will be given an opportunity to display its football spirit when coaches, students, and grads gather as guests of Horace Heidt, popular orchestra leader, in a huge pep rally to be directed from the stage of the Earle Theater at 6 P. M. Friday.

Clipper Smith, Vince McNally, and "All-American" John Wysocki will be introduced by Heidt as a feature of the evening.

Assembling in what promises to be the most elaborate of collegiate gatherings in the Philadelphia area, Wildcat fans will witness a colorful competition of baton-twirling with Heidt and Villanova's John Eldracher vieing for honors on the stage.

Villanova's Wildcats will have an opportunity to regain their football prestige which they rightly deserve, in Saturday's contest with Auburn's gridders. But, what is far more important, is that Horace Heidt's invitation affords all Villanova to answer, in fact, refute, a challenge which has permeated this vicinity for too long a period already.

The challenge is that, Villanova itself isn't behind its team as strong as it should be. Heidt's invitation couldn't possibly have come at a more opportune moment. After last Friday's incident our boys really need support, and need it badly. To prove that Villanova students are back of the team wholeheartedly, every student should make it his duty to be present at this great rally, Friday night at the six o'clock show at the Earle Theater.

Heidt's invitation came as a result of wishing to pit his baton twirling against that of our own Drum-Major Jack Eldracher, whom he heard, was possessed of exceptional ability. In addition to this contest Jack will be Honorary Leader of the "Alemite Brigadiers," for the performance.

The rally will also mark the re-

Science Frat To Present Annual Informal Dance

College Field House Scene of Lambda Kappa Delta Social; "Villanovans" Supply Rhythms For Collegiate "Hop" Friday

With the advent of the first Friday of November the Lambda Kappa Delta science fraternity will sponsor the final informal dance of the present scholastic year. Italo DeBartolomeis, chairman of this Annual Fall Dance, realizing the position of epilogue this affair holds to the sport-dancing season, intends to stress the collegiate spirit in the decorative program.

The chairman and his newly-confirmed committee of nine will collaborate in the preparations for this. Those on the committee follow: Carl Pantaleo, '39; Lawrence Knaphle, '39; Benedict Cusani, '39; Bernard Bellew, '40; Harry Taylor, '40; Francis Thomas, '40; John Eldracher, '41; Joseph Clarken, '41, and Robert Kiley, '41.

Banners or pennants of nearly every conceivable college in the country will be adroitly arranged in the Villanova Field House against the background of the acoustic curtains to create an atmosphere of informality and sociability. Through such a procedure it is hoped that the true nature of the informal dance will be thrown into bold relief. The emphasized collegiate nature of the hop should inject into it the feeling of freedom and easiness which is almost totally lacking in formal socials. Besides being appealing to the eye the decorations should carry this psychological effect of absolute adaptability to the scene with them.

This Annual Fall Dance by the science fraternity sounds the knell to informal dances for the 1938-39 season. All dances during the remainder of the year will be formal. Thus, DeBartolomeis is planning to make of this hop a composite of the best that Villanova has offered so far during the semester in like affairs. Being in a position of retrospect he with his committee intends to glean the outstanding features of the former informal socials and intersperse them with original ideas such as that mentioned for

Reason for Growth Determined at Weekly Gathering of Campus Organization

STUDENTS SHOW INTEREST

"Dictators and Dictatorship" was dicussed by students attending the History Seminar last Thursday when it convened in the Mendel Reception room under the direction of Harold F. Hartman, Ph. D.

It was the primary purpose of the seminar to determine at this session why the dictators of Europe had been successful in their early careers. After intense discussion it was concluded that "before any dictator could arise in a country there must be an emergency either real or ficitious."

Members of the History Seminar stated that the conclusion reached "must not be interpreted as an attempt to belittle the intelligence of the dictators themselves as this and other character attributes are also of importance."

Dictators Not New

Dr. Hartman pointed out that the dictatorial governments of Europe in the present decade have had historical precedents. He mentioned that there were dictators before the time of Christ, and in more recent times Cromwell and Napoleon have held prominent dictatorial positions.

The supposition was advanced by the Seminar "that man must use his intelligence to take advantage of such an opportunity that may be presented by a national emergency. The attitude of the people in regard to dictatorial government is another topic worthy of consideration."

During the coure of the meeting the policies of France and Germany were examined as to political, social and economic conditions so that reasons might be found to ex-

ROSEMONT COLLEGE APPEARS IN MASQUE DRAMATIC PROGRAM

Local Thespians to Present One-Act Plays Thursday Evening

STUDENTS, FRIENDS ASKED TO ATTEND INITIAL SOCIAL

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., Appointed Speech Arts Moderator

A series of dramatic programs sponsored co-operatively by Catholic colleges in this vicinity will initiate its season Thursday evening, at 8:30, when a program of one-act plays will be presented by the Jest and Gesture Club of Rosemont College and the Belle Masque Society of Villanova College. As Villanova is among the prime backers of the movement the cycle will start in the local gymnasium-theater where Villanova students will play host to visiting members of other participating institutions.

Reciprocally, Villanova students will be welcomed to other auditoriums as the movement gathers momentum. The activities will be held on a different campus each time. An effort is being made to have one such event arranged for each week. Actors and actresses with their stock of plays will make a circuit of the member colleges, all of the associated collegiate dramatic societies being represented on each program.

A conference of the faculty representatives of the schools will be held this afternoon at the College of Chestnut Hill. Among those expected to attend are Miss Ruth Haskell, of Rosemont; Sr. M. Donatus, I. H .M., of Immaculata; Mr. Joseph Sprissler, of La Salle College; Fr. Parsons, S. J., of St. Joseph's College; Miss Marion Gow, of Chestnut Hill, and Mr. Anthony J. Frayne, of Villanova.

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A. has been appointed moderator of extra-curricular speech arts, succeeding Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., whose accumulating duties, chief among which may be mentioned those in connection with his office as chaplain, forbid his continuance in the capacity of spiritual director of these fraternities; the Beta Gamma, varsity debating so-

Society Appoints Publicity Group For Ensuing Year

A. S. M. E. Also Releases Trip Committee; Will Visit Westinghouse Company

Raymond E. MacGregor, president of the Villanova chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, announced the Trip and Publicity Committees of the chapter at its last meeting on Tuesday, October 25.

The Trip Committee is composed of John C. Hallinan, Edward J. Hubay, Evan V. Quinn, and Fred A. Bergner. The following men compose the Publicity Committee: Otto Christophe, Joseph J. Quinn, Robert Hattis and Joseph Kelly.

The trip to Edge-Moor Iron Works in Chester, scheduled for October 25, has been postponed till Wednesday, November 2. Trips to the Bantam Motor Car Company, in Butler, Penna., and to the Westinghouse Electric Company are being planned for the near future.

Plans for the annual smoker were discussed at the meeting. The committee for this event is still in the formative stage, but is expected to be announced by the next meeting. Difficulties are being met with as to obtaining a speaker for the smoker. Efforts are being made to develop this year's affair into a memorable one.

SENIORS TO OBTAIN PROOFS THIS WEEK

Notices Will be Posted Relative to Securing Photographs

Announcement was made recently by Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., moderator, to the effect that proofs of the senior Belle-Air photographs will be distributed throughout the week.

Work on the annual publication is well under way. At present time the entire staff is engaged in composing the individual write-ups procuring ads and patrons, and attempting to organize a novel set-up for the 1938-39 issue. It is the opinion of the editors that with the co-operation now in effect the Belle-Air is in a position to attain the All-American rating this year.

Fr. Falvey also asks that all officers of the various student organizations report to the Belle-Air office in room 51, Mendel hall, as soon this week as is convenient. Pictures of the activities of members of these societies are desired for publication. Officers are also asked to have a detailed account of the proposed program for the coming year.

Notices will be posted relative to the procuring of the senior proofs as soon as they are available. All seniors having paid the required deposit are eligible to receive these photographs.

"Hoot Mon!" She's A Bonnie Scotch Lass With A Rare Highland Brogue

By LEN FLINKMAN

Callender, Ontario, makes vaudeville news this week with a sister act billed simply as the Bonnie Quintuplets whose song, dance and comedy are the highlights of the photoplay, "Five of a Kind," at the Earle Theater. A "Quintuplet Feature" for a single admission. But this column reveled in a single worth the price of five any day.

Hoot, Mon, Scotch gusto, and a Hollywood celebrity she is!

It all goes back to one early misty morning in the highlands of Scotland, Glascow exactly, on the sixth of March, one year prior to the "declaration of belligerency" to civilization, the "World War" to this generation, and 1913 to Ella Logan.

Has Fascinating Brogue

We saw no kilts in the closet; no bag-pipes in the corner; no Scotch landscapes on the wall; no, not even a bottle of Scotch. A semblance, yes, of brogue fascinating to the ear. And of beauty—the best we've seen since Harry Lauder conquered this country with his legions of drollery.

For a bonnie lassie, she packs a mean groove of swing. By no standard is she an admirer of "le jazz Hot."

"Ella," says I, "what's a jitterbug?"

"Weel, a jitterbug is a follower of syncopation. Years ago we referred to him as a 'syncopated kid,' or a 'jazz boy,' only today it's more exaggerated. It's only a novelty, and I see no bright future for it."

"And what about swing?"

"Sweet swing is the future for dancing. It still has melody and rhythm to it and I think 'cheek to cheek' style will be the vogue very soon."

So spoke Ella, and she should know. She can't remember here or when she got her start because it's been so long ago.

"It was in London, I do remember that. I think at the ti I was three of age. I just sang and danced the native favorites wherever I was."

"And what do you do in your spare time, Ella."

"I do housekeeping. My only hobby is cooking. I like to cook native dishes wherever I may be.

IT CAN'T BE DONE

ANNIHILATE all religion! Most every thinking man of today could unhesitantly identify this slogan with Communism and rightly so. The Soviet Government unblushingly admits in clear-cut inferences that an intensive anti-religious program is rabidly being followed.

While apologists for Communism —who, incidentally, are exceedingly active in America—loudly decry misinterpretation of their principles as regards their endeavors to overthrow Governments by violence, they are mute in denial of this inundative work at the foundations of religion. They are helpless to abrogate a fact which the official organ in Moscow blandly announces.

In accordance with the tactics of all such atheistic campaigns, Russian Communism aims its choicest weapons at the school children who, in their formative years, can most easily be beguiled into accepting this insidious doctrine. But obviously the official war against religious instruction and observances has only been partially successful. Such can be clearly gleaned from the recent call by the Soviet Regime for an intensive drive by school teachers to wean their pupils from their faith.

The organ of the Commissariat of Education admits as much when it states "as a result of the teachers indifference" many children last Christmas went about singing carols and at Eastertide celebrated the great religious festival by carrying candles. The Russian Government is not the first to meet difficulties trying to abolish religion. Time immemorial indicates that all attempts to eradicate man's most inborn quality of religion have proved fruitless.

How can the Communistic social and economic principles be worth considering when such a damnable doctrine of anti-religion is inseparately entwined in its program? The many fallacies of the entire system of Communism need not be investigated since it is enough to point out the uncompromising proposal of Red Russia: "Accept my social and economic theories, accept my anti-religious program."

Any political system that is endeavoring to raise up a Godless generation, to teach youth to revile religion and its noble works, is purely and inescapably un-America on its face and has no place whatsoever in this country. It has been convicted out of its own mouth.

WHAT NEXT?

THE systematic and purposeful propaganda of Italy and Germany in South America is a growing challenge to trade and relations of the U. S. and other nations with countries of the Western Hemisphere.

Germany and Italy have been in the process of organizing political and cultural forces for the upbraiding of the independence and democracy of these 20 Latin-American Republics. Recently, a renewed and more persistent effort is emanating from Germany as a result of the Munich settlement, and with this arises a more pronounced rebuke from Uncle Sam.

For the past several years, Italy has been seeking a stronghold in South America. She has proffered a free newsagency to all the countries of that continent. In addition, Italy has been donating the services of her artists, lecturers, military men, and economists . . . all free of charge in the propagation of FASCISM.

Whence goes Hitler after the completion of his hegemony in Europe? Where does the Munich Settlement leave the United States?

The answer is three-fold: 1- the enlarging of the highly industrialized areas of Germany have given demands for new, quick outlets for its industrial products. 2- the rise of German prestige and military status renews the demand of a new world-wide colonial apportionment. 3- Great Britain was the silent partner of the Monroe Doctrine; the Munich Settlement has greatly weakened her position. Our knowledge of England permits us to think that she might have motives for winking one eye at possible German aggression in the Western Hemisphere . . . the other eye on the possible sharing of larger profits.

PANIC

GOD caught up with the world last Sunday evening with the dramatization, by Orson Welles, of "War of the Worlds." Newspapers and the radio news reports have well assured us that the fear of God was in the hearts of the people as a result of this nation-wide broadcast by the Mercury Theater of the Air.

May our priests and preachers take this message of Orson Welles, that man does believe in God, and it takes but a good scare to bring him back to God. They may thank Welles for bringing into the drama a Christian aspect, that even the least of God's creators were not created in vain, for it was bacteria that saved man at this period of catastrophy.

Our only regret of the performance of the other evening is that it was a radio program that brought the nation to God, and not the words of Christ that were being taught in His Church the same day.

AUBURN RALLY

Here's your chance, Wildcats! Horace Heidt has personally invited each one of you to be on hand at a rally being staged in the Earle Theater at 6 P. M., Friday.

He thinks Villanova has a spirited team—a team that will win against Auburn Saturday. Show him, and all football fans, that Villanova has an ardent array of highly spirited backers. Rally with Heidt!

Why Be A Gentleman?
BY
J. Stanley Morehouse, M. E.

IN THESE highly competitive times, when there are many men equally well qualified technically for each available position, it is necessary that a college graduate possess more than mere technical knowledge. He must place proper emphasis on the attributes commonly exemplified by a gentlemen. "Manners oft proclaim the man" says Shakespeare.

Given two college men of equal professional ability is it not logical to assume that the one of polished bearing stands a far better chance of securing and holding a position than one whose uncouthness offends those whom he meets?

Consideration of others, the basis of good manners, can be developed and perfected by practice to the advantage of the college man. He will earn not only the respect of others but will rise in his own esteem.

For the inevitable position to which every college graduate aspires it is necessary to sell himself. Good manners will help him to do so. A college student has an opportunity by association with faculty members and students with superior background to acquire the desirable qualities of a gentleman.

Another characteristic which enables a college graduate to sell himself to his prospective employer is that of correct and effective speech. Too frequently the college man can speak only in the popular vernacular of the day, and when called upon to express himself in the English of an educated person, flounders hopelessly. He allows himself to slip into grammatical errors or fails to correct those of his youth.

Only by persistent watchfulness can he hope to overcome his early habits of poor speech. Here again close observance of correct speech, spoken and written, is imperative.

One often hears the indictment that Engineers are notoriously weak in English. Without a doubt some of this criticism is just. It is very difficult to find the time necessary for English courses in a curriculum into which must be crowded so many technical and professional subjects in four years. Some schools obviate this difficulty by extending the course to five or even six years and are thus able to introduce more English and a number of valuable cultural subjects.

I believe that if the student realized the real need of all his English and Public Speaking courses he would not treat them as "extra-curricula activities' 'but resolve to put forth every effort to gain the fullest value from them. I also believe a great deal can be accomplished by closer co-operation between the various faculty members and the English Department. Both the student and the English Department would be immensely benefited.

Much carelessness on the part of the student could be eliminated, if faculty members would call the student's attention to mistakes in spelling and in English by making appropriate deductions from the student's grade for egregious errors in his work.

The college man is so often called upon to make a report. How can an intelligent, clear, and concise report be written by a man unable to express his thoughts clearly?

Another aspect of desirable gentility is that of proper grooming. While a certain amount of collegiate dishevelment is condoned on the campus, it is not generally accepted elsewhere, and a neat appearance helps one make a favorable impression.

We all could name a number of very successful men who have not had the benefit of a college education, but if one studies these men, he will find that they attin their position and standing not only by their ability but also by their gentlemenliness. Fashions change, trends vary, but refined speech, manners, and appearance are always an asset, and it behooves college men to cultivate these valuable aids.

DOWN THE ROAD

Hitch-hiking isn't the oldest sport in America. Nor is it the richest. It isn't even subsidized. But it does have organization. Registered Collegiate Thumbers—that's what has become of the hitchers' democracy. It's a bureaucracy now, pure and simple. The RCT (Registered Collegiate Thumbers — remember?) has just been evolved as an idea at St. Ambrose College in Davenport, Iowa.

THEY NEVER CEASE

She was an old Irishwoman on her way back to Dublin from the North. The Customs man fished out a bottle from its temporary sanctuary in a voluminous nightdress.

"And what's this," asked the Customs man,

"Shure, an it's holy water," said the old lady, clutching for it.

The Customs man had his suspicious; pulled out the cork.

"This is whiskey," he said, sternly.

Up went the old lady's hands in amazement.

"Glory be! A miracle!"

CRASH-DIVE

It's news when a man bites a dog, but it's supernews when a football coach has to pay to see his own team in action. But that's exactly what happened at the University of Scranton when Coaches Davies and Jones were stopped at the gate for no gain until they paid through the window.

HOMECOMING

This years homecoming is certain of success. A great football team is on hand, a great coach, and a great game. So lets get behind the team and the coach to show that we appreciate what they are doing for us.

INTRODUCING

Frank Mozzi Centers Aim On Scholastic Achievement, Council and P. K. P. Frat

By WILLIAM J. WARD

A PECULIARLY reticent attitude on the part of the subject of this dissertation is hardly conducive to the writing of a flowering article but despite all obstacles we are endeavoring to construct a pillar that will be amenable to others which have appeared in this, the student publication. . .No this is not the "Faculty Comments" column but one written by a student.)

This week's victim is none other than the pride of the school of technology ,the calmest of the madmen, the original edition of Francis J. Mozzi, Esq. Known both here and abroad, as far east as Bryn Mawr and as far west as Sproul Road for something or other Mr. Mozzi is distinguished for no reason at all.

Being of a normal trend of thought Mr. Mozzi insists that he was born . . . March 18, 1918. At a very early age he became a commander of all the fundamental processes and at the tender age of three or four months he was able to cry as well as any baby half his age and weight.

Deciding that education was a necessity, even for the citizens of Meriden, Conn., Frank, at the insistance of his parents and the truant officer enrolled in St. Rose's Elementary School for the Teaching of Stuff to Children. Because of his innate abilities and his relationship (not by marriage) to one of the teachers he was able to procure a five dollar prize at the time of his graduation . . . at last reports almost all of the five has gone the "weigh" of all coins of the realm.

Deciding that the educational advantages offered by the pedagogues of St. Rose's were too elementary for his mature mind Frank next went to the Meriden (and I do mean Meriden) High School where he insists he did nothing. In this respect both Frank and the instructors at Villanova are inclined to agree.

Lest you are inclined to believe that the estimable Mr. Mozzi has been defunct in the pursuit of the educational muse we feel it necessary to point out that after a very successful matriculation at Villanova (a job which took all of his ingenuity) Frank amazed himself and amused his new found friends by taking fourth position in his class back in the dim daze of his Freshman year.

FRANK J. MOZZI

Content at last that his educational status was firmly ensconced on the bump of knowledge Frank then turned all his alleged energies to the field of extra curricular activities. After a rather stormy introduction to the Phi Kappa Pi our subject set about to improve his physical as well as mental self. This small matter was taken care of by playing a game sometimes called basketball with the backing of the rest of the "Wacks."

Catching up with fame in his third year Mr. Mozzi was elected by his classmates to represent them in the Student Council. With an eye to the future his work was well done and also well rewarded by his election ,this year, to the chairmanship of the Council.

Now in the public eye as effectively as a divot, Frank broadened his outlook . . . no reference to physical attributes, please. Turning to the Villanova Engineer and seeing the likelihood of spending many a balmy afternoon under the protection of its banners he became a staff writer.

Unable to hide his talents for long both he and the publication decided an assistant - editor's job was the one for which he was best fitted. After due consideration the assistant editor-ship decided to accept our hero.

Versatility? Huh, think nothing of it. The A. I. E. E. needed a chairman, Frank needed something to take his mind off the W. P. A. so the two got together . . . net result . . . Mr. Mozzi is now chairman of that august body of future wire splicers.

"How about your hobby?" Inquired we. "What's a hobby," asked he. "Never mind," quothe we. And thus ended the most interesting conversation of the current season.

Believing that Frank was playing cozy when we inquired about his feminine amours we sent one of the Connecticut representatives to Meriden to find out if any place in that domain lived a young lady who faithfully placed a candle in her window every night. After three weeks of travel, accompanied by Indian guides and his faithful Chief Boy, our spy from the outland district reported that as far as he knew there was no such light and as far as he could ascertain there was no place called Meriden.

This we are sure is not true because in one of the modern treatises of towns in the U. S. there is a paragraph which reads: "Meriden, Conn., a small slightly populated area lying somewhere between Hartford and New Haven; a territory recently reclaimed for the U. S. by an Antarctic expedition which was cut off from its base by recent hurricane."

Thus endeth the saga of Francis Mozzi, a man among men, an engineer among engineers, a lad with a purpose in life, a boy with the light of knowledge shining in both eyes and a desire to use that knowledge burning in his heart.

ODDS and ENDS

By Tom Haynes

ENTREE:

There has come to the writers ears (strangely enough) many dissenting opinions with regard to the matter contained in this column. The chief complaint seems to be that the subject matter is just small talk. The writer suggests that these "columnists-in-the-rough," do something themselves that will warrant their making the news. The writer will also see that their doings will not go unnoticed. Will that be satisfactory? After all, gentlemen, consider the source.

MORE SMALL TALK:

We are wondering why Robert Emmett O'Brien has decided to go out for the 150's . . . could it be Ruth from Brooklyn or the source of those letters from Norristown . . . Speaking of O'Briens . . how did Gene O'Brien get in that 69th St. league . . . Has anyone ever asked Walt (Hulk) Burlington what his favorite tune is . . . could it be "I Hadn't Anyone 'Till You" . . . Would anyone be interested in knowing that there is a boy (???) on this campus who is an ardent user of Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Pack . . . he really thinks its the best ever . . . We wish that D'Ippolito would bring that smooth job around these parts more often . . . Charlie Barrett knows the one I mean . . . We understand Mullarky is trying to make his weight for the 1½'s . . . sign him up, coach, he's only 195 . . . It really looks, to the casual observer, like the Frosh are taking over the major part of the social curricula on the campus ;they seem to be making more advances than ever before . . .

SCOOP:

It looks like the here-to-fore strong organization of the ROSA-NOVA is weakening. One of its staunch members has confided in your writer that he is definitely losing interest. Chief peeve seems to be that it lacks pep, quote, "they are just a bunch of rowdies," . . . The member is by name Mr. Beatty Schemerhorn . . . We sincerely hope that this isn't the handwriting on the wall for this truly representative group.

STORY OF THE WEEK:

Once upon a time there was a handsome Villanova undergraduate who went under the nom-de-plume Edward Cogan. It seems that this little fellow had a very faithful lady-friend in the old home town. It also seems that this young lady also had a birthday approaching. Eddie, poor fellow, was in a quandry. What would he give her? It had to be something very special as she was a very special girl. He mulled over these thoughts awhile and then sticking out his chest. He hied himself into the city of Brotherly Love on a shopping tour. After touring for about an hour he found the perfect gift. Can't you guess, fella's? A WHITE BOLERO JACKET and it was purchased in a just too, too exclusive shop. There is only one drawback though . . . he spent all his spondulix, forgetting that he had a date with his No. 2 lady the next Friday night.

IT CAN'T BE DONE

ANNIHILATE all religion! Most every thinking man of today could unhesitantly identify this slogan with Communism and rightly so. The Soviet Government unblushingly admits in clear-cut inferences that an intensive anti-religious program is rabidly being followed.

While apologists for Communism—who, incidentally, are exceedingly active in America—loudly decry misinterpretation of their principles as regards their endeavors to overthrow Governments by violence, they are mute in denial of this inundative work at the foundations of religion. They are helpless to abrogate a fact which the official organ in Moscow blandly announces.

In accordance with the tactics of all such atheistic campaigns, Russian Communism aims its choicest weapons at the school children who, in their formative years, can most easily be beguiled into accepting this insidious doctrine. But obviously the official war against religious instruction and observances has only been partially successful. Such can be clearly gleaned from the recent call by the Soviet Regime for an intensive drive by school teachers to wean their pupils from their faith.

The organ of the Commissariat of Education admits as much when it states "as a result of the teachers indifference" many children last Christmas went about singing carols and at Eastertide celebrated the great religious festival by carrying candles. The Russian Government is not the first to meet difficulties trying to abolish religion. Time immemorial indicates that all attempts to eradicate man's most inborn quality of religion have proved fruitless.

How can the Communistic social and economic principles be worth considering when such a damnable doctrine of anti-religion is inseparately entwined in its program? The many fallacies of the entire system of Communism need not be investigated since it is enough to point out the uncompromising proposal of Red Russia: "Accept my social and economic theories, accept my anti-religious program."

Any political system that is endeavoring to raise up a Godless generation, to teach youth to revile religion and its noble works, is purely and inescapably un-

America on its face and has no place whatsoever in this country. It has been convicted out of its own mouth.

WHAT NEXT?

THE systematic and purposeful propaganda of Italy and Germany in South America is a growing challenge to trade and relations of the U. S. and other nations with countries of the Western Hemisphere.

Germany and Italy have been in the process of organizing political and cultural forces for the upbraiding of the independence and democracy of these 20 Latin-American Republics. Recently, a renewed and more persistent effort is emanating from Germany as a result of the Munich settlement, and with this arises a more pronounced rebuke from Uncle Sam.

For the past several years, Italy has been seeking a stronghold in South America. She has proffered a free news-agency to all the countries of that continent. In addition, Italy has been donating the services of her artists, lecturers, military men, and economists . . . all free of charge in the propagation of FASCISM.

Whence goes Hitler after the completion of his hegemony in Europe? Where does the Munich Settlement leave the United States?

The answer is three-fold: 1- the enlarging of the highly industrialized areas of Germany have given demands for new, quick outlets for its industrial products. 2- the rise of German prestige and military status renews the demand of a new world-wide colonial apportionment. 3- Great Britain was the silent partner of the Monroe Doctrine; the Munich Settlement has greatly weakened her position. Our knowledge of England permits us to think that she might have motives for winking one eye at possible German aggression in the Western Hemisphere . . . the other eye on the possible sharing of larger profits.

PANIC

GOD caught up with the world last Sunday evening with the dramatization, by Orson Welles, of "War of the Worlds." Newspapers and the radio news reports have well assured us that the fear of God was in the hearts of the people as a result of this nation-wide broadcast by the Mercury Theater of the Air.

May our priests and preachers take this message of Orson Welles, that man does believe in God, and it takes but a good scare to bring him back to God. They may thank Welles for bringing into the drama a Christian aspect, that even the least of God's creators were not created in vain, for it was bacteria that saved man at this period of catastrophy.

Our only regret of the performance of the other evening is that it was a radio program that brought the nation to God, and not the words of Christ that were being taught in His Church the same day.

AUBURN RALLY

Here's your chance, Wildcats! Horace Heidt has personally invited each one of you to be on hand at a rally being staged in the Earle Theater at 6 P. M., Friday.

He thinks Villanova has a spirited team—a team that will win against Auburn Saturday. Show him, and all football fans, that Villanova has an ardent array of highly spirited backers. Rally with Heidt!

Why Be A Gentleman?

BY

J. Stanley Morehouse, M. E.

IN THESE highly competitive times, when there are many men equally well qualified technically for each available position, it is necessary that a college graduate possess more than mere technical knowledge. He must place proper emphasis on the attributes commonly exemplified by a gentlemen. "Manners oft proclaim the man" says Shakespeare.

Given two college men of equal professional ability is it not logical to assume that the one of polished bearing stands a far better chance of securing and holding a position than one whose uncouthness offends those whom he meets?

Consideration of others, the basis of good manners, can be developed and perfected by practice to the advantage of the college man. He will earn not only the respect of others but will rise in his own esteem.

For the inevitable position to which every college graduate aspires it is necessary to sell himself. Good manners will help him to do so. A college student has an opportunity by association with faculty members and students with superior background to acquire the desirable qualities of a gentleman.

Another characteristic which enables a college graduate to sell himself to his prospective employer is that of correct and effective speech. Too frequently the college man can speak only in the popular vernacular of the day, and when called upon to express himself in the English of an educated person, flounders hopelessly. He allows himself to slip into grammatical errors or fails to correct those of his youth.

Only by persistent watchfulness can he hope to overcome his early habits of poor speech. Here again close observance of correct speech, spoken and written, is imperative.

One often hears the indictment that Engineers are notoriously weak in English. Without a doubt some of this criticism is just. It is very difficult to find the time necessary for English courses in a curriculum into which must be crowded so many technics: and professional subjects in four years. Some schools obviate this difficulty by extending the course to five or even six years and are thus able to introduce more English and a number of valuable cultural subjects.

I believe that if the student realized the real need of all his English and Public Speaking courses he would not treat them as "extra-curricula activities' but resolve to put forth every effort to gain the fullest value from them. I also believe a great deal can be accomplished by closer co-operation between the various faculty members and the English Department. Both the student and the English Department would be immensely benefited.

Much carelessness on the part of the student could be eliminated, if faculty members would call the student's attention to misiakes in spelling and in English by making appropriate deductions from the student's grade for egregious errors in his work.

The college man is so often called upon to make a report. How can an intelligent, clear, and concise report be written by a man unable to express his thoughts clearly?

Another aspect of desirable gentility is that of proper grooming. While a certain amount of collegiate dishevelment is condoned on the campus, it is not generally accepted elsewhere, and a neat appearance helps one make a favorable impression.

We all could name a number of very successful men who have not had the benefit of a college education, but if one studies these men, he will find that they attin their position and standing not only by their ability but also by their gentlemenliness. Fashions change, trends vary, but refined speech, manners, and appearance are always an asset, and it behooves college men to cultivate these valuable aids.

DOWN THE ROAD

Hitch-hiking isn't the oldest sport in America. Nor is it the richest. It isn't even subsidized. But it does have organization. Registered Collegiate Thumbers —that's what has become of the hitchers' democracy. It's a bureaucracy now, pure and simple. The RCT (Registered Collegiate Thumbers — remember?) has just been evolved as an idea at St. Ambrose College in Davenport, Iowa.

CHATTER

Syracuse University offers the first full credit courses in Marriage . . . Creighton University R. O. T. C. has issued orders that all members must appear with inch-and-a-half haircuts . . . Television was first used as a medium of class room instruction by New York University . . . Tax collectors are going to college ,especially since Supreme Court ruling is not an essential athletic activity. The Federal Treasury will collect ten per-cent on each ticket over forty cents.

THEY NEVER CEASE

She was an old Irishwoman on her way back to Dublin from the North. The Customs man fished out a bottle from its temporary sanctuary in a voluminous nightdress.

"And what's this," asked the Customs man,

"Shure, an it's holy water," said the old lady, clutching for it.

The Customs man had his suspicious; pulled out the cork.

"This is whiskey," he said, sternly.

Up went the old lady's hands in amazement.

"Glory be! A miracle!"

CRASH-PROOF

It's news when a man bites a dog, but it's supernews when a football coach has to pay to see his own team in action. But that's exactly what happened at the University of Scranton when Coaches Davies and Jones were stopped at the gate for no gain until they paid through the window.

HOMECOMING

This years homecoming is certain of success. A great football team is on hand, a great coach, and a great game. So lets get behind the team and the coach to show that we appreciate what they are doing for us.

APECULIARLY reticent attitude on the part of the subject of this dissertation is hardly conducive to the writing of a flowering article but despite all obstacles we are endeavoring to construct a pillar that will be amenable to others which have appeared in this, the student publication. No this is not the "Faculty Comments" column but one written by a student.)

This week's victim is none other than the pride of the school of technology ,the calmest of the madmen, the original edition of Francis J. Mozzi, Esq. Known both here and abroad, as far east as Bryn Mawr and as far west as Spaul Road for something or other Mr. Mozzi is distinguished for no reason at all.

Being of a normal trend of thought Mr. Mozzi insists that he was born . . . March 18, 1918. At a very early age he became a commander of all the fundamental processes and at the tender age of three or four months he was able to cry as well as any baby half his age and weight.

Deciding that education was a necessity, even for the citizens of Meriden, Conn., Frank, at the insistance of his parents and the truant officer enrolled in St. Rose's Elementary School for the Teaching of Stuff to Children. Because of his innate abilities and his relationship (not by marriage) to one of the teachers he was able to procure a five dollar prize at the time of his graduation . . . at last reports almost all of the five has gone the "weigh" of all coins of the realm.

Deciding that the educational advantages offered by the pedagogues of St. Rose's were too elementary for his mature mind Frank next went to the Meriden (and I do mean Meriden) High School where he insists he did nothing. In this respect both Frank and the instructors at Villanova are inclined to agree.

Lest you are inclined to believe that the estimable Mr. Mozzi has been defunct in the pursuit of the educational muse we feel it necessary to point out that after a very successful matriculation at Villanova (a job which took all of his ingenuity) Frank amazed himself and amused his new found friends by taking fourth position in his class back in the dim daze of his Freshman year.

Content at last that his educational status was firmly ensconced on the bump of knowledge Frank then turned all his alleged energies to the field of extra curricular activities. After a rather stormy introduction to the Phi Kappa Pi our subject set about to improve his physical as well as mental self. This small matter was taken care of by playing a game sometimes called basketball with the backing of the rest of the "Wacks."

Catching up with fame in his third year Mr. Mozzi was elected by his classmates to represent them in the Student Council. With an eye to the future his work was well done and also well rewarded by his election ,this year, to the chairmanship of the Council.

Now in the public eye as effectively as a divot, Frank broadened his outlook . . . no reference to physical attributes, please. Turning to the Villanova Engineer and seeing the likelihood of spending many a balmy afternoon under the protection of its banners he became a staff writer.

FRANK J. MOZZI

Unable to hide his talents for long both he and the publication decided an assistant - editor's job was the one for which he was best fitted. After due consideration the assistant editor-ship decided to accept our hero.

Versatility? Huh, think nothing of it. The A. I. E. E. needed a chairman, Frank needed something to take his mind off the W. P. A. so the two got together . . . net result . . . Mr. Mozzi is now chairman of that august body of future wire splicers.

"How about your hobby?" inquired we. "What's a hobby," asked he. "Never mind," quothe we. And thus ended the most interesting conversation of the current season.

Believing that Frank was playing cozy when we inquired about his feminine amours we sent one of the Connecticut representatives to Meriden to find out if any place in that domain lived a young lady who faithfully placed a candle in her window every night. After three weeks of travel, accompanied by Indian guides and his faithful Chief Boy, our spy from the outland district reported that as far as he knew there was no such light and as far as he could ascertain there was no place called Meriden.

This we are sure is not true because in one of the modern treatises of towns in the U. S. there is a paragraph which reads: "Meriden, Conn., a small slightly populated area lying somewhere between Hartford and New Haven; a territory recently reclaimed for the U. S. by an Antarctic expedition which was cut off from its base by recent hurricane."

Thus endeth the saga of Francis Mozzi, a man among men, an engineer among engineers, a lad with a purpose in life, a boy with the light of knowledge shining in both eyes and a desire to use that knowledge burning in his heart.

ODDS and ENDS

By Tom Haynes

ENTREE:

There has come to the writers ears (strangely enough) many dissenting opinions with regard to the matter contained in this column. The chief complaint seems to be that the subject matter is just small talk. The writer suggests that these "columnists-in-the-rough," do something themselves that will warrant their making the news. The writer will also see that their doings will not go unnoticed. Will that be satisfactory? After all, gentlemen, consider the source.

MORE SMALL TALK:

We are wondering why Robert Emmett O'Brien has decided to go out for the 150's . . . could it be Ruth from Brooklyn or the source of those letters from Norristown . . . Speaking of O'Briens . . . how did Gene O'Brien get in that 69th St. league . . . Has anyone ever asked Walt (Hulk) Burlington what his favorite tune is . . . could it be "I Hadn't Anyone "Till You" . . . Would anyone be interested in knowing that there is a boy (???) on this campus who is an ardent user of Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Pack . . . he really thinks its the best ever . . . We wish that D'Ippolito would bring that smooth job around these parts more often . . . Charlie Barrett knows the one I mean . . . We understand Mullarky is trying to make his weight for the 175's . . . sign him up, coach, he's only 195 . . . It really looks, to the casual observer, like the Frosh are taking over the major part of the social curricula on the campus ;they seem to be making more advances than ever before . . .

SCOOP:

It looks like the here-to-fore strong organization of the ROSA-NOVA is weakening. One of its staunch members has confided in your writer that he is definitely losing interest. Chief peeve seems to be that it lacks pep, quote, "they are just a bunch of rowdies," . . . The member is by name Mr. Beatty Schemerhorn . . . We sincerely hope that this isn't the handwriting on the wall for this truly representative group . . .

STORY OF THE WEEK:

Once upon a time there was a handsome Villanova undergraduate who went under the nom-de-plume Edward Cogan. It seems that this little fellow had a very faithful lady-friend in the old home town. It also seems that this young lady also had a birthday approaching. Eddie, poor fellow, was in a quandry. What would he give her? It had to be something very special as she was a very special girl. He mulled over these thoughts awhile and then sticking out his chest. He hied himself into the city of Brotherly Love on a shopping tour. After touring for about an hour he found the perfect gift. Can't you guess, fella's? A WHITE HOLLRO JACKET and it was purchased in a just too, too exclusive shop. There is only one drawback though . . . he spent all his spondulix, forgetting that he had a date with his No. 2 lady the next Friday night.

PRE-MED BULLETIN WILL BE DEDICATED TO REV. J. O'BRIEN

"Around the World With Science" Featured in First Issue

"Around the World with Science" will be presented in the 1938-39 Mendel Bulletin, it was announced by Bernard J. Miller, editor of the quarterly publication of the Villanova School of Science.

This feature will cover scientific research and experiments in foreign countries and will contain some translations from Italian, German, French and Russian publications.

The first issue will be dedicated to the late Rev. John F. O'Brien, O.S.A., former member of the Villanova faculty, and will appear prior to Thanksgiving Day. It will contain a biography of Dr. Alexis Carrel, who with Charles Lindbergh, has been working to construct an artificial heart. The mode of thinking and the philosophy of Dr. Carrell will be stressed in this article which will be written in a very unusual but interesting manner. Also contained in this issue will be an explanation of the Autumn pigmentation of plants and an educational discussion of the X-Ray.

A special effort is being made this year to produce a publication of interest to all students and not the science students only as has been the case in the past. The bulletin will be characterized by small bits of rhyme and cartoons, things which were never present in the past.

One of the most attractive features of the next issue will be the cover which will portray the scenic beauty of the Villanova College campus.

Capitalism-Socialism-Liberalism Conflict At Round-Table Session

Many-Sided Arguments Offered as Sociology Seminar Discusses Papal Encyclicals and Economic Re-adjustment at Bi-Monthly Gathering

By MURRAY ZEALOR

Time—7:30 P. M.
Place—Day Hops Room Mendel 102.
Date—Monday, October 24, 1938.
Subject—Sociology Seminar.

Scrupulous. . . .The meeting has come to order. Let's see what they have to offer, probably another group planning the resuscitation of world depression or something similar.

Doubtful. . . .It is a nice group, large one too. What meeting is this?

Scrupulous. . . .Sociology seminar, what ever that is. It has just started up here at Villanova College. Morons! Groups of this type never. . . .

Doubtful. . . .Hush! I think they are ready to begin.

1st Speaker. . . .The discussion for the second meeting of the Sociology Seminar will comprise the interpretation of the first articles in the encyclical by Pope Piux XI., Rerum Novarum, by Raymond Beaucaire, Senior in Commerce School.

Scrupulous. . . .Snap course. . . . Bah.

Doubtful. . . .He should have time to study and know what he is to talk about.

Senior. . . .and so you see that the Pope agrees that the abuses and excesses of capitalism are due to the application of the liberalistic philosophy of rugged individualism. We can all agree that the Guilds were a near perfect system during the middle ages. Their decadence and decline removed an apt instrument for regulation.

Scrupulous. . . .He's a capitalist.

Senior. . . .The critical period is not on affecting the poor people but is one that shall break down the world capital if business is not given leadership.

Another Idea. . . .I do not agree with your stance on the encyclicals. The Pope is for the removal of the oppression from the poor. Over sixty per cent of the people in the United States are not receiving a living wage and they can thank capitalism for it. The Pope Scupulous. . . .I told you they would try to remove the world depression by a lot of talk. It can't be done.

Doubtful. . . .But we don't have Guilds anymore and we have liberalism. . . .

Answering the call of the Holy Father, Villanova College students have, under the guidance of Rev. Vincent McQuade, O. S. A., commenced a study of the encyclicals in the new and exciting Sociology seminar. This organization which has its beginning this year has been greeted by a large and enthusiastic group of students.

They have entered discussion of the encyclical Quadrogesimo by Pope Piux XI., which is the encyclical Forty Years After, the revival of the social and cultural encouragements presented by Pope Leo XIII. It is a lively discussion and various interpretations are reached through the study of the encyclicals, many of which are contrary to the views of the students, and verbal battles are the order of the evening.

On Monday November 10 the group will consider for discussion the ebenfits due to Rerum Novarum. Thia meeting will open with a formal reading of a paper by one of the members of the group presenting the interpretation of these benefits. From this paper all the discussion of the evening will emanate. Thus the group is given a clearer insight on the material up for discussion and preventing it from going astray in their interpretations.

Beta Gamma Society to Release Debating Schedule Soon

Appointment of the Executive Committe of Beta Gamma, Villanova's debating society, was made by Anthony J. Frayne, moderator, at the initial meeting of the present season held Wednesday afternoon, October 26.

Members of the committee include Thomas Delate, Pershing Calabro, James Quigley, seniors in the School of Arts, John Harrington and Robert O'Brien, juniors in the Arts and Commerce and Finance Schools, respectively, and James Donovan, sophomore, also of the Arts School. The purpose of this group is to form a directive body representative of the several factions included in the organization. It will be the duty of this committee to arrange for the various activities engaged in by Beta Gamma and to act in the capacity of program directors.

Complete plans for the ensuing year are now in the process of organization.

decorations. Following the outlined schedule DeBartolomeis has already contracted William Dobbins as vocalist.

As was announced in the last issue of the VILLANOVAN the sale of tickets has already begun. The subscription fee—$1.50 per couple; the place of purchase—either at the office of this paper or direct from the committeemen and fraternity members. General advertisements of the dance in the form of book-like floaters call for dancing to begin at nine o'clock and to terminate at one o'clock. Also prominently displayed on these floaters is a clever slogan which DeBartolomeis wishes the majority of Villanova students to follow to the letter: "Cut up with the Pre-Meds" at the Annual Fall Dance on November 4.

BAND ACCEDES TO POPULAR TREND BY PRESENTING SWING

Repertoire Includes "Alexander's Rag Time Band" and "Dixie"

"Swing" will be presented among other musical novelties as the Villanova College Band marches on the field at Shibe Park for the annual football classic with Auburn this Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

This fact was recently disclosed by the Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S .A., moderator of the college musical organization.

Under the direction of Paul D. Teel, the Villanova band will feature a number dedicated to the Southern institution represented on the gridiron. "Dixie" will be rendered in the style of the Villanova band. Popular "swing tunes" will also be contributed by the local musicians, among which will be "A Tisket, A Tasket,' 'and "Alexander's Rag Time Band."

Strict enforcement of disciplinary regulations by the directors has led to vast improvement in the Villanova College Band, during the past years. New instruments and additional equipment have produced a brilliance of tone and added color to the band.

Approximately one half hour of each Wednesday and Thursday practice session is devoted to a rehearsal of musical arrangements, while the remaining period is concentrated on elaborating upon drill formations and marching technique.

Kinney Is Selected As President Of Yearling Debaters

Frosh Also Choose Salerno For Position of Financial Secretary

Patrick Kinney, freshman Engineering student, was elected president of the freshman debating society at the first meeting of the year held on Friday, October 28.

To assist him in the work of the organization Manuel Salerno, of the Arts Department, was chosen financial secretary. It was announced that the meetings would be in the form of informal discussions in which the time, place and subject of the future debates would be talked over.

In order that a formal team may be chosen it was suggested that a debate be held between the dayhops and the resident students. In this way it is hoped that the best talent in the society will be ferreted out to carry the colors of Villanova on the forensic platform.

The society will hold its meetings every week on Tuesday afternoons in room 106 Mendel Hall. Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., is the moderator of the organization.

CARL PANTALEO ELECTED CONNECTICUT CLUB HEAD

At its intial meeting of the current scholastic year the Connecticut Club elected Carl Pantaleo, senior in the School of Science, as president of the organization.

In the election two other officers were chosen to assist Pantaleo in the direction of club activities. Matthew Phelan and Frank Pimpinella were elevated to the offices of vice president and secretary-treasurer, respectively.

Principal speaker at the meeting to be held tomorrow evening will be William Duffy, undefeated welterweight of the Villanova Boxing team.

Duffy, in an extensive tour of the country, has visited forty of the forty-eight states. His talk will consist of various anecdotes relating o his travels.

CUSANI TO GIVE TALK ON X-RAYS

Singer and Freed Will Also Address Research Seminar

Student papers on topics which have been the subject of intense research for the past number of years will be presented at a meeting of the Research Seminar this Thursday evening at 6:45 P. M.

Among the topics selected by Augustin Giordano, chairman of the seminar, are: "X-Rays," to be delivered by Benedict Cusani, senior student; "The Normal and Abnormal Thyroid Gland," by Bernard Singer, junior pre-medical; and "Adrenalin," by Albert Freed, freshman member.

Chairman Giordano, co-operating with the Rev. James A. Donnellon, O. S. A., moderator, have successfully organized the seminar during its two years of existence until it has become of intense interest to the majority of students in the School of Science. Irving Uram, 38, was the first chairman of the seminar upon its inauguration.

Through the medium of a simplified presentation of research papers the seminar attempts to convince the undergraduate student that much of the work done in scientific laboratories can be performed with a large degree of success by pre-medical students.

ENGINEER EDITOR REVIEWS MAGAZINE

"The New Curriculum" Featured in October Issue of Publication

"The New Curriculum" as reviewed by the Advisers is one of the "should-be-read" articles appearing in the October issue of the Villanova Engineer.

Each Adviser in the engineering school explains the purpose for the revision in his department. It is expressly for the freshmen and sophomore classes as it brings a closer relationship with specialist in his specific field.

Joseph J. Quinn, editor, explained that the articles were written for the average student as well as the one versed in the technical light.

"The Roadways of the Future," an explanation of the recent advances in the construction of roads is explained to the reader. Helping the explanation are several photographs of unusual beauty and clearness, showing roads that have been recently built along modernistic lines.

News of what is happening in the engineering world outside, and here on the campus, is a highlight in this issue. The Alumni Notes delve into the latest information concerning those who have "gone forth to serve," while "Cross Section" gives characteristics of those yet to leave.

LIGHTWEIGHTS HOLD PENN TO SCORLESS TIE ON MUDDY GRID

Inclement Weather Conditions Prevent Both Teams From Flashing Offense

LOMBARDO GAME HERO

On a rain soaked grid last Friday, the Villanova lightweight squad fought the Penn "150 pounders" to a scoreless tie.

With the exception of an occasional end run little or no offensive was displayed by either team.

Late in the first half, however, Penn came within ten yards of the "pay off stripe" when Joe Beecher, the Blue and Red tackle, fell on a fumble by "Brad" McManus. With first down and goal to go, it seemed as if the "tiny tots" of Penn would be the first to push over a marker.

Father Time intervened however, and called a halt to all further progressiveness until the second half.

Lombardo Stars

The opening quarters were the scenes of fine play by "Galloping Guy" Lombardo. His hard tackling and crafty dodging had the Penn gridders guessing if the old saying "You can't be in two places at the same time" was entirely true.

The half came to a close with both goal lines uncrossed.

The Main Liners opened up the third quarter with an opportunity for the initial score. This came about when Lombardo did a beautiful "jack knife" into the sea of mud and recovered a fumble which had squirted from the hands of Al Lunango, a Penn sub.

With Villanova on the Blue and Red 20 - yard stripe with a first down, the 'Cat rooters, rain-soaked as they were saw a bit of scoring sunshine coming their way.

Another highlight of the rally will be the performance of George Gable and Betty Code, who won the National Intercollegiate jitterbug contest in New York City, five months ago.

Villanova's cheer leaders will be present to conduct Wildcat songs and cheers, accompanied by the Brigadiers.

A higher tribute has never been paid to Villanova along this line and the college can show its appreciation by making its presence felt. This football rally atmosphere will no doubt bring back memories to Heidt, who was headed for All-American fame at the University of California. Heidt made the varsity in his sophomore year and his

Tigers Invade Shibe Park Saturday Hoping To Avenge Two Previous Ties

Thrice Beaten Auburn Squad Has Star-Studded Backfield; "Spec" Kelley, George Kenmore, "Bo" Russell All-American Possibilities

By JOE BARNES

Up from the plains of Alabama comes the vaunted Auburn Tiger to meet the 'Cats this Saturday at Shibe Park.

Coached by Jack Meagher, once a great end at Notre Dame, and captained by the South's leading aspirant for an All-American tackle berth, Bo Russell, the Plainsmen present the most formidable eleven to meet the Wildcat so far this Fall.

The Meaghermen, who play just about the toughest schedule in the country, are primed to cut down "Clipper" Smith's men and end the streak of ties in the Villanova-Auburn series. The two schools first met in sunny, peaceful (?) Cuba in the Bacardi Bowl game on New Year's day, 1937. With the brilliant Matty Kubar, Villanova's stellar guard, in the starring role the 'Cats came from behind to tie up one of the most powerful Auburn teams in history.

Play Off Two Ties

In the hope of playing off the Bacardi Bowl tie the Tiger and the Wildcat met again last Fall, but to no avail. The game was an example of the battle between an irresistable force and the immovable —net result: 0-0.

Next Saturday they will again attempt to come to a decision and, according to reports from the South, the Plainsmen are confident that they will return to Alabama fattened by a victory feast. The gigantic hard-charging, and speedy "Bo" Russell will lead the Tigers into the battle against the "Clippermen." This Saturday will be the third time that Russell has opposed the Villanovans and he swears that the result of the past two meetings will not be repeated this year. "Bo" wants this game and intends to get it! Whether he does or not is up to Johnny Wysocki and his men.

Russell Outstanding Tackle

Russell was All-Southeastern tackle last year and is considered to be one of the greatest linesmen in Auburn's history. He tips the Fairbanks at 202 pounds and towers six-feet, two inches above the ground.

Another 200 pounder, Bill Nichols, holds down right tackle, as "Bo's" running mate. Not far behind are George Wolff, a junior, and Gordy MacEachern, a sophomore. Both tip the scales at well over two hundred pounds! Chet Bulger and Jim Sherman bring up the rear, making the Plainsmen three deep at each tackle post! Mac Eachern and Bulger are the only "Yankees" on the Southerner's squad.

At end the Orange and Blue has no less than nine varsity men! Ossie Burford and Max Harrison, whom the Wildcats will remember from the last two games, hold down the starting posts with very close competition coming from Stan Whatley, one of the leading passanarers below the Mason-Dixon line. With Harrison at one flank and Whatley at the other the Plainsmen give pass-defenders a rough afternoon.

Bukofski Scores on Pass From Howlett, Clary Tallies For Southerners; Wysocki Forced to Sidelines With Foot Injury in First Period

"FUMBLITIS" RETARDS BLUE OFFENSE

Unable to maintain a six point advantage, failng to come through in the pinches and by making costly errors, Villanova's Wildcats were tied by a fighting and determined Gamecock outfit last Friday afternoon in Orangeburg, South Carolina.

Villanova's only score of the day came as a result of a 52-yard sustained drive in the early part of the second half. Bukofski, having replaced injured Johnny Wysocki in the line-up, reeled off 42 yards on an end around advancing the ball to the Carolina's eleven. On the fourth down, after two linesmashes and a forward pass failed, Howlett tossed one to Bukofski in the end zone.

Immediately following the kickoff after the Blue tally the Gamecocks came back to even the count. On an exchange of kicks the Southerners got the oval on Villanova's 26 after Buek got off a poor punt kicking from his own five.

Clary Misses Conversion

Advancing the pigskin to the one-yard line on a pass play and two line thrusts the stage was all set for Clary to catapult over the goal line. Clary had a chance to sew the game up when he tried for the conversion because Tony Pereira failed to do the trick for the 'Cats. However, Clary's attempt was wide of the uprights and the score remained 6-6.

That South Carolina was tough the 'Cats realized right in the first period. Hughes returned Wysocki's kickoff 55 yards to Villanova's 41, almost getting into the clear only to be brought down by Rizzo with a crushing tackle.

YEARLINGS SMOTHER TEMPLE FRESHMEN TO EXTEND STREAK

Kittens Display Powerful Attack and Impregnable Defense in Downing Owlets

Showing great form and completely outplayig their rivals, the Villanova Freshman football team marched through the Temple Frosh eleven on Roosevelt Field last Thursday night and came away from the game with a 26 to 0 victory.

An indication of the type of play displayed by the Kittens can be gained from Stan Baumgartner an official at the game, who remarked, "They are good enough to beat two out of three college elevens." Incidentally, the victory marks the 21st straight win for a Villanova Freshman eleven.

Kittens Offense Clicks

Throughout the game the power shown by the Blue and White line was a feature. They opened big holes while on the offense, and seldom gave the Temple ball carriers a chance when the Owlets had the ball. This is demonstrated by the statistics, which show a net gain of 156 yards for the 'Cats and a net loss of four yards for the Owls. In first downs the Kittens held a 6 to 0 edge.

The yearling backfield also functioned well. The starting combination of Famalette, Yednock, Behot, and Worthington as well as Howlett and Magnotto showed much form. Joe Magnotto made the longest run of the contest, going 56 yards in the final stage of the game. He followed this dash with another that took the ball over the last line from nine yards out for the final touchdown.

Napoletano Scores On Pass

The first score came on a 34-yard pass, Behot to Napoletano, who took it on the one-yard line and went over. The march for the second touchdown started on Temple's 26, by virtue of an intercepted pass. A few plays carried it to the three from where Bill Howlett tallied.

Another interception gave the Kittens possession on the Owlet's 34. A pass from Yednock was caught by Behot on the 15 and he ran over the goal for six additional points. Worthington and Famalette

HARRIERS DO WELL IN INFORMAL MEET

Haverford and Swarthmore Listed as Future Cross-Country Opponents

Coming out of their shell in a test of strength, the Villanova harriers doffed sweat-shirts for the first time this year to engage in an informal meet with Haverford College last Wednesday on the Wildcat course.

Not regarded as a serious meet, by either coach, the cross-country competition was more or less an informal and practical way of familiarizing the members of the Haverford team with the Villanova course. It is the intent of the Wildcat coach, "Jumbo" Elliot, to hold a regular meet with Haverford in about three weeks. Following in short order will be a dual meet with the distance men of Swarthmore. In Wednesday's meet with Haverford there were no official times kept nor was there any tabulation of score.

By TOM O'MAHONEY

QUARTERBACK BUEK, the man who swings the Wildcats out of their huddles is one for the "local boy makes good" school of writers, having called his first play in life in the city of Philadelphia on October 16, 1914. However, Charles Harvey, as practically no one calls him, left the buzzing metropolis for a new home in Merion when he had attained his tenth birthday. Here he adapted himself to Merion Grammar School, Lower Merion Junior High and finally Lower Merion High School as a preparation for college.

Now that we have skimmed over Harvey's non-athletic career with a few words, we start by describing our hero's life at Lower Merion High. Only two sports attracted Harve here, those being football and track. Playing fullback, he turned in four good years wearing the L-M red, and as a trackman was undefeated in both high and low hurdles, and held the Suburban Conference record for the 220.

Drops Ball in Clear

Although he attempts to hide it, there is a story concerning his scholastic pigskinnery. It seems that in the big game (with Radnor High, of course) in his senior year, played on a muddy Villanova College stadium gridiron, Harve found himself slated to carry the ball from his own 20 on an off-tackle thrust. There were barely seconds to go in the first half, and Radnor led, 8-6, as the ball was snapped back from center. To his great glee, he found himself toting the ball into the clear, with only the safety man to beat. Beat him Harve did, as he swerved perilously past the midfield stripe. Passing the five yard line away out in front, Harvey decided to look around to see who was behind him. The ball slipped, he grabbed, and the ball kept right on slipping—out of bounds on the two yard line—as the half ended.

Lower Merion later won, 12-8, but the Maroon coach slept nary a wink that night.

Among Buek's team-mates at the Ardmore school were Bill Miller and Dom Polilli, now seniors at Penn, our own Tom McMahon, and Lou Young, Jr. now a Dartmouth starwart.

Enters Temple

In the Fall of 1934 Harvey entered (grrr) Temple University and went out for freshman football. However, after hurting his knee he withdrew from the sport and at the end of the year decided he'd see how the other half lived by matriculating at Villanova. Having changed his course to Education, he was forced to start over as a lowly frosh, and spent a quiet year here, playing no football, but reporting to track coach Jim (Jumbo) Elliot for the hurdles.

As a sophomore, Harve went out for varsity football, and succeeded in sticking at left half-back, as Andy Stopper's understudy. He got in every game, and scored three touchdowns; two against P. M. C., and one on Boston U. However, it was as Frank Castles' room-mate, and chief of the bucket brigade in Austin Hall that his fame increased that year. However, he kept his undefeated record in the hurdles again, and was rewarded by being elected captain for his junior year.

Shifted to Quarter

In his third term, Harvey was shifted from left half to right half to quarterback, but still managed to get in every game. Scoring no points, he nevertheless proved invaluable as a blocker and kicker, to say nothing of his play at safety. He considers the Temple game by far the most thrilling he has seen while at college, and enjoyed the trimming handed to his almost-alma mater, as the Wildcats prevailed 33-0. Wrenching his back in the first half, he saw none of the last half scores, and was unable to play in the Loyola game the following week.

Rated High As Leader

Now a full-fledged "Q.B.," Buek has shown well indeed in the games to date. His field generalship, punting and blocking stamp him as one of the Blue's finest ever. With half the schedule completed, he has scored two touchdowns, an unusual treat for a blocking back. It is certain that Villanova can ill-afford to lose him, as lose him they must this June, when he grasps his B. S. in Ed. degree to set forth on the gridiron of life.

His football ability is perhaps inherited, for his father was a star end at Swarthmore in '08 and '09, playing on a team which defeated mighty Pennsylvania. So Saturdays see an old Swarthmore blue sitting in the Villanova stands rooting for the Wildcats and their heady quarterback.

Among his favorite diversions are listed boating, swimming, keeping a light in his Fedigan Hall room, and playing pinochle with, as he says, "Lucky Cochrane" and the big tackle's other "Fish," halfback Nick Basca and Trainer Gadsby. Harve vows he'll win from Cochrane someday but we're not so sure.

Harriers

Tom McCabe followed closely by Tom Delate. These boys looked especially good to Jumbo Elliot who was well pleased with their performance. Bill Gulteras and Bill Dobbins surprised by staying up with the leaders all the way and finishing under the first ten. After this workout, Coach Elliot seemed satisfied enough to O. K. the meet with Haverford and Swarthmore. Until this time these engagements were only potential.

Middle-Distance Men Benefit

The cross-country team consists not only of distance men but of quarter milers and 880 men. For middle-distance men such workouts prove to be an excellent form of conditioning for the indoor meets that will get under way shortly after the new year. By consistantly running races that are three and four times their usual distance, the Elliot men have acquired a commanding use of their wind and have strengthened their legs for the kick that is so essential to track men in the indoor and outdoor races.

Jumbo Elliot, who starred in his High School days at West Catholic, and climaxed them here at Villanova, knows above all the value of this early training.

It can be easily seen that he is most anxious to have his team whipped into shape as soon as possible and have his first trial at a cross-country team be made a successful one.

path to stardom was prevented by a serious back injury.

While convalescing, Heidt dreamed of organizing an orchestra. That such a dream came true, everyone realizes today, because Heidt has given to the public one of the most popular bands all over the country.

Saturday evening at the Warwick Hotel, 17th and Locusts Sts., the alumni of the college will convene for the dinner-dance sponsored by the local Villanova Club of Philadelphia. Dinner will be served promptly at 7 o'clock. After the banquet the scene of activities will shift to the Warwick Ballroom where dancing to the music of Bert Pamanante and the Villanova orchestra will high-light the evening. The committee in charge under the direction of James Carr, 34, chairman, have also arranged for special entertainment to add to the festivities.

Gerald Kunz, '37, was elected president of the Rochester, New York, Club, at a dinner held by that organization on October 10.

'Cats-Gamecocks

the Blue stopped a Gamecock threat early in the first period getting the ball on downs on their own 19. From this point on the 'Cats did most of the attacking, stopped either by missing perfectly thrown aerials or by poor ball handling. On such occasions Dewitt Arrowsmith and later Clary would set the visitors back on their heels with booming punts over the safety's head.

Blue Falls to Click

The Blue had a wonderful scoring opportunity in the second period when Sabrinski kicked one out on the Gamecock six. Arrowsmith then kicked out to the Carolina 47. On the next play with Monaco out in the clear Basca pitched a beauty only to have Sam drop it with a clear field before him.

After another aerial failed Sabrinski kicked into the end zone. The Gamecocks advanced the ball to their 32 and then were forced to punt. Mazzei came back with Clary's punt from his own 20 to Carolina's 28; but fumbled and S. Nowak recovered for the Southerners. The remainder of the half resolved itself into a kicking duel with each team holding its own.

Wildcats Fumble

In the third period after South Carolina had tied up the count the Blue started another drive only to be stopped by a fumble by Shader after he had advanced the ball 20 yards to his own 40. The Wildcats held the Southerners for four downs and got the ball on their 34. On the next play Basca fumbled and Burns recovered for Carolina as the period ended.

As the last period started "Clipper" Smith sent in Wysocki, making his first appearance in the contest since his removal early in the first quarter because of an injured foot. Wysocki smeared Arrowsmith for a seven-yard loss and Clary punted out to the Wildcats' 13. After a five yard penalty inflicted on the 'Cats Sabrinski kicked out to the 48 from the end zone.

Basca to Sabrinski

When the Gamecocks smacked out a first down the 'Cats held and took the ball over on their 25. McMahon and Sabrinski hammered out a first on the 'Cats' 39. On the next play Basca passed to Sabrinski, snaring the pass at midfield and advancing it to the Carolina's 13.

Following a Blue holding penalty the 'Cats took to the air but were unable to score. Buek returned Clary's punt 30 yards to Carolina's 48, downed by Larry Craig who was a stumbling block to the Smithmen all afternoon. The Blue made a last desperate attempt to score but it seems as if fate was against them.

Basca threw a pass to Wysocki and although Johnny made a valiant attempt for it, he just couldn't reach it. On the next play Murphy fumbled, picked it up, lateralled to Basca, who threw a pass to Walt Nowak, good to the Carolina three. However the referee ruled the ball dead from the spot that Murphy dropped it. The game ended with the 'Cats in possession of the ball on their own 37.

Clipper Comments

On South Carolina

WE played well enough to win down there in Carolina but you have to put some numbers up on that scoreboard to win ball games. We were far ahead in the statistics but people forget all about that the next morning. The big thing is to finish up the game with a few more points than the other team.

The loss of Johnny Wysocki hurt us much offensively in the game. However I am not detracting from the work of Frank Bukowski, who played a swell game, but Wysocki is a big factor in our attack and we were naturally weakened by his absence.

Chisick, Rizzo Look Good

Andy Chisick was excellent both on the offense and defense. His backing up of the line was something to be marvelled at. Val Rizzo looked good and both the guards, Di Filippo and Kuber, were in there to the limit throughout the afternoon.

Howlett and Basca worked up to expectations. Harry Mazzei's blocking and his choice of plays were exceptionally good and it looks as if he might merit the opening assignment next Saturday against Auburn.

Sophomore Gordon Shader backed up the line like a veteran while he was in there with Andy Chisick. However Shader was caught up with by injury and he had to leave the ball game.

We still have a young team, inexperienced and lacking in the cool finesse which last year's outfit had down pat. We still miss Andy Stopper and Ray Stoviak in there these afternoons along with "Rabbit" Raimo. This year's backs have the same potential ability as Ray and Andy but they have yet to acquire their calm judgment.

We expect to do a lot better next Saturday against Auburn. We feel that the South Carolina mishap will be the springboard to better performances during the balance of the season.

Outplayed Foes but Were Tied

Because we played well enough to win and failed to do so, we feel as though we were beaten. We are dejected and almost irritable. It is my hope that they take it out on Auburn this Saturday and avenge the South Carolina affair.

As was the case in the Detroit game our opponent's kicking hurt us very much. Almost every man in the South Carolina backfield could boot that ball far, wide, and handsome. They kept us in the hole many times with this punting.

Craig Sparked Southerners

I thought that this 200-pound South Carolina end, Larry Craig, was one of the best ends I have seen in a long time. He continually brought down our ball carriers when it looked like they were off for a long gallop. There is no doubt but that he is one of the greatest ends in the country this Fall. [illegible] with our own John Wysocki in defensive ability.

Our game captain, Walt Nowak, also played a wonderful game while he was in there, considering that he was not in good physical condition for the game.

We came close to scoring when Sabrinski got loose for 50 yards or so but the blocking fell down and Mike was stopped.

[illegible]pe to do better next week a[illegible] I feel that we will if our offense clicks a little better than it did Saturday. Perhaps the line-up will be revamped a little.

Fediganites Gain Lead In Intramural Race

GIGOLOS, AUSTINITES WON TWO GAMES IN MURAL COURT PLAY

Day-Hops and Alumni Each Win One; Penthousers and C. & F. Lose Twice

HART PACES FEDIGAN FIVE

By PHIL DUNN

By virtue of victories over the two Day-Hop groups Fedigan Hall now holds undisputed possession of first place in the intra-mural basketball standings.

Last Tuesday afternoon the Gigolos took the measure of the Businessmen by a good 52-32 margin. "Buzz" Hart and Vic Sandor, with nine counters each, led the Fedigan-ites in point making, but were not far ahead of Skelba and Costello, each of whom got eight. Wisnewski of C. F. was high scorer of the game with six double-deckers.

Tuesday evening saw Austin take the Greenies into camp to the tune 33-31. As the score indicates, it was a good game with the outcome never certain. Alumni trailed 19-11 at halftime; but came near winning in the second half when, paced by Muench, they outscored the Blueshirts, 20-14. Muench tossed in 10 points to lead his team; "Mick" Cuskey led the Austinites by accounting for eight of his team's markers.

Dalina Leads Day-Hops

Danny Dalina made five field goals and a foul in the game between the two Mendel teams and led his Day-Hops to a crushing 39-14 win over the Penthousers. In this game, Keating, the Grey's star center, sprained his ankle and will not see action with the Day-Hops for several days. Before he left the game, however, Keating contributed eight points to a winning cause as did his teammate, Depersio.

The most important game of the week took place Wednesday night. The only unbeaten quintets in the league faced each other, and—oddly enough—a poor game ensued. None of the great basketball of which both teams are capable was shown, and the score was exceptionally low.

After trailing 7-4 at the half, Fedigan's Gigolos emerged on top by a 20-17 count. Both teams played fairly good guarding games, but their offensive strength was lacking. "Buzz" Hart again led Fedigan's scorers, this time with eight markers. For the Mendel Day-Hop five Wood, Corr, Depersio and McMahon each garnered three points.

Austinites Trim Penthousers

With Ralph Fioretti contributing 19 points, and Carl Pantaleo and "Bucky" Maley adding 10 each, Austin had little trouble in submerging Fr. McQuades Mendel outfit in Wednesday' second game. The final score of this encounter was 55-35. Little can be said about this game. Mendel supplied fight and did score frequently, but they were no match for the Blue aggregation. Crumb and Bannigan sparked the Mendel attack, the former scoring nine and the latter eight points.

On Thursday afternoon the first overtime game of the season was played when at the end of regulation time a winner could not be decided in the Alumni-C. & F. tilt. In the extra period the frosh made four to the C. & F. team's two, to leave the scene of battle with their first win in basketball since they entered Villanova. Lanky Jim Halpin was high man for his team with a total of 10 points. Muench of the same team had eight, "Bud" O'Connell rang up 14 scores for the Business five, but this was not enough to stem the tide, and the Green won by a score of 32 to 30.

Thundering Plainsmen

Meagher's leading guards. Both are tall heavyweights and fast enough to lead the intereference when those speedy Auburn backs start running. Six top-notch centers grace the Auburn roster and all of them would be welcome at any school in the country. So far this season one hundred and ninety pound "Malvy" Morgan has proven a worthy successor to the great Les Antley, who starred for the Orange at Shibe Parke last Fall. Mal is an all-around athlete—a big raw-boned giant, who steps aside for no man. Enthusiastic southerners say that he is even better than Les Antley—which is pretty good!

At quarterback is a veteran of past campaigns, the stocky, 170-pound alternate-captain "Pig" Walker. Coach Meagher considers him one of the best blocking backs in the country. Besides his blocking ability, "Pig" is also an ace passer and a smart, crafty field general.

Backs Look Great

The "Tarrant City Express," short, speedy "Spec" Kelley is Auburn's leading left-halfback. Spec is a "ten-second man" on the track and combines shiftiness with sheer speed on the gridiron.

"Swivel-hipped; classy punter, brilliant passer; excellent pass receiver!" That about sums up the virtues of the Auburn "mighty mite," George Kenmore. A junior, Kenmore is rapidly shaping into All-American form and it will take plenty of heads-up football to cut him down.

Charley Haynsworth and "Pel" Sitz are fighting it out for the Tiger's fullback berth. Both are powerful line-plungers, swell blockers, and linebacker-uppers. Haynsworth enjoys a slight edge over his rival because of his weight. A star-studded backfield!

Plainsmen Have Tough Schedule

So far this Fall the Alabama boys have shown up fine against the toughest kind in opposition. They trounced Birmigham-Southern in the first game and then were tied by the "Green Wave" of Tulane for the second successive year. Undefeated Tennessee, 13-0 conquerors of Alabama, barely beat out the Auburnites in the next fray, 7-0. Rebounding from the Tennessee defeat the Alabamans trounced Mississippi State, 20-6. Georgia Tech's "Ramblin' Wreck" wrecked the Orange and Blue's hearts when they escaped with a 7-6 triumph over the Meaghermen. This kind of a defeat makes a team thirst for blood so it's "Wildcats Beware."

The battle will mark the fourth meeting between Jack Meagher and "Clipper" Smith as rival coaches. They both played in the same era of Notre Dame football, the "Clipper" entering the South Bend school the year that Meagher left. Their first coaching meeting was a few years back when "Clipper's" Santa Clara team met Rice, coached by Meagher.

Villanova-Penn

But "fate clouds" soon covered up those scoring rays of light, when the Blue and White was pushed back ten yards on their four tries through the line.

Cuskey's Kicking, a Highlight

A highlight of the second half was a punting deal between Villanova's Cuskey and Penn's Crisp. Cuskey on several occasions, sent off boots that would have received crowd admiration on a clear day and therefore proved spectacular under such hampering "dampering" conditions.

The all lenient father of time, realized that neither squad was so far superior to the other to reach the hoped for goal on four consecutive downs, and so mercifully called the muddy battle to a halt.

Players covered with mud, tackles made with a "thud," and noses streaming with blood, were three good reasons why the crowd did not desert their scampering charges and seek shelter from the drizzling showers.

Blue Good On Defense

Once again the Villanova lads showed opponents their defensive prowess, the same prowess which they displayed to the Rutgers eleven two weeks ago. Penn was considered to be the favorite at the "kickoff," as was Rutgers, but these Blue and White "little men" have the admirable habit of "kicking off" the favorite.

A win last Friday for Penn would have put them in the running for the league championship, but the "little Wildcats" pulled their high hopes earthward and watched them splash into a "grid river."

McGurk turned in a stellar performance for Villanova with his fine blocking and tackling. Lombardo made his presence known to the "eleven men from Penn" by turning in his usual excellent mode of play. Timmens, McManus and Cuskey also deserve their share of praise, along with the rest of the squad for the part they played in keeping a good Penn team from a possible league championship.

each contributed a point to the scoring.

All the scoring was done in the second half. Three scoring opportunities were lost by the Kittens in the first half of the game. Temple once stopped a Villanova drive on the one-yard line, halted another advance by recovering a Kitten fumble on the four, and held for downs on the nine.

Estimates placed the attendance at approximately 2000 people. Among the officials at the game, aside from Stan Baumgartner—who was umpire—was Charlie Berry one time catcher and now coach of the Philadelphia American League Baseball team.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

All Intramural basketball games scheduled for Tuesday, November 1, will be played on Wednesday, November 2. This change was made because there are no classes on Tuesday, and the C. & F. and Mendel Day-Hop teams will not be present to play their games backstage or in my apartment."

Housekeeping brought another topic to our mind. It was a burning question and the answer was a flare. Take heed, fellows.

"Are you married Miss Logan?"

"No. I'm not."

We let it go at that. It was a moot question.

Wanted a Profession

"You no doubt had an early ambition, Ella. What was it,"

"As far back as I can remember I always wanted to be a professional lady, that is, a physician or a lawyer. Probably medicine appealed to me most. And I have witnessed quite a few operations, too. In Germany, while I was there sometime ago, my sister and I attended many of them. You see, I don't go out much and I can do anything I please in my time off. But as it is, I feel very much at home doing my work now."

She is contemplating no future in the movies since her personal appearance tour has been so successful and when it comes to an end then she intends to draw up plans for musical comedies of the type that were so popular as the previous ones. "52nd Street," "Goldwyn Follies," and "Top of the Town."

The parting question asked Ella was how it felt to see her name in lights.

"Oh well, I'm used to it now. I was in England that I first saw it. Late in the afternoon it was. You know, one of those typical cold afternoons. I stopped there watching them. It just warmed me to the depths."

And Ella warmed us to the depths, too.

Ella has a lot of pet peeves, especially "that foreign situation." She spoke authoritatively on it with no holds barred. But she asked not to be quoted hoping that it would be settled in the best interests of all.

Now that we've left her our impression has become more indelible. It will be the same with you, too." "Right down to the depths."

Relations Society Reorganizes Under Rev. W. J. Lunney

Joins Catholic Student Peace Federation; New Members Welcomed

International Relations Club, which is one of the older student organizations on the campus, has recently re-organized under Rev. William J. Lunney, O. S. A.

In recent years it has carried the prestige and name of Villanova to many of the other eastern colleges and universities. This year will be no exception as the plans of the club have been carefully laid.

Recently, the club joined the Catholic Student Peace Federation, which is composed of a very active group of Catholic College students, who are interested vitally in the world-wide observance of peace.

The Central European situation will occupy the attention of the club for the present. The discussions relative to this present-day problem are informal and all sides are given full consideration.

New students will be welcomed by the older members at tomorrow's meeting, which will be held in Room 111, at 1 P. M.

DR. EDW. HAENISH DELIVERS LECTURE ON SPECTROSCOPY

Chemical Society Will Visit Pennsylvania Salt Company Today

Spectroscopy and its application to the chemical industry was the topic of a lecture delivered by Dr. Edward L. Haenish, head of the chemical engineering department and moderator of the Chemical Society of Villanova College, last Monday evening in the Mendel Amphitheater.

Dr. Haenish's lecture is the second in a series of three dealing with this subject.

Emphasizing the fact that much valuable time is saved in making both qualitative and quantitative analyses spectroscopically, Dr. Haenish outlined the procedure generally followed.

Spectroscopy is based on the fact that each element has its own particular wave length. The unknown substance is heated until it is glowing hot then photographed on glass plates. Since the wave length of the crucible in which the unknown is heated is already known, the appearance of the unknown wave length is easily distinguished. The analysis is then completed when the spectrum of the unknown is compared with the spectroscopic chart of the other elements.

After Dr. Haenish's lecture, plans were made for a visit to be made today to the plant of the Pennsylvania Salt Manufacturing Company in Philadelphia. This company manufactures, besides various salts, sulphuric acid which is much used in chemical laboratories.

Rev. E. M. Dwyer Introduces First Philosophy Group

Delate to Address Members of New Seminar This Week

First meeting of the newly formed Philosophy Seminar was held last Tuesday afternoon under the direction of Rev. Edward M. Dwyer, O. S. A., Ph. D., professor of Philosophy at Villanova.

The seminar, composed of those superior philosophy students whom Fr. Dwyer invites to participate, is planned to afford an opportunity for students discussion of philosophical problems.

At each of the weekly meetings, a student will discuss a topic chosen by himself; another student will analyze the topic and comment on the speaker's exposition. Until some conclusions have been reached about the topic of a meeting, subsequent gatherings will witness no new subject for discussion.

At this week's meeting, Thomas Delate, senior in the School of Arts, will consider the "Relations of the Physical and Philosophical Sciences." After Joseph Quigley comments upon the talk, a general discussion will take place.

Among the students in attendance a high degree of interest manifested itself during the course of the meeting. Dr. Hartman is quoted as having said, "We are more than pleased by the academic and intellectual progress being made in the History Seminar since students attending are favorably co-operating in provoking discussion."

ciety, and Belle Masque, dramatic society.

Fr. Sullivan will also act as coach of the freshman debating society. He is qualified for this task through studies in these subjects at the University of Southern California, and at Oxford University as well as through practical experience in teaching dramatics.

On assuming his new position, Fr. Sullivan remarked to the reporter that it was his desire to continue the achievements of the last two years in an effort to bring alive the traditions and respect Villanova held long ago in the dramatic field.

Fr. Boyle, who was instrumental in the organization of the co-recreational ventures in revolving dramatic productions, expressed his concern that the approaching entertainment be successful. He sees a fostering of an increased friendship and a co-operative spirit flowing from the dramatic endeavors to all relations between the colleges.

If the inauguration is successful the authorities will go onward with further plans. He emphasized that as so much depended on the good will of the students to give the enterprise impetus all students should try to lend their support through attendance.

Huge Rally To Be Staged

GYMNASIUM SCENE OF GIGANTIC AFFAIR THIS FRIDAY NIGHT

Spirit Rises to New Peak; Bonfire Will be Featured

PROMINENT SPEAKERS WILL ADDRESS LARGE GATHERING

By LARRY KNAPHLE

Villanova school spirit, fostered by a traditional athletic rivalry, will reach its zenith this Friday evening, 8:30 o'clock, in the college Field House, on the occasion of the annual Temple football pep rally.

Assembling first in the gym, the Wildcats adherents will give vocal expression to that dominant theme of the week "Beat Temple." Physical impetus to that demand will be supplied Saturday—an impetus accelerated by the pre-game fever heat generated at the rally by the entire student body. Through the medium of cheers and songs in place of passes and off-tackle plays the 'Cat rooters will add their bit to an expectant victory.

Speakers Introduced

Speakers of the evening to be introduced by Frank Mozzi, chairman of Student Council, will include Rev. Jerome A. Mahoney, O. S. A., Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., and Kirby Cushing, publicity director of the college. Various sport columnists of the city newspapers have also been invited to attend. Letters to this end have been sent to "Red" Smith of the Record, Ross Kaufman of the Bulletin, Perry Lewis of the Inquirer, and Tommy Lovett of the Evening Ledger. Student Council also hopes to have present Byrum Saam, the radio announcer of Villanova's games.

Needing rest for the supreme effort of the morrow it is doubtful if members of the team will attend. Coach "Clipper" Smith and assistant "Vince" McNally will add to the proceedings as representa-

ROUTES TO TEMPLE STADIUM COMPILED

Lists of Trolley, Automobile Directions for Saturday's Classic

Below are given the best routes both by automobile and trolley to get to Temple Stadium, Vernon Rd., and City Line, Philadelphia. These routes have been compiled by the VILLANOVAN, for those who are unfamiliar with the streets of the Quaker city.

By Automobile

The direct route from the central part of the city is north on Broad St. to its end, left on Cheltenham Ave. to Vernon Rd. and the parking ground adjacent to the Stadium. Another route, longer in distance but shorter in time, is over Benjamin Franklin Parkway to the East River Drive in Fairmount Park, then on to the Wissahickon Drive (joins East River Drive at Ridge Ave. and City Line Ave.) Continue to the Lincoln Drive, to dead-end and turn right to Germantown Ave., double car tracks, bear right again and at first traffic light turn left on Mt. Airy Ave. and follow till you come to the Stadium.

By the latter route the heavy traffic on Broad St. is avoided. Thos

VICTORY AND COMMON SENSE

EVER SINCE the Temple-Villanova football classic was inaugurated a friendly rivalry of the highest type has characterized the team play and the conduct of the respective student bodies.

Year by year the game enjoys increasing interest on the part of football fans in the Philadelphia area. Sports writers unhesitatingly acclaim the game as a "natural."

A game of this type has a great attraction for many who have little interest in either institution or in football itself. They look for a lot of zip and spectacular playing in the game. They want to see plenty of excitement in the stands. They will side with the wining team — and when the game is over they are for celebrating in what they think is collegiate fashion — down with the goal posts — carry away the markers — break everything in sight! Their vicarious enjoyment is all at student expense. The alumni and student body of the winning team gets the blame.

VILLANOVA HOPES TO WIN ON SATURDAY! IF OUR HOPES ARE REALIZED — LET'S TAKE THE WIN IN STRIDE AND WITH RESTRAINT. DON'T GIVE ENCOURAGEMENT TO THE TYPE OF FOOTBALL FAN WHO WANTS TO HELP DEMOLISH EVERYTHING IN SIGHT.

The future of the Temple game largely depends on the ability of the fans to preserve good order and decorum.

AS STUDENTS LET'S DO OUR PART TO CO-OPERATE IN REMEDYING THE ABUSES WHICH THREATEN THE FUTURE ATHLETIC RELATIONS OF TEMPLE AND VILLANOVA.

Temple--Villanova Football Classic Will Present Rivalry Of Coaches

"Clipper" Smith and "Pop" Warner Meet For Third Time Since Former Assumed Coaching Duties Here; Each Has One Victory

By MURRAY ZEALER

With the world of activity that has been happening on the Villanova College campus in the past few weeks, the Detroit game in the past, the game with South Carolina still a taunt, Villanova with its Wildcats under "Clipper" Smith is facing the "Old Foe's" Owl of Temple.

This game presents more than a rivalry between Temple University and Villanova College, it goes further back than this, it is a rivalry of coaches. "Pop" Warner has been plagued by the advances of "Clipper" Smith from out on the West Coast to his present position at Villanova College. To really understand this new angle on the Villanova-Temple game it is necessary to trace the history of "Clipper" Smith and just why he is called the "Clipper."

Nine out of ten people know that Mr. Maurice Smith's nickname is "Clipper," but how many can tell how he acquired it? Thereby hangs a tale. It seems that the Notre Dame team, of which Smith was an important component, was playing the Great Lakes Naval Training base, and a certain guard on the Ramblers was causing the Sailors no end of worry and torment. So much so, that one of the Gobs entered the dressing room of the Rockne troup and wanted to know the name of the guard who had caused so much trouble during the afternoon. "Oh, that fellow," replied teammates, "That was 'Clipper' Smith."

This guard who had caused so much trouble for the opposition was a mere lad of 145 pounds when he started to play for Knute Rockne and was the first of the watchem 'guards for which Notre has become famous.

From the tutelage of the Grand Old Coach the "Clipper," in 1921, accepted the position of head coach of Columbia University of Portland. Not much had been heard of this sent of learning, and many wondered why Smith should choose this place in preference to a larger college. But the "Clipper" had his reason.

From 1921 on through the next two years Columbia's football star began its ascendency under the able coaching of M. J. Smith, Notre Dame, '21. With the handicap of poor material to be overcome, Clipper's feat of bringing the small college out of the fire was all the greater. Many abler and larger opponents fell victims to the strategy of the former Notre Dame luminary.

"Clipper's" fame spread about the coast, and as a result, Gonzaga of Spokane, Washington, took the lad into its arms and installed him as head coach. History repeated itself and Gonzaga's football saga became definitely brighter and more pleasant to its adherents. The crowning effort of the Smith regime was the successful conquest of Slip Madigan's St. Mary's Gaels. Incidentally, Messrs. Maidgan and Smith were teammates under Knute Rockne. By 1928, four years after he entered Gonzaga, the "Clipper" packed up his bags and set sail for Santa Clara.

The "Clipper" is facing Pop again for the third time and this time is one of importance to both. Both have one game apiece since the inauguration of Clipper Smith as coach of Villanova College. Both are going to be out and trying to out-maneuver the other on the playing field next Saturday.

Warnermen Loom As Threat To Villanova's Unbeaten Record of Two Seasons

Owls, Smarting From Four Defeats, Determined to Snap Blue's Streak; "Clipper" Smith Wary Over Outcome

Villanova's undefeated Wildcats will face another serious menace to an unblemished pathway for national football recognition when they meet their traditional rivals, the Temple Owls, in the eleventh consecutive contest Saturday afternoon at Temple Stadium.

The football relationship which has existed between these two institutions has attracted great interest, near and far, because of the intense but, nevertheless, friendly rivalry predominating at the games. The Blue and White holds the edge of six wins and a tie in the series which has been marked by some of the finest, most spectacular and most thrilling football ever to be witnessed in this area.

Although the Blue finally came through and showed a football prowess, which Villanova fans have been looking for all season, against Auburn, the Smithmen will have to be at their best to continue undefeated. Temple still remembers that 33-0 reversal of last year and a victory over their traditional grid-foes will take the sting out of defeats administered this season by some of the leading grid combinations in the country.

Owls on Rebound

Everything seems to be in favor of the Templars this season. Smarting from the 33-0 defeat handed them by Holy Cross last Saturday, after outplaying them for the first half, the Warnermen will throw all cautions to the wind and stake everything to crush the Wildcats. At the same time the boys from the Main Line will have to guard against a let-down after their fine offensive showing against the Plainsmen, whose goal line has been crossed only twice in one game by Rice, one of the leading teams in the Southwest.

The only apparent weakness in the Owl defense this season seems to be against an aerial attack. The Owl forward line held remarkably against the running plays of Holy Cross but in the second half the

PREPARATIONS SET BY VARIOUS HALLS FOR BEST DISPLAY

Dormitories Vieing for Decoration Plaque; Fedigan Winner Last Year

One need only to notice the business-like antics going on in the various halls on the campus to learn that the crucial football game with the Owls of Temple is in the offing. A sure sign of this annual classic is the preparations of the residents in their respective lodgings for the building decoration contest. To the most colorfully decorated hall on the campus goes a one year possession of the Connelly Plaque which was put into competition for the first time last year by Mr. William Connelly, '27, Villanova's number one alumnus.

The entire Student Council will sit as judges of the best "dressed-up" hall and select the winner. The act of judging will take place on Thursday, November 10, with the victor being announced at the pep rally on Friday night. At this rally the plaque will be presented to the moderator of the winning hall.

The two upper class halls, Austin and Fedigan, as ever arch-rivals, are really out to win, considering themselves the only combatants on the field. However, there are the two Freshman Halls, Alumni and Mendel, to consider, and according to the representatives of said buildings, they are very much in the race.

Defending Fedigan Hall, upon the words of its moderator, the Rev. J. J. Vrana, O. S. A., does not intend to rest upon its laurels of last fee if the opinion of the Villanova year's victory in the decoration contest. With the burden of preparations resting not on a single chairman, but on a selected group, a better program is hoped for by Father Vrana. The actual suggestions and ideas for decorations are being handled by a committee of three: Louis Dubino, Joseph Bochetto, and Arthur Fanning. The financial difficulties entailed in the production of suitable expositions will be solved by Raymond Moynihan and Clem Lavin. Dubino was asked for a statement and compiled with: "I feel assured that Fedigan Hall will successfully defend its decorative crown because of the fine spirit of co-operation already shown."

LET'S GO, VILLANOVA

THERE is more to the winning of a ball game than sending a well-coached squad out on the field to run mechanically through a series of plays. If that were the sum of football, twenty-two robots might be substituted with more efficiency. However, its great attraction, and one of the great lessons learned in college, is the observation of the manifestation of the power of spirit. Such spirit has been exhibited repeatedly by our team this year. But a super-abundance of this spiritual power will be needed at Saturday's clash to overwhelm a Temple Owl vibrating with that same intangible element.

In these few fleet days spaced with the anticipation of the exciting fracas there is much preparation to be made by Villanovans who enjoy the zest of a surging victory. The atmosphere must be made to tingle with a single determined thought. There must be a united and unqualified support so that the loyalty will help induce in the team that confidence necessary for the smooth operation of our grid system. Let us lay the foundation now so that our cheers later will have some meaning. Speak a few words of encouragment to your friends on the team when you meet them on the campus. The traditional and colorful student campaign annually preceding the Temple game is the best means of demonstrating by wide co-operation that we are back of them solidly. Halls and day students are urged to vie with one another in the display of inspirational messages, not alone for the prize plaque, but as evidence that they are doing their part in rousing the spirtual forces that will explode in an overflowing Owl's nest.

ALMA MATER
By Al Dubin and Joseph Burke

When the twilight shadows gather
Out upon the Campus green,
When the blue and purple night
Comes stealing on the scene
Loyal sons of Villanova
Sing a hymn a praise
To our dear old ALMA MATER
And our College days.

Villanova, Villanova,
When we leave your shelt'ring walls,
We shall leave an echo ringing
Through your treasured halls
We will leave an echo ringing
In the silent night
While our memories are singing
Of the Blue and White.

When the last big game is over
And the last roll call is heard
When the oldest pedagogue
Has had his final word
We shall come to ALMA MATER
In our dreams again
With a prayer for Villanova
And a sweet amen.

On Auburn Game

FOR THE first time this year our team showed signs of offensive co-ordination. That, I believe, is the outstanding reason for our success against the Auburn outfit. The whole team played the kind of football they are capable of playing and it happened that Auburn was around to absorb the effects of that playing. Don't get the idea that Auburn wasn't a good team. They were plenty good.

The great passing of our sophomore, Nick Basca, certainly was reason for elation. He was superb. Throughout the afternoon he pitched perfect strikes to his receivers. The receivers also showed good form, notably Frank Bukofski. They were usually right there when Basca's tosses came down. The Auburn pass defense was not weak and it was only by remarkable playing that we were able to complete so many.

Nowak Blocks Well

Bukofski's only flaw on Saturday was Auburn's end-running. The Southerners got around him a few times. Walt Nowak, at the other end, played fine football. His blocking of "Bo" Russell, Auburn's great tackle, was certainly something to marvel at. He actually stopped "Bo" cold.

The center of our line showed up much better than they have at any time so far this Fall. Matty Kuber and the others were at their best. Dave DiFilippo's protection for Basca, when Nick was passing, was fine. Dave plays hard, tough, football every second that he is in there and on Saturday he even exceeded his usual outstanding work.

Tackles, Still a Problem

Our tackles still present quite a problem. Against Auburn they showed quite a bit of improvement over past performances, but there is still room for a whole lot of improvement. We must correct this defect this week in order to stop Temple's great running attack. As you know, "Pop" Warner concentrates his running attack on the tackles. The whole basis of his system is to work fast, hard-hitting plays inside and outside the tackles. Unless our tackles show considerable improvement those tackle slants are going to cause us a lot of trouble next Saturday afternoon. Something will have to be done.

Howlett's kicking against Auburn was fine. His good work in this department helped us no little in staving off the Auburn threats. Harry "Baby Tank" Mazzei's calling of plays was top-notch. Our system of football needs smart quarterbacking if it is to have any success. Harry left nothing to be desired in this department against the Plainsmen. We are hoping that he shows the same good judgment next Saturday against Warner's aggregation, who are not easy to fool.

McMahon Crashes Well

McMahon's straight line crashing helped our offense much. Good running by Tom kept the Auburn defense in close enough to make our passing work as it did. Without a good running attack he a threat our passing would have been hampered. Auburn would have been able to concentrate their defense on our passes, but McMahon's work prohibited this.

Chisick, as usual, was adept at backing up the line. He is smart and powerful enough to stop many otherwise perfect plays.

Plainsmen Hard Hitters

The Auburn backfield was about the fastest, hardest-hitting quartet that we have met so far this year. We thought that South Carolina's backs, particularly Al Grygo, were good but they don't measure up to Auburn's secondary. At least they did not on the day we met them. Kelley, Sitz, Haynesworth, and Walker even surpassed the reports of Southern sports writers. We expected them to be good, but we never expected so many hard-hitting men on one ball club. Their leg-drive was about the best I have seen in a quartet of backs this Fall.

We sincerely hope that Berrier, Lukac, and the rest up at Temple Stadium are not as good as those Auburn speedsters. If they are we will be in for a tough afternoon!

'Cats Gain Confidence

We feel that we gained much valuable exeprience against Auburn's great team. We hope to benefit by this experience on Saturday.

Hy Malkin—Soph Engineer: "Always a tough game. Temple's record isn't too impressive, but they haven't shown everything as far as Villanova is concerned."

Pat Patterson—Freshman Education: "I never saw Temple play but if they're anything like their Frosh, we'll take them."

Dave Whalen — Freshman Commerce: "A sloppy game unless we show some improvement. Past records don't mean a thing here."

MAURICE J. 'CLIPPER' SMITH, head football coach, "Vince and I feel that this Temple game is the hardest and most difficult of the entire season. Last year's 33-0 victory and Temple's so-called poor showing this season don't mean a thing.

"I believe that Temple has played one of the most strenuous schedules in the country. After their showing against Holy Cross last Saturday, Temple doesn't have to improve its defense against running plays and we can rest assured that its pass defense won't be as easy to crack.

"All these stories, quite audible and prevalent, that Villanova will trounce the Owls have no foundation at all. This game wasn't played last year nor at any other time; but it will have to be played Saturday, November 12, 1938."

Assistant Coach Vince McNally . . . Refused to commit himself when called upon to predict the outcome of Saturdays big game. Vince merely shrugged his shoulders and said: "I am afraid to put the jinx on the boys."

GLENN S. "POP" WARNER, "The Old Fox," of football and coach of the Temple University football machine looks back on past Villanova-Temple games with evident optimism. The Owl mentor recognizes another great Villanova team in "Clipper" Smith's 1938 squad.

"We realize," commented Warner, "that we are going up against another great Villanova team. Although their record is better than ours, I think we can do much better than last year."

FRED SWAN, assistant coach and right-hand man of the Temple mentor, backed up the opinion of Warner with a more forceful statement, "I don't care what the records of the two teams are! When the game comes all the dope goes in the ash can. The Temple-Villanova games have always been hard-fought. It is the game in which you can never tell the outcome."

Charles Winterburn, Owl Freshman coach and scout for "Pop" Warner, said, "Well, we'll do our best."

Inclement Weather Conditions Hamper Kittens' Ground and Aerial Attack

MEET DIPLOMATS FRIDAY

Invading Johnstown in an attempt to gain their 22nd consecutive victory, the Villanova Frosh were held to a scoreless tie by a lighter St. Francis team at Point Stadium before a small crowd.

Each team had one real scoring chance, the Frannies' coming in the first and the Kittens' in the third period. The Saints' opportunity came as a result of a fumble by Behot on the Villanova 19. Three line bucks and a pass gained only three yards, however, and the Kittens took the ball on their 16.

The yearlings' chance was ended when a pass thrown by Bill Howlett was intercepted. Gaining a first down on the Saints' 21, and their running attack having bogged down, the Kittens took to the air. Two passes were grounded before the interception that ended the drive.

The game was evenly contested as is evidenced by the fact that both teams scored four first downs. Good punting by both elevens featured the game, there being only one sizable run—a 25-yard jaunt by Matlin, of St. Francis.

Both teams were hampered by the Crusaders took to the air, scoring and setting up touchdowns by this method of attack. "Pop" Warner, one of the shrewdest coaches in football history, will attempt to remedy this weakness in preparation for the Blue tilt, and will try to make sure that the Wildcats most potent weapon shall not prove devastating against his eleven.

Temple Line Strong

It's not very likely that Warner will build a new defense to stop the Blue and White aerial attack, because "Pop" has used practically the same pass defense since the forward pass became an integral part of football.

In all his years' of coaching no opposition has ever passed so well against this defense as has been true this season. Probably the Temple backs, seeing action for the greater part of the games played, aren't capable of breaking up an aerial invasion. It wouldn't be surprising then, if the 'Cats take the field against the Owls Saturday and find an entire new backfield facing them. One that may not compare offensively with the unit already used but one that is much more defensively efficient.

Temple coaches, no doubt, are well pleased with the forward line that started against Holy Cross. This line did what many others attempted to do and failed; that is, stop Bill Osmanski, the Crusader's contribution as an All-American candidate. Charlie Walters, appointed game captain for the tussle, and Joe Mooney ,two boys who saw action last year against the Blue will probably start at the wing positions for the Cherry and White.

Palmer at Tackle

At the tackle slots Warner will no doubt send "Hippo" Palmer and Grandovic. Both boys started against Holy Cross and turned in commendable performances . The center of the line will be wel ifortified with Drulis and McGee filing in at guards and either Wehler or Katz at he snapper position. This is the same line that started against Holy Cross and, no doubt, will present as impregnable a forward wall as the Wildcats have bucked up against all season.

It is doubtfull whether or not "The Old Fox" will atart the same backfield combination of Stevens, Berrier, Lulac and Nichols that performed against the Crusaders, against the Smithmen, because of their weakness on pass attacks.

However, if the boys show any improvement in practice Warner will start this unit because of their running prowess. Temple has adequate reserve strength among the backs. All of them have seen action this season and are raring to go against their arch-rivals. Johnny Kovacevich, who has been supplanted by Stevens will be ready for duty. His kicking is still remembered and may prove a deciding factor in the outcome. Reserve halfbacks are Powers, Juralewicz, Bowles and Burns. Honochick will no doubt se eplenty of action, alternating at the fullback position with Nichols.

"Clipper" Smith and Vince McNally will probably send out the same team that started against Auburn with probably a few changes in the line. A close battle is expected with Villanova slightly favored because o ftheir sensational victory over the Auburn Tigers. However, Temple, lashed to a fighting fury by the incessant drubbings of the current season, will be doubly inspired in this traditional grid spectacle and may turn the tables.

THANKS for the swell birthday gift, Wildcats . . . Yes, you guessed it. My birthday was last Saturday and that 25-12 victory helped me to celebrate one of the most pleasant anniversaries I've ever experienced.

It certainly looks as if "Clipper" Smith has discovered the right unit to go out and play football the way Wildcat fans like to see the game played. It's a pity that more grid enthusiasts wouldn't invest a couple of bucks and see a good club . . . only 18,000 fans at a contest which would have packed the house in any other city.

C. & F. MOVES INTO FOURTH

By PHIL DUNN

Only four games were played in the Intramural Basketball League last week, but enough happened to make up for the postponement of Thursday evening's contests.

The biggest surprise of the week was C. & F.'s complete reversal of form and their two wins—the first of the season—over a scrappy Mendel Resident team and a faltering Mendel Day-hop group. By their two victories, the Businessmen climbed from last into fourth place in the standings.

Stack Leads Businessmen

In a game played on Wednesday afternoon the C. & F. crew, led by Jack Stack with 11 points, powered their way through a very much smaller and lighter Penthouse club and emerged on the long end of a 41-30 count. The game was much closer than the score indicates, however, as it was only in the latter part of the game that the Business five drew away from their weakened opponents.

The score stood at 17-16 at the half, but with the start of the final period the C. & F. team turned on the heat and with Jim Schelle scoring 7 of his 9 markers, came out on top. The shooting of Mariani, Daly and Clark was the feature of Mendel's game.

Gigolos Still Winning

The Gigolos continued on their merry way when they trounced the Alumni Greenies by a 44-21 margin on Wednesday night. Connors paced the Fedigan five by scoring 10 points while "Buzz" Hart followed him up with four double-deckers. For the Greenies "Whitey" McKenna garnered five points, and Mowen and Reid each got four.

The second overtime game of the season was also played on Wednesday night. Austin Hall and the Mendel Day-hops were brought together, and at the end of the extra period the Day-hops were declared the winners by the scant margin of one point. The end of regulation time came when both teams had scored 22 markers; and by scoring four to their opponents' three in the overtime, the Greys left the floor victorious.

Dalina Leads Day-hops

Ralph Floretti led the Blueshirt point-makers. He contributed nine points to his team's total, while Dan Dalina was high scorer for the Day-hops with seven points. Devlin with six scores was next high for the Grey.

The biggest upset of the season to date occurred on Thursday when the Businessmen accomplished the aforementioned feat of beating their commuting pals 38-26. Until this game the only team to beat the Mendel Day-hops was the pace-making Fedigan quintet.

"Bud" O'Connell rang up 12 markers for the victors, and Leaming and Schelle added eight each. For the Greys, Dalina and Devlin were again high men, this time with nine points apiece.

By SAUL WALLACH

WALKING UP the center aisle of the Villanova Field House will be no new thing for Val Rizzo, ace Wildcat tackle, when diplomas are handed out in June. Rizzo, who is in his fifth year on the Main Line campus, received his B. S. degree in Education last year with the class of 1938. This Commencement Day the former Pittsburgh scholastic star will receive his Master's degree in History, which makes him the intellectual of the 1938 Wildcats.

It's a long story this feat of Rizzo's—but here it is in a nut shell. Coming up from the freshman team as a sure varsity performer, Rizzo met unexpected competition for a starting post in Jordan Olivar, present Radnor High assistant grid coach. Harry Stuhldreher, then Villanova major-domo, alternated both on the right side of the line. All-American Eddie Michaels, who Rizzo rates the best Villanova lineman, held down a guard position in the team that year. A dearth in guards made "Clipper" Smith convert Val to a guard position which he held down all season, when the Smith Regime took over the Villanova football destinies.

Injured in Senior Year

Preparing for the 1937 undefeated season, Rizzo suffered a broken ankle in a pre-season scrimmage. He was through for the season and collegiate football for good because he was a Senior. Realizing that he had another year of football left, Rizzo decided to come back and get his master's degree as well as play again.

He was christened Valentine John Rizzo in the city of his birth, Pittsburgh, where he still lives. One of eight children including four boys, none athletes, Rizzo carved a niche for himself in the annals of Pittsburgh interscholastic football, chosen on the All-Pittsburgh team for a tackle position. He achieved this honor while starring for South Hills High School, where he captained the football and basketball teams.

Used to Play Hooky

Asked whether he achieved any fame while a student at Brechwood Public School and St. Catherine's School, he sheepishly replied: "No, unless you can consider playing hooky to see the Pirates play baseball."

Rizzo still likes to talk about his famous run against Manhattan College two years ago at Ebbets Field. Rizzo caught a forward pass intended for Raimo and romped forty yards for the score which was later nullified. After fifteen minutes of arguing, Manhattan athletes finally convinced the officials that it was he and not "Rabbit" Raimo who carried the ball.

Playing fifty minutes against Temple in his Sophomore year in a ding-dong battle which the Wildcats won 21-14, is his most thrilling remembrance. "I don't think a harder ball game was ever fought," avers Val.

Expects to Teach

"I expect to coach and teach next year, probably in Pittsburgh, but I won't be fussy if the offer comes from a school in this sector."

Rizzo likes traveling and sleeping best, perhaps that's why he decided to go to Villanova, after all it's about four hundred miles between the school and the Smoky City, and the railroad companies still find use for sleeping cars.

The "Big Red" had the largest turnout for practice in the league this year. The introduction of lightweight football was enthusiastically received and the Cornell aggregation has already proven itself worthy. They loom as a big threat to Villanova's season. It's a "must" game!

Did you know that Villanova is playing Temple this week . . . just a reminder if you've been hitting the books lately. We don't want to say much concerning this game because it's always a touchy subject. However, we think the following is in order. Villanova has come along too far these last two seasons to start going backwards . . . We believe that the Wildcats have the stuff to beat their traditional rivals . . . but it won't be an easy task . . as many are apt to believe because of Temple's record this season . . . The Owls are always dangerous and in this rivalry nothing is certain . . . If we are allowed, we'd like to suggest that the Blue be wide awake out there Saturday and play ball like they know how . . . or what Villanova has sacrificed to become prominent will amount to nothing if Temple slips in a win.

Wildcats Comment On Temple Fray

Art Murphy, hard-working halfback will be in there fighting for a Villanova victory but states about the game, "It will be for blood—they still remember 33 points—we remember 6-6. George Kamen, a tackle of no mean ability who is doing well in his attempts at filling up the gap left by the graduation of Mellus and Olivar is not overconfident, but merely says, "Mr. you will have to consult the Gods for this one, but I believe we have the edge."

John LeKee, Audubon lad who is meeting for the first time in his career at Villanova the Temple squad, will see action from the center post and will do his best to help annex another win. His only comment is, "Always a tough one."

"Whizzer" Morkum, another Sophomore addition to the Wildcat squad, will be in the Quarterback slot. He and McKee seem to have their feelings in common as both state, "It's always a tough one."

Mike Sabrinski, first string halfback and possible starter for the tilt, explains, "It is almost impossible to determine the outcome of a game that includes such traditional rivalry as Villanova and Temple. However, Villanova will be in there giving its best."

Bill Romanowski, junior halfback can find only this to say, "Being a traditional game, anything may happen. The team getting the breaks will win."

Dave DiFilipo, one of the mainstays of the guard position and an all around hard worker, finds time to say, "This is a tough one—a pass, a punt, and a prayer."

Andy Chisik, first string center and line backer extraordinary, of a conservative nature and states, "I'll save my comment until after the game—time will tell."

Stan Stress, sophomore member of the Business School who pursues his football endeavors from the end post is of the optimistic type. He has been quoted as saying, "If our passing attack clicks, we should be able to repeat last year's victory. However, I expect the game to be much closer than last year's encounter."

"Gogo" Gogolinski, injured fullback, "Temple is not easy. They will be out to slay us."

"Whitey" Urbelis, speedy quarterback thinks that Temple will be a tough opponent, but the 'Cats love their Owl meat too much to be denied."

"Buzz" Howlett, triple-threat half back, "If the boys play the way "Clipper" has taught them, you know the outcome."

"Jerry" Nerl, backfield ace, "A traditional rival is always tough."

Harry "Baby-Tank" Mazzei, the smallest man on the squad and a devastating blocker says, "Temple will try to make up for this year's disasterous season by overwhelming Villanova."

"Tom" McMahon, the fullback that crashes the line with the force of a Mack truck remarks that it is a wise bird that isn't killed during the shooting season."

"Bob" Buckley, tackle who will play in his last Temple game thinks that it will be a red hot afternoon, but that the 'Cats will take them.

"Ronnie" Tornwall, versatile lineman hopes that we emulate last year's team by playing our best game of the year against Temple.

"Pete" Yankauskas, reserve halfback, "A Wildcat always likes tasty pickings."

Harry Dhue, reserve tackle, feels that no matter what the score is, the playing will be spectacular from the viewpoint of the spectator.

John Wysocki, Villanova's contribution to the All-American ranks, will be playing his last game against Temple. He is a Senior and has been playing left end. He honestly remarks, "As usual we will give the people their money's worth."

Walt Nowak, junior right end of no mean ability encouragingly states, "We will duplicate last year's victory."

Bill Cochrane, converted tackle in his Senior year, until hampered by injuries was a fine replacement for Mellus. He finds himself lost for words to my question and merely says, "Oh! You Know." Being an understanding friend of Bill's I would say he means Villanova by two touchdowns.

Leonard Kolenda, sophomore center who is giving a fine account of himself on the football field, cautiously explains, "They will be plenty tough trying to avenge their defeats but we are out to repeat last year's meeting." Leonard is to convert from the end position and has worked himself up to the second string center position.

Harvey Buek, dependable quarterback, playing his last game against Temple, can be counted on to do his share of playing against his former teammates. When asked to comment on the coming game he comes to the point and just says, "Villanova."

Sam Monaco, North Jersey lad who is known for his fine blocking, has been made into a tackle for the coming affair. Before this time he was a second string end seeing plenty of action in the past games. Being a busy lad these days he merely states, "Villanova," and rushes off.

Matthew Kuber, is one of Villanova's sixty-minute men, playing in the guard position. For a man his size he is surprisingly fast and proved it when he intercepted a pass and sprinted, not galloped, 65 yards for a touchdown against Detroit. Matt is another Senior playing his last game against Temple. He remarks, "We are leaving last year's affair as a thing of the past and are looking into the near future to the coming Temple game as just another game in which we will have to give everything we have."

Frank Bukowski, junior left end, looks forward to the coming Temple game with interest and predicts a victory for Villanova.

Victor Cook, junior tackle, has been giving a very good account of himself on the football field until hampered by injuries. When questioned about the coming Temple game, he willingly says, "It should be another Villanova victory."

Clem Andrews, sophomore tackle—"We will make the Owl howl!"

Pete Naimo, sopohomore quarterback—"Hoping for the best!"

Ed Collins, soph end — "Plenty tough, those Owls, they have met top-notch competition."

Bill Pisclone, sophomore guard—"See me after the game."

Nick Basca, sensational soph halfback—"I ain't a sayin.'"

Vic Maconachy, sophomore tackle—"Anything can happen in a Temple-Villanova game."

Gordon Shader, plunging soph fullback — "Make no bones about it, we will win by two touchdown and an extra-point!"

"Spud" Menard, sopohomore guard—"It's a toss-up!"

Johnny Nojunas, sophomore fullback—"Breaks will decide the Temple-Villanova game."

Al "Legs" Sheldosky, lanky junior end—"We will both be in their trying, don't kid yourselves on that point."

Val Rizzo, senior who plays tackle and guard — "History will repeat; same as last year."

Tom Casper, junior guard—"Villanova will win. The 'Cats will run through and pass over the Templars."

Trainer Ray Gadsby . . . proved to be more confiding . . . "It will be a honey of a game and very close, but I am sure that the boys will come across for the "Clipper and Vince."

Frosh Coach and Chief Scout "Doc" Jacobs . . . "Temple had a let-down in the Georgetown game, but they will be up there again. It certainly looks like a tough battle."

Ray Stoviak, who played a decisive role in last season's 33-0 defeat and present coach of the Lightweights . . . "I saw Temple play quite a few of their games this season. It seems as if they have a much better organized ball club this year. The Wildcats are in for a busy afternoon."

Bill Slaughter, aide in the publicity Department . . . "The Wildcats will win again but it won't be as gory as last year. The 'Cats will win by two touchdowns."

Bob Whalen, Secretary of Villanova Athletic Association . . . "Temple will play way over their head in this ball game, but I really believe that Villanova has the stuff to win, in a game that won't be easy by any means."

Al Severance, Varsity Basketball Coach . . . "Temple is dangerous at any time, even more so in the Villanova game. The Wildcats are right on the spot and will have to be at their best to win."

OWL GRIDDERS THINK:

Charles Walters, Owl end and captain for the Villanova game: "As far as I'm concerned the game is always a toss-up. But I personally think it's going to be our year."

Joe Palmer, tackle: "They (Villanova) can't always be lucky."

down. Out of the huddle, and again it was Basca. This time the ball took wings and dropped into Frank Bukofski's arms on the Auburn 9, where the outraged Tiger secondary pulled him down. Then, after three plays gained four yards, Basca ran to his left and slipped a change of pace into the end zone, where Bukowski picked it out of the air for the Blue's first score. This took five minutes. The extra point was missed, but the Wildcats led, 6-0.

Five plays later, after the 'Cats had taken an Auburn punt on their 40, and a run-ning play was stopped, Basca faded deep and tossed a long spiraling pass across to the left to Bukowski, who had dashed behind "Spec" Kelly to catch it almost at the goal line. Fifty-five yards for a strike! Again the 'Cats failed to convert, and now led 12-0, with less than 11 minutes gone.

Tigers Score

Auburn's first score came in the second quarter when, after having been repulsed on one drive down field, they came roaring back with Dick McGowen leading the way overland on spinners through the tackles and over the guards. Finally, balked on the Blue 20, the Plainsmen took to the air, and McGowen tossed one into Gus Pearson's eager clutch for the first Auburn tally. When the Tigers, too, failed to convert, the score was 12-6, and remained at that uncomfortable point until the half ended.

As the second half opened, an Auburn fumble on their own 40 was recovered by alert Walt Nowak, playing one of the finest games in his life out there, and the Blue was moving. Quarterback Harry Mazzei, who played 60 minutes without relief, called on fullback Tom McMahon to crush the Auburn line. It bent, and Tom picked up plenty yardage. Then passes from Basca to Nowak, and to tackle Sam Monaco, on a tackle-eligible line shift, put the oval on the 4. Here a fake reverse, with Mazzei holding on to the ball and skirting his right end behind a terrific block by Basca, picked up those four yards and the Wildcats' third 6-pointer. For the third time the extra point was missed, but an 18-6 lead looked good indeed.

Forward-Lateral Ca Drive

As soon as they got the ball again, the Blue moved. McMahon tore inside tackle time and again to advance the ball from the Villanova 20 to the Auburn 46. Then Basca took the ball and ferried it through the air to Walt Nowak on the 24. Two big Auburnites wearing fierce looks interrupted Walt's trip here, so he wisely decided to lateral the pigskin to guard Matty Kuber trailing the play down the sidelines. Nobody laid a hand on Matt as he sprinted across the last stripe.

This time Mazzei converted, and the score was 25-6. However, the South never gives up, sub, and the Tiger came snarling back as big Charlie Haynsworth ripped the center of the Villanova line to shreds for consistent gains and substitute halfback Carl Happer had the Blue secondary in a turmoil with his shifty sprints. The visitors went 58 yards in nine plays on this combination, pushing back a confident mixture of 'Cat regulars and subs until Haynsworth plunged for the last score of the fray from the Villanova one yard line. Thus end the scoring, and soon, the game.

One of the most potent factors in the success of the college on the gridiron will be present, carefully guarded by the chairman of the Student Council. Crowd Demands Appearance Of Auburn's "Bo" Russell As Gridmen Are Feted By Horace Heidt At Earle Theatre

Villanova Wins Theoretical Game in Baton Contest

Wysocki, Basca, Howlett, Chisick Applauded on Stage

By LEN FLINKMAN

A rally that would have warmed the twitching muscles of his heart, cast his enthusiasm to the boundaries of the nation, and more than probably produced a capable candidate. Objectively we refer to a politician, subjectively to the rally that was exhorted to the football team previous to its annual tussle with Auburn.

As part of a swing program with Horace Heidt as chief cheer rouser at the Earle Theater last Friday evening and at his invitation members of the student body of Villanova College attended this pre-game rally. In spite of the inconvenience of the balcony where they were situated, they shouted more exhuberantly their esteem of the team and produced fight and spirit, seldom if ever, witnessed before.

Coaxed, persuaded, lured, tempted and finally kidnapped, All-American Johnny Wysocki, "Buzz" Howlett, Andy Chisick and Nick Basca put in their appearence on the stage to the thundering applause of the fans.

Further cheer and demand brought down from the balcony "Bo Russell, Auburn's All-American nominee, to share the sporting plaudits of the crowd. What a difference the stage and gridiron make of a footballer!

"Out there" they fight for glory and victory, relinquishing the pains of battle and emotion for what we onlookers term victory, but "up on the stage" under the tension of Kleig lights for a battleground the boys are shy or overcome by awe.

It might just as well have been a "Turkey Day" classic, all the "fixins" were evident.

Jack Eldracher, official baton slinger of the band, twirled his stuff. He agreed that, should he drop the baton it meant a touchdown for the Plainsmen, if caught it was a Villanova ticket to paydirt. Nary a faux pas did he produce, and superstitiously, Villanova was on her way home with the delicious meat. Even down to the cheer leaders was the rally real. M. G. M. in all their imagination could not have produced so successful a production.

Heidt's invitation came as a result of wishing to pit his baton twirling against Eldracher's, whom he heard, was possessed of exceptional ability. The rally also marked the renewal of an old acquaintance, begun out on the coast. Horace has always been an ardent rooter for the Wildcats, attending their game with Loyola on the Pacific Coast last year. He has always made it a point to introduce over his informal broadcasts alumni of the College, and during one of them, found a couple who had been married only a few hours.

Heidt had prepared for the rally a special song which he had written with Edmond Reilly, '35, former editor of the VILLANOVAN, but due to the shortness of time and practice, was unable to present it.

stronghold of the Firemen at Austin Hall, the same spirit of determination and confidence prevails. The Rev. E. B. McKee, O. S. A., Moderator, is firmly convinced of the winning possibilities of his proteges. The committee of those making the preparations, headed by James Mularkey and Paul Wade, consists of Clem Andrulewicz, Wetold Kryzwicki, and Norbert Smith. The whole committee with their moderator feels highly confident of victory in view of the progress already accomplished. Several drawings to be displayed have been finished and others are in the various stages of completion. Father McKee stated that he fully expected "his boys" to produce the winning display because of the high merit of the proposed program.

Nowak And Basca Score Touchdowns In First Half

Villanova Gridders Run Wild Before 32,000; Warnermen Tally on Pass to Powers; Mazzei and Stevens Convert

BLUE UNDEFEATED IN EIGHTEENTH TILT

By JOE PAGANO, '39
Sports Editor

Villanova's roaring Wildcats wasted no time last Saturday afternoon to confirm public opinion that the Blue and White would continue unbeaten at Temple's expense. In winning by an overwhelming score of 20-7, the Cats stretched their undefeated streak to 18 straight and now hold the edge of seven to three wins with a tie in the memorable eleven game series.

Basca started the game by kicking off to McGee who returned the ball 12 yards to the 22 where he was brought down by Wysocki. On the next play Nichols smashed off center for nine yards. Attempting the aame play with Nichols carrying, Chisick came up fast to nail him on the line of scrimmage, hitting him so hard that the pigskin took off and landed in Nowak's hands.

Nowak Tallies First Six-Pointer

Villanova's sterling end headed for paydirt and scampered 36 yards for the Blue's first tally of the day. Mazzei converted, sending the 'Cats ahead, 7-0. It happened so quickly that many fans are still trying to figure out what happened. But the Smithmen went ahead and their play for the rest of the game indicated that they were determined to stay in front.

Following an exchange of punts after Basca again kicked off to the Owls, the 'Cats were in possession of the ball on Temple's 33, when Mazzei ran Stevens' punt back from his 45 to the 33. The stage was set for Villanova's second score

Invitations to attend the smoker have been extended to the students at the University of Pennsylvania, Drexel Institute, University of Delaware, Haverford College and Swarthmore College.

Fedigan Hall Again Wins Connelly Plaque For Outstanding Display

By JAMES HAUGHTON

Displaying pageantry that would make Billy Rose feel ill, the Fedigan Hall Gigolo's originality proved too much for the brilliant banner display of the Austin Hall firesaters and again the WestEnd boys captured the Villanova Connelly plaque for the best pre-Temple game decorations.

This year's contest was the most bitter in history and it was only after much bickering that Frank Mozzi and the Student Council decided the protegees of Fathers Vrana and Donnellon had put forth the best efforts and should be declared the winner. Austin matched the Fedigan entry in many qualities, but it was the unusual ingeniousness that brought the Gigolos out on top. Alumni Hall placed third and Mendel Hall brought up the rear.

The outstanding feature of the West-End "Madri Gras" was the brilliant entrance display of a "Hotel Fedigan" marquis topped off by the notice "Home of the Stars." Two wide streamers on each side of the entrance and running the entire height of the building urged the gridiron gladiators on with "Let's Go, Wildcats."

Several large comic pictures balanced up the center display and contained such thoughts as a Wildcat questioning an Owl with "Ein ya come out to Play' 'and "If you missed the Owl Hop don't miss the Owl Roast." Another unusual sidelight was the series of cards decorating each window on the first and second floors. Each card referred to a player residing in the hall and included: "Sock 'em Wy," "Club 'em Matt," and "Make 'em Buzz, Howlett."

Father McKee's Austin entry was not to be overlooked in the judging and their brilliant banner display and comic cartoons served to keep them right in the judging fore. A huge "Beat Temple" streamer running from the wings of the hall set off the East-End pageant and was responsible for much comment from passing motorists.

A large V in the dormitory center was balanced by an excellent portrait of "Clipper" Smith from the pen of Paul Wade. Austin Decoration Chairman. To the right of this was to be found a portrait of "Clipper" priming his shotgun for a shot at eleven Owls roosting in a tree.

The fire fighting temperament of the East Enders was found in an unusual picture of the Austin Hall Fire House with the wide open doors containing the inscription, "The Firemen will put out that Red Flame." At night the shrubbery and balconies of the hall hid many brilliant colored lights and this all served to enhance the beauty of the display.

Frosh Try Hand

Newcomers to such campus activity, the Frosh managed to provide a few interesting notes but could come no where near the efforts of the upper class halls. The Alumni contingent was unusual in

Students Display Keen Enthusiasm At 11th Meeting Of Gridiron Rivals

Villanova was unfair to Temple . . .Howlett threw the touchdown pass to Nowak. . .without the aid of a Basca. . ."Pop's" cigarette bill increased. . .if a pack of Cats can't sooth his nerves, maybe a pack of Camels will. . .Temple was Dhue, but Villanova took the option.

Temple objected to the contest . . .they were never Neri enough to the goal. . .The Temple band looked good on the field. . .yes, The Temple Band!. . .It must be said however, that both teams fought with every ounce of sportsmanship they had. . .A few skirmishes here and there, but after all, a Temple-Villanova game isn't a ping-pong contest. The fans were arduous in their spirit. . .The weather was fine. . .as to the decisions of the judges. . .they can be consoled . . .It was not a Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech game in in any sense.

Father Sparrow was singing during the half. . .The plane above the field was advocating the use of Marlin Razor Blades. . .The 'Cats cut the Owls' throats. . .and the Sparrow flittered on. . .That's poor Ethics. . .The Villanova rooters got the goal posts, Broad Street got the splinters.

That first touchdown was sure swift. . .if you had a date with you, she was justified in asking how to make a touchdown. . .That V-shaped huddle the 'Cats used was something new to the fans. . . leave it to "Clipper" to devise a technique for quick action. . . Mazzei's punt returns were still a maze to the Warnermen.

Villanova fired all eleven plugs . . .We noticed that the Temple bench was situated in the stands . . .good way to play the game Bottles falling out of the stands were only pop bottles . . .the spirits of the crowd was low as compared to last year's cheer.

Basca's long dash was a sweetheart, a down-hearted one for the opposition. . .Even the fans across the stripes cheered him when he left the field. . .and only a sophomore. . .Well, everyone is happy . . .Temple got their players back, the 'Cats and that certain dorm were "Fed-i-gan" with that bacon. So long. . .see ya in the stands next year.

LEST WE FORGET

SEVERAL weeks have passed since the present special session of the state legislature was called by Governor Earle to consider, among other things, a law prohibiting the purchase and use of pyrotechnics except by experts. Despite the extensive protest last Fourth of July, after an exceptional number of deaths and injuries resulted from amateur handling of ever dangerous explosives, the very politicians who publicly bewailed the sad accidents have not done their duty to prevent the conditions from happening again.

Now is the time to put pressure on your representatives in the General Assembly to fulfill the promises made following the Independence Day catastrophes, as they were indeed catastrophic to every family in which they occurred. Distracted parents, bawling children, screaming injured, and crackling dead are forgotten now by ears close to certain manufacturers. It is probable that next Summer's celebration will be as disastrous as the past one if remedial steps are not taken.

Local laws are not effective because fire-crackers bought at a neighboring town are no less damaging. There are a few state bills, pickled, of course, which would be little good even if they were enacted because they forbid only certain fire works, whereas all must be outlawed for the untechnical. Whether it fly from a one-incher or a six-incher, a spark is enough to cause blindness. Those who vowed so ardently to protect the innocent from misery are now strangely silent.

A LITERARY CLEAN-UP

CONGRATULATIONS to the Dean of American Authors, a man with the courage of his convictions, Hamlin Garland. Mr. Garland speaking at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, recently made known his reason for resigning from the Pulitzer Award Board. To quote him: "I questioned the literary value of a book or play which depended for its success upon its salacious appeal. I refused to give my approval to weak plays with strong language and would not vote for novels filled with roadhouse speech and farmyard morals. Each year I found my task more distasteful. At last I resigned."

In its essence Mr. Garland's opinion coincides with the age-old teaching of the Catholic Church and consequently with her current forceful drive against obscene literature. The prevalence of this literary refuse which glorifies nudity and coarseness is shockingly extensive. No matter where one looks—in the corner drug store, in the so-called fashionable book stores, in the daily newspaper offices—he finds pulp magazines,book-length novels, reportorial assignments all revolving around the axis of indecency.

In order to erase such blots from modern American literature, we Catholics need only to follow a campaign paralleling the successful motion-picture clean-up program. Hit the publisher's pocketbook and watch him change his tactics. If we, the public, refuse to buy the trash he now publishes, he will without a doubt, like the movie czars, accede to our demands and formulate a decent, clean policy of production. Here is an opportunity of avoiding mere lip-service to our faith and really to live it.

WHEN STRONG MEN DIE

WHILE prolific critics in America were interpreting the election count, an incident happened on the other side of the world which, emphasized the value of democracy. Kemel Ataturk, ruler of Turkey, died. His death would have attracted little notice were it not for the fact that he single-handedly brought to Turkey the benefits of a modern progress.

Even though he was a good dictator, an inherent weakness in all dictatorships is illustrated . . . the uncertainity resulting on the death of the strong man. Terrifying is the thought of factional revolution in Russia, Germany, Italy, if present leaders in those nations were to die now.

Such a consideration of the comparative security of democratic America adds to the rejoicing of victorious parties in the recent elections that it was open to them to gain control of the government in a more civilized manner. No matter which side won, it is inspiring to note the spirit in which defeat is taken by citizens who are so fiery in their convictions.

MORE THAN THE GAME

VILLANOVA College won more than just another football game last Saturday at Temple Stadium. There was won more than press comments, more than the hilarious joy that comes with the victory over a traditional rival . . . Villanova won the respect of 32,000 people . . . won their respect by the showing of a superior team on the gridiron, by the fairness of which the game was played, and to a greater degree their respect for the action of the students after the game.

This is the time when the spirit and sportsmanship of a school shows forth . . . the time when there is no restraining hand of coaches and umpires . . . the time when all the fires of Hades cannot keep back a victorious group of fans. The goal posts were taken . . . this is a right to the victors that cannot be controlled. But this was all that was taken last Saturday, and to you, every student of Villanova College, congratulations, for you are the greater victor.

The Modern Alchemy

Dr. Edward L. Haenish

THE ancestor of the chemist was the alchemist, that mysterious and legendary individual who in his methods, or perhaps lack of them, showed such a contrast with his modern successor. For while the modern chemist employs the precise measurements and the reasoned methods of the scientist, the alchemist was content with haphazard and mysterious effort to discover the philosopher's stone, that intangible which would transmute base metals, such as lead, into gold.

The late 18th century brought the advent of the "scientific method" and the accompanying change of alchemy into chemistry. It was no longer expected that the experimenter could dictate to Nature the laws of chemical change. Instead, these laws had to be discovered by experimental study.

Two important types of substances were recognized and classified. One group, called elements, included those substances which could not be decomposed by any kind of treatment. Such familiar metals and non-metals as iron, gold, lead, sulfur or carbon are elements. Compounds constitute the other group of substances and can be decomposed into elements. The compound, water, is broken down by electricity in the elements hydrogen ad oxygen.

A careful consideration of the weights of material which enter into chemical reactions led the English schoolmaster, Dalton, to the concept that matter is discontinuous.

Each form of matter whether simple or compound is built of tiny, separate particles called atoms in the case of elements and molecules in the case of compounds. Dalton pictured these particles as hard spheres, alike in size and weight and indestructible. Chemical change consisted merely of the rearrangement of atoms into molecules. In the light of this theory, how futile and unavailing was the attempt of the alchemist to transmute an atom of lead into an atom of gold.

Further experiment usually leads to a modification of any theory. Although the Daltonian concept of discrete atoms and molecules has stood the test of time, the idea of an absolutely indestructible "billiard-ball" atom is no longer tenable. Experiments of the late nineteenth century proved that Thales of Miletus had been prophetic, when in the seventh century B. C. he stated that all matter was made up of a universal substance. That universal substance is something which was entirely unknown to Thales—electricity.

A moment's reflection on the part of the reader will bring to mind many examples of the intimate connection between electricity and matter. A chemical change in a storage battery produces an electric current; an electric current causes a chemical change, as in the electroplating of a metal; heating a metallic wire produces an electric current, as in a radio tube; passage of electricity through a rarefied gas produces a glow discharge, as in the familiar neon sign.

Ingenious research on the part of many workers has led to the modern picture of the atom as a grouping of electrical entities. The atom is in two parts—a nucleus on which is concentrated the mass and positive charge and, secondly, electrons or negatively-charged particles of negligible mass which are moving around outside of the nucleus.

It is the positive charge on the nucleus which fixes the mass and chemical properties of the atom. Chemical changes involve only the outside electrons and naturally the mass remains unaltered. It was on the basis of mass that Dalton conceived his theory.

Transmutation or alteration of an element is possible if the positive charge of the nucleus can be altered. The alchemists' dreams can now be attained. No longer is the atom indestructible and unchangeable as Dalton believed. To accomplish transmutation requires enormous amounts of energy to break down the extremely firm forces which bind the nuclear building blocks together.

In many university research laboratories are located "atom-guns," or "atom-smashers," which fire particles a hundredth the millionth of a centimeter in diameter into space at temporary velocities of thousands of miles a second in hope that these high speed particles will collide with nuclei of atoms and disrupt them.

PATRIOTISM

There has been much discussion lately whether Americans should rise from their beds and stand at attention if their radios happen to play the "Star Spangled Banner." We do not feel that this controversy will bring about the disintegration of our American ideals, but Mrs. Newport Potts, of the National Patriotic Council, claims that anyone who would refuse to rise from his bed was a "rat and a traitor."

The solution of all this seems to be in the fact that a nation that produced Francis Scott Key also produced a switch on the radio that can turn every program off.

The professor's compose was admirable. He merely ordered all the windows to be kept closed and courteously bade the girls to light up. element has been effected by this collision method. Lead has actually been changed into gold and the search for the philosopher's stone has ended. The "stone" is nothing but a high-speed electrical particle.

The quantity of lead which has been transmuted can be measured only in millionth, millionth, millionths of a gram. It is improbable that the process can become economically valuable.

From disintegration experiments there has resulted, however, a more valuable product than synthetic gold. It has long been known that radium therapy is beneficial in cancer treatment, but radium and other radio - active materials are rare and costly. The treatment of ordinary table-salt in an "atom-smasher" induces an artificial radio-activity which lasts for several hours. It may be possible to feed such a substance internally.

The reader should not conclude from this all too brief review that have been achieved by a few workers and from simple experiments. The conglomerate has been produced by the persevering efforts of many arduous, critical experimenters, many of whose names have escaped the recording of history. Of the thousands of complicated experiments which have been performed only a small number have been successful. Such is the way of scientific research.

What the future of modern alchemy holds, no one dares predict.

Ted Husing was announcing the Princeton - Navy football game. Fourth quarter, with score Princeton, 6; Navy, 13.

A Princeton back lashed out a long aerial. Amid riotous applause the ball was caught, and then lateraled for a total gain, as announced by Husing, of 45 yards, before the receiver was finally tackled.

Armchair quarterbacks were then left breathless by the next announcement to come over their radios.

On the Middies' four-yard line, with first down, and losing 13-6, Princeton was lining up for a field goal!

"They made it!" continued Husing. "Score is Navy, 13; Princeton, 9."

Few minutes later he realized his mistake. The aerial-lateral had been good for a touchdown. Point after 'down had been confused as a field-goal try.

Will be some time before Ted lives that one down.

INTRODUCING

"Louis Pasteur," "Don Juan" Are Mixed Personalities Of L. K. D. Fraternity Head

By WILLIAM J. WARD

UNDER COVER of the science school we have found hiding the original tea-time-terror, the delightful Drexel Hillian debutante detector, none other than the pride of Emily Post, one Mr. John C. Urie. Combining the faculties of a Don Juan and a Louis Pasteur is no mean occupation but the subject of the present effort has been quite successful in both instances.

He was such a delightful baby, was John, that both he and the world were rather amazed at each other's presence when they met on the balmy morning of August 18, 1917. Philadelphia was the lucky spot of this most auspicious occasion when John made his public debut amid exclamations of "Ohs," and "Ahs" from the assembled relatives. Living in the sticky confines of one of the residential sections for which West Philly is famous appealed very little to the squalling bundle from Heaven.

Attended Many Schools

At an early age he decided that the world was in need of men like he and suiting the action to the thought he enrolled in the Transfiguration School for the disseminating of doctrines and deeds to dreary dilletantes. Finding the local talent not up to his high standards, our "Jawn" decided, with the aid of his family, to move to greener pastures and so Drexel Hill got the nod. Transferring his academic and social activities to St. Andrews, was a wise move on the part of our hero, for here he found a world that give him much joy (spelled g-r-i-e-f).

Feeling an inner urge to better the man-that-was-to-be and realizing that the educational advantages offered by St. Andrew's were now unable to cope with his new found intelligence, John transferred his scene of conquest to St. Joseph's Prep.

At last in his recognized element, he commenced his long swing — since made famous here at Villanova. Being an honor man in his studies was the most natural thing accomplished to date . . . the report that it was the only NATURAL thing he ever did is entirely unfounded. Swimming, too, occupied part of our hero's time while at this knowledge foundry. At last reports he was considered one of the best breast-stroke artists ever to splash a drop of aqua pura on a group of interested watchers of the wet sport. The fact that he excelled in broad jumping has not been given for publication.

Named Frat Prexy

At long last came that eventful day when the trees on the campus lifted their dreary arms and welcomed "Jawn" to these portals of higher (?) education. Finally ensconced in his dream-world he set about to make a name for himself as one of Father Dougherty's playmates. Results, if interpreted correctly, seem to prove that he has lived up to his own expectations.

Feeling that books might interfere with his education too much he decided to take a good long look at the social side of life. Saying that he has been successful in his quest for this obscure side of his personality would be the masterpiece of understatement for the current year.

After his initiation into the Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity, "Jawn" turned his hand to the business of organizing and served successfully on the Soph Cotillion and Junior Prom committees.

But the zenith of his cycle had not been reached and the heavens were still smiling favorably on Gentleman John when the L. K. D. found it necessary to elect a new president. Of course he got the job, or should I say position, and he has been giving his all to the fraternity since the beginning of the present term.

Hobby? Yes, he had heard of that and thought that every one should have one. After a process similar to the extraction of a back tooth by your favorite drill and chisel man we found that hobby to "Jawn" means two things. First love in this field goes (you'll never believe this) to having a good time; can you imagine anyone, possessing all his faculties, who could have a desire for such a hobby. Nevertheless, this is true and it has been reported (and observed) that he receives excellent support in his chase of the amusing hobgoblin in the person of a dainty Miss from Frankford who answers to the name of Ann (no whistle, please).

Second in the hobby field comes the concealing of what the "C." in his signature stands for. Fold your hands on your lap, grandma, and get ready to swoon for the truth is about to come to light. The full import of the initial is Carlson and if you don't think that is cute see your doctor before the next edition hits the street.

So we leave this garden spot of nouns and verbs with the statement of J. Carlson Urie ringing in our good ear: "After due thought and much scientific research I have definitely proven that Orson Welles broadcast was no cause for alarm and furthermore that the world is getting better every day, and furthermore . . . (this is where we came in).

ODDS and ENDS

By Tom Haynes

Ed. Note: This week's guest columnist is James F. Donovan.

WE STILL say it wasn't fair. Here we were enjoying life like movie college boys when suddenly, bingo!, the quarterlies pounced upon us, and the Villanova social whirl underwent an abrupt and enforced postponment.

Now, Villanovans, upon whose arms beauteous bits of buxom femininity once hung delightfully, grip long ignored books in conscience-stricken but reluctant devotion.

No longer does the soft cry of "Hey, Montgomery" shake the building and mark the hours in stately Austin.

The Greek, in his abode of jig and guzzle, sorrowfully surveys the long row of empty booths. His Aristotelian face sadly remembers the green hills above the gleaming whiteness of Athens, and the reassuring gurgle of that doubtfully scented amber brew.

So your correspondent dug up his old hunting cap, swiped his roommates magnifying glass, and set out to probe the doubtful doings of the Wilder whirling dervishes.

I FOUND OUT THAT:

Ray "Keep in Line" Shiek nearly led a bulldozed and riquetoast band out of Shibe Park and along the street during the half of the Auburn game. Some observing Little Boy Blue came to his senses just in time. Now, if Ray walks, he walks alone.

Ken "Accent on Youth" Gallagher and Dan "I Danced With Them All" O'Mahoney are both running a fever and over a certain Rosemont cuddlesome. When in one another's company, the boys assume a nonchalant air that is the funniest thing we've witnessed since Landon demanded a recount. Both believe that the other hasn't a Chinaman's chance in Tokyo.

Rosanova came out like the hives to see Manhattanville's Murdering Maelstorm slug Rosemont's Rugged Ramblers, last Sunday. Seen row-row-rowing for Rosemont were Matt "Hartford's Gift to Womenkind" Phelan, Tom "Walter Winchell" Haynes, Art "Much Ado About Nothing" Somers, Buzz "I Hate Latin" Hart, Joe "Stop Calling Me 'Presh'" Clarken, Bill "Love in Bloom" Deasy, Ed "Change Partners" Hanlon and Jack "Doc" Cremens.

One little Manhattanville mauler had a selective eye on our Matt and the poor boy spent the entire day, ducking the old apple as it came flying at his dome.

We're still laughing about the answers that the Temple students gave to Barney Shoat and Cutie Bellow's query as to who would win the game. Upon further investigation, we found that the girl who said Temple would trim the Bounding Buccaneers also picked Able over Cain and Custer over the Indians. Likewise the sorority sophist, who didn't know what Villanova was, admits that Taft is a darn good president, but just watch this young fellow, Wilson.

Now to see what made Aristotle tick!

A LITERARY CLEAN-UP

CONGRATULATIONS to the Dean of American Authors, a man with the courage of his convictions, Hamlin Garland. Mr. Garland speaking at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, recently made known his reason for resigning from the Pulitzer Award Board. To quote him: "I questioned the literary value of a book or play which depended for its success upon its salacious appeal. I refused to give my approval to weak plays with strong language and would not vote for novels filled with roadhouse speech and farmyard morals. Each year I found my task more distasteful. At last I resigned."

In its essence Mr. Garland's opinion coincides with the age-old teaching of the Catholic Church and consequently with her current forceful drive against obscene literature. The prevalence of this literary refuse which glorifies nudity and coarseness is shockingly extensive. No matter where one looks—in the corner drug store, in the so-called fashionable book stores, in the daily newspaper offices—he finds pulp magazines, book-length novels, reportorial assignments all revolving around the axis of indecency.

In order to erase such blots from modern American literature, we Catholics need only to follow a campaign paralleling the successful motion-picture clean-up program. Hit the publisher's pocketbook and watch him change his tactics. If we, the public, refuse to buy the trash he now publishes, he will without a doubt, like the movie czars, accede to our demands and formulate a decent, clean policy of production. Here is an opportunity of avoiding mere lip-service to our faith and really to live it.

WHEN STRONG MEN DIE

WHILE prolific critics in America were interpreting the election count, an incident happened on the other side of the world which, emphasized the value of democracy. Kemel Ataturk, ruler of Turkey, died. His death would have attracted little notice were it not for the fact that he single-handedly brought to Turkey the benefits of a modern progress.

Even though he was a good dictator, an inherent weakness in all dictatorships is illustrated . . . the uncertainity resulting on the death of the strong man. Terrifying is the thought of factional revolution in Russia, Germany, Italy, if present leaders in those nations were to die now.

Such a consideration of the comparative security of democratic America adds to the rejoicing of victorious parties in the recent elections that it was open to them to gain control of the government in a more civilized manner. No matter which side won, it is inspiring to note the spirit in which defeat is taken by citizens who are so fiery in their convictions.

MORE THAN THE GAME

VILLANOVA College won more than just another football game last Saturday at Temple Stadium. There was more than press comments, more than the hilarious joy that comes with the victory over a traditional rival . . . Villanova won the respect of 32,000 people . . . won their respect by the showing of a superior team on the gridiron, by the fairness of which the game was played, and to a greater degree their respect for the action of the students after the game.

This is the time when the spirit and sportsmanship of a school shows forth . . . the time when there is no restraining hand of coaches and umpires . . . the time when all the fires of Hades cannot keep back a victorious group of fans. The goal posts were taken . . . this is a right to the victors that cannot be controlled. But this was all that was taken last Saturday, and to you, every student of Villanova College, congratulations, for you are the greater victor.

The Modern Alchemy

Dr. Edward L. Haenish

THE ancestor of the chemist was the alchemist, that mysterious and legendary individual who in his methods, or perhaps lack of them, showed such a contrast with his modern successor. For while the modern chemist employs the precise measurements and the reasoned methods of the scientist, the alchemist was content with haphazard and mysterious effort to discover the philosopher's stone, that intangible which would transmute base metals, such as lead, into gold.

The late 18th century brought the advent of the "scientific method" and the accompanying change of alchemy into chemistry. It was no longer expected that the experimenter could dictate to Nature the laws of chemical change. Instead, these laws had to be discovered by experimental study.

Two important types of substances were recognized and classified. One group, called elements, included those substances which could not be decomposed by any kind of treatment. Such familiar metals and non-metals as iron, gold, lead, sulfur or carbon are elements. Compounds constitute the other group of substances and can be decomposed into elements. The compound, water, is broken down by electricity in the elements hydrogen ad oxygen.

A careful consideration of the weights of material which enter into chemical reactions led the English schoolmaster, Dalton, to the concept that matter is discontinuous.

Each form of matter whether simple or compound is built of tiny, separate particles called atoms in the case of elements and molecules in the case of compounds. Dalton pictured these particles as hard spheres, alike in size and weight and indestructible. Chemical change consisted merely of the rearrangement of atoms into molecules. In the light of this theory, how futile and unavailing was the attempt of the alchemist to transmute an atom of lead into an atom of gold.

Further experiment usually leads to a modification of any theory. Although the Daltonian concept of discrete atoms and molecules has stood the test of time, the idea of an absolutely indestructible "billiard-ball" atom is no longer tenable. Experiments of the late nineteenth century proved that Thales of Miletus had been prophetic, when in the seventh century B. C. he stated that all matter was made up of a universal substance. That universal substance is something which was entirely unknown to Thales—electricity.

A moment's reflection on the part of the reader will bring to mind many examples of the intimate connection between electricity and matter. A chemical change in a storage battery produces an electric current; an electric current causes a chemical change, as in the electroplating of a metal; heating a metallic wire produces an electric current, as in a radio tube; passage of electricity through a rarefied gas produces a glow discharge, as in the familiar neon sign.

Ingenious research on the part of many workers has led to the modern picture of the atom as a grouping of electrical entities. The atom is in two parts—a nucleus on which is concentrated the mass and positive charge and, secondly, electrons or negatively-charged particles of negligible mass which are moving around outside of the nucleus.

It is the positive charge on the nucleus which fixes the mass and chemical properties of the atom. Chemical changes involve only the outside electrons and naturally the mass remains unaltered. It was on the basis of mass that Dalton conceived his theory.

Transmutation or alteration of an element is possible if the positive charge of the nucleus can be altered. The alchemists' dreams can now be attained. No longer is the atom indestructible and unchangeable as Dalton believed. To accomplish transmutation requires enormous amounts of energy to break down the extremely firm forces which bind the nuclear building blocks together.

In many university research laboratories are located "atom-guns," or "atom-smashers," which fire particles a hundredth the millionth of a centimeter in diameter into space at temporary velocities of thousands of miles a second in hope that these high speed particles will collide with nuclei of atoms and disrupt them.

PATRIOTISM

There has been much discussion lately whether Americans should rise from their beds and stand at attention if their radios happen to play the "Star Spangled Banner." We do not feel that this controversy will bring about the disintegration of our American ideals, but Mrs. Newport Potts, of the National Patriotic Council, claims that anyone who would refuse to rise from his bed was a "rat and a traitor."

The solution of all this seems to be in the fact that a nation that produced Francis Scott Key also produced a switch on the radio that can turn every program off.

element has been effected by this collision method. Lead has actually been changed into gold and the search for the philosopher's stone has ended. The "stone" is nothing but a high-speed electrical particle.

The quantity of lead which has been transmuted can be measured only in millionth, millionth, millionths of a gram. It is improbable that the process can become economically valuable.

From disintegration experiments there has resulted, however, a more valuable product than synthetic gold. It has long been known that radium therapy is beneficial in cancer treatment, but radium and other radio - active materials are rare and costly. The treatment of ordinary table-salt in an "atom-smasher" induces an artificial radio-activity which lasts for several hours. It may be possible to feed such a substance internally.

The reader should not conclude from this all too brief review that have been achieved by a few workers and from simple experiments. The conglomerate has been produced by the persevering efforts of many arduous, critical experimenters, many of whose names have escaped the recording of history. Of the thousands of complicated experiments which have been performed only a small number have been successful. Such is the way of scientific research.

What the future of modern alchemy holds, no one dares predict.

Ted Husing was announcing the Princeton - Navy football game. Fourth quarter, with score Princeton, 6; Navy, 13.

A Princeton back lashed out a long aerial. Amid riotous applause the ball was caught, and then lateraled for a total gain, as announced by Husing, of 45 yards, before the receiver was finally tackled.

Armchair quarterbacks were then left breathless by the next announcement to come over their radios.

On the Middies' four-yard line, with first down, and losing 13-6, Princeton was lining up for a field goal!

"They made it!" continued Husing. "Score is Navy, 13; Princeton, 9."

Few minutes later he realized his mistake. The aerial-lateral had been good for a touchdown. Point after 'down had been confused as a field-goal try.

Will be some time before Ted lives that one down.

INTRODUCING

"Louis Pasteur," "Don Juan" Are Mixed Personalities Of L. K. D. Fraternity Head

By WILLIAM J. WARD

UNDER COVER of the science school we have found hiding the original tea-time-terror, the delightful Drexel Hillian debutante detector, none other than the pride of Emily Post, one Mr. John C. Urie. Combining the faculties of a Don Juan and a Louis Pasteur is no mean occupation but the subject of the present effort has been quite successful in both instances.

He was such a delightful baby, was John, that both he and the world were rather amazed at each other's presence when they met on the balmy morning of August 18, 1917. Philadelphia was the lucky spot of this most auspicious occasion when John made his public debut amid exclamations of "Ohs," and "Ahs" from the assembled relatives. Living in the sticky confines of one of the residential sections for which West Philly is famous appealed very little to the squalling bundle from Heaven.

Attended Many Schools

At an early age he decided that the world was in need of men like he and suiting the action to the thought he enrolled in the Transfiguration School for the disseminating of doctrines and deeds to dreary dilletantes. Finding the local talent not up to his high standards, our "Jawn" decided, with the aid of his family, to move to greener pastures and so Drexel Hill got the nod. Transferring his academic and social activities to St. Andrews, was a wise move on the part of our hero, for here he found a world that give him much joy (spelled g-r-i-e-f).

Feeling an inner urge to better the man-that-was-to-be and realizing that the educational advantages offered by St. Andrew's were now unable to cope with his new found intelligence, John transferred his scene of conquest to St. Joseph's Prep.

At last in his recognized element, he commenced his long swing — since made famous here at Villanova. Being an honor man in his studies was the most natural thing accomplished to date . . . the report that it was the only NATURAL thing he ever did is entirely unfounded. Swimming, too, occupied part of our hero's time while at this knowledge foundry. At last reports he was considered one of the best breast-stroke artists ever to splash a drop of aqua pura on a group of interested watchers of the wet sport. The fact that he excelled in broad jumping has not been given for publication.

Named Frat Prexy

At long last came that eventful day when the trees on the campus lifted their dreary arms and welcomed "Jawn" to these portals of higher (?) education. Finally ensconced in his dream-world he set about to make a name for himself as one of Father Dougherty's playmates. Results, if interpreted correctly, seem to prove that he has lived up to his own expectations.

Feeling that books might interfere with his education too much he decided to take a good long look at the social side of life. Saying that he has been successful in his quest for this obscure side of his personality would be the masterpiece of understatement for the current year.

After his initiation into the Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity, "Jawn" turned his hand to the business of organizing and served successfully on the Sopn Cotillion and Junior Prom committees.

But the zenith of his cycle had not been reached and the heavens were still smiling favorably on Gentleman John when the L. K. D. found it necessary to elect a new president. Of course he got the job, or should I say position, and he has been giving his all to the fraternity since the beginning of the present term.

Hobby? Yes, he had heard of that and thought that every one should have one. After a process similar to the extraction of a back tooth by your favorite drill and chisel man we found that hobby to "Jawn" means two things. First love in this field goes (you'll never believe this) to having a good time; can you imagine anyone, possessing all his faculties, who could have a desire for such a hobby. Nevertheless, this is true and it has been reported (and observed) that he receives excellent support in his chase of the amusing bobgoblin in the person of a dainty Miss from Frankford who answers to the name of Ann (no whistle, please).

Second in the hobby field comes the concealing of what the "C." in his signature stands for. Fold your hands on your lap, grandma, and get ready to swoon for the truth is about to come to light. The full import of the initial is Carlson and if you don't think that is cute see your doctor before the next edition hits the street.

So we leave this garden spot of nouns and verbs with the statement of J. Carlson Urie ringing in our good ear: "After due thought and much scientific research I have definitely proven that Orson Welles' broadcast was no cause for alarm and furthermore that the world is getting better every day, and furthermore . . . (this is where came in).

WE STILL say it wasn't fair. Here we were enjoying life like movie college boys when suddenly, bingo!, the quarterlies pounced upon us, and the Villanova social whirl underwent an abrupt and enforced postponment.

Now, Villanovans, upon whose arms beauteous bits of buxom femininity once hung delightfully, grip long ignored books in conscience-stricken but reluctant devotion.

No longer does the soft cry of "Hey, Montgomery" shake the building and mark the hours in stately Austin.

I FOUND OUT THAT:

SAMPLE OF RADIUM PRESENTED TO DEAN BY CANADIAN FIRM

Science Classes Hear Interesting Lecture at Weekly Seminar

STUDENTS TO PROCESS ORE

A comparatively large sample of pitchblend, radium ore, was presented to Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Science, by Mr. Frank Hartman, representative of the Great Bear Lakes Canadian Radium Company. The ore was presented at the Science Seminar last Thursday. A number of charts, dealing with radium, its rays, its properties and uses, were also donated to the school.

Explains Extraction

Mr. Hartman gave an interesting outlook on radium to the many students present. An open discussion on the various aspects of radium was conducted. He told of the mining of pitchblend in Alaska, twenty-eight miles nothwest of the Arctic Circle and then described the process the ore went through before being shipped to Philadelphia for radium extraction.

Along with the discussion, Mr. Hartman displayed some of the phenomena of radium with apparatus. Some characteristic powers of radium was shown by means of an ultra-violet ray lamp and the special radium detector. The phosphorescence of salts mixed with radium was compared to those without radium in a fascinating experiment.

Discusses Cancer Treatment

The treatment of cancer by radium was also discussed by Hartman. It was seen that during the past few years radium rays have been used extensively in the treatment of cancer, usually with satisfactory results.

The sample of pitchblend will be turned over to the students in the school of science by Fr. Dougherty. It weighs about five or six pounds and contains about two milligrams of radium. Radium, at present is worth thirty thousand dollars a gram and formerly sold as high as one hundred and fifty thousand dollars a gram.

The students will have the opportunity to process the ore and retain the radium, in conjunction with the ora number of salts have been placed in the hands of the students. These salts will provide the background for experiments on phosphorescence.

The Great Bear Lakes Canadian Radium Company is the largest radium producer in the world. They have the richest mines, and, due to the concentration of radium in the ore, can put it on the market at a price over a hundred thousand dollars cheaper than a few years ago. They recently received an order for fifty grams from Great Britain at a cost of one and a half million dollars.

STUDENT'S SKIT HEARD ON RADIO

D'Angelo, Sophomore Education Student, Writes Sketch For Station WPEN

"Force of Habit," radio skit produced last Tuesday evening over Station WPEN, was the work of Andrea D'Angelo, sophomore in the School of Education. He wrote this in collaboration with Mr. Henry De Leo, and it is the first of a series they plan to write for the same station.

D'Angelo and his partner, also have four one-act plays in Italian to their credit, and they produced these and acted in them with the Madonna Players, a South Philadelphia Little Theater group.

Besides their radio skits they are now working on a three-act play in English which they also plan to produce themselves as soon as they complete it.

It was as a member of South Catholic High School's Dramatic Club that D'Angelo first became interested in the stage but it wasn't unti lafter he joined the Madonna Players last year that he started writing and producing as well as acting.

CIVIL ENGINEERS WILL VISIT SEWAGE PLANT

Society Members Tour New York World's Fair Grounds

Villanova chapter of the A. S. C. E. held its regular meeting last Monday. During the meeting, plans were discussed to visit the Philadelphia sewerage plant and the Sun Shipyard, at Chester, Pa.

The society is endeavoring to obtain motion pictures from some construction company showing the erection of a building from its excavation to its completion. It is also trying to make it possible for the student chapter to attend various types of construction, such as the Municipal Building of Philadelphia and many high schools throughout the city.

Fifteen members of the chapter enjoyed a visit to the New York World's Fair grounds, now under process of construction. Under the supervision of Professor John Oakey, they toured the fair grounds and were informed about the various buildings by a guide.

ELECTED TO OFFICE

Dr. William Mountford, '34, was recently elected president of the Villanova Club of Trenton, N. J. Other newly elected officers are: Joseph J. Caulfield, '35, vice president and treasurer; Thomas Kucker '31, secretary. Rev. Joseph M. Sutliff began his third term as chaplain of the organization.

Dr. Mountford represented Villanova College at the 10th anniversary of the founding of Pennington School, in Pennington, N. J.

IN APPRECIATION

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Scully wish to express sincere appreciation to the students and faculty of Villanova College, to the Phi Kappa Pi fraternity, and to the Class of 1940 for the love and respect shown their son, Joseph.

U. S. TRADE POLICY SUBJECT DISCUSSED AT PEACE SEMINAR

Delegates From Rosemont, Chestnut Hill, St. Joseph Attend Conclave Here

A Peace Seminar sponsored by the Senior Arts Class was held last Thursday, November 10, in he Commerce and Finance auditorium. The committee in charge was composed of Thomas Delate, James Quigley, and Pershing Calabro. The topic before the seminar for consideration was the trade policy of Cordell Hull, Secretary of State.

Delegates from Rosemont, Chestnut Hill, and St. Joseph's accepted the invitation and the student bodies of the colleges other than the representative proper were invited to attend as a participating audience.

Question Discussed

The principal speaker was Miss Katherine Mahoney of Chestnut Hill. Her topic was "How Secretary of State Cordell Hull could put into effect world peace" During the course of her address she showed that the United States trade policy was the nearest approach to peace yet found and that the trade relationship between Canada and the United States has increased since the enactment of the Hull Reciprocal Trade Agreement.

After Miss Mahoney's address, William R. Deasey, of St. Joseph's College, assumed the chair and opened the discussion of the question. The visitors showed their interest by actively entering into the discussion and the quality of their opinions and objections proved most interesting.

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., Anthony J. Frayne, Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., and Dr. Harold J. Hartman were among those present.

The European crisis of the present day was brought into the discussion. It was shown that no nation can have a favorable trade balance unless there are more exports than imports. Unless Germany and other European countries effect a favorable trade balance for goods needed there can be no alternative but seizure of the necessary goods. This condition leads to the constant strife between competing nations in the same fields, be they manufacturing or agriculture. Each nation fears being outsold, which condition would leave the undersold nation in an economic predicament.

Masque to Stage Six One-Act Plays

Commerce and Finance student, will give "Lost and Found" with Joseph McCabe, Thomas Kimmey, and Joseph Gallagher in the cast. Finally, Zealor himself will enact the role of Dr. Faust in the "Monologue" from "Dr. Faust" by Marlowe.

As this is the initial presentation of Belle Masque this year, it is expected that the Field House will seat a representative audience Tuesday evening. This first in the series of dramatic programs was offered on November 3, by the Jest and Gesture Club of Rosemont College.

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., acting in the capacity of moderator of extra-curricular speech arts, welcomed dramatists of local colleges at the first presentation and expressed hopes of the continuation of effort and success in this endeavor.

Belle Masque, through the efforts of Mr. Frayne, has secured rights to produce "Room Service," stage success now being filmed.

BRITISH FOREIGN POLICY DEBATED

History Seminar Also Considers Communism and Dictatorship

The British foreign policy was subjected to examination at the meeting of the History Seminar last Thursday afternoon.

With the Munich Pact still fresh in our minds the discussion was particularly timely. It was in regard to this latest diplomatic victory that the foreign policy of Great Britain. Of particular interest was the question expounded by Dr. Harold Hartman as to whether or not the parliament represented the true spirit of the ation as a whole.

Also considered was Communism in its various aspects. The question raised was, "Can Communism Be Used to Create a False Energy So That the Way Will Have Been Started for Dictatorships."

It will be remembered that at the previous meeting of the organization, an emergency, either real or false, was concluded to be a prerequisite of a dictatorship.

During the course of discussion, which waged back and forth among the students and faculty moderators, Dr. Hartman and Rev. J. R. Dunne, O. S. A., M. A., the point was made clear that often the plea that communism is undermining the government is used as an excuse for the poor economic status of a nation.

CONNEEN TALKS TO CHEMICAL SOCIETY

Edward Conneen, senior chemical engineering student, addressed the members of the Chemical Society last week. His topic was "The Attainment of Absolute Zero."

Progress from the first experiments to today, was explained by him. At the University of California scientists have succeeded in reaching one hundredth of a degree above the absolute, —273° C.

It is believed that normally electrons revolve in rapid motion around the nucleus. As the temperature is decreased, this motion is reduced. Most scientists believe that at absolute temperature, electronic motion will cease.

The Chemical Society is contemplating a trip through the Franklin Sugar Refinery Company, from which they will gain a broader view of the chemistry of sugars.

TALK ON X-RAYS GIVEN

"X-Rays" and "The Normal and Abnormal Thyroid Gland," were the topics discussed by Benedict Cusani, senior science, and Bernard Singer, junior science students, at the regular weekly meeting of the Science Research Seminar last Thursday evening.

Mr. Cusani presented clearly and concisely, the development of the "X-Ray" tube from a simple gadget of curiosity, to an exacting instrument of industrial and medicinal value.

After briefly reviewing the anatomical and histological characteristics of the thyroid gland, Singer discussed the physical and mental effects of an over secretion or under secretion upon the body.

Gene Reiley, '29, Adds Two Songs To Villanova's Musical Repetoire

Two new songs have been added to the repetoire of Villanova's cheering section through the musical ability of Gene Reiley, alumnus.

Reiley, former student of the Commerce and Finance school, graduated from Villanova in 1929. Always an active alumnus, at present he is a member of the Board of Governors and occupies a position on the editorial staff of "Alumnus," the alumni quarterly publication.

Both songs are being prepared by the band and with this innovation made in the streamlining of Villanova's vocalized school spirit.

Villanova Marching Song

VERSE:
Fight, Fight, Fight
For the Blue and the White
It is the song we sing,
As we go marching on.
Right, Right, Right
Into the fray,
Ye loyal sons as we stand and cheer.
Hip, Hip, Hip
Get into the swing
And carry on the Good Old Banner Dear,
Come give your best, in quest of Victory—
Villanova sons are near.

TRIO
Stout hearts are brave
When in battle they're arrayed.
Courage brave men,
Fight you on until the end.
Battles are won by the deeds of Vairous men,
Come give your all, your might and Fight, Fight, Fight for our Dear Old Banner Bright

CODA: Near—Fight!

Sing Verse and Trio, repeat verse and out at Coda. Follow with a short "Fight!"

Touchdown—touchdown—Score
Touchdown, touchdown, score
Get right in the fight
Break with all your might,
Put the enemy right into flight
With a touchdown, touchdown, score,
Points, pointe, points, points, score
Right into fame
Break up the Game
For old VILLANOVA your flame
With a touchdown, touchdown, score.
March down the field men
Bowl 'em over, roll 'em over, bust 'em, bash 'em, crash 'em, smash 'em
Touchdown, touchdown, score, men,
With a touchdown, touchdown, score.

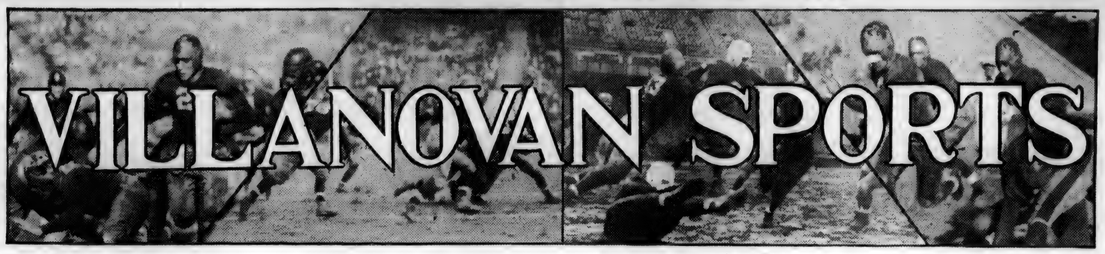
Terriers Confident Of Snapping Cat Streak



VILLANOVA CHALKS UP SIXTH VICTORY

Boston Gridders Prepared To Thwart Blue Invasion

Pat Hanley's Boys Gunning For This Game, As Win Over Visitors Will Avenge Two Previous Defeats

NECHTEM SCARLET BACKFIELD ACE

By TOM O'MAHONEY, '39

Encouraged by the prospect of having the irrepressible Sol Nechtem back in the line-up after a two-week layoff due to injuries, Boston University's football forces are drilling strenuously in preparation for the Wildcat invasion of the Hub this Saturday.

Victors in only three games this season, Boston U. will enter the fray as decided underdogs to the powerful Main Line scourge. Defeated, crushed and scattered to the winds by such teams as Army, Western Reserve and Boston College, the Terriers are determined to redeem an otherwise mediocre season by beating the Blue. In their last start, trailing 21-0 for three quarters against their arch rivals, B. C., the Scarlet launched an aerial barrage which scored 14 points in the final canto and gave Gil Dobie several anxious moments.

Terriers Use Warner System

Pat Hanley, Terrier mentor, is an advocate of the orthodox Warner system of play, and employs the double-wing attack in much the same fashion as our good neighbors up Temple way. He lays much stress on passing, and with Nechtem at left half, the 'Cats can look forward to a nice mixture of double reverses, spinners and good passing. On the receiving end of the Nechtem heaves will be the two sophomore ends, Jim McDonald and Ken Skoropowski, and right halfback Russ Lawry, a consistent ground gainer himself.

Although the freshman gridders have completed their season, Coach Hanley has kept them on hand to furnish the Terrier varsity competition in anticipation of the Villanova assault. Pass defense is being particularly studied and the Boston coaching staff hopes to throttle Nick Basca as one means of keeping the Blue in check.

End-Play Weak

Hanley chief worry is caused by the erratic play of his ends. Army's top-heavy score was a reflection of the inadequate wing play on the part of the Scarlet, as wide sweeps developing either into passes or runs found the Terrier ends turned with ease. The genial Boston mentor believes, however, that McDonald and Skoropowski will fill this gap acceptably Saturday. Nevertheless, a change at these positions would not come as a sur-with only six minutes of the game already gone.

Howlett to Nowak

Howlett faded back to his 40, spied "Whackin" Walt Nowak in the end zone with a nary a soul around. He fired and shortly after Walt gathered the oval in his eager arms and had the distinction of scoring his second touchdown, sending his teammates ahead 13-0. Mazzei again converted as Villanova rooters saw victory at hand.

It looked as if the Wildcats would strike again in the first period after Cochrane recovered a Temple fumble on the opponent's 29. Basca faded back and threw a perfect strike to All-American Johnny Wysocki, advancing the ball to the three yard line. However the play was recalled because of an offside penalty.

Trying two passes and a line play and then again a pass which netted nothing, the Templars took over on their own 34. The quarter ended as Stevens was thrown for a two yard loss. "Pop" Warner inserted practically a whole new team at the end of the period.

Basca Scores on 41-Yard Jaunt

Following an exchange of kicks after neither team could make much headway, the 'Cats put the ball in play on the opposition's 41. Basca faded back to midfield to attempt to pass. Unable to find an open receiver the sensational halfback decided to run, dashing off to his left and as the boys in the Blue jerseys mowed down the would-be tacklers, Nick swerved to his right and crossed the last white stripe unmolested. Wysocki, going downfield for a pass, took care of the safetyman with a perfect block.

Mazzei failed to convert, but the Wildcats didn't care as the Blue and White cheering section whooped it up to the tune of "MARCH YOU WILDCATS."

At this point the Cherry and White finally came to life and began a march which netted them their only score of the contest. Bukowski kicked off to Stevens who was downed on the Temple 12. The Owls advanced the oval to their 41 with Honochick, Juralewicz and Powers bearing the brunt of the attack. Unable to penetrate any further through the Blue forward wall, the Owls took to the air.

Cherry and White Score

On third down Juralewicz faded back ten yards and heaved a pass to Powers, who was in the clear on the right side of the field. Powers snuggled the ball in his arms on the 20 and outran Mazzei to the goal line. Stevens then added Temple's scoring of the day with a place-kick through the uprights.

With but a few minutes left to play in the first half the 'Cats began a march of their own. Neri having replaced Howlett, ran back Stevens' kick 18 yards to the 35

Kittens Conclude Season Unbeaten As Diplomats Rally To Tie Score

By JOE BARNES

Before a partisan crowd of 5000 at Williams Field, Lancaster, the Villanova freshmen rang down the curtain on their 1938 season with a 7-7 deadlock. Franklin and Marshall's undefeated freshmen furnished the opposition.

The game, marred by the partisan tactics of the spectators and poor officiating, was thrilling in spots as the Wildcat frosh played smart, heads-up football. F. & M. furnished surprisingly tough opposition for the "Kittens." Slippery fingers on the receiving end of Bill Howlett's great forward passes cost the Villanovans some possible scores. The game was the 23d consecutive defeatless battle for Villanova.

First Half Dull

The first half was uneventful as the teams played a "waiting game." Bill Howlett's beautiful punting gave the Villanova eleven whatever edge there was to be had as the ball see-sawed up and down the field. Both teams started marches, which were stopped by intercepted passes. The Diplomats presented a surprisingly good running attack headed by their vaunted quarterback, Bill Farkas and Ammerman, a giant fullback.

The Kittens threatenned to score in the second period when they had the ball on F. & M.'s 18-yard line. An intercepted pass halted the threat.

Behot Tallies

Early in the third period Villanova put on the drive which re-

ONE FIFTIES INVADE YALE SEEKING WIN

On Thursday, Villanova's 150-pound team will journey to New Haven, Conn., to engage the Yale lightweights in quest of their first victory of the season. The game will be played on Friday.

In previous contests against the Bulldogs the 'Cats did not fare so well; but this year, despite their poor record to date, the Blue and White team is on edge for the game and intends to make things "hot" for the Eli 150's. Last year they put on a spectacular finishing spurt and almost succeeded in downing the Bulldogs. The game ended with Yale on the long end of a 20-13 count.

The game played in 1936 resulted in a 25-0 victory for the Yale eleven, and the only other contest with this team resulted in a scoreless tie.

So far this year, the 'Cats have been beaten by Princeton and Cornell, and tied Penn and Rutgers.

Sportorial

WE UNDERSTAND that New York Sports Writers are considering the idea of inviting Villanova College to play in the Eastern Bowl game on the tenth of December in New York. It doesn't seem possible that football critics are really beginning to realize that perhaps "Clipper" Smith and Vince McNally have a group of boys down this way that can play a little football.

Joe Pagano

Many of the fans in this area talk enthusiastically about Notre Dame and Northwestern, et al . . . how great their teams are . . . not that we think they aren't good and deserve that recognition . . . but perhaps if this same group would look around a bit . . . they might hit upon the fact that a great team exists out on the Main Line at Villanova.

—V—

It seems amazing that such a "natural grid tussle," the Temple-Villanova spectacle, should draw only 32,000 . . . the smallest crowd ever to witness a contest since the inception of this ever-growing popular series .

COURTMEN HUSTLE FOR VARSITY POSTS

Villanova's basketball foes may find two strong Wildcat units to contend with this season when they meet the local dribblers on the hardwood, instead of the usual strong starting five.

Reports from those who have observed the varsity in their practice sessions against the freshman, reveal that several second stringers and a trio of Freshman team graduates have been pushing the first string in a hectic battle for starting posts against Roanoke College in the innaugural on December 1.

Bill Sinnott, number one reserve last season has been making it hot for the veterans Johnny Krutulis and high scoring Duke Duzminski.

Another hoopy holdover who is receiving considerable attention from Coach Al Severance is Lloyd Rice who works out at the pivot and guard posts. Rice saw plenty

Cornell Lightweights Capitalize On Breaks To Beat Stoviakmen

By FRANK J. CALLAHAN

Displaying a powerful first half offensive, the Cornell lightweights lowered the Villanova 150's, by the score of 13-2, last Saturday morning at the Main Line Stadium.

From the very opening of the contest the men of Ithaca held the upper hand over the "boys in blue." With the able assistance of quarterback Bowen and halfback Nichols, the little "Big Red" crew advanced the ball to the one yard stripe, in the first quarter.

Bowen Tallies

Then on a "heads down" plunge through the Blue defense Bowen took the ball across the pay off stripe for the initial score. The attempt for a conversion by White was wide of the uprights.

In the second period the Itacans started to roll goalward for the second time when on successive gains through the line they advanced the ball to the Villanova 20 yard marker. It was here that White took the song, "Lets do the Breakaway" to heart and broke away for a touch down run. This time White's attempt for the bonus point was successful.

Blue Lightweights Outplayed

For the entire first half the Villanova lads were outplayed. However, occasional sparks of progressiveness showed the followers of the Blue and White that their team had the ability and the intestinal fortitude necessary, but they too had the misfortune of not being

In the Sportlight

By SAUL WALLACH

PERHAPS he doesn't command the qualifications of a starter in big time football, but no one can deny that Lou Dymond doesn't possess the fire and spirit of an All-American.

We have watched the former Wilkes-Barre Coughlin High star with much interest in the last two years. Hardly a scrimmage goes by without seeing him tear his heart out in the old ball game. When he does get into a Villanova game, those few occasions find him backing up the line and oozing with fight.

Today he may be cannon fodder for Villanova's first stringers in scrimmages but it wasn't the same several years ago back in Wilkes-Barre.

Lou All Around Man

Entering Coughlin High School from Union grammar school the son of Officer Max Dymond went in for athletics in a big way. Lou went out for and made the first teams in football, basketball and track.

It was at the gridiron sport that he rose to such fame that he is considered one of Coughlins greatest football players along with Krywicki, present Fordham University star. Both played on the same team that captured the Wyoming Valley title.

As is the custom, the newspapers in the Wilkes-Barre sector get together each year and choose all-star teams. In his first year Dymond was awarded a first string post at center, and then honorable mention at tackle. Pretty good for a first year man, eh?

Shifted to Tackle

Because Red Pendergast, Coughlin mentor, needed tackles, our Dymond was shifted to that post. Again he made first string on the all-star team, in his junior and final years at Coughland, he made the all-star team with ease, holding down the number one center post.

In four years of competition, Dymond played in 48 ball games which included several East-West games. The rosters of both combinations are filled by outstanding Pennsylvania schoolboy stars.

If you have an idea that the competition in the Wyoming Valley is of the grape fruit variety, readers, you are greatly mistaken. Lou Dymond tells us that he played against our own Bill Romanowski, who starred for Avoca; Al Shedloskey and Frank Bukofski who starred for Nanticoke, traditional rival of Coughlin. Others are Chick Davies, of Niagara; Concella and Segal of Columbia; Jim Connell of Penn, when the latter was a tackle for Coaldale; Johnny Urban of Pitt; Len Pomeotor and Joe Migdol of Manhattan; Haggarty and Van Jura, first string linemen of Fordham, and a host of other stars.

Decides to Come to Villanova

The feats performed by Dymond reached the ears of Harry Stuhldreher, then head coach at Villanova. "Stuhly" persuaded him to attend Villanova.

In his first year here, Dymond was the number one center of the "Greenies!" It was his first game against the regulars that "Murph" remembers vividly. Whitey Randour passed to Nick Kotys. Matt Kuber deflected the pass which fell into Dymond's arms. Our hero promptly scampered the 56 yards for the score.

Lou rates his old high school coach as the greatest football player in Villanova history. It seems that Frank Pendergast, then captain of the Wildcats, almost singlehandedly defeated the Army.

Praises Michaels

Of Eddie Michaels, Dymond says "He was the greatest and best man I have ever seen on the football field. Ed was always a true gentleman."

Dymond expects to get his teaching credits after he graduates this June. Confidentially, he is in line for a coaching post in one of the Wyoming Valley schools.

If any of Lou's teams turn in poor records, we can bet it will be for any other reason than they lacked fighting instinct. We can't see how any person near this jolly Fediganite will not be infected with the joy bug.

Thus we salute a great fighter and a still greater fellow.

prise to those who have watched the long drills this week.

In this, their final game of the 1938 campaign, the Scarlet will be out to show up the Wildcats before what promises to be a large crowd of Villanova alumni and well-wishers. Pre-game estimates predict a crowd of some 20,000 will cram Mr. Tom Yawkey's Red Rox ball orchard to see the undefeated Wildcats in action.

The rivals have met twice before, Villanova being victorious on both occasions. In 1936, the Terriers came to Philadelphia on the crest of an undefeated, untied, and unscored-upon streak only to bow, 25-0.

sulted in their only tally. Worthington, frosh fullback, brought the ball to Villanova's 40. Joe Behot then tore off 40 yards on a line slash, bringing the ball to the Diplomats 20. A penalty put the ball on the 15 and Howlett passed to Joe Behot for the score. Worthington's placekick cut the goalposts for the extra-point which saved the day.

The Lancaster lads tallied in the final period after a 35-yard pass and an "unnecessary roughness" penalty put the ball on Villanova's one-yard line. Jim Ammerman skirted the end for the touchdown. Farkas tied up the game with his placement.

Kittens Travel

After the Diplomat score the Kittens "got hot" and went to work on the Lancaster gridmen. The Kittens reeled off three first downs to put themselves in scoring position, but then fate and Mrs. Referee intervened. A Blue pass to the Diplomats two-yard line was intercepted after the whistle had blown, announcing another Villanova penalty—this time 15 yards for what the official called holding. F. & M. elected to take the play and it was their ball on their own two-yard marker.

The Kittens dug in, determined to block a Diplomat kick. Then the referee paced off five yards against Villanova for no one knows what. Villanova protested and the referee paced off 15 more yards, giving the Diplomats 20 yards without them even touching the ball!

In the absence of "Doc" Jacobs, who scouted the Boston U. game, the frosh were mentored by Ray Stoviak, coach of the 150-pound team. Ray showed excellent coaching ability in guiding the frosh, whose plays and abilities were strange to him.

of action last season and accredited himself well.

"Chuck" Yund, standout center of the yearlings in the last campaign has served notice that he is very much in the race for a varsity position. Two other ex-freshman who have entered the picture by their inspired play are "Reds" Murphy a forward and Toni Vinci a back court man. Of the three, Yund has the toughest battle on his hands as he must displace such outstanding men as Rice, Dubino and Jim Montgomery.

Clipper Comments

On Temple Game

The whole team played heads-up football on Saturday and as a result we gained a 20-7 victory. Nowak's all-around play was very, very commendable, and Andy Chisick had one of his best days—both on offense and defense. Chisick's play has improved immensely over that of last year.

Basca's passing and the protection given him by his teammates while he was passing was a big improvement over last week. "Buzz" Howlett had a good day. His punting was exceptional, and his touchdown pass was as good a piece of individual work as ever seen on a football field.

Considering that Wysocki was heavily guarded he had a good afternoon. All in all, however, I think it was essentially a team victory.

The first touchdown may be called by some a "fluke," but Chisick's hard tackle forced the fumble and Nowak's intuitive knowledge happened to come through at the right time. It was a "forced" break, and we are always trying to force breaks. If you can cause enough breaks, there is bound to be a score.

I thought that the Temple team played inspired football. The work of Druilis on the lines was very good. Juraslewicz, Lucac, Berrier, and Nichols, on both offense and defense, stood out for the Cherry and White.

"Pop's" defensive strategy was really uncanny. The way he changed his defenses to confuse us as much as possible was something to make one marvel. Their touchdown drive and the pass that was its climax was a sustained drive—the kind that makes football what it is, the game that has won the genuine admiration of people in all parts of the country.

Over the period of the three years that I have been here I think that it was the hardest fought game played between these two schools.

"Red" Kamen, Mattie Kuber, Bill Cochrane, Dave DiFilippo, and especially Harry Mazzei deserve commendation and a pat on the back. They played effectively in all departments. Mazzei's blocking was up to his usual standard, and his choice of plays, noteworthy.

Shader, up to the time he was taken out, turned in one of the best defensive jobs I have seen a fullback do in many years. Tom McMahon is improving in that phase of his game. He will be useful and necessary in our next two games, both of which will be tough.

To sum it up, it was a game that teamwork won, and therefore, a banner triumph that should go to make up a lasting memory.

SCORING MARKS ARE SET BY GREY TEAM IN EVENTFUL WEEK

Alumni, Austin and Business Fives Tie for Fourth Place in League

KEATING SCORES HEAVILY

By PHIL DUNN

A total of eight games were played in the intramural loop last week, and a few records fell by the wayside. The established marks for team and individual high scoring were broken—both by Mendel Dayhops.

The Grey quintet as a whole, went to town against the Penthousers on Thursday night and rolled up the goodly sum of 71 markers. This breaks the season's record of 64 set by the league leading Fediganites. Dan Keating chalked up 22 points against Alumni on Tuesday night for another new mark.

Fedigan Still Undefeated

Meanwhile, the Fedigan five continued undefeated to practically clinch the first half championship. Sporting victories over Austin, Mendel, and C. & F., the Gigolos can do no worse than fall into a tie with the Day-hops; and this can happen only if the Gigolos lose both their remaining games and the commuters win their two. The crucial game will be played on Monday, November 21, when the Maroon and the Grey, "meet in mortal combat."

The pacemakers won from Austin by a 53-24 count on Monday night. For the victors "Buzz" Hart scored 12 points to lead in this department. Bochetto and Sceiba of the Gigolos made 10 points each as did Cassidy of the Blueshirts.

Monday night also saw a great game between the frosh teams. After a very close contest the Green of Alumni Hall emerged victorious over Mendel's Yellow-jackets to the tune of 44-39. Lanky Jim Halpin paced the Greenies with 16 markers, while Crumb led the Penthousers by garnering 14.

O'Connor Leads Businessmen

On Tuesday afternoon the C. & F. team—which shows promise of going places in the second half race—won a 37-30 decision over Austin. "Bud" O'Connell's 10 scores were enough to lead the Businessmen and 10 points garnered by George Flood were also enough to pace the losers.

Fedigan won its second game of the week by handling Mendel a 55-32 setback. Tony Sceiba and Vic Sandor added equal amounts of 15 points to the Gigolos total, and were instrumental in the victory. Phil Mariani tossed in 11 points—all in the last half—to lead the Penthousers.

Keating Scores 22 Points

It was in Tuesday night's other game that Keating rang up 22 markers to lead his Grey team to victory over Alumni. Dan was the star of this contest from any angle. Alumni, employing a "hanger" throughout most of the game, were not able to cope with the Day-hop attack and lost, 51-35. John Muench played a great game for the losers; his ability to get possession of the ball in a mix-up kept the Day-hops score within reason. He and Dalton each scored 10 points.

The week's best game was played on Thursday afternoon. Fedigan and C. & F. engaged in a nip-and-tuck battle the outcome of which was never certain. The Gigolos led 16-11 at half-time, but were held to three baskets for the remainder of the game. Gerry Lynam led the Business five with seven points, and "Buzz" Hart, who again led Fedigan, garnered only one more than that.

Alumni Trims Blueshirts

In a close game on Thursday night Alumni beat Austin 19-15. Indicative of the type of game both teams played is the fact that Alumni was held scoreless in the first 16 minutes of the second half. Carl Pantaleo's six points led the Blueshirts; and John Muench scoring five points and sparking the winners' play, led the Greenies.

After this game the Mendel Dayhops staged their runaway victory over the other Mendel club. The Penthousers never had a chance. To begin with they were handicapped by a scarcity of players, but even an abundance of men could not have stopped the onslaught. Keating ran up 19, and Abbott and Dalina contributed 14 scores for the Grey. Al Skaff made 12 points for the Yellow and Grady of the same team had eight.

Because the quarterly exams are being given this week, there will be no games. The contest scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday of this week will be played on Monday and Tuesday, November 21 and 22 instead.

able to "click" at the proper moments.

Racing out for the second half on the long end of a 13-0 score, a seemingly new Villanova squad took the field. The Blue 150's had bolstered the faltering defense they had used in the first half, they advanced with a will and tackled with a fury. The smooth Cornell running attack had struck a bump on the road to touchdown land. The "Big Red" was forced to turn to the defensive in order to ward off a possible Villanova tally.

Dominick Blocks Kick

Pushing the Cornell eleven backward toward their own goal, the Villanova lads seized their first opportunity for a tally. Vic "Little Wysocki" Dominic, crashed through the Red defense and blocked a kick. Turner, of Cornell, fell upon the ball behind his own goal for a safety.

This brief display of aggressiveness marked the end of all scoring for the day.

Cornell might have reached the Blue goal once again during the third quarter, had it not been for an interception by Pagano. The Ithacans had advanced the ball upfield on a steady march but were halted when the Blue quarterback snagged the ball on the seven.

Cats Not Outfought

The Main Liners might have been outscored but far from outfought. Although they trailed throughout the entire encounter, they had the same fighting spirit that they possessed on entering the stadium. The dancing shift which they use is "pep personified."

McGurk, Lombardo, and McManus were outstanding for their play against Cornell's "Little Varsity." Also mention should be made about little Vic Dominic, since he was directly responsible for the only Villanova score.

Taking all into consideration, the lightweights deserve credit for putting up such a gallant second half stand although they failed to overcome the lead Cornell had piled up in the opening quarters of the game.

Wildcats-Owls

When Neri's and Shader's attempts netted only a yard, Sabrinski smashed off the right side of the line for a gain of 15 yards, advancing the ball to Temple's 46.

Further progress was halted as time was up and the Wildcats sported a 20-7 lead at intermission.

Owls Threaten

With blood in their eyes the Owls came back in the second half ready to tear apart the Blue line. Lukac returned Basca's opening kick-off from his own 16 to the 43. With Nichols, Stevens and Lukac toting the mail, the Templars reeled off two firsts and were finally stopped on Villanova's 17.

Following an exchange of punts, Villanova gained 25 yards and was in possession of the ball on their 42. Rolling again, the 'Cats advanced the ball to the 24 on a pass to Nowak from Howlett. Two penalties in succession pushed the Blue back to the 44. When two passes failed Howlett booted one out on the four.

Starting an offensive drive which brought them to the 'Cats 27, the Cherry and White threat was halted as the Blue and White line held. With Basca and McMahon alternating, the Blue advanced the ball over midfield and then were forced to kick. Howlett got off another beauty which went out on the eleven.

'Cats Threaten Again

Bottling up the Owl backs in the last stanza, the 'Cats knocked again only to have officials step in and rule an offside penalty after Mazzei made a spectacular one-hand catch of Basca's heave on the Owl 13.

Temple made a last desperate attempt to score again on the last three plays of the game. Berrier was downed by Wysocki on the Owl 27 after Howlett quick-kicked from his 23.

Bowles line-smash was good for five; Lukac on a double-reverse made it a first on the 39. Stevens then passed to Lukac who, after almost getting away in the clear, was stopped at midfield as the game ended.

ON THE natural meeting grounds that sport provides, men can create between all peoples, irrespective of class, creed and nationality, bonds of unbreakable spiritual quality," says a statement issued by a group of leading British sportsmen and re-issued in America by the Oxford Group under the direction of a former intercollegiate two-mile champion and record holder, R. B. Eldridge.

The paper goes on to state that since sportsmen know the meaning of discipline and sacrifice which sport demands, it is up to them to give the lead. Moral rearmament, which is the true basis for national fitness, is an individual responsibility. Sportsmen, morally rearmed, can influence the life of the whole country.

Bill Sinnott

"This will mean that fear, vindictiveness, jealousy, self-indulgence—the forces that make for national unfitness—will disappear, and out of the present apathy a new desire for national fitness will spring to life."

The British athletes continue by suggesting that high standards of sportsmanship, fair play and clean living have a great share in building character and should, through sportsmen governed by these principles, be carried into national life. This requirement should be carried deeper in order to remove dissatisfaction and the spirit of unrest and to restore to the country faith in its high mission and purpose.

The English sportsmen's belief, and Mr. Eldridge opines the American Sportsmen's, too, is that the task of the sportsmen is to assert the principles of sport-fitness, discipline and teamwork—so that they become dominant in the life of the whole country.

The paper concludes with an appeal for the creation of a new chivalry and a new spirit of unselfishness among the peoples of the world based on the discipline and sacrifice which sport provides.

Among those who signed the statement was "Bunny" Austin, the tennis star.

DELIVERS ADDRESS ON SPANISH MUSIC

Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., delivered a talk on Spanish music and its meaning at the meeting of the Spanish Club last Tuesday night.

Fr. Handran accompanied his lecture with the playing of several recordings of Spanish music to demonstrate his points. Though Spanish music is difficult to understand because of its mplexity and variety of moods, Fr. Handran showed a profound knowledge of his subject, so much so that the members extended him an invitation to speak later in the year.

At the meeting next Tuesday, November 22, Albert Ibaraguen, general manager of the group, will relate the club's plans for future events.

Ibaraguen stated that he will urge members to visit the International House in Philadelphia, an organization composed of local college students from fifty-eight different countries, and to attend the lectures, forums, and teas held there.

THE frazzling pace of these fast-moving times doesn't mean a thing in the life of the dog. Although his complex, high-keyed nervous system closely resembles our own, when the dog feels his nerves tire he settles down—relaxes—as the beagle hound above is doing. That is instinctive with the dog. We are not so likely to break nerve tension before it gets our nerves upset. Ambition and determination push us on and on...past the warning stage of nerve strain. Will-power silences the instinct to...pause and rest.

And yet jittery, ragged nerves are a distinct handicap. Don't let your nerves get that way. Learn to ease the strain occasionally. Let up—light up a Camel! Six performances are being directed by Bradley McManus, Robert Wilderotter, Thomas Haynes, Robert O'Brien, and Murray Zealor, members of the cast of "Winterset," successful production of last Spring.

Each individual skit will comprise approximately twenty minutes. Melodramas and farces are the types of sketches being enacted. Contrary to rumors, scenery and costumes will be used throughout.

"Foiled—By Heck," "Sky Fodder," "Curses, What a Night," "And the Villain Still Pursues Her," "Lost and Found," and "The Monologue," from "Dr. Faustus" are the titles of the plays.

All the students and their friends are invited to attend. Students from nearby colleges have been asked to be present. A small charge of twenty-five cents will be made.

Presented Annually

These annual one-act plays are presented in order that promising talent may be discovered for the forthcoming Spring production. Members of the various classes, particularly the freshmen, will enact the roles. An added attraction will be the many female impersonations which combined with the humorous dialogues will produce a very comical effect.

Anthony J. Frayne, faculty director of Belle Mesque, promises an enjoyable evening. A capacity crowd is expected to attend this initial production of the dramatic society.

Most of the plays are of the melodramatic farce type. The comedy of characterization consists of the villain pursuing the heroine who is finally rescued by the hero.

STIMULATE HUMAN EGG WITH NEEDLE

Student Conducts Startling Experiment With Lankenau Research Director

The world of medicine was startled recently by an experiment in the field of pathological research in which the human embyro was artifically stimulated.

Bernard J. Miller, senior in the School of Science at Villanova, in collaboration with Dr. Stanley P. Reimann, Director of Research of the Lankenau Hospital, of Philadelphia, gained the honor of sucessfully performing this experiment for the first time.

Used Needle

The embyro was stimulated by pricking it with a miscroscopic needle. It started with the problem of discovering the origin of certain mysterious tumors in the reproduction organs of the human. There was a great deal of doubt as to whether the human egg was possible of this.

Dr. Reimann and Miller had the good fortune of being able to observe many embyros. The one chosen was taken from a woman in the sixteenth day of her cycle during

DWYER AND MILLER SELECTED TO HEAD PROM, DINNER DANCE

Commerce Student, Member of Science School, Receive Important Positions

COMMITTEES FOR AFFAIRS WILL BE RELEASED LATER

Realizing the importance of securing competent leadership to insure a successful senior week-end, William J. Ward, president of the class of '39, today announced the appointments of James W. Dwyer and Bernard J. Miller as chairmen of the Belle Air Ball and the Senior Dinner Dance, respectively.

Ward also stated that the chairman for the Invitation Social will be appointed at a later date. Purpose of this is to allow full attention by the class to the Ball and dinner dance arrangements.

Committees to assist the chairmen in carrying out the functions of the office are being organized. A group of twenty men will aid Dwyer, member of the Commerce and Finance school, in making complete arrangements for the Belle Air Ball which is to be held on February 10.

Committees Released Later

Miller, student of the Science school, will head a select committee of five members. They will aid him in making all preparations for the Dinner Dance, held this year on February 9. Names of all committeemen will be released at an early date.

As the first formal dance of the college social calendar, the Belle Air Ball has always held general student interest. And as the last such affair sponsored by the seniors, it has received the special attention of the prospective graduates. Prominent orchestras, superlative decorations, and surprising novelties have in the past made it an affair to be long remembered.

Dwyer asserts that this year will be no exception to the standards set by other classes. In fact he declared that with the same co-operation that has expressively marked the social endeavors of the present senior class, a dance will be held that should exceed all previous efforts and set a new high for future

RETURN OF THE TERROR

THE reign of terror has been revived! Led by a power-crazed dictator, the German people have torn the darkest pages from the annals of French history and have ascribed their race to one of the fiercest persecutions ever perpetrated by human injustice. The German people are not at fault. Rather than commit themselves to chaos, they accepted the rule of a dictator. This man, upon assuming power, began a concentrated drive of persecutions against Jews, Catholics, and all others who would not conform to his diabolical schemes.

There is no excuse, no reason, for this unprecedented fire of anti-Semitism which is raging within Germany. It is true that there may be political, economic, and social conflicts between the Germans and the Hebrews, but the utter expulsion and destruction of these people will not remedy these differences, or cause any good to either race. It will draw the Jews more closely together, and turn the outraged wrath of the entire world against this dictator and all that he stands for.

This is Hitler's last stand. IT IS THE ATTEMPT OF AN ILLOGICAL MANIAC TO PUT HIMSELF AGAIN IN THE LIMELIGHT WHEN HE HAS BEEN EXHAUSTED OF SENSATIONAL IDEAS. His power is weakening—his favor among European countries lost — he is bereft of friends, both political and personal, so he wields his torch of childish anger against a minority among his people. His people? No, it would sully the character of the German race to include him as one of their number.

At last the world is awakening to the fact that we are all children of God, equal in His sight, and that racial or religious persecution is fundamentally, morally, and undeniably wrong. Thus, only with a surge of world indignation and united prayer to the God of eternal justice will men of this calibre be brought to whatever senses they have left.

This hellish movement will eventually subside, but it will burn its mark of brutality and injustice upon the pages of the history of an otherwise enlightened era. The darkest ages in civilization do not rival this persecution in horror—it cries out to the high heavens for revenge!

THE ONLY WAY

THE world's daily tabloids recently laid aside for a day or two their glaring headlines depicting the horrible atrocities being committed on hapless Jews and Catholics in Nazi Germany to make way for news of a more peaceful nature.

This new story was generally hailed as an oasis, so to speak, a place of refuge from the insidious persecutions and cruelties now prevalent. Yes, the account of the Beatification of Mother Cabrini in Rome last week went far in relieving the tension and bitterness aroused by the situations in Germany and Italy.

It served as a refreshing interlude of escape from the trials of this care-worn world and had the effect of the long-overdue tonic in that it presented concrete assurance to the public at large that oppression does not, and will not, possess dictatorial way over this planet of ours.

The ceremonies, through which the title of Blessed was bestowed upon Mother Cabrini and which made the first step in the ultimate canonization of the first American Saint, were beautiful and becomingly stately. These personify the salvaging influence that all religion, particularly Catholicism, has in the hearts of man.

The entire beatification proceedings and their object, Mother Cabrini may easily be figuratively construed as a delicate hint from Heaven to turn to Almighty God as the only solution to the pressing problems of today. If such it be, the advice can well be followed profitably. Upon consideration, it is plain that the one, stable, and never-changing source to which we can turn to gain solace in any of our troubles, either of a private or a national nature, is Christ, the Prince of Peace.

There can be found none better than Almighty God to whom we can go in such matters. Every virtue has its source in Him, and no pleas are ever unheeded by Him. Almost every other plan has been tried to cure the world's ills to no avail. Why not now follow the true program of recovery and stress the importance of God in public and private life?

IT'S ALL FOR YOU

NEXT week the Belle Masque troop will exhibit its talents in the presentation of "ye olde time meller-drammers" in an attempt to instill a spirit of humor into its collegiate program.

For weeks the directors and members of the cast have been rehearsing the scripts to have the roles perfected for the occasion. One of the hardest tasks for the actors has been to grow immune to the ridiculous gags and characterization that stud the plays.

They must learn to remain undisturbed so that they will be able to maintain poise in an atmosphere of rollicking uproar. But that does not mean that you will supress your bursts of joviality and mirth. It's all for you.

In line with the co-recreational policy of the dramatics societys, the session of laughter will be brightened by the presence of nearby co-eds. Celebrate the ending of examinations. Get yourself into a good mood for work to be done. Support the rising stock of this ambitious group. After all . . . it's all for you.

Language Study in America

BY

Rev. Thomas F. Gilligan, O. S. A.

VAN WYCK BROOKS, the great critic of American letters, has described for us in his classic "The Flowering of New England" the education of the early citizens of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maine and New Hampshire. In many beautiful and fascinating pages he sketches pen portraits of those pioneer scholars who did so much to create an indigenous American culture.

Contrary to what might have been supposed from the fact that these men worshipped God in the most narrow of religions, and in spite of the fact that they were separated from the world of Masks and bookmen by the broad Atlantic, there was nothing narrow or insular about their culture. Indeed it might be maintained that the culture of America was never so broad and cosmopolitan.

Never since in our land have the classics of Greek and Latin enjoyed such popular esteem. They were read and loved by Harvard dons, by shop-keepers, janitors, ditch-diggers.

A man's refinement was judged by his ability to quote the original Greek, to coin a Latin epigram even to compose a clever Latin pun. Nor were the other Literatures neglected. The old New England preachers modeled their rather florid discourses on the masterpieces of Bossuet and Massillon. The classics of the Golden Age of French letters were known and loved. As Edward Everett gave an unparalleled impulse to the study of Greek and Latin, George Ticknor became the father of modern-language study in the new nation.

Men like Motley, Prescott, Bancroft in Dutch, Spanish, and Colonial history were recognized as scholars in their own country of course, but their fame went over the whole civilized world. Bookmen like Emerson, Lowell, and Dr. Holmes were equally at home in many literatures.

Of all of these men perhaps Longfellow would serve best to illustrate what was meant by the flowering of American culture. Though he is known chiefly for his poems which are of purely American inspiration, much more impressive is his command of world literature. His works abound with translations from French, German, Italian, and Scandinavian. But above all, these foreign cultures became really his own.

No modern has even grasped as he did the spirit of the Middle Ages; no American has even appreciated as he did the culture of Europe, no Protestant has ever come as close as he did to an understanding of monasticism and all things Catholic. Of all of these men most noteworthy is the fact that their cosmopolitan caused no lessening of their love for their own country. In fact they were better citizen of the new world because they knew so much about the old.

The study of world literature has declined since those days. We do indeed have great scholars in all our universities. We have world-renowned teachers of Greek, Latin, and all the languages. It seems to me, however, that the culture of America has become a very parochial thing. Our high school and college students read the usual text-book editions of the classics.

Their reaction is, however, chiefly one of distaste and revulsion. The average American college student knows little and cares less about the great world classics. He has had a fairly wide reading in English literature. He keeps abreast of the currently best selling American literature. But his sole knowledge of the present thought of the world comes to him through translation. Naturally the books chosen for translation have to be books that will sell; they have to be dirty.

It is truly a shame that Roman culture must be judged by a laborious and disjointed translation of Virgil; that Greek is known to be very difficult; that German is studied only by Science students; that French, Spanish, and Italian are desireable chiefly for commercial reasons. The men who teach these subjects are constantly being harried by utilitarians who demand to know of what use the study of languages is.

The fact that the study of languages in our country suffers from the disease that afflicts all our education. Briefly, the symptoms of this disease are as follows: 1, Everyone is "educateable." Result: our language classes are cluttered up with boys and girls without the desire or ability to learn. 2, Hard work is to be avoided. Result: our language students have the idea that, since a language and a literature can be learned only by hard work, they

DE PAULIA: DE PAUL U. For the first time in the history of American football a game will be played without the point after touchdown when the University of Detroit and Santa Clara meet at Sacramento, California, Sunday, November 27.

In case of a tie score, victory will be awarded the team making the greatest net yardage in running, passing, and running back kicks, less yards lost in penalties.

LEHIGH: BROWN AND WHITE: Oklahoma students have formed an American Co-ed Protective League which issues insurance policies to protect good-up girls from heart pangs. For a meager fee of 10 cents weekly, a member of the league is covered to the tune of 50 cents in case her big moment does not show up for an evening's frolic. If the unfortunate gal catches her escort with another man, she gets double indemnity.

EVENING BULLETIN: The football team of Brooklyn College went on a real sitdown strike. It seems that the students didn't support the team and left them without sufficient funds to pay for equipment. An average of thirty-five spectators watched their games. This makes Villanova's plight seem lighter.

VARIETIES

Student Poll Results; Myrna Loy Selected; Will Wysocki Want Recount?

By FRED WATERS

TOMMY DORSEY, Spencer Tracy, Myrna Loy; favorite dance band, actor, and actress of Villanova students!

With a sigh of relief, and no longer wondering about the inspiration which caused the invention of the "automatic count" voting machine, we give you the results of last week's poll. Over 800 votes cast were distributed as follows: (for the dance band)

1. Tommy Dorsey 202
2. Hal Kemp 105
3. Kay Kyser 100
4. Larry Clinton 94
5. Benny Goodman 60
6. Guy Lombardo 53
7. Sammy Kaye 51
8. Artie Shaw 30
9. Russ Morgan 12
10. Blue Barron 12
11. Paul Whiteman 10
12. Richard Himber 9
13. Wayne King 8
14. Fred Waring 7
15. Fred Martin 6
16. Henry Busse 6
17. Chick Webb 6
18. Villanovans 5
19. Eddie Duchin 5
20. Glen Gray 5
21. Jimmy Dorsey 5
22 - 36. Fifteen other bands received from 4 to 1 votes each.)

Hal Kemp, first choice in last year's "Varieties" poll, and subsequent selection for the '38 Junior Prom, would have fared far better in the above tabulation, if the frosh and sophomore votes had been excluded.

Among Juniors and Seniors, Hal placed only three votes behind Dorsey. As it is, there is practically a three-way tie for second place between Kemp, Kyser, and Clinton.

Only five students selected all three winners on their ballots; Frank Lombardo, '41, C. & F.; Glen Dinon, '40, Eng.; Frank Devlin, '42, Eng.; Vincent Gordon, '42, Eng.; Howard McCall, '42, Arts.

The boys were certainly particular when it came to selecting the "gals." Fifty-one different acresses were marked on the ballots! The vote:

1. Myrna Loy 152
2. Hedy Lamarr 147
3. Loretta Young 66
4. Ginger Rogers 50
5. Priscilla Lane 39
6. Carole Lombard 33
7. Madeline Carroll 31
8. Alice Faye 29
9. Bette Davis 28
10. Olivia de Haviland ... 24
11. Betty Grable 20
12. Margaret Sullivan 18
13. Norma Shearer 16
14. Deanna Durbin 12
15. Jeanette McDonald 12
16. Annabella 10
17. Joan Bennett 10
18. Luise Rainer 9
19. Martha Ray 9
20. Greta Garbo 8
21. Irene Dunne 8
22. Simone Simon 6
23. Dorothy Lamour 5
24. K. Hepburn 5
25. Anita Louise 5
26 - 51. (Twenty-six actresses received 4 to 1 votes each.)

Actor selections:

1. Spencer Tracy 225
2. Mickey Rooney 123
3. Clark Gable 111
4. Errol Flynn 66
5. Ronald Colman 30
6. Gary Cooper 27
7. Paul Muni 27
8. Tyrone Power 24
9. William Powell 21
10. James Stewart 18
11. Cary Grant 18
12. Charles Boyer 15
13. Wallace Beery 12
14. W. C. Fields 10
15. Robert Taylor 9
16. Bing Crosby 9
17. Fredric Marsh 9
18. Lionel Barrymore 7
19. Bob Montgomery 6
20. Hugh Herbert 6
21. Herbert Marshall 6
22. Don Ameche 6
23. Ed. G. Robinson 5
24 - 39. (Sixteen additional actors received 4 to 1 votes each.)

There are several surprises in the above list. Robert Montgomery and Don Ameche, each with only six votes, probably owe their position to the fact that (contrary to Hollywood publicity) there are so many good actors on the screen today who appear more frequently, and, of late, in bigger "budget" pix, than the latter two.

* * *

Nip and tuck between Hedy and Myrna, with the more seasoned actress finally winning out. Johnny Wysocki will probably demand a recount.

Slip O' Pen: Voter's name, graduating class, and department were required on every ballot. Some marked a question mark in the blank after "graduating class." Not so with senior Paul Schleicher. No doubt in his mind, Paul write, "yes."

Mae West was left out in the cold Nary a vote.

Kandid Kamera: Diminutive frosh Tom Doyle climbing up onto one of the Commerce and Finance "recreation" room tables in order to decorate one of our "Poll" announcements.

Dorothy Lamour and Don Ameche evidentally have not added to their popularity as a result of their effort on the Charlie McCarthy-Bergen program. Don polled six, Dorothy five votes.

Spencer Tracy, who rose to the top in cinema fame thru his roles as a priest in "San Francisco" and recently "Boys Town" was the "first movie actor ever to don a cassock," according to Merto-Goldwyn-Mayer.

INTRODUCING

From Olive Oil to Machine Oil and Aeronautics With "Grease and Grime" Engineer

By WILLIAM J. WARD

WHILE DULCET breezes gently wafted the branches of the olive trees and strew olive oil on the shoulders of the unsuspecting citizenry of Palermo, the capital of Sicily, a certain member of the Cirrito clan was nervously pacing the floor of his abode awaiting for the cry of a new born babe. Just when it seemed that the carpet would give way and suffer from an acute case of footgrove, the long-awaited cry was heard to blend mellifluously with the gentle sound of marching feet and military music. Thus began the career of one of nature's noblemen the point of all this ballyhoo, Mr. Anthony J. Cirrito.

Gets An Idea

At the age of two, after giving special attention and much thought to the crisis then evidenced in Italy, Andy prevailed upon his family to pack their respective toothbrushes and take a rock and roller to the land of golden opportunity. Realizing that the new bambino was a giant in the thought and idea department, the family took him at his word and did as directed.

Arriving in New York after a rather uneventful trip, the Cirritos found themselves enshrouded in one of the densest fogs ever to envelop the "pathway to millionaires' row." Unable to see, the family trudged up the first handy street and didn't get stopped until they landed in Bryn Mawr, Pa.

With the family escutcheon firmly planted in the virgin soil of this yet-to-be striving metropolis, the Cirrito clan set about providing for the educational opportunities of the Subject-of-most-conversation in family gatherings. With this thought uppermost in the collective minds of the family, Andy was sent posthaste to St. Thomas' grammar school in Rosemont. Finding the make-believe world a greater outlet for his artistic heritage than the one of reality Andy wasted no time in becoming the star performer of the local Group Theater.

Enters Lower Merion

Satisfied at last that his command of all the subject matter disseminated by the good Sisters of the above institution, the next move was in the general direction of Lower Merion High School. Finding that this was a peaceable country at most times, Andy decided that in the event of any type of conflict the one best armed never comes off second best so his natural tendency was to join the rifle club.

Citizens of Philadelphia were tremendously grateful that the targets used at Lower Merion faced in the general direction of heaven so no casualities ensued. Feeling the importance of being able to explain any shots which might go wild, and realizing that all peoples are not blessed with an understanding of the two languages now at his control, our hero joined the French Club . . . never any thought of joining the Foreign Legion entered his young mind.

After all that, Villanova was the natural choice of the youth and suiting the action to the word he introduced himself to the faculty during the Fall of 1935. Greatly believing in the future of bridge building and realizing the need of good men to construct parking lots the School of Technology seemed the likely outlet for his pursuit of the educational muse.

Once a full fledged member of this select group, Andy decided to participate in the various features peculiar to this type of student. Joining the A. S. M. E. and the Pi Kappa Phi in his first year were coupled with his Caruso-like endeavors in the Glee Club. The second year went by so rapidly and was so full of academic procedure that Andy sat tight and played it cozy until his Junior year rolled around.

Elected P. K. P. Head

At this time the A. S. M. E. elected him to the post of secretary-treasurer and the class as a whole came through with an offer to serve on the Prom committee. Filling both offices to the best of his abilities and being kept busy with other outside interests the senior year swept in before our subject had recovered his breath. The senior class and the P. K. P. vied with each other to see who would get the services of Anthony and the contest came out a draw . . . the P. K. P. elected him president and the senior class made him a member of that august body referred to as the Student Council.

Coupling his abilities at organization with his other propensities for demonstration Tony made his debut early in his undergraduate days and has been living up to his ideals since. Every student affair on the campus is better for his presence and he makes it a point never to miss one.

The young lady in the case? Does John Barrymore content himself with the companionship of only one of the fair sex? Don't be silly, Bismark, but gather round and I'll tell all. Being an actor, as previously stated, occupies much of Mr. Cirrito's time and makes heavy demands on his social calender. And so refusing to hurt the feelings of any of his fair admirers he gives them all equal opportunities to share in his time and company.

After graduation in June, Andy plans to work for a year or so (that's long enough as far as we are concerned) and then return to a graduate school where he expects to major in aeronautics. So if any of you are ever hit in the eye by a few drops of oil just remember that it is no longer olive oil welcoming him into the world but rather machine oil proving that he is still a member of the grease and grime crew usually referred to as mechanical engineers.

ODDS and ENDS

By Tom Haynes

Ed. Note: This week's guest columnist is James F. Haughton, '41.

ODDENDA:

These little things called "exams" sure do provide excellent copy for an embyro columnist. For instance, there's the case of the group of lads studying for an English test in that Bryn Mawr center of coke culture—The Greeks. Then, too, the Frosh who stayed up till the wee hours of the morning studying for a quiz, and then overslept it.

A few fellows reminiscing on their fortune in the quizzes offer this parody on "I Haven't Changed a Thing."

I haven't passed a thing
The cribs were all in vain,
I'm waiting for the dean to put me on the train.
(chorus)
Oh father dear, please let me explain
That's why I haven't passed a thing.

CALLING ALL PROMINENTS:

Prexy of Rosa Nova Club: (Whoever he may be) There's a blond lad with the initials George Haggerty who'd like to read the by-laws of your organization with thoughts of joining.

Jim Farley: The classy twirler of the village band, Jack Eldracher is on the receiving end of a few fan letters through the courtesy of your outfit. Oh for the life of a drum major.

HighSchool Principal: Lou Dubino, who is currently instructing the lads and lassies in his student teaching routine at Radnor High, has a perplexing problem. Seems he can't concentrate on the presentation of material with a lot of young lovlies making eyes at him from out in the hall.

Bell Telephone: If your firm charged the receiver as well as the caller for the use of Alexander G. Bell's little invention, then Sam Monaco and possibly Jim Montgomery would be broke over in Austin Hall.

Emily Post: What should a fellow do who has showered, shaved and shampooed in thought of expecting a petite bit, and then the fair one doesn't put in an appearance? That's Tony Skeeba's problem.

Then, too, what would you advise several lads to do who were steady entertaining bureaus at a certain college, and when the students of that institution "runned" a dance the lads weren't on the receiving end of invitations?

College Librarian: Two students conversing in the library: "Let's get out of here or we'll be getting a bad reputation."

Roger Babson: Dr. Loeffler, college medico, claims that Villanova students really learn high finance in—of all things—ticket scalping.

Lawrence Tibbett: The campus singing runner, Bill Dobbins, can't understand why the lads condemn his yodeling in dorms, classrooms, etc., praise his tonsilitory when he parades in front of the local musicmakers.

Ely Culbertson: You may make a fortune on your bridge activities, but boy what a shellacking many a campusite is taking on his poor pinochle playing ability.

PRE-MEDICALS HEAR MARYNOLL DESCRIBE LEPERS IN CHINA

Rev. F. J. Connors Addresses Seniors Before Returning to Orient

MEETS MANY DIFFICULTIES

An appeal for financial and medical attention in behalf of Catholic Missionaries laboring among Chinese lepers was heard by seniors in the School of Science last Friday.

Rev. F. J. Connors, a Maryknoll Missionary, addressed the graduating pre-medical class speaking on his experiences with the dreaded disease of the Orient. The group was privileged in being able to hear information regarding symptoms, treatment, and distribution of the disease from one who has been closely associated with it.

No Cure Available

In his address Fr. Connors revealed that the medical profession today is unfamiliar with the disease. As yet, he stated, no positive cure has been found. Treatment in many cases is successful. The disease is known to be caused by a definite bacillus and its symptoms are readily recognized.

According to his observations during seven years among victims of leprosy, Fr. Connors has advanced some explanations for its spread. He explains that the community tea-drinking custom of the Chinese, the predominance of rodents in the squalid cities and villages, and the use of common eating dishes may be factors explaining the predominant occurence of leprosy in China.

300 in Colony

Fr. Connors is Director of the Leprosarium of Catholic Missions at Kongmoon, South China. Today there are approximately three hundred lepers being cared for in the colony.

He is assisted by another Catholic priest, the only white inhabitants within a thirty mile radius. Young and old victims, the rich and the poor, possess the much-dreaded disease. It is present not only to China and the Phillipines but is evident on this continent, and from Greenland to the tropics.

Soon after Fr. Connors had become a missionary priest, he left the home of the mission society in New York and went to China. It was here that he volunteered his service for work among the lepers. Since he wanted to help the lepers, he was told to do all he could.

Met Many Obstacles

Given practically no help whatsoever, with four lepers he began his task. The Chinese government gave them land on which to live a corner of a graveyard. The first building was composed of boards obtained from the coffins in the graveyard. The roof was of thatched grain. For financial help they went to the Chinese government where, after several years of trying, a very small amount of money was obtained.

At this time Fr. Conners moved into the interior of China and there spent several years teaching the people. He came back again and started a colony only to have it swept away by a gale that approximated 250 miles per hour.

At the colony in Kongmoon, South China, it takes only ten cents a day to exist. At this rate it is only three dollars a month per individual. Fr. Conners' hopes are that he may enlarge the colony, receive medical aid, and most of all, funds to carry on this great task. He spent the first seven years in China learning the language.

The most impressive idea of the talk was his attitude toward his own life. He said that it was God's will that this be his life's work.

Fr. Connors came back from China to the United States to see his parents, and then he will return to South China soon after the New Year to spend the rest of his life at Kongmoon, South China—aiding the lepers. He believed that it is likely that he will become a leper himself.

MAKES PREPARATIONS

College Glee Club Practices Diligently for Ensuing Concert Season

Preparing for the ensuing concert season, the Villanova College Glee Club has been practicing special choruses and choral technique during the past several weeks.

A tentative program includes, Brahm's "Lullaby"; "Dark Rivers"; "Burleigh"; "Adoremus Te Christe" "Pristrina," and "I Love You," Schubert. These concert pieces will be rendered in German, Latin, and French, as well as in English, by the organization this year.

The glee club is comprised of 35 members, and hopes to surpass all former achievements in the duration of its activity. A special quartet and octette have been formed and are expected to produce a better balance of tone in the translation of the classics.

ALUMNUS MARRIES

William F. McGraw, '34, B. S. in Econ., was married on Saturday, November 12, to Miss Kathryn Hair of Scranton, Pa. The nuptial rites took place in Athens, Pa. While attending Villanova, he was very active in campus affairs.

Scholarship Fund To Be Established By Campus Society

Phi Kappa Pi Fraternity Elects Frank Melograna Treasurer

Scholarship Committee, announced that after the unanimous vote of the Phi Kappa Pi fraternity, a scholarship fund definitely will be established.

Quinn stated at the regular bi-monthly meeting of the P. K. P., "that this fund will be second to none on the campus." He believes the speed with which it has been organized has already set a precedent among similar organizations.

At this meeting President Anthony Ciritto announced that Frank S. Melograna, junior mechanical engineer, has been elected to the office of treasurer.

Another important announcement released at this meeting was the fact that the P. K. P.'s basketball season will open on Saturday, December 3.

Edward Ritti, secretary of the organization, is endeavoring to secure a well-known engineer to address the group at its next meeting.

COMMITTEE SELECTED

MacGregor Appoints Group in Charge of Arrangements for Smoker

Raymond MacGregor, president of the Villanova branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, announced on Wednesday, November 16, that the committee in charge of refreshments and arrangements for the annual smoker were elected.

The members of the committee of arrangements are: John J. Seelaus, junior student; Edward A. Ritti, and Frederic A. Rappleyes, senior and junior engineers.

MacGregor also revealed that John Heck, active member in this society, is making arrangements to secure Mr. Harrison, of Philadelphia, to lecture on "Finish Control."

Arrangements are also being made to entertain the student members of the various local college branches of the A. S. M. E.

REPRESENT VILLANOVA

Rev. William J. Lunney, O. S. A., moderator of the International Relations Club, and several members of the club represented Villanova at the conference of the International Relations Clubs of the local colleges held in St. Joseph's College recently.

THESPIANS TO HOLD CASTINGS FOR ROLES IN 'ROOM SERVICE'

Director Advises Applicants to Familiarize Themselves With Play

Tryouts for roles in the Belle Masque version of "Room Service," will be conducted by Anthony J. Frayne, director of dramatics, on December 6 and 7.

Belle Masque, through its director, recently received rights to produce "Room Service," as its annual Spring presentation. This popular play, written by John Murray and Allen Boretz, was proclaimed by many critics as the best comedy ever staked on the Great White Way. Lately it was filmed by Warner Brothers. However, because of technical difficulties, the screen version is regarded as inferior to the theatrical production.

When the Villanova dramatists portray their version of the play it will be with the explicit intention of fostering a better reputation among dramatic organizations. Belle Masque enjoyed notable success in its presentation of "Winterset" last season, and aims at even more satisfactory results this year.

Prospective participants have been requested to familiarize themselves with the roles in the play by reading "Room Service," now available in the college library. In this manner each student will be given better opportunity to select a type for which he is best suited, Mr. Frayne believes that if Belle Masque members follow this procedure a better selection of the cast will be possible.

Inside Highlights On The Workings Of The Press Revealed Through The Eyes Of An Inspired Reporter

By JAMES COLLINS

By the way, reader, have you ever stopped to ponder over the condition under which this paper struggles to press every Tuesday (?), over the mental stress (mostly dial staff on Friday afternoons, or over the menta istress (mostly distress) and strain which the editors undergo in compiling this masterpiece of literature? Well, in that case, perhaps the following little excursion into the 'sancta sanctorum' of the VILLANOVAN will enhance your knowledge. Fares, please! Let's go!

Time: Any Friday afternoon. Scene: Editorial room of the VILLANOVAN.

The first time we meekly try to open the sacred portal someone or something from within breezes by with the speed of a Chinaman on War Admiral in Tokyo and scares our ever-present hiccoughs away. (No, lady, There's no extra charge for that service).

When we do sneak in unobserved, what a bedlam reaches our ears! What a sight of industry smacks us in the visual organs! Embryo journalists scurry by with the importance of a Winchell, so thick and furiously that one takes his life in his hands endeavoring to cross the office. (Hey, lady, do I have to tell you again not to let that kid get too close to these guys? They're dangerous in this mood. You know, punchy!)

Papers sail hither and thither (sometimes even yon) in a merry manner and inevitably come to rest on the nice floor. (Incidentally, the waste paper baskets, all three of them) are the cleanest and tydiest things you ever did see.

An Iron-Clad Rule

That's one of our iron clad resolutions: Never throw excess bits of paper or stuff into a waste basket when the floor is unoccuppied. So funny, too, everyone abides by it. I wonder why, Daddy?)

The clatter of typewritters plays the general melody to the symphonic arrangement of "When the Scoop Comes Over the Mountain," while the glassy-eyed editors in quavering sopranos (and we do mean soooopranos) sing the vocal to the tune of "Stop Beating Around the Mulberry Bush: Why Don't You Have Your Column Written?"

"Slug that Dummy"

If you people hear that diminutive chap over thar with the big cigar in his mouth shouting "Who's going to slug that dummy?", please don't think that he is referring to your correspondent. Half of the time he may be, but I am so ignorant I think he's talking about the make-up chart. The fellow on the other end of that cigar (Try a little harder, Stinky, and you'll see him,) is none other than Co-editor Tofani who claims everyone he sees is "his boy."

Don't look now, but the fellow with the glasses who, between intermittent shag steps and vocal outbursts of "You Go To My Head" is giving some pointers to that cute Freshman on the art of composing stories, is the other half of the co-editor situation, Bob Howe. (I'm a thinking that it's a good thing for me I didn't pull a "Dipsy Doodie" and say "better half" above.)

Slices It Thick

Let's listen to him and perhaps pick up a neat slice of advice. Howe: "That story is easy to write, Frosh. Listen: 'Villanova is the first to blah, blah, blah, boom!' See how easy it is?" We, with the acquiesing freshman, go away in a dither, marvelling at the knowledge of the man.

And now permit me to show you the method of —— (Listen, mister, the show isn't over yet. There's plenty more to see. Aw, come on back, now. That isn't cricket, I'll even let your darling little son mess up the circulation manager's files. Ar you leaving, too, madam? I take back that crack I made about your daughter looking like a pekinese that had just been through a hectic half-hour in a meat grinder. On my bended knees I implore you to hang around a little longer, please ——) 'S no use; they're all gone. Well, now that I'm in the office I think I'll bat out next week's assignment. Ho hum! What a life!

Wildcats Romp To Victory Against Boston University

Backs Display Offensive Form as Team Shows Best Blocking of Season; Basca Runs 88 Yards to Score on Pass Interception

UNBEATEN STREAK NOW EXTENDED TO 19

By JOSEPH PAGANO, '39

FENWAY PARK, Boston.—Continuing to flash the offensive tactics that it has displayed in the last several games a great Villanova grid machine handily defeated a courageous but outclassed Boston University squad last Saturday in a quagmire of mud, by the score of 39-6.

Undefeated now in 19 straight games and winning its seventh game of the current season the Wildcats loom as a potential contender for one of the leading Bowl games in the country.

Adhering to the policy of striking quick and furious the 'Cats wasted no time in making a bid for a score in the first period. Mazzei ran back Crompton's punt from midfield down to the Terrier 19. With McMahon and Basca toting the mail the 'Cats made a first on the Terrier seven. On the next play a reverse Basca to Howlett the 'Cats lost eight yards. Basca then faded back to his 25 and pitched a perfect strike to Wysocki on the three who lateralled to Cochrane and the ball rested on the seven.

Scores First

Basca again fading back to throw a pass decided to run it when no 'Cat receiver was in sight and climaxed his 15-yard run by hurtling across the goal line sending the Blue into the lead. Mazzei con-

VILLANOVA GRIDMEN PICKED ON ALL-EAST

Wysocki Selected by NEA; Korisky, Stenn, Behot Make Frosh Team

Within the last week the football ability of several Villanova gridmen has been recognized. It is nothing new to Villanova to have one of its Varsity placed on an Honorary Football Team; but it is something new when a member or members of the Frosh team are placed on an Honorary grid team.

Last year's All-American Johnny Wysocki was picked by the NEA on the All-East team. This choice came in preference to Cornell's Brud Holland and Pittsburgh's Bill Daddio. This recognition tends to disprove the fact that the Wildcat end has lost his old fire and hasn't come up to expectations this year.

Wysocki Fine Pass-Snagger

Quoting the NEA article by Jerry Brondfield, "Wysocki, a 190-pounder, is one of the finest pass receivers in the East, and once he snags an aerial swings off with the ability of a halfback." Wysocki's running mate at the other end is Fordham's Harry Jacunski, picked because of his superior defensive ability.

The NEA Service Sports Writer can find nothing but praise and admiration for these wingmen who are not only skilled blockers and

BLUE LIGHTWEIGHTS LOSE CLOSE CONTEST TO BULLDOGS, 13-6

Blue and White Rallies to Tie Score; Weaken in Second Half

Villanova's 150 - pound gridders met their third defeat of the current campaign last Friday, bowing to Yale 13-6 at New Haven.

Bad breaks, as much as the good offense of the Bulldog, accounted for the Wildcat loss, as the local attack looked impressive even in defeat. Injuries to two key players, John Conway and Jerry Holland, weakened the Kittens at tackle, providing holes through which the Eli backs began to pour in the final periods.

Yale Forges Ahead

The home team jumped into the lead late in the first quarter when Marshall Green, Eli left halfback, carried the ball over tackle for six yards and the first score of the game. Green failed to convert, and the period soon ended with the Kittens in possession of the ball, marching toward the Yale goal.

With the beginning of the second period the 'Cats piled through the Blue line with Jim Lattanzia, Jay Brown and Frank Lombardo carrying the pigskin over and around the Eli defenders. Reaching the 30, Brad McManus replaced Lattanzia in the line-up, and promptly hurled a pass to left end Donald McGurk that was caught on the 18 from which point McGurk sprinted to the goal line.

Neither team was able to score after the 'Cats unsuccessful conversion, although once Liscio outran the Yale secondary only to drop Brad McManus' perfect pass, thus costing the Main Liners, their last real scoring chance.

McManus Away

At the beginning of the second half, the Stoviakmen turned to the air, but their passing offense was met with a strong anti - aircraft defense by the hustling Elis, and the ball merely see-sawed up and down the field with neither team in a threatening position. Brad

VARSITY COURTMEN UNDERGO STRENUOUS DRILLS FOR OPENER

Veterans Pushed Hard by Reserves for Berths on Starting Five

MEET ROANOKE AT HOME

By PHIL DUNN, '40

With the opening game less than two weeks away, Villanova's 1938 edition of varsity basketeers has definitely started to "shape up." The basketball season will get underway on Thursday, December 1, when the locals take on the Roanoke College five of Roanoke, Va.

An indication of the starting line-up can be gained by observing the scrimmages which take place daily in the gymnasium, Three new faces, in onlookers' opinion, have a good chance for regular berths.

Veterans Show Form

Montgomery and Duzminski are maintaining their old positions while Lloyd Rice, Paul Nugent and "Chuck" Yund bid fair to fill out the quintet. Art Vigilante, veteran guard, is regaining last year's stride and may get the starting call at his old post.

The new men just mentioned—Rice, Nugent and Yund — have readily grasped the Villanova system of play. Their team play is adding impetus to the Wildcats' attack, and is bolstering the defense as well, while their height gives the homesters a decided edge off the backboards.

The enthusiasm and spirit they display, as well as their ability to work as a unit, will probably place Duzminski and Vigilante, at the guard positions with Rice in a supporting role. Montgomery at center backed up by Lou Dubino and Sinnott, and Lszorchak and Yund at the forward posts with Krutulis, Vinci, and Nugent close on their heels. This may easily become the starting line-up.

Reserve Material Abundant

This year an abundance of reserve material makes it advisable that regulars who held their berths last year because of lack of man-power, start playing the Villanova way. If they do not, an eager, underatudy will take over the position; and, unlike the result that this would cause last year, the quintet will not be weakened.

The amount of material on hand is a just cause for a favorable prediction as to the kind of season the Wildcats will have. One school—Loyola, of Chicago—has named Villanova as the team to beat; and notwithstanding the difficulty of the schedule prepared for them, the basketeers should have a very good year.

Revamped Manhattan Team Confident Of Beating Cats

Kelly Green Under Kopf Sports Three-Game Winning Streak; Determined to Keep String Intact and Avenge Previous Defeats

MAZUR, SULPISKI, CARUSO SPARK OFFENSE

By TOM O'MAHONEY '39

Manhattan College will have a different football team out there Thursday to oppose Villanova's unbeaten Wildcats. No more one-sided beating in which the Kelly Green droops and those good citizens of the Bronx who have no love for Fordham scream in anguish. No, the picturesque college up on the hill, until now famed more for its distinguished list of alumni than its football prowess, is in the progress of a gridiron rejuvenation.

A little visit to Manhattan Field, Jasper practice arena, a talk to amiable Doctor Herb Kopf, the resident physician, and above all, a look at the patients themselves in action, brings forcibly to mind the claim of the Brain Trusters. They may or may not be making America over, but Coach Kopf, who served his internship at Columbia University, is certainly making Manhattan's football over.

Jaspers Use New Offense

In the not so distant days of Chick Meehan, Manhattan football was a series of smacking the tackles twice, a try at center and then a punt. All fine football, fundamentally. It worked well for Chick in the halycon days at N. Y. U. Unfortunately, however, it didn't work so well at Manhattan. Dr. Kopf, who feels that the hand is quicker than the eye, being horrified at such tactics, has installed a nice attack which is fundamentally the same as that used by Lou

RAY GADSBY NAMES BILL DUFFY LEADER OF BOXING SQUAD

Coach Announces That Training Will Begin After Holidays; Veterans to Report

With the announcement that Bill Duffy, sensational 145 pounder and winner of every fight but one in two years, will captain the Villanova boxing squad; word also comes that practice will start immediately after the Thanksgiving Holidays.

Villanova should be well represented in the square circle this season because most of last season's men will be back. The only boxer who will not be definitely back, is Jimmy Mulroy. Jimmy was coming along fine last season but will not be with the Wildcats this season because of an accident that took place over the Summer vacation.

Veterans to Report

Veterans who will start training immediately are Mike Ariano, 125 pounder and one from whom a lot is expected this year. Eddie Kirk fully recovered from an appendicitis operation, which kept him out of action last year, is raring to get started so that he can regain his old form. Eddie looked very good in his first season and should be a consistent winner for the Blue.

Bill Duffy, appointed captain for the last two seasons, will no doubt turn in his usual fine performances and his steady generalship should prove invaluable to the new candidates. Bob Mentzinger, representing the Wildcats in the 155-pound class, will be gunning to extend his undefeated string of last season's wins. Johnny Nojunas, Ben Morkum and Ed Killian, all football players may be out there throwing punches for the White and Blue. However, the end of the current grid season will determine that.

Student Urged to Compete

All students interested should report to insure Coach Gadsby the possibility of coming across a 115 pounder and some men to represent the 'Cats in the heavier weight divisions.

ENGINEERS PREPARE FOR COURT TOURNEY

Harold Murphy Making Arrangements for Contests to be Held in December

Under the management of Hal Murphy the Phi Kappa Phi fraternity is completing plans for its annual basketball tournament to be held in the early part of December.

Inaugural December 3

Although the schedule is still befng prepared, it is definite that the first game will be played on Saturday, Dec. 3. Participants in the league are the freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior members of the engineering fraternity. The various classes form teams and battle it out for the fraternity diadem.

Hal Murphy, who also stars for Ray Stoviak's 150's, is in full charge of the tournament.

Seniors Former Champs

Last year's tournament ended up with the seniors in the van, but this year is another story. The present seniors hope to follow in their predecessor's foosteps, but competition will be much tougher this Fall.

The Freshmen are the only members who have not yet organized, but it is expected that they will do so shortly.

The Phi Kaps are also considering the revival of their old bowling league. Bowling was once an outstanding feature of the Engineer's program, but interest lagged in the past two years.

Clipper Comments

On Boston University

DESPITE the fact that weather conditions made the playing of good football almost impossible the team came through last Saturday and played some good football. The boys were in top condition and they went on to show some great football to Boston.

Nick Basca's running and passing were all that could be expected. He was outstanding on a team that clicked as a unit. Buzz Howlett's kicking and pass receiving of that soggy, slippery ball was very good. Walt Nowak continued his steady, heads-up playing.

McMahon Has Good Day

Our line play was very good. Chisick had a great day and was outstanding. His defensive work was as good as anyone could ask. Tom McMahon had the best day of his season. We were a little worried because of Shader's injury, but McMahon came through to add our fears with a great exhibition of offensive and defensive ball-playing.

Matt Kuber was a standout as usual, and Bill Cochrane made a good showing. The team, as a whole, turned out the kind of a blocking job they are capable of and this helped very much on the numerous long runs reeled off during the game. I'm hoping that we turn in the same kind of a game this Thursday against Manhattan.

Mazzei Blocks Well

Harry Mazzei's punt returning and blocking were up to the "Baby Tank's" usual great performance. Harvey Buek and Mike Sabrinski turned in fine performances at the right and left halfback positions, respectively, while they were in there. Working as a combination they were good, both having just about their best days of the year.

Bukowski looked good, as did Sam Monaco, who was hampered by an injury.

Boston University was right in the ball game at all times, despite the overwhelming score. Crampton showed up as a good passer and kicker. The wet ball hampered him no little.

Walker, B. U.'s center, was one of the best men I have seen in years. Connerney is to be congratulated on playing a great game in the place of the Terrier's injured star. I doubt that anyone could have turned in a better game at the halfback job. He was especially outstanding on defensive work, and punt returning.

As a whole, the Villanova team picked up confidence in the Boston game. The confidence and experience they acquired against the B. U. outfit should do much toward bolstering up our running and passing attack against the Manhattan team this Thursday.

'Cats Play Remarkable

Against Boston the playing was remarkable when the conditions under which the game was played are considered. The field was in terrible condition after steady, hard, rain so that it seemed that the running and passing attacks of both teams would have been stopped. However, the team played as if they were impervious to the weather conditions. I doubt that a better played game could have occurred on a dry day. The team was primed and rain was unable to stop them.

Next Thursday brings Manhattan, a much improved team over that one which opened the Jasper's season, so we will need all that excellent blocking, running, and passing which we shoed against the Boston team. If we get the same top performances we may be successful against Manhattan. It is a sure thing that we will need good work to stop the New Yorkers. We have shown a steady improvement in the last few games. The improvement must keep up.

A SUGGESTION was made to our department by the VILLANOVAN Associate Sports Editor, Thomas O'Mahoney. We thought it was very good and one which the student body should know about. His suggestion was that the moving pictures of all the Villanova football games played this season be presented some night in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. This would not only give Villanova fans an opportunity to witness some of the games which they may have missed but also an opportunity to review the happenings of the current grid season.

Joe Pagano

Another integral part of his suggestion was that a nominal fee be charged to those attending. The revenue could be used for some worthy student project. Comments which students have to offer either pro or con should be referred to Mr. O'Mahoney. Such a realization may become practical if arrangements, facilitated by student interest, can be made with the proper authorities.

—V—

Villanova's grid machine has enjoyed a successful season to date but as yet there remains one all-important obstacle to overcome. That as we all know is the Manhattan game to be played at the Polo Grounds on Thursday. Villanova has been offered invitations to play several post-seasons games already. However, if the Wildcats were to lose to the Jaspers Thursday, which is no impossibility, the complex of the whole situation may be changed completely. We know that defeat is the most re-

McManus, playing the best game of his career, was a consistent gainer and once dashed off tackle neatly, passing the Yale backs as though they were riveted to the turf, only to be intercepted by the Blue safety man, Tabor, at midfield.

With but six minutes remaining to play, and the ball Yale's on the Villanova 40, it appeared that the Kittens would emerge with their third tie. However, once again, Green the villain of the piece, went into action. He carried the ball once for a five-yard gain, and on third down burst off tackle with nice interference for the Bulldog's second touchdown. His conversion was successful and the game ended soon after with the Kittens on the wrong end of a 13-6 score.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER:

Our genial basketball mentor's home has been blessed by the arrival of an addition to the family—a nine pound boy. Congratulation's Al, from each and every member of the Freshmen and Varsity basketball squads.

Since this is the third son, members of the basketball team are wondering if their mentor is attempting to rear a basketball club instead of acquiring one.

It is interesting to note that Art Vigilante, varsity basketballer, was a member of the famous Vigilante Brothers basketball quintet, so well known throughout Northern New Jersey. The team was composed of five members of his immediate family with his Dad acting in the capacity of manager.

During the past few weeks, the Varsity basketball schedule has had some notable additions. De Paul University of Chicago, Illinois, has been invited to play Villanova at the Convention Hall in Philadelphia on Saturday, January 21, as part of a twin-bill in which Penn State will oppose Temple in the second game.

The Villanova quintet, being rated "the team to beat" by the basketball coach of Loyola University of Chicago, has been invited to participate in a twin-bill at the 132nd Infantry Armory in Chicago on Monday, January 9. Villanova will head the program against Loyola of Chicago, with Duquesne, a worthy Villanova opponent of the past, playing De Paul.

Besides participating in a basketball game, the Villanova basketball squad will have the opportunity to watch De Paul play, also study their system and mannerisms since De Paul has been chosen as a Villanova opponent at a later date.

On last Wednesday evening, the Villanova Gymnasium was the scene of a basketball clinic conducted by "Chuck" Taylor, a

IT SEEMS that there are two different lines of thought on the same subject. The two different lines of thought are being championed by two different types of columnists. We speak of so-called "Villanova rowdyism" and the two columnists, "Red" Smith and Stan Baumgartner, who must have seen the aforesaid rowdyism from different angles or through differently colored glasses.

Baumgartner insists that the ball players punched each other all over the field. Baumgartner insists that the spectators in the stands behaved themselves in a most riotous fashion. Baumgartner insists that the after-the-game crowd at Philly night spots—they must have been Villanova men, all 50,000 of them—behaved themselves a manner most indecorous and antipodal than that to which staid Quakerstaters are accustomed. Baumgartner insists that the ball players were hostile and inimical towards each other. Baumgartner insists . . . Well, that's Baump's line of thought. Now, for the other line of thought, and "Red" Smith.

Smith insists that the ball game was a fierce battle on the field, but it was clean fight all the way. Smith insists that the stands behave in a manner indicative of a change for the better in spectator conduct at a Villanova-Temple game. We saw two good fights, but they were fought outside the goal lines in the horseshoes of the Temple Bowl. Subway alumni, most likely. They pay their admission price. If they pay to fight, let them fight. They come to forget other things. Let them have their holiday.

Smith insists that the ball players were more friendly after the game than before it. We saw Dave Defillipo and a few others rush across the field and intercept Temple men to congratulate them on a fine ball game. That concurs with my conception of sportsmanship. We saw that. And you know, "Red," we weren't listening to a radio description of the Cornell-Dartmouth tussle as was your contemporary. Perhaps he confused th games.

Seems like it's time to say we insist "Red" Smith is absolutely right in insisting that Stan Baumgartner is wrong in his insisting that conduct at the V-T game was ungentlemanly.

What we'd like to know is Baumy's motive for writing something he didn't see. Incentive is sometimes confused with purpose.

What's Baumgartner's purpose? That's a better question. It would be a hard blow to Philly fans if V-T relations were severed. And just prior to this game those relations were not too solidly based. Food for thought.

Continuous 12:45 to 11:30 P. M.

In the Sportlight

By BILL CAREY

FIVE FEET three inches, one hundred and thirty-five pounds constitute the physical makeup of Carl V. Pantaleo, who for the last four years has won the admiration and respect of his team mates and other acquaintances by his plucky spirit and love for competitive sports.

This diminutive lad who hails from New Haven, Connecticut, has overcome the disadvantage of his pint-sized stature to win recognition and honors in the field of sports during his stay here at Villanova.

Reveals Sporting Talent

During his frosh year Carl wasted no time in putting himself in the limelight. He became a member of Alumni Hall's basketball team and at the end of the season found himself among the first five high scorers of the intra-mural league. Through his achievement he earned himself the nicknames "Deadshot" and "Wolf."

Came the boxing season so he thought he'd take a stab at this. Much to his surprise he was chosen to represent the 125-pound class. Carl enjoyed a successful season, winning five out of six fights. His first combat was won by a knockout over a Penn man, and his only defeat was inflicted by Pettenio of Temple on a close and disputed decision.

Enters Social Life

As a sophomore, "Dead-shot" was elected to the Orientation Committee, and through his fair sportsmanship and sense of humor was considered by the frosh as a regular guy. This year was divided between social and athletic activities for Carl. He was a member of the Sophomore Cotillion Committee and was chosen secretary of the Connecticut Club.

Carl avoided the ring as far as varsity competition was concerned, but he did partake in an intra-mural engagement to win by a decision. He had his opponent out on his feet but the game lad carried on until the final bell.

Our abbreviated friend turned his attention to football and because of the shortage of weight had to be contented with the idea of the 150-pound team as his goal. This was attained shortly and he has been a regular ever since. All his team mates and opponents will admit that he has done a neat job at left halfback through the season.

To Enter Medical School

Carl is the second child and has one brother and one sister. His father owns a grocery store in which every member of the family is employed at one time or another. But as this is not Panny's idea of a future, he is planning on entering a southern medical school to further his studies and achieve his ambition of becoming a surgeon.

At present Carl says he has no heart interest but he does find time over the week-end to make trips to Norristown . . . Despite these frequent trips Carl denies there is anything serious in them, and besides he's too wrapped up in his medical future. His favorite hobbies are swimming and dancing. He has passed senior life guard test and is a full-fledged life-guard waiting to "save" his first victim. When Panny trips the light fantastic, he really goes to town. His truckin' and susie-Q'in are the rage of the campus. For swing music he nominates Tommy Dorsey to lead the list and for the softer strains he gives Guy Lombardo his vote.

Never Missed Meeting

Carl's greatest sorrow suffered at Villanova came as a result of losing a great friend when Domonic Manna had to leave the home of the Wildcats. Panny does not hesitate to admit that he cried when Domonic departed.

He feels that his greatest achievement at Villanova was being present at every Thursday morning Seminar meeting during his entire four years up until this point and he intends to carry it through 'till the finish. Showing stamina such as this Carl proves he has the stuff that will carry him to future success and we wish him the best of luck in his quest of achievement in the medical world. We are proud to say that Carl V. Pantaleo is a true Villanova gentleman.

Little. Working from a modified Notre Dame type formation, he lays stress on spinners, reverses and many, many fakes.

In the two sophomore stars Ted Mazur and Johnny Supulski, Manhattan has two backs who dovetail easily into this system of play. Mazur, whose punting has amazed New York sports writers, holds down the right halfback position and is a great defensive back. Including the North Carolina State game, the 146-pounder has averaged 46.5 yards for 41 boots. In the N. C. State fray, he punted nine times for an average of 52 yards. His running mate at left half, Supulski, is the running and passing star of the squad. Hampered until now by a bad leg, Johnny is reported to be faster than ever—no good news for the Wildcats.

Line in Good Shape

Captain Al Caruso, hard blocking senior at quarterback, is also a good runner and passer, while Harold "Tubby" Savage, another senior, occupies the spin-buck position in the Jasper backfield. The line, too, is in fine shape for the Turkey Day encounter with the Main Liners. Barring last minute changes, it will probably present Bill Dorsey and Homer Farabaugh at the ends, Pete Paulhus, just out of the sick bay, and Art Jocher as tackles, Ed Tellier and Jerry Fall at the guards and either Len Pomecter or Frank Gnup at center.

Last year Johnny Wysocki took personal charge of the game for the 'Cats and scored 19 points out of his team's total of 20 as Manhattan went down to defeat. The memory rankles up there in Riverdale, however. This game is the one to win—and Dr. Kopf, who says little until, aroused, whereupon it is too bad for his listeners, give the impression that it will be won—by Manhattan.

With the aid of members of the Villanova basketball squad, Mr. Taylor demonstrated the necessary fundamentals of basketball, stressing the importance of passing the ball as quickly as possible. Many players had the habit of holding the ball for a few counts and are therefore a handicap to the rest of the team. After the demonstrations were over, Mr. Taylor answered all questions brought to his attention.

From a reliable source, I have learned that Don Shields, well-known Temple basketball player of the past, has been employed by the Phillips Oil Company of Oklahoma and is an active member of their basketball team composed of well-known stars who are six foot two inches or over. Meyer Bloom, another Temple star of last year is now playing professional basketball with the Philadelphia Sphas.

Fedigan Hall Nears Mural Diadem; Austin Wins 33-21 To Take Third

Maley, Finn, Finehouse, Starr, Score 24 Points in Easy Win

The lowly place Mendel Residents were set back another notch when the Austin five defeated them on Thursday night, 33-21.

With Alumni remaining idle, and the Blues registering a win over Mendel, they now move up into undisputed third place.

Tom Maley and Joe Finn, took the scoring roles with twenty-four points between them, for the Blue-shirts' victory. The Austinites retained their lead right up to the end of the fray and were never threatened. Their floor play was inpenetrable and most all of the baskets by the Mendel club were from the mid-court section. The half-time score was 15-9, in favor of the Austin team. In the last half they held the Mendel team to eleven points while they totaled eighteen points on the books.

C-mb Leads Scoring

Bernie Crumb led his team in scoring with ten points, and played a good defense game.

Because of quarterly exams last week, there were only two games played. On Monday afternoon, C. & F. will engage Alumni in a fracas which will be a battle for fourth place. On the same night Alumni will attempt to put an end to the nine game streak of Fedigan Hall. Austin plays the second game of that night against the Mendel commuters. Tuesday afternoon will see C. & F. pitted against the last place Mendel residents. All these games will mark the official end of the first half of the Intramural League.

Red Shirts Trounce Day Hops, 34-24, to Stay Unbeaten

Fedigan Hall virtually cinched the basketball crown for the first half of the season when they downed the second place contenders, Mendel Day Hops, by the score of 34-24, on Thursday night. The game was marked in a rough and tumble fashion with seventeen fouls committed by both teams.

A crucial game it was indeed, until the Fedigan'te powerhouse rolled up ten points in the five minute over-time period. Lo Balbo, mainpass of the game on the Villanova 12 and scooted 88 yards for his second score behind some nifty blocking, typical of Wildcat play on intercepted forward passes. This time Mazzei failed to convert and the Blue's scoring for the first half was ended.

Buek and Sabrinski Show Form

Buek and Sabrinski, having replaced Howlett and Basca respectively in the 'Cate backfield, did some beautiful running in the remaining minutes of the second quarter and advanced the ball to the Terrier nine as the half ended preventing any further progress.

Beginning where they left off the 'Cats went right back to work as the second half started. "Buzz" Howlett snake-hipped 15 yards to increase the Blue lead and once more Mazzei failed to convert.

Harvey Buek, having replaced Howlett in the Blue backfield, shot off tackle on a reverse from Sabrinski, swerved off to the left and sprinted 54 yards to register for the 'Cats. The line and downfield blocking was superb on this play and Buek's run was really a spectacle to behold. Mazzei converted and the Blue led 33-0.

Mike Sabrinski concluded the fireworks for the afternoon when he galloped 75 yards behind some beautiful blocking by Bukowski, who, on one occasion mowed two Terriers down to open the way.

At this point the Villanova coaches sent in most of the third stringers and as a result the Terriers hung up their only score of the day with some spectacular passing on the part of Crompton.

Taking the ball on their eleven the Terriers marched almost 90 yards to save themselves of a shutout. This Boston University march was featured by four passes being completed, the last of which Crompton to Pantano placed the oval on the Villanova one-yard line. On the next play Salvati smashed off tackle to score. The try for extra-point was wide of the uprights.

verted and after Basca kicked off to Boston the first period ended.

Once the Smithmen tasted blood there was no stopping them. The 'Cats scored twice in the second quarter and sported a 20-0 lead at the half.

Nick Basca, who seems to be in the right spot at the opportune time, intercepted a Terrier pass on the Villanova 37 and once more the Blue was off to touchdown land. Basca faded and a pass meant for Monaco was incomplete. However, the next aerial was completed to "Buzz" Howlett advancing the pigskin to the B. U. six. Mazzei then skirted right end for a tally and also converted.

Villanova's third touchdown came when Basca intercepted his second pass of the game on the Villanova 12 and scooted 88 yards for his second score behind some nifty blocking, typical of Wildcat play on intercepted forward passes. This time Mazzei failed to convert and the Blue's scoring for the first half was ended.

DWYER AND MILLER SELECTED TO HEAD PROM, DINNER DANCE

groups to attain. It is his intention to utilize the Christmas holiday season in contacting the various popular orchestras that will be available on the specified date. Student opinion will be pleased in so far as it is possible.

Success Anticipated

Miller, in regards to the dinner dance, echoes the opinions of his fellow chairman. This activity will mark the last time the senior class meets as a social unit in a closed affair. It is Miller's belief that an excellent meal, a good orchestra, and the dignified but congenial atmosphere of some well-known place suitable for such an occasion, will leave a fond remembrance in the minds of departing classmates.

Both men chosen to fill these responsible positions are well qualified for the duties ahead of them. Dwyer has been a prominent figure in the social life of the campus since his matriculation. As captain of the golf team he has acquired an athletic reputation second only to that of his business propensities.

Miller, as a member of the junior dinner dance committee last year, received valuable experience in this line of work. An honor man scholastically, he is editor of this year's Mendel Bulletin and figured recently in a nationally recognized scientific experiment in the field of embryology.

ENGINEERS SHOW MOTION PICTURE

'Wizardry of Wireless' To Be Viewed by A. I. E. E. Group

"The Wizardry of Wireless," motion picture explaining the phenomena and methods of operation in wireless communication, will be shown at the next meeting of the Villanova Chapter of the A. I. E. E. on Monday, November 28. The film was secured from the General Electric Company and will be witnessed by the group at 11:45 A. M. in the Mendel Ampitheater.

Frank J. Mozzi, chairman of the group, has also revealed that the A. I. E. E. will conduct its following two meetings in conjunction with the Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity. A speaker will be secured for these occasions.

In all probability Dr. Paul A. Loeffiad, college physicion and instructor in Human Anatomy, will address the composite gathering on the value of safety methods and treatment of injuries from the standpoint of industry and engineering.

These parts are dramatized very forcefully as they were in the days of the legitimate stage. Interesting sound and scenic effects will be used in each production.

Unusual in its originality will be Zealor's portrayal from the midnight scene of "Dr. Faustus" by Marlowe. The stage will be in entire darkness while a spotlight plays on Zealor. It will be very dramatic and effective. This will conclude Belle Masque's annual Dramateurs Reception.

COLLEGE BAND ADDS 'LAMBETH WALK' TO MUSICAL REPETOIRE

Continues Renditions of Popular Tunes With Latest Continental Craze

Following its recent success with "A Tisket, a Tasket," and "Alexander's Rag Time Band," the Villanova College band is marching on. The latest number added to its repetoire is the Continental craze which has also swept America, the "Lambeth Walk."

Under the ever watchful eyes of Paul Teal, conductor, and the Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., the band is developing into a high calibre organization. The addition of these popular tunes is a step toward keeping this organization on a par with the modern trends of other college groups.

Band Shows Improvement

Although Villanova does not have a School of Music as have many of the other institutions, the Villanova band compares favorably with the other bands with which it competes.

Mainly due to the efforts of Teal in his conducting and Fr. Handran for his tireless endeavor to improve the group, Villanova is the proud possessor of a first rate band.

Among the things being planned to make the band a better and bigger unit, is the unique formation of letters by the use of the hats and other parts of the uniforms. In this way the band will become more colorful.

It is expected that next year's edition of the college band will be as good, if not, better than the present aggregation and that Villanova will retain its prominence in this department of the gridiron game.

inaugurating a new system of staff management, formulated last Spring In January, an entirely new change of staff will be effected. Upward Swing In Use Of Library Attributed To Improved Facilities

Student Interest Mounts as Volumes Are Contributed By Clergy, Lay Teachers; Electricity, Physics, History, Philosophy Are Added

Among the noticeable changes on the campus during the past few years is the increased use of the library by the students. The upward swing is due mainly to improved facilities and efficiency. Contributing to this is the number of books recently added by friends of the school.

Mr. William A. Slavin, professor of Electrical Engineering at Villanova, has donated approximately one hundred volumes dealing with recent research in Electricty and Physics. The additions are timely and their usefulness is already very much in evidence. Professor Barber, also of the Engineering School, contributed works on General Science and Electricity.

From Rev. John J. Farrell, O. S. A., have come many lately published volumes on all subjects. Some sociological literature is the gift of Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., Dean of the Science School, while Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., Dean of the Arts and Philosophy School, has rendered some historical works. Rev. Bartowski, O. S. A., is also among the contributors.

The late Rev. John F. O'Brien, O. S. A., library of English literature as well as the late Msgr. Slatery's philosophical library have been incorporated en masse into their respective sections. Quite a few of the works in these two collections are well hailed by students in these fields. The cataloging department is in full swing preparing the last of these books for the shelves.

As recent trends have indicated, a substantial supply of works in a department has a strong tendency to provoke reading along those lines by students. A continuous stream of gifts of the legible variety is therefore an indication of sturdy health in a college library.

a surgical operation. It was put into a drop of human blood serum to which a certain amount of heat was applied. The embryo was brought into its potent stage by pricking it with a miscroscopic needle.

After approximately five and one-half hours the egg began to disintegrate and held for about an hour and a half longer. The implications of the findings are many and varied in relation to the conceptions of multiple potency. At present experiments are being carried on with rat eggs and further experiment with human embryos will be started in the near future.

The work has been presented at Philadelphia College of Physicians and the John B. Deaver Memorial of the Lankenau Hospital and will appear in the Archives of Pathology in the near future. A feature on it will appear in the next edition of the Mendel Bulletin.

Miller, an active man here at Villanova, intends to enter medical school after graduating this year, after which he will give his time entirely to research. He is editor of the Mendel Bulletin and has lectured many times in the Research Seminar.

He justified the pact so concretely that there was little doubt left in the minds of the delegates regarding its importance.

His excellency, Most Rev. William J. Hafey, Bishop of the Diocese of Scranton, presided at the conference.

DELATE ANNOUNCES DEBATE SCHEDULE FOR ENTIRE SEASON

Engage St. John's, St. Vincent's in Preliminary Contests This Week

MEET N.Y.U., MANHATTAN; EXTENDED TRIPS PLANNED

Thomas E. Delate, chairman of the Debate Council, has announced the Beta Gamma schedule for the coming season. Although the regular season will not begin until February, one debate has already been held and two more are to be staged this week.

Preliminary to the opening of the formal schedule, Beta Gamma will contest St. John's of Brooklyn on Thursday evening at 8:00 P. M. Mt. St. Vincent will be met here on Saturday at 10:00 A. M. Both these meetings will take place in the amphitheater in Mendel Hall; both will have as their theme the question of "Pump Priming." Faculty and students are invited to atttend.

During the regular season several debates will be held each week on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays either on the campus or before local clubs and gatherings and on the radio. Trips to Washington, New York and various parts of Pennsylvania have been arranged. All traditional rivals will be met here or away.

Radio debates have become an important function of Beta Gamma. Last year station WIP extended time for nine broadcasts. This year the society hopes to hold broadcasts over that station each week for seven weeks in February and March.

Several extended trips are planned for the coming season. On the first, teams from Manhattan, Columbia, New York University and Fordham will be met. PHILOSOPHY GROUP HEARS HARRINGTON

Calabro and Bongiovanni Will Address Seminar Today

Sensation and intellectual knowledge will be discussed by the Philosophy Seminar at its regular meeting at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon in Room 106, Mendel Hall.

John Harrington, of the School of Arts, will present a discourse regarding the "transformation of material sensory perception into the immaterial knowledge retained by the intellect." This will be followed by a review of the matter by Pershing Calabro, also of the School of Arts. A general discussion will ensue, in which all members of the seminar will participate.

Interest in this topic was aroused by a quotation from St. Thomas Aquinas: "Nihil est in intelliotu qui non prius fuerit in sensibus." This subject was also the topic of discussion at the previous meeting of the seminar at which time Pershing Calabro was the speaker and Joseph Bongiovanni the reviewer of the material as presented by Calabro. This was followed by the customary general discussion, in which it appeared that Calabro was inclined toward the Platonic point of view in this regard, while many of the group took the position of Aristotle in this regard.

The moderator of the seminar, Rev. Edward Dwyer, O. S. A., will offer criticisms about the procedure and any necessary corrections at the conclusion of the meeting.

Four One-Act Plays Given by Thespians Prove Successful

Newcomers Show Promise in Initial Appearance as Dramatists

Before an appreciative audience, Belle Masque presented its annual Dramateurs' Reception last Tuesday evening in the Villanova Field House, which was transformed into a spacious auditorium for the occasion.

The audience applauded the efforts of the embyro Thespians. For most of them it was their initial appearance behind the Kleig lights. Much promise was shown by these newcomers.

"Sky Fodder," directed by Thomas Hayne, was highly dramatic and received many favorable comments.

"Folled-By Heck," produced by Bradley McManus, was first rate comedy and resulted in numerous side-splitting laughs.

Murray Zealor's "Monologue," from Dr. Faustus was highly commendable as was Thomas Wildrotter's "Curses, What a Night.' '

Mr. Anthony J. Frayne, faculty director, was well pleased with the performances and predicted a successful season for the Belle Masque Society.

The skits will be reproduced at various local colleges as part of the dramatic affiliations group recently inaugurated here at Villanova by the Jest and Jesture Club of Rosemont College. These round-robin activities will be resumed tomorrow night at Rosemont College, at 8:30 P. M., when Villanova and La Salle will stake one-act plays. The students are cordially invited.

The incumbents are selected by the preceding editors and sanctioned by the Moderator. The first issue under the new management will be that of the week of January 9. Approximately fifty staff members are expected to attend the social, a slight increase over the number present last year. Then, too, the Arcadia served as the scene of the festivities, with Happy Felton in attendance to furnish the music for dancing.

By JAMES F. HAUGHTON

Campus talent will have an opportunity to reveal itself when Villanova students present the third Amateur Show on the stage of the local Field House, Monday evening, at 8 o'clock.

Gathering momentum since its inauguration as a pre - Christmas production, the Amateur Show will be conducted in the usual informal mode with the various halls on the campus vieing for honors. The theatrical program is a feature of the intra-mural program.

Alumni Defends Crown

Alumni Hall, winners the past two years, will again defend its laurels with a group under the direction of Joseph McCabe.

The Austin Hall delegation, runners-up the past two seasons, will attempt to crash the coveted group with an offering under the direction of Edward Cogan and John McKee. McKee has garnered much experience in home-town productions.

Attempt New Plan

Fedigan Hall moderators have not selected any particular student to direct their offering, but instead will have an all-hall production with each resident aiding in the final offering.

The day students of both the School of Commerce and those in the different schools in Mendel Hall plan to take part in the affair. The committee from the Business School includes Robert McIntyre, James O'Brien, and Bradley McManus. The Mendel Hall show is being produced under the direction of Paul Farnsworth.

Eddie Dowling, Paul Carroll Refer Chattingly To Theatrical Careers

Producer and Playwright Relate Humorous Incidents; Present "White Steed" Here Dec. 26; Comment on Rose Bowl Choice

By LEN FLINKMAN

In the becoming and quiet suite of the Warwick, a dull and overcast day for a scenic backdrop, two men, outstanding in the world of entertainment, spoke chattingly of themselves, their work and about things in common, Eddie Dowling and Paul Vincent Carroll.

Outstanding Producer

Eddie Dowling is a phenomenon of the theater as well as the most interesting man along Broadway. His productions of "Shadow and Substance," starring Sir Cedric Hardwicke, and "Richard II," starring Maurice Evans, have established him as the outstanding dramatic producer in the legitimate theater. Born in Providence, R. I., with 16 others in the family, he noticed a shortage of silver spoons. "So I went to work." He sang in cabarets, acted as a bell boy on coastal steamers, "knowing what port was, but not the starboard side" he reflected comically. "On my first oversea voyage I landed in London and, through the influence of an acquaintance on board, joined the Westminster Choir."

Carroll the Pedagogue

"How about you Mr. Carroll?"

"Me, I was born in 1900 on the outskirts of Dundalk, County Louth, Ireland. My dad was a country school master and he taught me until I was 14. Then I ceased to raise my skull cap to the local grocers and those adorable Maureens, also those illiterate leaders of society, and escaped to Dublin. I entered training as a teacher, learned to drink a bottle of Guiness without sputtering, and inhabited the pit of the Abbey Theater. To them I owe everything dramatic I have. Go ahead Eddie, it's your turn."

"Where were we? Oh yes, the choir. Well, the tenor voice disappeared and then long britches came

ZEALOR ADDRESSES TOWN HALL FORUM

Delate and Calabro Uphold Munich Pact Before Three Hundred

"Town Hall," the informal discussion of world affairs by general audience, was held at St. Joseph's College last Thursday, December 1. Although informal discussions of this nature have been held previously by the Villiger Society at that college the idea of inter-collegiate participation was an innovation sponsored by Beta Gamma of Villanova. Rosemont also has taken up the thought and will sponsor such a program in January, 1939.

At the affair last Thursday representatives from Immaculata, Rosemont, St. Joseph's, and Villanova were present together with students from the home college. The audience numbered three hundered. Papers on the Munich pact were read by Murray Zealor of Villanova, and representatives from Rosemont and St. Joseph's. Following the reading of the papers was a general discussion presided over by Wm. Deasy of St. Joseph's.

The speeches were animated and often drew applause from the audience. The feelings of the audience seemed anti-German and many expressed the sentiment that that country should be suppressed. Thomas Delate expressed a strong opinion to the contrary and decried the dividing of countries into dictatorships and democracies. Pershing Calabro also took this same stand. The motion that the Munich pact is conducive to world peace was overwhelmingly defeated.

UNDEFEATED

ANOTHER undefeated season for the Wildcats of Villanova! This is the second successive perfect record made by the Blue and White gridiron representatives. To all the laudatory comments being passed upon this achievement from far and near may the VILLANOVAN, as the organ of the general student body, add a really sincere tribute, albeit brief, to the 1938 football squad.

Primarily, of course, the man who bears the brunt of all caustic criticism during the stormy days which any team may encounter during the season should in all fairness be presented the laurels that accompany victory. Consequently, the highest possible praise is more than due Coach Maurice "Clipper" Smith for the fine performance of his athletic pupils.

When one looks at the re-capitulation of the season's record and sees eight victories and one tie, he is likely to be more impressed by the very face value of it rather than by the more important implications that lie behind it. It has always been the accepted fact that the victor travels an easier road than the loser, but, all things being equal, the man on top meets many difficulties which are altogether different from and much heavier than those of the defeated. Every-one points for the winner, and the majority of general criticism is aimed at him whether he merits it or not.

All of this is mentioned only to bring to mind the serious difficulties which the team and the coaches had to withstand during their undefeated campaign and thus to further emphasize their victories. The exact opposite of the excesses which were possible to block the path of the team was achieved. Personal glory was at all times sacrificed by the individual players for the betterment of the team and done so as to convince the most astute observer of its sincerity and spontaneity.

Everything being considered, the future has a mighty rosy hue for the Villanova football powers. After two brilliant seasons untainted by defeat and with both a highly efficient, competent coaching staff, and a high spirit of morale in evidence among the players it would take the staunchest of pessimists to disagree. Thus, with many and mighty hopes for future national recognition as THE team of the country, we salute the 'Cats of Villanova.

READ CATHLIC

THE current campaign of decent citizens to halt the offerings of the filth mongers must be complemented with a positive substitution of wholesome publications. A religious program of reading is in order to counteract the nefarious influence of the devil's press. It is one of the valuable contributions of this college that it affords easy access to such Catholic reading.

Not only are periodicals open for all at the library, but subscriptions to leading Catholic magazines and newspapers are available to Villanovans at inexpensive rates. Take advantage of these opportunities. Aim to supplant the piles of tittilating froth absorbed by professed "collegians" with a minimum, at least, of one Catholic periodical for every room on the campus. When the reader has finished, he should not throw his copy away, but, trade it with fellows in the hall, send it home, or give it to the Catholic Press Apostolate.

Those who have never enjoyed anything but secular tittle-tattle will be surprised at the interest this literature holds. In fact the sensationalistic friviolity of the profane press has grown so boring that a turn to authors of substantial thought is a welcome relief.

TOLERANT AMERICAN PUBLIC

NEWSPAPER accounts have brought inescapeably to our attention the impasse reached by numerous municipal governments, throughout the nation, practically bankrupt through the leadership of mayors and councils more interested in politics than civics.

It is amazing to note how tolerant the American public is—sometimes even of the wrong things. It is equally wonderful to discover how idealistic we, as a nation, advocate the advancement of justice, honesty, political equality, and democratic principles; yet, in contradiction to this, we allow certain degrading influences to exist in our country which are a discredit to our great American system.

No one need be reminded of the number of mayors of our American cities who have exceeded their authority and have set themselves up as veritable dictators within the confines of their jurisdiction. No one need be reminded of the vast number of municipal governments which are hopelessly in debt, and of the fact that the added burden of taxes to meet these deficits is draining the resource, of the tax-payer, but still he seems to take the attitude that he must bow before the inevitable to meet the demands of these political grafters in a submissive mood.

Whenever an investigation of their activities is attempted, it is usually bought off or quieted down by the pulling of a few political wires. Honest editors, and truly American newspapers, have striven to bring these facts to the notice of the nation, but to no avail. It seems that we accept them as a part of our systems, and allow them to function with no more thought than an indifferent shrug of the shoulders—a symbol of tolerance?

Extra-Curricular Activity
BY
P. F. Banmiller, Registrar

FOR MANY years colleges have recognized a place for extra-curricular activities in developing qualities of initiative and leadership. Most colleges, today, offer a wide range of such activities for their students to cater to their many diversified interests. On the whole there has been a notable increase in participation in these activities. This is a healthy development and deservee encouragement.

There is no doubt that a well-organized and properly administered extra-curricular program can be of considerable profit to the student These activities serve admirably in the development of initiative, personality and leadership. They provide experience in co-operation, in meeting people readily and working with them harmoniously. That these abilities are of great importance in after college days no one can deny.

At Villanova, there is a well diversified program of extra-curricular activities. Here is full recognition of the importance of encouraging social development to keep pace with intellectual development. There is no reason why each student should not participate in at least one of the many activities on the campus. They include various societies, clubs, seminars, class socials, musical organizations, publications and intra-mural athletics.

Any student who leaves school without having participated in some phase of extra-curricular activity has missed a vital part of his college education.

Business executives realize the importance of the development of the social side of the student's life and not infrequently request recommendations concerning his interests in other than academic activities. A cross section of the questionnaires that reach a Registrar's desk from the personnel officers of business and industrial concerns would make profitable reading for undergraduates. After graduation many students have reason to regret their lack of interest in this important phase of their education.

The writer does not wish to convey any wrong impressions regarding these activities. It is clearly understood that these activities are secondary to academic studies. They are in a real sense, "extra-curricular," but this does not mean that they are lacking in importance. In taking the full stature of life, character, personality and leadership abilities are more important than book-learning. But it goes without saying that "book learning" which is designed to broaden the intellect and sharpen the mental faculties has an importance all of its own in the full flowering of leadership which should be characteristic of college graduates.

INTRODUCING

Conducts Unusual Experiment Involving Microscopic Study of Embryo Scientist

By ALBERT A. ZOGBY

RECENTLY, the world of science was startled by the results of an experiment in the field of pathoiigical research in which the experimenters were successful in stimuating a human ova artifically.

Today, my friends, we, too, are about to conduct an unusual experiment in which we shall endeavor to study the development of an embryo scientist in serial section.

On the stage of our special microscope we will place a specially stained and sectioned slide. Now using the extra high powered oil immersion lens we focus on the upper left hand corner of our slide and slowly move it from left to right across the first row of sections.

We find under our lens Phila. on a bright day in the year 1918, the 24th of September to be exact. This day doesn't apparently differ from other days, but wait! What is that terrible din we hear arising from our slide? Oh yes, we recall that since this is an unusual experiment we are working with an unusual microscope, one that is wired for sound, and that din we hear is eminating from the lungs of our lusty young embryo.

Speciman Has Appetite

On closer examination we find that the noise and commotion is due to the fact that our subject had appeased a hungry craving by chewing on several Gray's anatomy books and then for dessert had topped this off with Piersol's histology and Arey's embryology books and was now having a fine time spouting scientific terms. Precocious child, isn't he? Teh, Teh, he can't wait until he gets to Villanova.

Continuing with our serial sections we are now beginning the second row and here we find our embryo scientist engaged in the more normal pursuits of childhood development and so we skip the remainder of this row and move to the next. Here we see the beginning of the formal education of our subject.

Note here the sudden changes which take place. Enrolling in the John Hays public school our embryo decided on a change of atmosphere and transferred his activities to the public school which graces the corner of 7th and Dickinson Sts., where he remained for the next five years patiently whiling away his time, and then another change; this time he transferred to the Kensington School in that section of North Philadelphia where he concluded his education in the more elementary facts of life.

BERNARD MILLER

This marks an advanced stage in the development of our embryo bringing him to the junior high school stage, and so in the next row we find him enrolling in the Wagner Junior High School. Continuing the development in a more rapid manner our hero (every story has a hero) soon attains the first in a series of distinctions, that of president of the chemical club of the Wagner Jr. High School. Other accomplishments are memberships in the Wireless and photography clubs.

Moving our slide back to the left and beginning the fifth row of sections in this series, we note our subject has now entered the Central High School of Philadelphia. Here his extra curricular activities again include membership in the chemistry club, astronomy club and the staff of the German publication.

Makes Honor Roll

The subject of our experiment is now beginning to take on a more definite form, and in the sixth row we find him continuing his higher education at the renowned institution of learning situated in the dense forests of the Main Line at a point known as Villanova, Penna. Here we find he has enrolled in the School of Science and in his first year is content with making the honor roll.

In his second year at Villanova we note the first definite sign of intensive experimental work, this in the field of histology which by the way is conducted in his own personal laboratory which he has set up in his home.

Turning to the social aspect of our future scientist we find him applying for and receiving membership in the pre-med fraternity better known as the I. K. D. Gas and X-ray tubes! What an initiation these boys put on, but our hero survived and we note he is now a full fledged member of that organization. The third year at Villanova shows a rapid development in the experimental field where we observe him doing work on the Dioxane technique at the Lankenau hospital in Philadelphia under the direction of the well-known man of science, Dr. Stanley Reimann. Entering the publications field again for the first time at Villanova, he becomes a staff member of the science quarterly known as the Mendel Bulletin.

Edits Mendel Bulletin

In his fourth and final year he became the editor of the Mendel Bulletin but still found time to conduct experiments in the field of pathology and this work again was done under Dr. Reimann. The purpose of this experiment in which the human ova was artifically stimulated was to gain informaiton which would perhaps lead to a clue as to the cause and cure for cancer. If you will now kindly refer to the first section of our slide, you will recall hearing those strange noises, a mixture of terms used in anatomy, histology, and embryology. These noises are heard again, but in a more coherent and organized manner, as our subject presents addresses to the College of Physicians and later to the John B. Deaver Memorial group.

The next series of sections dealing with the development of the embryo scientist have not been mounted as yet, but we understand that they will be prepared at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, at least that is what we are given to understand, however when they are ready for study we assure you that we will gladly lend our sound wired microscope to anyone interested in making a further study of this subject. At this moment it gives us great pleasure in INTRODUCING to you the subject of this experiment, Villanova's and Philadelphia's gift to science and Atlantic City, Bernard Joseph Miller.

ODDS and ENDS

By Tom Haynes

Ed Note: This week's guest columnist is William F. Garrity.

BY NOW most of us have recovered from the effects of Thanksgiving recess and have once more settled down to pursuing the activities of the collegiate curriculum.

Villanova's candidate for All-American center decided to taper off and rest up after the hard work of the past season. He started off well by helping about six Rosemon girls disembark from the train Sunday night with their many hunks of luggage. Is that your idea or relaxing, Andy?

Robert Emmett O'Brien and Robert "B. A." Wilderotter were quite perturbed at one George "Old Boy" Haggerty because of his absence from a proposed meeting place during the past week. The reason for their ire was "Old Boy's" excuse, "I'm sorry, fellows, I had to get a pair of shoe trees for Bukowski and by the time I got them it was too late to meet you."

Did you know there was a jitterbug loose on the campus? Frank Fitzpatrick jittered his way into the title of Champion Jitterbug of Hamid's Million Dollar Pier in Atlantic City during the past Summer and lately has been wowing the patrons of many of the local cinemas with his dancing. His able partner on all these occasions has been Lydia Bingham, of Philadelphia.

The following was slipped under my door by an unknown member of a local club.

WHY I NEVER JOINED A SORORITY

1. I wanted to think for myself and not be led around by a bunch of sisters.
2. I never went in for woman's organizations at home.
3. I didn't want a bunch of Fraternity boys calling on me at night.
4. I never danced with a man in my life and didn't want to start.
5. I didn't like the idea of rooming with one girl for a whole semester.
6. I didn't look well in sleeveless, low-cut gowns.
7. I am a male.

Jimmy O'Brien in the recent Belle Masque one-act play in which he stole the show as the villian, Sylvester Brewster, was worried about smoking while wearing a false moustache. Said Jimmy: "Gosh, fellows, if this thing goes on fire I might even burn to death. Keep a chaser handy to wash it down with."

Mayor Kryzwicki of Austin Hall announces the moving of his offices to Room 239. Reasons for this are that he will be able to spend more time with his pinochle students.

Any advice for the lovelorn may be obtained by contacting Bud 'I bet them all" Lawrence.

Most colleges, today, offer a wide range of such activities for their students to cater to their many diversified interests. On the whole there has been a notable increase in participation in these activities. This is a healthy development and deserves encouragement.

There is no doubt that a well-organized and properly administered extra-curricular program can be of considerable profit to the student. These activities serve admirably in the development of initiative, personality and leadership. They provide experience in co-operation, in meeting people readily and working with them harmoniously. That these abilities are of great importance in after college days no one can deny.

At Villanova, there is a well diversified program of extra-curricular activities. Here is full recognition of the importance of encouraging social development to keep pace with intellectual development. There is no reason why each student should not participate in at least one of the many activities on the campus. They include various societies, clubs, seminars, class socials, musical organizations, publications and intra-mural athletics.

Any student who leaves school without having participated in some phase of extra-curricular activity has missed a vital part of his college education.

Business executives realize the importance of the development of the social side of the student's life and not infrequently request recommendations concerning his interests in other than academic activities. A cross section of the questionnaires that reach a Registrar's desk from the personnel officers of business and industrial concerns would make profitable reading for undergraduates. After graduation many students have reason to regret their lack of interest in this important phase of their education.

The writer does not wish to convey any wrong impressions regarding these activities. It is clearly understood that these activities are secondary to academic studies. They are in a real sense, "extra-curricular," but this does not mean that they are lacking in importance. In taking the full stature of life, character, personality and leadership abilities are more important than book-learning. But it goes without saying that "book learning" which is designed to broaden the intellect and sharpen the mental faculties has an importance all of its own in the full flowering of leadership which should be characteristic of college graduates.

INTRODUCING

Conducts Unusual Experiment Involving Microscopic Study of Embryo Scientist

By ALBERT A. ZOGBY

RECENTLY, the world of science was startled by the results of an experiment in the field of pathological research in which the experimenters were successful in stimuating a human ova artifically.

Today, my friends, we, too, are about to conduct an unusual experiment in which we shall endeavor to study the development of an embryo scientist in serial section.

On the stage of our special microscope we will place a specially stained and sectioned slide. Now using the extra high powered oil immersion lens we focus on the upper left hand corner of our slide and slowly move it from left to right across the first row of sections.

We find under our lens Paris, on a bright day in the year 1918, the 24th of September to be exact. This day doesn't apparently differ from other days, but wait! What is that terrible din we hear arising from our slide? Oh yes, we recall that since this is an unusual experiment we are working with an unusual microscope, one that is wired for sound, and that din we hear is eminating from the lungs of our lusty young embryo.

Speciman Has Appetite

On closer examination we find that the noise and commotion is due to the fact that our subject had appeased a hungry craving by chewing on several Gray's anatomy books and then for dessert had topped this off with Piersol's histology and Arey's embryology books and was now having a fine time spouting scientific terms. Precocious child, isn't he? Teh, Teh, he can't wait until he gets to Villanova.

Continuing with our serial sections we are now beginning the second row and here we find our embryo scientist engaged in the more normal pursuits of childhood development and so we skip the remainder of this row and move to the next. Here we see the beginning of the formal education of our subject.

Note here the sudden changes which take place. Enrolling in the John Haye public school our embryo decided on a change of atmosphere and transferred his activities to the public school which graces the corner of 7th and Dickinson Sts., where he remained for the next five years patiently whiling away his time, and then another change; this time he transferred to the Kensington School in that section of North Philadelphia where he concluded his education in the more elementary facts of life.

This marks an advanced stage in the development of our embryo bringing him to the junior high school stage, and so in the next row we find him enrolling in the Wagner Junior High School. Continuing the development in a more rapid manner our hero (every story has a hero) soon attains the first in a series of distinctions, that of president of the chemical club of the Wagner Jr. High School. Other accomplishments are memberships in the Wireless and photography clubs.

Moving our slide back to the left and beginning the fifth row of sections in this series, we note our subject has now entered the Central High School of Philadelphia. Here his extra curricular activities again include membership in the chemistry club, astronomy club and the staff of the German publication.

Makes Hono. Roll

The subject of our experiment is now beginning to take on a more definite form, and in the sixth row we find him continuing his higher education at the renowned institution of learning situated in the dense forests of the Main Line at a point known as Villanova, Penna. Here we find he has enrolled in the School of Science and in his first year is content with making the honor roll.

BERNARD MILLER

In his second year at Villanova we note the first definite sign of intensive experimental work, this in the field of histology which by the way is conducted in his own personal laboratory which he has set up in his home.

Turning to the social aspect of our future scientist we find him applying for and receiving membership in the pre-med fraternity better known as the I. K. D. Gas and X-ray tubes! What an initiation these boys put on, but our hero survived and we note he is now a full fledged member of that organization. The third year at Villanova shows a rapid development in the experimental field where we observe him doing work on the Dioxane technique at the Lankenau hospital in Philadelphia under the direction of the well-known man of science, Dr. Stanley Reimann. Entering the publications field again for the first time at Villanova, he becomes a staff member of the science quarterly known as the Mendel Bulletin.

Edits Mendel Bulletin

In his fourth and final year he became the editor of the Mendel Bulletin but still found time to conduct experiments in the field of pathology and this work again was done under Dr. Reimann. The purpose of this experiment in which the human ova was artifically stimulated was to gain informaiton which would perhaps lead to a clue as to the cause and cure for cancer. If you will now kindly refer to the first section of our slide, you will recall hearing those strange noises, a mixture of terms used in anatomy, histology, and embryology. These noises are heard again, but in a more coherent and organized manner, as our subject presents addresses to the College of Physicians and later to the John B. Deaver Memorial group.

The next series of sections dealing with the development of the embryo scientist have not been mounted as yet, but we understand that they will be prepared at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, at least that is what we are given to understand, however when they are ready for study we assure you that we will gladly lend our sound wired microscope to anyone interested in making a further study of this subject. At this moment it gives us great pleasure in INTRODUCING to you the subject of this experiment, Villanova's and Philadelphia's gift to science and Atlantic City, Bernard Joseph Miller.

ODDS and ENDS

Ed Note: This week's guest columnist is William F. Garrity.

BY NOW most of us have recovered from the effects of Thanksgiving dinner and have once more settled down to pursuing the activities of the collegiate curriculum.

Villanova's candidate for All-American center decided to taper off and rest up after the hard work of the past season. He started off well by helping about six Rosemont girls disembark from the train Sunday night with their many hunks of luggage. Is that your idea of relaxing, Andy?

Robert Emmett O'Brien and Robert "B. A." Wilderotter were quite perturbed at one George "Old Boy" Haggerty because of his absence from a proposed meeting place during the past week. The reason for their ire was "Old Boy's" excuse, "I'm sorry, fellows, I had to get a pair of shoe trees for Bukowski and by the time I got them it was too late to meet you."

Did you know there was a jitterbug loose on the campus? Frank Fitzpatrick jittered his way into the title of Champion Jitterbug of Hamid's Million Dollar Pier in Atlantic City during the past Summer and lately has been wowing the patrons of many of the local cinemas with his dancing. His able partner on all these occasions has been Lydia Bingham, of Philadelphia.

The following was slipped under my door by an unknown member of a local club.

WHY I NEVER JOINED A SORORITY

1. I wanted to think for myself and not be led around by a bunch of sisters.
2. I never went in for woman's organizations at home.
3. I didn't want a bunch of Fraternity boys calling on me at night.
4. I never danced with a man in my life and didn't want to start.
5. I didn't like the idea of remaining with one girl for a whole semester.
6. I didn't look well in sleeveless, low-cut gowns.
7. I am a male.

Jimmy O'Brien in the recent Belle Masque one-act play in which he stole the show as the villian, Sylvester Brewster, was worried about smoking while wearing a false moustache. Said Jimmy: "Gosh, fellows, it looks like this thing goes on fire I might even be born to death. Keep a cuspidor handy to wash it down with."

RALLY SUPPORTING NATIONALIST SPAIN HEARS NOTED MEN

Msgr. Hawks Addresses Capacity Crowd at Academy of Music

CHARGE PRESS AND RADIO MISLEAD PUBLIC ON TOPIC

Methods of Loyalist propaganda were exposed by prominent speakers for the Spanish Nationalist Relief Committee at a rally held in the Philadelphia Academy of Music on Thursday evening, December 1.

Four speakers, including Dr. A. Hamilton Rice, Dr. J. Eastman Sheehan, Monsignor Edward Hawks, and Hon. Clare G. Fenerty, told the capacity crowd that they have long been misled by both the press and radio in regard to the true situation existing in the Spanish civil strife.

Dr. Rice, the only man accorded the distinction of receiving a personal interview with Generalissimo Franco, contended that the affair represented a war between the forces of Communism and Christianity with the Catholic Church as the chief weapon of defense. Sparing no one in his critism, Dr. Rice attacked the Spanish Embassy, the Spanish Medical Aid Bureau, the Methodist Episcopal Bishop McConnell of New York, and the leading American newspapers as the instruments of spreading false beliefs through our country.

Both Monsignor Hawks and Mr. Fenerty laid great emphasis on the distortion of facts as presented to the American public. Monsignor Hawks summed up his appeal with the frank statement "I admit I only saw one side, but if it had been the other perhaps I wouldn't have returned to tell the story."

Dr. Sheehan, director of the General Mola Hospital in San Sabastian, spoke only of the conditions encountered in Spanish hospitals. Great hardships are encountered in the treatment of wounded soldiers because of the lack of adequate medical facilities. He stressed the need of American support in establishing better means of hospitalization in the battle areas.

Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, archbishop of the Philadelphia diocese, headed a list of boxholders including many prominent clergy and laymen of this vicinity. A delegation of Villanova, St. Joseph's and La Salle students assisted in the seating of approximately 4200 supporters.

CLUB SIGNS ORCHESTRA FOR CHRISTMAS DANCE

Wilkes-Barre Club will hold its annual Christmas Dance December 26 at the Hotel Sterling in Wilkes Barre. Music and entertainment will be furnished through the orchestra of Junior Macquire. As yet the chairman has not been appointed but it is understood there will be two, one from Wilkes-Barre and one from Hazleton.

Carl Panteleo, president of the Connecticut Club, has announced there will be no Christmas dance this year. Instead an Easter dance is to be held, the plans of which will be discussed after the Christmas holidays.

MUSIC SEMINAR MEETS

Tristan and Isolde Will Be Featured Thursday Evening

Tristan and Isolde will be the feature of the Thursday evening music seminar. Wagner's beautiful symphonic synthesis, long praised as one of his most interesting works, will be played in its entirety. The selection, "Meditation," from the opera, Thais, will also be included in this all-operatic program. Concluding the evening's entertainment of operatic music will be an aria from the opera, Rigoletto, by Virdi, as sung by Lily Pons.

PRESIDENT ATTENDS

Very Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova College, attended the inauguration of Rev. John Elbelt, S. M., as president of the University of Dayton on December 3.

CONDOLENCES

In behalf of the administration, faculty and student body of Villanova College, the VILLANOVAN wishes to express deepest sympathy to Philip M. Dunn, on the recent loss of his father.

GOVERNOR-ELECT

HON. HERBERT R. O'CONOR, recipient of an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Villanova in 1937, was recently elected governor of the State of Maryland. He has long been a prominent attorney in the city of Baltimore, where his fame in legal matters as a Catholic barrister gained for him widespread recognition.

COLLEGE YEARBOOK PLANS INNOVATIONS

Belle Air to Feature Novel Group Photographic Section

In addition to the recent innovations in the method of presenting the individual pictures of the senior class, the Belle Air will introduce a novelty in the group photographs of the various departments this year.

The activities of the different departments have enabled the students to make many interesting and educational trips and the highlights of these expeditions have been photographed. These snapshots will extend to the entire student body a better understanding of each organization and acquaint them with the exploits of every department.

The main purpose of this additional feature is to obtain an interesting collection of informal photographs which will provide a picturesque background. Since the inception of this plan great strides have been taken to accomplish this end. With the photography and literary staffs progressing rapidly in their work we can look forward to a fine year book.

DR. L. V. HEILBRUNN ADDRESSES SCIENCE GROUP AT SEMINAR

U. of P. Professor Lauds Democracy; Best Medium for Advancement

CALLS AMERICA LEADER

Dr. L. V. Heilbrunn, Ph.D., professor of Physiology at the University of Pennsylvania, addressed the science students last Thursday at a general seminar in the Mendel amphitheater. "Science and Democracy" was the theme of his address.

"America is first now in science," he stated, as a result of the fact that democracy goes hand in hand with all progress in the field of science. Our country, definitely democratic, has become a refuge for men of research. It is in America that scientists are left alone in their laboratories and permitted to work as they see fit. Science does not, and can not ,succeed as well in other countires where dictators and politics play the predominant part. The richly endowed universities which aid the scientist in his progress were also mentioned by Dr. Heilbrunn as another factor in America indicative in transferring this country into the leading scientific advocate.

In some countries, Dr. Heilbrunn continued, dictatorship has reached a point where the scientist cannot experiment as he wishes but must follow a definite, governmental standard. This issue is the only retarding scientific progress in those countries because the men have the natural ability and love for this manner of work but can do nothing of their own choice. To some degree, the dictatorships have stopped respecting the truth, and as this course, ipso-facto, there can be no real scientific development.

debates with Catholic University, Georgetown and the University of Delaware.

After the debates held on the campus there will be open discussion in which the audience is invited to participate. It is hoped that the student body will co-operate by attending these affairs.

Rev. Robert M .Sullivan, O. S. A., moderator of the society, and Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S .A., have contacted such organizations as the Knights of Columbus who are desirous of staging inter-collegiate debates at their meetigs. Before such organizations Villanova hopes to demonstrate to the people in practical walks of life the value of an intelligent analysis of current problems.

As a subsidiary activity Beta Gamma has encouraged the holding of inter-collegiate seminars by staging one on the subject of Reciprocal Traffic. This led to a similar seminar at St. Joseph's College and gave hopes of stimulating similar activity among the local colleges. Rosemont College will be host for a seminar to be held in January.

C. C. P. A. Denounces Anti-Semitism; Called Crime Against Americanism

Catholic Colleges Condemn Jewish Persecutions in Press Release; Based on Scientific Absurdity; Stress Individual Rights of Man

Profoundly stirred by the recent Nazi oppression of the Jewish race, the Catholic College Press Association, of which the VILLANOVAN is a member, released the following resolution:

"In this tragic hour for the Jew in Germany, Catholic students are impelled to express their deep anxiety over the rising tide of anti-Jewish feeling in the United States. They hold that anti-Semitism, repeatedly denounced by the Pope as un-Christian and immoral, is also a crime against true Americanism and democracy.

Indifference Impossible

"It is impossible for Americans who believe in God and liberty to remain indifferent to this surge of racial intolerance. Racism, the doctrine propagated by the totalist dictators, attacks the dignity, the rights and liberties of the individual man; it is based upon a scientific absurdity; it denies man's spiritual nature; it contradicts the doctrine of mankind's unity through Christ's redemption.

"The obvious teachings of the Gospel oblige us to take a front position in the battle against racial hatred and intolerence always, but particularly at this time and in the United States.

Condemned by Pope

"Only recently the Pope pointed out that anti-Semitism is not compatible with the sublime reality and thought expressed in the Offertory prayer of the sacrifice of the Mass. 'Anti-Semitism', the Pope continued, 'is a movement which Christians cannot share . . . It is not possible for Christians to take part in anti-Semitism.'

"The Catholic attitude toward Jews is the same as the Catholic attitude towards Africans or Englishmen. For the true Catholic sees only what Christ sees—It is, a person, and does not submerge him in a mass, whether that mass be national, racial, or economic."

DOWLING, CARROLL SPEAK OF CAREERS

into style for me. A few guineas rolled my way so I returned to America, imbibed with foreign tradition and ready to exert them on the American stage." He always wanted to be an actor, anyhow, but his first taste of paint was as a playwright. Erlanger was producing "Velvet Lady" in New York and Eddie was assigned the star role. But the producer was dissatisfied with the book and lyrics. Eddie offered to rewrite. The musical comedy clicked and he was a Broadway favorite as an actor and playwright.

Condemn Bowl Choice

The first act of the interview was over and the curtain came down just in the time for refreshments. Here boisterous remarks concerning the other's boyhood, the football situation, were made. Both condemned the Rose Bowl pickings. "Neither are any good," remarked Carroll, "I thought sure Villanova would grab the Sugar Bowl with T. C. U. and that would've been some match. But that Rose Bowl—they ought to call it the 'Stink-Weed vase.'"

The bell rang and the curtain went up and we continued with Mr. Carroll. "You were in the pit of the Abbey Theater, and . . ." "Well, by this time it was around 1916. And I thought I saw in this theater the spiritual rebirth of the Irish race and I remained in Ireland until 1920, all through those tense days that soon announced the Irish Republic. I saw those lines of tanks daily crawling down O'Connel St., saw sharp shooting and sudden death, experienced being held up in tramcars, being searched at gun point, lived under martial laws and curfew, saw scores of Black and Tans in cars, all roaring drunk . . . and George Jean Nathan, writing in Scribner's magazine wonders why we, the Irish are dramatic!

"Then what, Mr. Carroll?"

"Well, I returned home to the grocers, and Maureens. But the air was too tense for me, so I departed for Scotland, landed a teaching job, and am still there. Then in 1934 I wrote "Shadow and Substance," had it produced in the Abbey Theater and, thank heavens, it was acclaimed by the critics. Then Eddie brought it to America, and, well, there you are."

Again Mr. Dowling

A slight switch of position and we are now facing Mr. Dowling, producer of "Sally, Irene and Mary," and "Sidewalks of New York." Eddie Dowling's talents run in many channels. He is one of the few theatrical producers, who is politically-minded, being credited with the presidential election of Franklin D. Roosevelt. He is the only actor proposed for nomination to the U. S. Senate, an honor he declined since it would detract from his allegiance to the legitimate stage. Now he brings another Paul Vincent Carroll production, "White Steed," to the Chesnut Street Opera House, December 20.

Two Irishman, seriously and comically wending their way to deserved and well-earned heights in the annals of the antiquitous history of the stage. But let Mr. Carroll say it . . .

"I am neither deaf nor dumb, lame nor blind, nor teetotaler, nor do I believe in fairies, or wear a kilt. And I'm no Scot—I'm as Irish as a terrier and with a sharp saw sharp shooting and sudden bite. Forsooth!"

To Johnny Wysocki, Villanova's great end went three awards, in this last hectic week of football.

For the second year in succession, slim John was awarded a first-string position on the All-American teams of the United Press and the NEA. What's more there promises to be more for the "Socker."

Most Valuable Gridder

Probably the most cherished will be the plaque presented him by the Upper Darby Lions Club after his teammates voted him the most valuable of the 1938 Wildcats.

Wysocki became the third Villanovan to be awarded the plaque. Last year his roommate and former high school teammate, Johnny Mellus, received the same award as did Art Raimo in 1936.

It was against Manhattan College, last year that John sky-rocketted to fame and All-America honors. Since that memorable after-

RICE STARS FOR VISITORS

By TOM O'MAHOUEY, '39

Villanova's '38 court team opened its season in the right way last Saturday night as 1500 basketball fans came out to watch the much-heralded 'Cats get by a surprisingly scrappy Roanoke College squad, 35-29 at the Main Line gym.

To Mike Lazorchak, diminutive sharpshooter, fell the honor of scoring the first Villanova points of the season when he sank a long shot after the 'Cats consistently failed to penetrate the Virginians' close defense. Paul Rice, Roanoke forward, tied the score quickly, but Lloyd (No Relation) Rice followed this with a pretty shot from under the hoop, putting the Blue into a lead it never relinquished.

Yund, Duzminski Tally

The ice broken, high-scoring Duke Duzminski and sophomore Chuck Yund racked up two-pointers to offset the foul shots being converted by Paul Rice, Studebaker and Sheffield of the visitors, and again Lloyd Rice, Duzminski and Yund broke through to give the

Wildcats Climax Successful Season With Brilliant Win Over Manhattan

Tie With Gamecocks Mars Perfect Record; Decisive Victory Over the Auburn Plainsmen Highlights Blue Offensive Power

When the Villanova gridmen trotted off the Polo Grounds on Thanksgiving Day they rang down the curtain on Villanova College's 40th football campaign. In doing so they also joined a very select list of Villanova football teams.

In the forty years of football at Villanova only four teams emerged from their seasons undefeated. The first was in 1894, the second in 1926, the third in 1937, and the fourth in the season just completed.

'Cats Start With Bang

The trek to the top began last October, when an enraged Wildcat broke loose in all its fury and ran roughshod over a hapless American International team, 59-0.

Next came Muhlenberg College with a heavy, powerful outfit. Before a huge throng in Allentown, Pa., the Mules fell before a Villanova onslaught, 25-7. The Mules went on after the Villanova defeat to become co-champions of the Eastern Pennsylvania Football Conference.

From "old Kentucky" came the Praying Colonels of Centre College to meet the Blue in their next battle. Prayers and the best team they had in many years were not enough for Centre to stop the Clippermen. With All-American Johnny Wysocki notching three touchdowns, the Villanovans won easily, 35-6.

Gus Dorais' Detriot Titans, featuring halfback Ed Palumbo, came to Shibe Park next and threw a scare into the hearts of Villanovans. Palumbo's great passing and even greater kicking held the Wildcats to a 13-6 win. Nick Basca's 6 yard gallop for the first touchdown featured the Blue offense, while the great defense put up by the Wildcats in the shadow of their own goal posts sent the fans home talling to themselves!

Making their 1938 debut before the Mason and Dixon line the Villanova eleven traveled to South Carolina and in a heartbreaking contest the Smithmen were forced to be content with a 6-6 tie. Despite the deadlock the Wildcats gave the southern sportswriters something to talk about for weeks to come. They were called "the classiest team seen in the South in several years!" Injuries kept Johnny Wysocki out of most of the game.

Plainsmen Clipped

Auburn University, one of the south's outstanding elevens came to Shibe's lot for the Wildcats first November appearance. Auburn had lost to undefeated Tennessee, 7-0,

With the recent victory over Manhattan, the Blue and White extended their undefeated streak to twenty games — the highest in collegiate football to date. That such a record is enviable, there is no doubt, even though many—not yet Villanova rooters—still maintain that the Cats piled up such a record against mediocre foes with several tough ones interspersed.

We say let them think what they may but we'd like to bet a "plugged nickel" that it won't be long before every football spectator near and far will be saluting one of the greatest teams in the country. In fact we'll go out on the limb and

Lightweights Triumph In Last Game To Finish Fourth In League Fight

Year's Record Includes One Victory, Two Ties and Three Defeats; Squad Reaches Offensive Peak in Final Tilt

By TOM CARBINE, '39

Villanova's 150 pound team rose to new heights in the season just completed by finishing fourth in the league race. After several rather unsuccessful years the Blue and White finally found coach, Ray Stovink, who could mould a defensive team that would be consistent throughout an entire game.

Out of a six game schedule the Lightweights lost only three contests. Two others were scoreless ties and the other was a 7-0 victory over Lafayette. The champion of the league, Princeton, had the highest scoring machine of all, but they were only able to score twice against the "Little Men" in a game that ended at 14-7.

Lose to Yale, Cornell

Against last year's league leader, Yale, Villanova also played a fine game, holding them to a 13-6 score. The most decisive defeat of the season was administered by the Cornell team which managed to hold the Wildcats to two points while they pushed across two touchdowns and a conversion.

On the other hand Rutgers and Pennsylvania were unable to break down the strong defensive combinations of Ray Stovink's men while they held the Blue scoreless, so that both games resulted in stalemates. The statistics of the season, then, show that while the combined scores of the opposition totalled 40, Villanova was able to chalk up an impressive 22 points.

McManus to McGurk

In both the Princeton and the Yale games Villanova's score came as a result of a forward pass from Brad McManus to Donald McGurk. The two points scored against Cornell was the direct result of Domenick blocking a Cornell punt, which was recovered for a safety. The final touchdown of the season, which proved to be the margin of victory over Lafayette, was scored by Frank Lombardo on a plunge from the three yard line, after a clicking Villanova team had marched 80 yards downfield without a stop.

It was in this final game that the Blue and White finally reached their peak. Both offensively and defensively the team was doing their best work of the entire season. Several times their forward passing attack almost paid off with a score. Moreover the ground gained in this game totalled more than that gained in all the rest of the games combined.

FEDIGAN CLINCHES FIRST HALF TITLE

By BOB FUNAHASHI, '42

A high-geared Fedigan Hall team climbed to the portals of mural diadem last week on their ten-game winning streak to give them undisputed first place at the close of the first half of the Intramural basket season.

These same lads who last year represented Austin Hall, as the number one team, moved into Fedigan Hall, across the campus, and with perfect coagulation they continued their grueling onslaught with an unblemished record. Ten times they kept up their offensive drive combined with an impenetrable defense and with this precision, they toppled all their opponents.

Defeat Blueshirts

The latter victory of the winning streak was recorded over the green wave of Alumni Hall, 35-29. The maroon squad with a prevailing second half attack pounced upon their rivals and coasted on to victory, completing their clean slate. Connors with nine points and Bochetto with eight points led the field for the Fedigantes, while Lozowski and Halpin tallied eight and six points respectively.

The Alumni team looking for a surprise victory were in no position for an upsetting challenge as the Gigolos were at top speed with an unfaltering attack. The Greenlees' defeat put them into fifth place in the final standing with three victories and seven setbacks.

Businessmen Finish Third

Previously in the afternoon tilt Alumni met its sixth defeat at the hands of the C&F commuters, by the close margin 37-35. The C&F team playing the final game of their schedule had a comparatively hard time against the freshman team but their victory gave them third place in the rating. O'Connell, personally led the scoring for the businessmen with thirteen points while his teammate Lynam was close behind with ten points.

C&F completed its double-header victory when they crushed the Mendel Residents ,under an avalanche of baskets, by the score of 70-41. Only one other team compiled more points than C&F in one game, that was the Mendel Day Hops who rang up seventy-one points in the early part of the season.

O'Connell Paces Teammates

Again, O'Connell was the spearhead of the white attack, with eighteen solid points on the books. For the Mendelites it was Bernie Crumb, their ace forward, who registered twenty points, half the team's total score. This marked the ninth straight defeat for the Mendel team, they have not won a game since their debut game with Alumni.

The C&F lads wasted little time in getting started, they jumped at all opportunities and at the half time they had the commanding lead of 38-18. In the second half the business men hit their real stride and proved too much for the Mendel team.

Austin Hall dropped its tilt to the Mendel Day Hops and thereby dropped from third place to fourth place with four wins and six defeats. The score was 44-27, with Keating and Devlin leading the attack for the grays. Mendel's win over Austin gave them second place in the standings.

Wildcats an advantage that looked comfortable.

Studebaker and Wagner, Roanoke guards, closed this gap with a goal apiece a few minutes later, but Duzminski made three points just before Sheffield, lanky Maroon center, finally scored on what appeared to be his favorite play, a pivot shot from close in. The half ended with the 'Cats ahead 19-14.

'Cats Lead at Half

Again thwarted in their attempts to split the fast Southerners' defense, the 'Cats resorted to long-range bombardment, and Lazorchak and Yund scored on long shots to add to the Blue margin. The scoring then became more or less retaliatory, with the Wildcats seemingly the better retaliators, as they tallied 16 points to 15 in the second half.

With less than four minutes to go, however, and the score, seesawing dangerously, then at 33-23 in favor of the 'Cats, Studebaker, Paul Rice and Wagner counted for the visitors, only to see Duzminski make a long shot to turn the tide and place the affair safely on ice.

Duzminski High Scorer

This same Duke Duzminski, Philadelphia's high scorer last year, turned out to be top man again last Saturday, counting for 11 points. Lazorchak, with 7, and Yund and Rice with 6, barely nosed out Jim Montgomery, whose 5 points don't tell the story of his clever floor play.

Game Captain Johnny Krutulis, last year a regular, did not start, curiously enough, and in the short time he played, scored no points. Art Vigilante, another of last season's starters, was also on the bench most of the game.

In the preliminary game, the Villanova freshman team easily overpowered Roebling's (N. J.) Blue Centers in their annual meeting, 35-14. Joe Gerland and Dick Gray, with 11 and 9 points, respectively, were high scorers for the Kittens.

noon in Brooklyn, where he scored Villanova's 19 points out of 20 registered, Wysocki has been in the public's eye.

Hits Peak After Injury

Starting this season in the same fashion he was temporarily halted against South Carolina where he sustained severe ankle injuries. Wysocki found himself against Auburn and continued to play in his sensational way.

That he was equally as good this season as he was in 1937 can be best judged on the fact that All-American selectors give slim "Number Ten" positions on their teams.

Many followers of the art of pigskinnery are still wondering why a team which is so anxious to attract more public attention—than it is now getting—turned down an opportunity to play in a bowl game, if any of those reading this column are unaware of the fact, Villanova was offered an invitation to play Texas Tech in the Cotton Bowl and declined. This refusal dazed this writer and he was inclined to think that perhaps Athletic Authorities hadn't acted wisely.

But after being informed of the motives that prompted such a decision, on second thought, we are inclined to think that the answer was justifiable. Beating an opponent such as Texas Tach, which has a good football team—but not a name team, would not further enhance the national prestige of Villanova's Wildcats. At the same time the Blue and White may have taken it on the chin and that record which it now maintains would be overshadowed by a single defeat.

That record of 20 undefeated games should act as a tempting bait for a more-formidable schedule next season—by all indications it seems as if it is already casting its spell.

toughest little teams in Pennsylvania, follows Rider. Then comes the wild Mountaineers from Western Maryland. They don't always play the best basketball, but they guarantee the toughest!

Play at Convention Hall

On December 29 Villanova's Wildcats of the court make their first appearance of the season in Convention Hall. Severance's men will meet the perennial power of the Big Ten Conference, the University of Illinois. Probably the toughest team to face the Wildcats in several years, the Illini will present quite a threat to the Villanova record. The game will be the feature of a double-header attraction, in which the other attraction will bring together Minnesota and Temple Universities.

Dickinson College and St. John's, of Maryland, will be met on January 13 and 16, respectively, at the Field House. Away games in January will bring the 'Cats to Loyola, of Chicago, in a double-header attraction and to Washington on January 19 to meet Catholic University.

DePaul University, one of the most powerful mid-western fives, comes to Convention Hall for a set-to with the Wildcats on January 21. Penn State and Temple meet in the other half of Claire Har's doubleill.

Meet Old Rival

Temple University, dearest friend of the Wildcat, will be met in the feature game of the eastern season on January 27. Last year the Wildcats scuttled the Owls in a thrilling battle at Convention Hall.

February home games include Geneva College, St. Francis, (one of the few conquerors of Villanova last year), P. M. C., Lehigh and Moravian Colleges. One game will be played on opponent's floor, with Dickinson College, at Carlisle, Pa., on February 8.

more interested in the success of the team rather than in personal glory it is difficult to pick out the outstanding players. However for their consistently good work Dominick and Jerry Holland on the line attracted attention, while the defensive playing of Frank Lombardo could not be equalled.

As an offensive backfield, the combination of Brad McManus, Jack Brown, Frank Lombardo and Joe Pagano functioned most smoothly. Brad McManus did most of the passing and some of the punting. However it was the excellent kicking of Kuskey that made possible the playing of such strong defensive games by the Lightweights.

Jerry Holland, Harold Murphy, Joe Pagano, Carl Pantaleo and Italo DeBarthofomeis are the seniors who have completed their Intercollegiate football careers, and their loss will be a severe blow to the team next year.

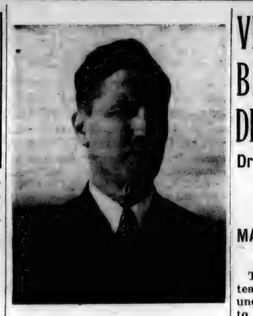
On Roanoke College



PRYING the lid off a basketball season very often brings out many academic faults and a tension that can only be overcome by actual game competition. Villanova's initial start was no exception to this rule.

In meeting Roanoke College Villanova put their chips on the line from the opening gun of the 1938 season. Roanoke, Virginia's outstanding quintet, have been leaders of their conference twice and were semi-finalists in the famous Denver Tournament, which brings together the outstanding basketball teams of the country.

The Roanoke game was a good measuring rod for future developments of our team. The southerners boasted of five capable seniors, each of whom displayed a thorough understanding of the fundamentals of basketball. They played "system" basketball at all times, which made it necessary for us to play both aggressively and safely in order to beat them.

New Faces on Blue Team

Many factors, some of which are worthy of mention, added to and detracted from the success of our club. The introduction of new faces in our lineup hurt our teamwork, naturally, as basketball is essentially a team sport. There are always mental lapses until the team welds itself into a cohesive unit. This fault is not alarming as it will gradually, disappear as the team develops coordination.

Yund and Rice, the two new men in the lineup, performed admirably under fire. They left little to be desired. Their backboard work was especially ont standing, as was their spirit and co-operation. Their work indicated that with more game competition they should mould easily into the style of play we desire.

"Big Jim" Montgomery, suffering from an attack of grippe, was not very accurate from the foul line but his ball retrieving was very much in evidence. This played no small part in keeping our club on top. Jim's sickness caused him to miss ten days of practice, so we expect much from him later.

Lazorchak Deadly

Mike Lazorchak's deadly long shots forced the southerner's defense to "come out" and this enabled our inside attack to function more smoothly. His coolness under fire will help us in future contests.

"Duke" Duzminski's effectiveness was self-evident from the box score and from his excellent floor generalship. Both he and Montgomery, acting as co-captains, gave the rest of the team the balance and confidence necessary when new faces are in the line-up.

There remains much for improvement if we are to approach the success of the 1937 season. I would like, in closing, to express my appreciation for the co-operation of the band and the cheerleaders. Their spirit and aid indicated that the student body as a whole is pulling for this contingent to bring home the mail. There are so many factors that can tip the scales of victory either way, and very often, where the odds are even, such spirit as displayed by the band and student body plays an important part in ultimate success.

Wildcats

and to Georgia Tech, 7-6, Rice had humbled the Plainsmen, 7-0, and they had lost no game by more than seven points when they came to Philly, although they play one of the country's toughest schedules — second only to Notre Dame's.

Past records meant nothing to the Wildcats as Basca passed and ran the Plainsmen ragged, 25-12! Bukowski also starred as he ably filled the shoes of the ailing John Wysocki. Little Harry Mazzei played the entire 60 minutes, doing a great job of blocking and play-calling. After losing to the Blue, Auburn went on to crush Louisiana State, 28-6, and win 23-14 over Georgia!

Owls Ruffled

Dear old Temple University provided the opposition in the next start and, loving the Owls as they do, the Blue presented "Pop" Warner's boys with a 20-7 lacing. Walt Nowak was in top form for the 'Cats at end and, as usual, Sophomore Nick Basca thrilled the crowd with his work at half-back. Mazzei, Howlett, Wysocki, and Kuber also played great football. Andy Chisick at centre was in top form and was the chief thorn in the Owl's attack.

In the mud of Fenway Park in Boston the Wildcats skidded to a 39-6 victory over the Boston University Terriers. With Basca showing the way and long runs featuring the day the Villanova machine went into high and put on their greatest performance of the season. Buek, Mazzei, Chisick, Sabrinski, and Howlett, along with Basca, went to town for the 'Cats.

Thanksgiving Day! Polo Grounds! New York! Manhattan Game! Victory! Nuff said Rolling on all four cylinders before the "big town" audience the Wildcats concluded their regular season with a smashing victory over the Manhattan Jaspers, 20-0. Basca's great right arm was responsible for all the Wildcats touchdowns as he threw touchdown passes to Wysocki, Kuber and Howlett. Chisick , Kuber, DeFilippo, Rizzo and Cochrane shone for the Blue and White.

When the sun set on the bleak Polo Grounds gridiron seven Villanovans turned in their suits for the last time. All-American Johnny Wysocki, one of the greatest players ever to wear the Blue and White, led the list. With him went the durable, steady Matt Kuber, an All-Eastern guard, Bill Cochrane, Lou Dymond, Harvey Buek, Val Rizzo, and Bob Buckley.

VILLANOVA MERMEN BEGIN DRILLS FOR DIFFICULT SCHEDULE

Dr. Ruggerio Flocco Continues as Coach for Ambitious Wildcat Tankmen

MANY VETERANS REPORT

By FRANK CALLAHAN, '42

The Villanova College swimming team, entering its second season under professional coaching, hopes to attain an undefeated aquatic season, according to a statement made by the Blue coach, Dr. Ruggerio Flocco.

The Main Line mermen have a most ambitious schedule of nine meets, opening with the University of Delaware and following with one meet each week for the duration of the season. This schedule will be interrupted only once during the year, due to the annual Villanova Interscholastics, which will be held on Washington's birthday, February 22.

Squad Looks Promising

Dr. Flocco stated that: "The present Villanova squad is one of the finest swimming teams that ever represented the Blue and White. Although we miss Bill Leahy very much, we have quite a few reliable leftovers from last years team. Charlie Timmins and Dick Martin will be our divers while Captain Bill Bailey and Paul Fitzmaurice will swim the freestyle and breaststroke respectively. Two other boys who we expect to do well are Ed Leahy a backstroker and Charlie Barrett a freestyle artist."

The Freshman team of last year game Coach Flocco quite a few potential aquatic stars. The outstanding contribution being "Big Boy" Pholeric. Although weing well over 200 pounds, this boy is extremely fast in distance and dashes. Paul Fansworth and Walt Kelly are two other sophs that show promise for the coming nautical year.

Freshman Report

Members of the, as yet unformed, present freshmen team will be Joe Costa, Larry McStravog and Bill Hooper. Larry placed third in last years Villanova Interscholastics for his fine showing on the board.

It is the hope of the Doctor to enter a Blue team in the Eastern Collegiate Swimming Association Championships. This hope will be realized, he related, if the team lives up to his present expectations.

The two most difficult meets will be with Pennsylvania, and Franklin and Marshall. If the Villanova splashere can submerge these two squads in the darkened waters of defeat, the rest of their schedule should be smooth sailing.

In the Sportlight

By BILL CAREY

THE athletic type! These three words describe very well the nature and appearance of Gerard A. Holland, the high-spirited, hard - fighting tackle of the Wildcat 150-pound football team. This rugged lad is the proud possessor of a chunky build, a ruddy complexion, and closely cut hair that is definitely all curls. These physical characteristics together with his flair for sport clothes makes him a typical collegiate athlete.

Starred in High School

Gerry, who is a native son of good old New York, began his athletic career at All Hollows High School located in the Bronx. He was a member of the football team four years, which, incidentally, won the city Catholic championship from his sophomore year straight through to his senior year. He was also a deciding factor in the success of the track and swimming teams. In other words Gerry was an all around wizard collecting no less than eleven letters from his high school alma mater. Gerry climaxed his athletic achievements at All Hollows by being named guard to an "all city" team that covered the high schools of New York.

Upon graduation, Gerry, through the advice of his football coach, Jack Lavelle, formerly of Notre Dame, entered Villanova to study in the Commerce and Finance School

Assisted Emmerling

During his freshman year he was engaged as a guard on the frosh team and took part in intra-mural boxing and in the intra - mural swimming meet. As a sophomore Gerry was handicapped by a knee injury. This meant no ball playing but it did not prevent him from assisting Dick Emmerling in coaching the 150 pounders. This injury left him in time to let him engage in the intra - mural track meet in the Spring.

From this time on, Gerry went full speed until he was again slowed down, this time by an injury to his collarbone. He finished his second season playing with a strapped shoulder. In his last season Gerry overcame this handicap to play top-notch ball throughout every game, only to miss out on the Lafayette game, as the result of a kick in the kidneys received in the preceding game. It is no secret that in his two playing seasons Gerry made plenty of trouble for the opposition and was the key man on many of the Wildcat offensive plays.

Enjoys Bull-sessions

Gerry says that he has no favorite campus hobbies but he does enjoy greatly the Austin Hall bull-sessions. Of these the most memorable is the sessions on the "ins" and "outs" of football with Dave De Fillipo that lasted no less than nine hours. The conclusion that they drew from this was that linemen did not receive their due credit.

After he leaves Villanova Gerry has ambitions of returning to his high school as an assistant coach, that is, if he can find time from law school classes. His chief ambition is to reach the heights as a lawyer.

We're sure that his fine spirit and will to succeed will carry him to future success and he has our heartiest wishes for good luck

The latter victory of the winning streak was recorded over the green wave of Alumni Hall, 35-29. The maroon squad with a prevailing second half attack pounced upon their rivals and coasted on to victory, completing their eleventh start. Connors with nine points and Bochetto with eight points led the field for the Fedigantes, while Lazowski and Halpin tallied eight and six points respectively.

The Alumni team looking for a surprise victory were in no position for an upsetting challenge as the Gigolos were at top speed with an unfaltering attack. The Greens' defeat put them into fifth place in the final standing with three victories and seven setbacks.

Businessmen Finish Third

Previously in the afternoon the Alumni met its sixth defeat at the hands of the C&F commuters by the close margin 37-35. The C&F team playing the final game of their schedule had a comparatively hot time against the freshman team but their victory gave them third place in the rating. O'Connell, personally led the scoring for the businessmen with thirteen point while his teammate Lynam was close behind with ten points. C&F completed its double-header victory when they crushed the Model Residents under an avalanche of baskets by the score of 74-11. Only one other team netted more points than C&F in one game. That was the Model Day Hop who came up seventy-one [illegible]

O'Connell Paces Commuters

C&F's 37-35 win was keyed to victory by the whole-hearted efforts of individual players on the books, but the Mendelites at Bells Corner once their own found who counted twenty points but the Green's total score. The marked one with straight shot for the Model team, they gave the Green a game race that ended with the Alumni.

The C&F lads wasted little time in getting started, they pounced at the opportunities and at the half time lays had the commanding lead of 18-8. In the second half the business men hit their real stride and proved too much for the Model team.

Austin Hall dropped its tilt to the Model Day Hops and thereby dropped from third place to fourth place with four wins and six defeats. The score was 41-27 with Keating and Devlin leading the attack for the grays. Mendels win over Austin gave them second place in the standings.

Wildcats an advantage that looked comfortable.

Studebaker and Wagner, Roanoke guards, closed this gap with a goal apiece a few minutes later, but Duzminski made three points just before Sheffield, lanky Maroon center, finally scored on what appeared to be his favorite play, a pivot shot from close in. The half ended with the 'Cats ahead 19-11.

'Cats Lead at Half

Again thwarted in their attempts to split the fast Southerners' defense, the 'Cats resorted to long-range bombardment, and Lazorchak and Yund scored on long shots to add to the Blue margin. The scoring then became more or less retaliatory, with the Wildcats seemingly the better retaliators, as they tallied 16 points to 15 in the second half.

With less than four minutes to go, however, and the score, see sawing dangerously, then at 33-23 in favor of the 'Cats, Studebaker, Paul Rice and Wagner counted for the visitors, only to see Duzminski make a long shot to turn the tide and place the affair safely on ice.

Duzminski High Scorer

This same Duke Duzminski, Philadelphia's high scorer last year, turned out to be top man again last Saturday, counting for 11 points. Lazorchak, with 7, and Yund and Rice with 6, barely nosed out Jim Montgomery, whose 5 points don't tell the story of his clever floor play.

Game Captain Johnny Krutulis, last year a regular, did not start, curiously enough, and in the short time he played, scored no points. Art Vigilante, another of last season's starters, was also on the bench most of the game.

In the preliminary game, the Villanova freshman team easily overpowered Roebling's (N. J.) Blue Centers in their annual meeting, 35-14. Joe Gerland and Dick Gray, with 11 and 9 points, respectively, were high scorers for the Kittens.

Wysocki

Starting this season in the same fashion he was temporarily halted against South Carolina where he sustained severe ankle injuries. Wysocki found himself against Auburn and continued to play in his sensational way.

That he was equally as good this season as he was in 1937 can be best judged on the fact that All-American selectors give slim "Number Ten" positions on their teams.

Many followers of the art of pigskinnery are still wondering why a team which is so anxious to attract more public attention—than it is now getting turned down an opportunity to play in a bowl game. If any of those reading this column are unaware of the fact, Villanova was offered an invitation to play Texas Tech in the Cotton Bowl and declined. This refusal dazed this writer and he was inclined to think that perhaps Athletic Authorities hadn't acted wisely.

But after being informed of the motives that prompted such a decision, on second thought, we are inclined to think that the answer was justifiable. Beating an opponent such as Texas Tech, which has a good football team—but not a name team, would not further enhance the national prestige of Villanova's Wildcats. At the same time the Blue and White may have taken it on the chin and that record which it now maintains would be overshadowed by a single defeat.

That record of 20 undefeated games should act as a tempting bait for a more-formidable schedule next season—by all indications it seems as if it is already casting its spell.

toughest little teams in Pennsylvania, follows Rider. Then comes the wild Mountaineers from Western Maryland. They don't always play the best basketball, but they guarantee the toughest!

Play at Convention Hall

On December 29 Villanova's Wildcats of the court make their first appearance of the season in Convention Hall. Severance's men will meet the perennial power of the Big Ten Conference, the University of Illinois. Probably the toughest team to face the Wildcats in several years, the Illini will present quite a threat to the Villanova record. The game will be the feature of a double-header attraction, in which the other attraction will bring together Minnesota and Temple Universities.

Dickinson College and St. John's, of Maryland, will be met on January 13 and 16, respectively, at the Field House. Away games in January will bring the 'Cats to Loyola, of Chicago, in a double-header attraction and to Washington on January 19 to meet Catholic University.

DePaul University, one of the most powerful mid-western fives, comes to Convention Hall for a set-to with the Wildcats on January 21. Penn State and Temple meet in the other half of Claire Har's double-bill.

Meet Old Rival

Temple University, dearest friend of the Wildcat, will be met in the feature game of the eastern season on January 27. Last year the Wildcats scuttled the Owls in a thrilling battle at Convention Hall.

February home games include Geneva College, St. Francis, (one of the few conquerors of Villanova last year), P. M. C., Lehigh and Moravian Colleges. One game will be played on opponent's floor, with Dickinson College, at Carlisle, Pa., on February 8.

more interested in the success of the team rather than in personal glory it is difficult to pick out the outstanding players. However for their consistently good work Donenick and Jerry Holland on the line attracted attention, while the defensive playing of Frank Lombardo could not be equalled.

As an offensive backfield, the combination of Brad McManus, Jack Brown, Frank Lombardo and Joe Pagano functioned most smoothly. Brad McManus did most of the passing and some of the punting. However it was the excellent kicking of Kuskey that made possible the playing of such strong defensive games by the Lightweights.

Jerry Holland, Harold Murphy, Joe Pagano, Carl Pantaleo and Italo DeBarthofomeis are the seniors who have completed their Intercollegiate football careers, and their loss will be a severe blow to the team next year.

On Roanoke College

PRYING the lid off a basketball season very often brings out many academic faults and a tension that can only be overcome by actual game competition. Villanova's initial start was no exception to this rule.

In meeting Roanoke College Villanova put their chips on the line from the opening gun of the 1938 season. Roanoke, Virginia's outstanding quintet, have been leaders of their conference twice and were semi-finalists in the famous Denver Tournament, which brings together the outstanding basketball teams of the country.

The Roanoke game was a good measuring rod for future developments of our team. The southerners boasted of five capable seniors, each of whom displayed a thorough understanding of the fundamentals of basketball. They played 'system' basketball at all times, which made it necessary for us to play both aggressively and safely in order to beat them.

New Faces on Blue Team

Many factors, some of which are worthy of mention, added to and detracted from the success of our club. The introduction of new faces in our lineup hurt our teamwork, naturally, as basketball is essentially a team sport. There are always mental lapses until the team welds itself into a cohesive unit. This fault is not alarming as it will gradually, disappear as the team develops coordination.

Yund and Rice, the two new men in the lineup, performed admirably under fire. They left little to be desired. Their backboard work was especially ont standing, as was their spirit and co-operation. Their work indicated that with more game competition they should mould easily into the style of play we desire.

"Big Jim" Montgomery, suffering from an attack of grippe, was not very accurate from the foul line but his ball retrieving was very much in evidence. This played no small part in keeping our club on top. Jim's sickness caused him to miss ten days of practice, so we expect much from him later.

Lazorchak Deadly

Mike Lazorchak's deadly long shots forced the southerner's defense to "come out" and this enabled our inside attack to function more smoothly. His coolness under fire will help us in future contests.

"Duke" Duzminski's effectiveness was self-evident from the box score and from his excellent floor generalship. Both he and Montgomery, acting as co-captains, gave the rest of the team the balance and confidence necessary when new faces are in the line-up.

There remains much for improvement if we are to approach the success of the 1937 season. I would like, in closing, to express my appreciation for the co-operation of the band and the cheerleaders. Their spirit and aid indicated that the student body as a whole is pulling for this contingent to bring home the mail. There are so many factors that can tip the scales of victory either way, and very often, where the odds are even, such spirit as displayed by the band and student body plays an important part in ultimate success.

and to Georgia Tech, 7-6, Rice had humbled the Plainsmen, 7-0, and they had lost no game by more than seven points when they came to Philly, although they play one of the country's toughest schedules — second only to Notre Dame's.

Past records meant nothing to the Wildcats as Basca passed and ran the Plainsmen ragged, 25-12! Bukowski also starred as he ably filled the shoes of the ailing John Wysocki. Little Harry Mazzei played the entire 60 minutes, doing a great job of blocking and play-calling. After losing to the Blue, Auburn went on to crush Louisiana State, 28-6, and win 23-14 over Georgia!

Owls Ruffled

Dear old Temple University provided the opposition in the next start and, loving the Owls as they do, the Blue presented "Pop" Warner's boys with a 20-7 lacing. Walt Nowak was in top form for the 'Cats at end and, as usual, Sophomore Nick Basca thrilled the crowd with his work at half-back. Mazzei, Howlett, Wysocki, and Kuber also played great football. Andy Chisick at centre was in top form and was the chief thorn in the Owl's attack.

In the mud of Fenway Park in Boston the Wildcats skidded to a 39-6 victory over the Boston University Terriers. With Basca showing the way and long runs featuring the day the Villanova machine went into high and put on their greatest performance of the season. Buek, Mazzei, Chisick, Sabrinski, and Howlett, along with Basca, went to town for the 'Cats.

Thanksgiving Day! Polo Grounds! New York! Manhattan Game! Victory! Nuff said Rolling on all four cylinders before the "big town" audience the Wildcats concluded their regular season with a smashing victory over the Manhattan Jaspers, 20-0. Basca's great right arm was responsible for all the Wildcats touchdowns as he threw touchdown passes to Wysocki, Kuber and Howlett. Chisick, Kuber, DeFilippo, Rizzo and Cochrane shone for the Blue and White.

When the sun set on the bleak Polo Grounds gridiron seven Villanovans turned in their suits for the last time. All-American Johnny Wysocki, one of the greatest players ever to wear the Blue and White, led the list. With him went the durable, steady Matt Kuber, an All-Eastern guard, Bill Cochrane, Lou Dymond, Harvey Buek, Val Rizzo, and Bob Buckley.

VILLANOVA MERMEN BEGIN DRILLS FOR DIFFICULT SCHEDULE

Dr. Ruggerio Flocco Continues as Coach for Ambitious Wildcat Tankmen

MANY VETERANS REPORT

By FRANK CALLAHAN, '42

The Villanova College swimming team, entering its second season under professional coaching, hopes to attain an undefeated aquatic season, according to a statement made by the Blue coach, Dr. Ruggerio Flocco.

The Main Line mermen have a most ambitious schedule of nine meets, opening with the University of Delaware and following with one meet each week for the duration of the season. This schedule will be interrupted only once during the year, due to the annual Villanova Interscholastics, which will be held on Washington's birthday, February 22.

Squad Looks Promising

Dr. Flocco stated that: "The present Villanova squad is one of the finest swimming teams that ever represented the Blue and White. Although we miss Bill Leahy very much, we have quite a few reliable leftovers from last years team. Charlie Timmins and Dick Martin will be our divers while Captain Bill Bailey and Paul Fitzmaurice will swim the freestyle and breaststroke respectively. Two other boys who we expect to do well are Ed Leahy a backstroker and Charlie Barrett a freestyle artist."

The Freshman team of last year game Coach Flocco quite a few potential aquatic stars. The outstanding contribution being "Big Boy" Pholeric. Although weing well over 200 pounds, this boy is extremely fast in distance and dashes. Paul Fansworth and Walt Kelly are two other sophs that show promise for the coming nautical year.

Freshman Report

Members of the, as yet unformed, present freshmen team will be Joe Costa, Larry McStravog and Bill Hooper. Larry placed third in last years Villanova Interscholastics for his fine showing on the board.

It is the hope of the Doctor to enter a Blue team in the Eastern Collegiate Swimming Association Championships. This hope will be realized, he related, if the team lives up to his present expectations.

The two most difficult meets will be with Pennsylvania, and Franklin and Marshall. If the Villanova splashere can submerge these two squads in the darkened waters of defeat, the rest of their schedule should be smooth sailing.

In the Sportlight

By BILL CAREY

THE athletic type! These three words describe very well the nature and appearance of Gerard A. Holland, the high-spirited, hard - fighting tackle of the Wildcat 150-pound football team. This rugged lad is the proud possessor of a chunky build, a ruddy complexion, and closely cut hair that is definitely all curls. These physical characteristics together with his flair for sport clothes makes him a typical collegiate athlete.

Starred in High School

Gerry, who is a native son of good old New York, began his athletic career at All Hollows High School located in the Bronx. He was a member of the football team four years, which, incidentally, won the city Catholic championship from his sophomore year straight through to his senior year. He was also a deciding factor in the success of the track and swimming teams. In other words Gerry was an all around wizard collecting no less than eleven letters from his high school alma mater. Gerry climaxed his athletic achievements at All Hollows by being named guard to an "all city" team that covered the high schools of New York.

Upon graduation, Gerry, through the advice of his football coach, Jack Lavelle, formerly of Notre Dame, entered Villanova to study in the Commerce and Finance School.

Assisted Enmerling

During his freshman year he was engaged as a guard on the frosh team and took part in intra-mural boxing and in the intra - mural swimming meet. As a sophomore Gerry was handicapped by a knee injury. This meant no ball playing but it did not prevent him from assisting Dick Emmerling in coaching the 150 pounders. This injury left him in time to let him engage in the intra-mural track meet in the Spring.

From this time on, Gerry went full speed until he was again slowed down, this time by an injury to his collarbone. He finished his second season playing with a strapped shoulder. In his last season Gerry overcame this handicap to play top-notch ball throughout every game, only to miss out on the Lafayette game, as the result of a kick in the kidneys received in the preceding game. It is no secret that in his two playing seasons Gerry made plenty of trouble for the opposition and was the key man on many of the Wildcat offensive plays.

Enjoys Bull-sessions

Gerry says that he has no favorite campus hobbies but he does enjoy greatly the Austin Hall bull-sessions. Of these the most memorable is the sessions on the "ins" and "outs" of football with Dave De Fillipo that lasted no less than nine hours. The conclusion that they drew from this was that linemen did not receive their due credit.

After he leaves Villanova Gerry has ambitions of returning to his high school as an assistant coach, that is, if he can find time from law school classes. His chief ambition is to reach the heights as a lawyer.

We're sure that his fine spirit and will to succeed will carry him to future success and he has our heartiest wishes for good luck.

GERMAN CLUB TO BE REORGANIZED

Resumes Activities and Will Hold Regular Sessions Twice Weekly

Under the direction of its faculty moderator, Rev. William J. Lunney, O. S. A., the German Club has resumed its activities and henceforth will hold regular sessions in Room 54 Mendel Hall, on Tuesday mornings at 9:45 A .M. and on Friday mornings at 10:40 A. M.

Improvement of the members in German conversation and a study of German culture, life, customs and habits are the two principal aims of the club, Fr. Lunney stated. "The club is not concerned with the political happenings in Germany nor the present Reich regime, but rather with the interesting sidelights of Germany and the German people. These latter cannot be thoroughly discussed in class, due to lack of time."

ATTEND DINNER

Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., and Paetrus F. Bannmiller, attended an Alumni Dinner of the Atlantic City Alumni Association at the Knights of Columbus Hotel in that city. Officers of this group include Edward J. Fister, president and Ralph Olsen, secretary.

MEYERS ADDRESSES MECHANICAL GROUP

"Solving turbine problems by dimensional analysis" was the topic of an address delivered to members of the Villanova chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers by Mr. Charles Meyer, at the annual smoker held Tuesday evening, November 30, in the Field House.

Mr. Meyer, a former student of the school of Technology here, is at present employed by the Westinghouse Electric Company. His talk was the highlight of the evening's program, concluded by several bowling and billiard matches between the members.

Stanley J. Morehouse and Coleman Sullers, both of the Philadelphia section of the A. S. M. E., also addressed the gathering at which Pennsylvania, Swarthmore and Villanova were represented.

Plans were discussed for a student night to be held on February 28. A dinner and entertainment will feature this meeting.

PRESENT AT MEETING

Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S .A., and Rev. Jerome A .Mahoney, O. S. A., instructors in Spanish at Villanova recently attended a Spanish symposium in the city of Philadelphia.

How Has Glass Benefited Mankind? World's Fair Display Gives Answer

An amazing display and a colorful panorama depicting the history of glass down through the ages from the mists of antiquity to the present day will be presented to the eager and inquisitive public in the exhibits of the "Glass Center" at the New York Yorld's Fair, in 1939.

On this occasion valuable technical and scientific information concerning the gigantic strides achieved by the glass industry in every phase of modern life and the countless possibilities of glass usages in the future will be disclosed.

What is glass? Of what use is it? How has it benefited the human race? These are but a few of the many questions which arise in connection with glass.

It may be classified as a hard, smooth, invaluable substance wrought from the fusion of a standard mixture of sand, soda, and lime. Perhaps this definition is vague, but it will suffice when it is realized that a great industry was born when an exact proportion of the basic ingredients of sand, soda, and lime was discovered to result in transparent glass.

Civilization has come to the stage where it is necessary to depend on the usage of glass for modern convenience. Structural and tempered glass are now widely used in the construction of homes, factories, and office buildings. The light we read by, the movies we enjoy, the beacon lights that guide our aerial transports, the cameras, that record great historical events — and these are only a few—all have been made possible through the medium of glass.

Probably the greatest benefits mankind has derived from glass are the microscopes and transparent test tubes. Without the aid of the microscope neither Pasteur nor any other scientific benefactors of humanity could have contributed their amazing discoveries in the fight against maladies and pestilence. Equally helpful have been the laboratory test tubes which have proved invaluable aids in the conquest of disease which for centuries has plagued mankind.

Undoubtedly the chief direct aid the world has derived from glass is in spectacles which provide comfort for so many million people.

Down through the ages has rolled the progress of glass. Rome was the center of the art till its fall, and in the middle ages Venice became famous for its manufactured glass. Gradually the art seeped to the other nations.

Now, as a wave a scientific research is sweeping the world, it has been discovered that glass can be made to resist heat and unusual chemical attack. Scientists have found that chemical reactions can be carried on at a high temperature without fear of breaking with specially treated glass. What new developments these recent discoveries will produce time alone will reveal.

ENGINEERING GROUP CONTEMPLATES TRIP

Francis J. Mozzi, chairman of the Villanova branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, announced today that the organization has chosen Westinghouse Terminal as the first objective of their many inspection trips to be taken in the course of the year.

It was further announced that complete schedules of the meetings to be held and the trips to be taken by the group have been compied and will be published shortly.

Dr. Paul A. Loeffad, college physician and instructor in Human Anatomy, addressed the A. I. E. E. in conjunction with Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity, and will speak again to the two groups on December 12.

Initial Issue Of Mendel Bulletin Dedicated To Late Rev. J. F. O'Brien

Science Journal Contains Summary of Experiment Conducted at Lankenau Research Institute; Features Sketches, Photographic Reproductions

Mendel Bulletin, publication of the School of Science at Villanova, made its initial appearance yesterday. The November issue of the quarterly journal, dedicated to the memory of Rev. John F. O'Brien, O. S. A., contains ten articles of scientific interest compiled by its student editors. Photographic reproductions and diagrams are featured to explain the scientific themes.

Bernard J. Miller, chairman of the Board of Editors, adopted a new plan this year upon the suggestion of Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., Dean, and moderator of the Mendel Bulletin. The innovations are feature articles, cartoons and other additions which attempt to present the scientific material in a lighter manner.

Presented by Miller is a summary of the paper entitled "Studies of the Human Ove 1. Description of Artificially Parthenogenic Activities in One," to appear at a later date in the Archives of Pathology. This experimental work was done during the Summer of 1938 at the Lankenau Hospital Research Institute by Miller and Doctor Stanley P. Reinmann. It presents data on an outstanding contribution to science in the field of Pathology. Four plates descriptive of the various stages before and after stimulation of the human ova are reproduced in the Villanova publication, the Mendel Bulletin. Recently the experiment attracted considerable attention in the nations' presses.

Alexis Carrel, French surgeon, is presented in a biographical sketch by Edward R. Lucente. It is a very highly factual writing, covering the events and activities of a man who is renowned to be one of the greatest living surgeons. Well explained with his works is the fact that he is a Roman Catholic, adding splendor to the faith he possesses. In a note in the column, "Around the World with Science," it is announced that Dr. Carrel will leave his laboratory at the Rockefeller Institute in July, 1939. He will then be sixty-five

WILLIAMS FEATURED FOR STAFF SOCIAL

Famed Society Maestro Contracted for Engagement at Arcadia

Arcadia International Restaurant, through its Public Relations Manager, Joseph T. McGrath, has announced that Clem Williams, famed society maestro and his orchestra, will provide the music for the annual VILLANOVAN dinner-dance on January 12, 1939.

Plans are materializing for the dinner-dance under the direction of Peter C. Mackin, toastmater. Mackin wishes that all VILLANOVAN staff members wishing to attend the affair contact him before Friday so that final arrangements can be completed over the holidays. As usual, the dinner-dance will be formal. A general meeting of the VILLANOVAN staff will be held today to complete negotiations for the affair.

Williams, who skyrocketed to fame in the short space of six months, also played for the Rosemont Senior Ball and received an enthusiastic ovation.

Former Student

He is a former University of Pennsylvania student who, possessing an innate desire to conduct his own orchestra, purchased the organization of a popular Philadelphia musician. The group was suc-

JUNIORS WILL RECEIVE RINGS BEFORE CHRISTMAS

Class Formulates Plans for Prom and Dinner

Juniors who have paid for their rings in full will receive them by special delivery at their homes before Christmas, as announced by Frank Pimpinella, chairman of the ring committee. It has also been arranged for those who have not completed the payment to have them delivered C. O. D.

Anyone who has ordered a ring and has since changed his address should contact a member of the committee at once to prevent any complications.

Miniature rings if desired can be obtained in the usual manner by arranging it through a member of the ring committee.

Information on the site of the dinner dance and the orchestra for the Junior prom will not be forthcoming until after the holidays but plans are well under way.

DINON SELECTED TRIP CHAIRMAN

Named Head of A. S. C. E. Committee; Prof. Oakey Addresses Society

The members of the Villanova branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers elected Clement Dinon director of the trip committee. Dinon immediately suggested that the first trip be made to the Filtration plan of Philadelphia.

In the course of the meeting it was proposed that the society organize a basketball team and contact the University of Pennsylvania, Swarthmore, and Drexel in order to arrange for games with simliar socities in these schools. The purpose of organizing a team would be purely social.

Professor John A. Oakey, moderator of the organization, will give an address at the next meeting of the society. The meeting is to be held on December 12 at one o'clock. All members of the engineering school are cordially invited to attend.

PHOTOS AVAILABLE

All Seniors who have paid for their finished photographs may receive them tomorrow at 11 A. M. to 3 P. M. in the reception room of Mendel Hall. A representative from Zamsky's will be there to supervise the distribution.

GILLESPIE, DEVERS NAMED CHAIRMEN OF CHRISTMAS DANCE

Wilkes-Barre Club to Hold Annual Affair on December 26

According to the recent release of the president of the Wilkes-Barre Club, Philip Noll, a member of the junior class in the School of Science, William Devers and William Gillespie, both of whom are juniors in the same department, have been appointed co-chairmen for the approaching Christmas Dance of the organization. This social affair has long been a most favorite one with all the students who comprise the organization, and is a regular annual presentation.

A committee of five has been appointed to supplement the work of the executive chairmen in the necessary arrangements, preliminary to the actual social itself. Included upon this auxiliary group are: George Baran, sophomore scienceman; Robert J. Pash, junior in the school of Commerce and Finance; Anthony J. Ludullo and Walter Lilipech, both junior pre-meds; and Hugh Boyle, sophomore engineer.

Hotel Sterling Selected

The Crystal Ballroom of the Hotel Sterling in Wilkes-Barre will furnish the setting of the holiday dance for the club members. It has been definitely learned that the music for dancing will be provided by the well-known Jerry McHale and his orchestra on December 26, the date finally chosen for the affair.

From all indications, say the newly appointed co-chairmen, this year's dance will see not only a perfect representation of the undergraduates of the organization but also a goodly number of the alumni of that section. A banner reception is eagerly awaited by these men.

By FRANK FITZPATRICK

John J. Harrington, junior student in the Arts school, has been selected to serve in the capacity of editor-in-chief of the VILLANOVAN for the ensuing year, Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., moderator, announced today. Harrington has served on the staff for the past three years and was literary editor this year.

In addition to his work on the newspaper, the new editor has participated actively in extra-curricular activities. He is a member of the Beta Gamma Debating Society and the newly formed Philosophy Seminar.

Assume Duties Early

The editor-in-chief will assume charge in the issue appearing January 10. This will mark the first time in the annals of the paper that the new staff will assume charge at such an early date. In former years the management was usually transferred late in the second semester. This innovation is expected to familiarize the editors with their respective duties and enable them to exceed even this year's highly successful staff.

Other imporant posts will be filled by Philip M. Dunn and James P. Collins. Dunn, junior in the Commerce school, will succeed Joseph M. Pagano, sports editor of this year. James Collins, member of the staff since his freshman year, will direct activity as college editor. This position was not assigned last year.

These men were selected for the high quality of work which they contributed and the interest that they manifested in publishing the paper. Both have shown prominently in their respective departments.

John T. Gallagher, new member of the staff this year, will succeed

As We Say Farewell...

By JAMES P. TOFANI ROBERT G. HOWE

JUST AS THE worm will turn... so will he eventually crawl into his hole. And we, who have for so long annoyed the readers of this journal, most reluctantly turn from pleasant duties to accept the dictates of destiny.

Like the worm, we were meek in our earlier days...submitting to the decrees of past editors with unquestioned confidence. We've known John DiJoseph, Ben Maloney, and Joe Toland...and we're better for our acquaintance with these editors of the past. May we be worthy to join them. Ours is an expression of gratitude for the assistance they imparted to us.

In our metamorphosis from inconspicuous staff-writers to the somewhat supreme dignity of the Co-Editor-in-Chief capacity...we were the "worm" that "reversed his tactics." The change was a gradual one. It came with a "Nice Work," from DI Joseph; "By-lines" under Ben Maloney; and Copy Editor and College Editor posts with Joe Toland.

Time and duty brought need of an alteration in disposition. Once regarded as "fair eggs," we gave way upon acceptance of higher office to such titles as "Simon Le-

SNAPSHOT CONTEST IN FULL PROGRESS

Bernard McHenry, Belle Air Editor, Urges Early Entries

Bernard McHenry, editor of the Belle Air annual, makes another appeal for entries in the snapshot contest sponsored by the college yearbook.

In the endeavor to make the book strictly Villanovan, he requests that all snapshots taken in or about the college campus be submitted as soon as possible to the Belle Air staff for consideration. Through this procedure the pictorial content of the book will more vitally concern its most interested reader, the general Villanova student body, and consequently, McHenry thinks, will better fulfill its original purpose.

Progress Shown

The reason of the urgent request for speed is quite obvious- any delay in the composition of the picture layouts will seriously retard the scheduled progress being made upon this year's publication. As suitable awards for the best snapshots, the Belle Air will present many valuable pieces of photographic equipment, Since promptness will be a powerful feature in the final act of judging, the many fine snapshots already received will be accorded special merit. All probable entrants of this contest should take notice of this rule made by the staff. Delays will count seriously against contestants.

THE CITIZEN PAYS AND PAYS

STUDENTS who desire a concrete example of the municipal bungling discussed in a recent editorial need search no further than neighboring Philadelphia where a stupid city council facing jail for its dilatory puerility is resorting to extraordinary and ill-advised measures to meet a condition resulting from years of mismanagement.

"Corrupt and contented" is a label that aptly describes Philadelphia, for in the City's worst hour when its financial plight is worse than ever before, not to mention the civil misdemeanors charged by various investigating bodies, the politicians continue their selfish practice of putting the survival of the party above the securing of good government. They continue to shield a stealthy source of the City's financial loss—the drones. They have become a legend in Philadelphia. Everybody talks about them but no one throws them out.

Various proposals are offered by the City Council, but strangely enough this drain of taxpayers' money to support the army of political henchmen is not mentioned as a possible source of curtailment. The methods allegedly offering surcease from the present financial worries are inequitable. They place too much of a burden on the poor man. A strong method of saving not to be disregarded in solving the present crisis is the unseating of the political drone.

Let the Philadelphia politicians responsible for this mess through their long continued budget juggling take notice that they are not playing a long sighted game in protecting these political parasites because when the voters feel the sting of corruption in their pocket books so sternly as they will in the City ofBrotherly Love they will not be long in ousting those guilty of the situation.

SATISFYING A NEED

AN ADVANTAGE at Villanova secured through the initiative of the students themselves is the service of seminars which provide for further study in subjects one is particularly interested in. The small group with mutual interests whose members are present not because they have to be but because they want to be inspires the faculty moderator, who loves the subject himself, to his best efforts and gives a lift as well to the students who do most of the talking themselves for a change.

Such a pooling of knowledge obtained through reading and reflection brings the subject alive with all the color satisfying to a deep interest in truth. The informal character of the meetings adds a zest to the subject which delights the sincere student. Here free from pedagogical restrictions he can bring up questions that cannot be covered in class, and, as one might say, get the inside story on the subject.

It is noteworthy that the seminars have been instituted through the endeavors of the students rather than the administration. It is indicative of a growing appreciation of learning on the campus. It may be remembered by upper classmen that among the pioneers in this movement was the defunct Study Club, sponsored by Father Vrana, whose topics are now handled by the History Seminar and the Sociology Seminar. The moderators are to be congratulated for encouraging such extra-curricular activities by giving unselfishly of their time.

Glorifying under faculty auspice the famous bull sessions of a few years ago is possible only in a small college where the intimate associations of teacher and pupil make intercourse readily enjoyable.

SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

THE annual Xmas rush again is inundating us with its flood of stock formulas, decorations, sales, crowds — and Santa Claus.

To the child this last perhaps is the most important feature of the holiday. Children—even Catholic children—connect with Christmas that mythical person, Santa Clause. Nor would the situation be so bad if he were properly known in his relation to Christ.

It is a far cry from the original St. Nicholas to the Santa Clause of the department stores who usurps the place of Christ himself. Though it may not commonly be known, the costume of this figure is a corruption of the old episcopal habit worn by the real St. Nicholas.

Parents, teachers, merchants, all impress on the child's consciousness this Santa Clause until he is the only thing which comes to the child's mind when Christmas is mentioned.

We are drifting away from Christ — even on the anniversary of his birth. Children must be made to realize that Christmas is the day of the Christ Mass. Our modern American Santa Clause must be made to assume his proper subordinate position. Christmas is to be preserved as the Mass of Christ.

CONGRATULATIONS!

FOR COMBINING the beauty of modern publishing genius with accuracy of the scientific content of its research articles our hats are off to the Mendel Bulletin which has just come to our desk. Always eager to support student activities our heartiest congratulations are offered to the staff of the Mendel Bulletin, the moderator, and all who shared in its achievement!

Success
BY
Harry S. Benche, M. S., E.E.

SUCCESS is a relative term and varies in its meaning with the nature of one's business in life. The successful accomplishment of a task, the profitable extension of trade by a merchant, the discovery by a scientist of some new physical law, these may be indicative of a success that is relatively, more or less, complete. And none the less surely does he succeed in life, who, it may be as an unknown and humble toiler, earns an honest living by useful labor, and by uprightness of his life, example and influence adds to the sum total of private and civic virtue.

For to do good and become good is the noblest pursuit of mankind. Goodness is everlasting and rewards its possesor with its length of days. He who has done his best to obtain goodness has reached the very highest success that the heavens know. This is a success, open to all who will only try to acquire it.

To most of us another meaning may be given to the word success. Unfortunately, it is too often limited to the mere getting of wealth or to the winning of a great name among men.

Be it as it may, the latter definition is the one which will influence many and which will bear amplification.

In times like the present it would be well for the student who is preparing for his life's work to take stock of his likes, desires and ambitions. He should ascertain if his present work will lead him into the proper channel which he wishes to pursue. He should visualize himself several years hence and make plans now so as to accomplish the desired results.

For example, graduation for some is very near yet what effort have they made to ascertain the employment condition in their field of endeavor. Many prospective employers would be pleased to discuss the question of a job and give excellent adice if they were not required to produce an opening. Contacts thus made during the Summers or other vacation periods may prove most valuable at graduation time.

Again the student should ask himself if he were to be interviewed tomorrow, what is he able to accomplish. What can he offer the employed in return for the compensation which he expects t receive? Make a list of accomplishments and then sell yourself to the prospective employer on the basis of this list. Given thought to this matter will enable the student to gain confidence in his abilities.

In these days of constantly multiplying machinery and appliances the tendency is to force men into special lines of efforts if they would succeed. The student should guard against specializatoin, if possible, in College, but at the same time should be able to do well, a few things in his chosen field so that too long a time would not have to be spent in the employ of a company without some sort of return being made to the company for his efforts.

Many of these so called specialized accomplishments may be secured during vacation periods even though the remuneration be small. Capitalization for this specialized knowledge may then come when a more permament job is secured after graduation.

Any person with average intelligence, high ideals, a disposition to work, willing to bear needful trials, and above all with a careful planning of his course, is sure to crown his life with success.

Retiring Columnist Writes His Last Contribution

By FRED WATERS

END OF A long, but pleasant experience is marked by this writing of our last column.

Next month, after the Christmas vacation, a new staff will take over, as the terms of the present senior members END.

END of his VILLANOVAN coeditorship will undoubtedly cause no little regret to Jim Tofani.

His constant, never wavering interest in weekly turning out the best composed, laid out, and written paper of which he is capable, with no consideration of personal effort and sacrifice, is common knowledge among those on the staff

Jim has what it takes. We have yet to witness his failure in any venture, large or small, upon which he has once really set his desire.

It is with deep regret, that after four not-soon-to-be forgotten years of almost daily association with him, we must now reach the END.

END of our contact with Father McKee, active but not domineering moderator of the VILLANOVAN, calls forth at this time, a deep recognition of his untiring and progressive activity in behalf of this publication.

We hope that his work in this capacity will not, for many years to some, END.

END of Bob Howe's term as coeditor will signify the loss of a sincere and able officer of this paper. "Sincere" is the underlying motif of his character.

Trying to help the other fellow is a habit with him—a habit that probably has made him one of the most liked members of the staff.

Nothing "assumed" or "make believe" about Bob, yet every inch a gentleman—he is one of the most sincere persons we have ever had the pleasure of meeting.

It is with much concern, that to our present affliation with Bob Howe, it has come time to write 'END'.

END of Harry McGlade's seemingly effortless and smooth operation of the circulation department, high-lighted by his strict regularity in mailing the paper each week, will be a distinct loss to the VILLANOVAN.

Let's hope, however, that the many fine policies inaugurated by him, will not, with his passing, END.

END of a hundred-and-one different college publications constantly haunting the dreams of Frank Reul, "College Chatter" editor, will bring with it, we venture to say, no joy.

That perpetual smile of your's Frank, will undoubtedly prove to be one of your greatest assets 'n later life, just as it has in your College days, which are just about to END.

END of our writing, "Varieties," will necessitate the appointment of a new editor for this column.

To our successor, Bill Toy, we take this opportunity to wish the best.

In the next issue , he will take up from where we will, in a few moments, END.

END of those high-pressure phone calls to hard-boiled advertisers will probably leave Pete Mackin, Business Manager de-luxe, in a very bewildered and unaccustomed frame of mind for a time.

But even as for the rest of us, so too must the activities of the crack "add" salesman finally END.

END of the following senior's writing for the VILLANOVAN, will also come about with this issue. They will have by today "punched out" their last story.

Joe Pagano, a little man, with capabilities all out of proportion to his size; Bill Ward, and his topnotch "biogs"; Bill Dobbins, and his "in-the-nick-o-time" cartoons, that were well worth waiting for; Bert Passanante and his big-black copy editor's pencil; Tom Carbine, Tom O'Mahoney, Al Zogby, Len Flinkman—with his interesting interviews, Lawrence Knaphle, Paul Juergens, all of these, in-so-far as their activity on this publication is concerned, have now reached the END.

END of this, our last column, is almost a reality.

But those pleasant memories of:

—Friday afternoon dead-lines;

—Monday noon dead-deadlines;

—endeavoring to obtain our mail while it was still in readable condition;

—Jim Tofani acting as mailman, in bringing that same mail to us in-between classes;

—"traveling" around the globe with foreign students and profesors via our Frosh and Sophomore column "Globe Trotting";

—tabulating that band-actor-actress Poll;

—listening to a hundred rumors near the Sports Editors desk, especially about "next year's" schedule;

—those Father McKee "huddle" discussions;

—writing "Varieties";

—looking for the first time at the completed paper every Tuesday at noon;

—all those VILLANOVAN members mentioned above;

All this and countless more of the like, is that which will never, in our memory, end, but will for many years to come, CONTINUE.

INTRODUCING

Belle Air Editor Has "Treatise" Framed; Attended Catholic High

By ALBERT A. ZOGBY

THE DOOR BELL rang furiously, brring, brring. Mr. Nicholas McHenry (senior) stirred uneasily in his easy chair and mumbling what sounded like "doggone I wonder who that bird is ringing the bell at this time of the night." He arose to answer the summons of the bell which continued to ring until he had opened the door.

Standing outside was a tall long-legged, long-nosed individual who greeted Mr. McHenry politely. The fellow had on a uniform, the cap of which indicated he was a special delivery messenger.

Enter "Little Mac"

Reaching into an inner pocket the chap withdrew a delivery book and thumbed through it until he reached the page he was searching for and handed the book to the elder McHenry to sign on the dotted line. Not having ordered anything from Sears Sawbuck and Company, naturally Mr. McHenry was a bit puzzled and read over the delivery slip.

This is what he saw: One bundle from heaven to Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas McHenry, Philadelphia, Penna., September 18, 1916. Signing the slip and returning the book to the messenger he promptly received the package which by this time was raising an awful rumpus.

Called a Huddle

Hurrying inside again, Mr. McHenry called the members of his family together. After much fumbling the package was finally opened to reveal the noise maker, a pink-toed, rosy-cheeked, young fellow who was mighty displeased with being stared at.

Not having notified the milk man to leave an extra quart of milk, Mr. McHenry sent out for two hamburgers and a bottle of lemon pop which the newcomer devoured quickly.

Seriously though, my friend, Bernard J. McHenry, is a very modest chap and getting facts concerning his past life was about as easy as removing a rear molar from the mouth of a somewhat reluctant patient.

Enrolled at St. Columba's

It seems that back in the early days when Catholic educators in the City of Philadelphia were searching about for likely spots to erect parochial schools, they forsaw the possibility of the coming of a McHenry and so decided to locate a school convenient to the McHenry family. This school was placed under the patronage of St. Columba. Young McHenry, on becoming of age, enrolled in the school and remained there for eight years.

After eight years spent here our friend bid a fond farewell to the hallowed walls of old St. Columba's and set out to find the highest of all Catholic High schools in Phila. This proved to be Roman Catholic High which is twenty steps from the street level.

Met Matt Kuber

Here it was that Bernard made the acquaintance of two other Villanova-bound fellows: Matt Kuber and Bud O'Connell, who had just crossed the great waters of the Del. aware from Collingswood, N. J., to take up residence in the city of brotherly love, Phila.-on-the Delaware.

The four years spent at Roman Catholic passed pleasantly for our friend. It is said that Brother O'Connell benefited greatly from his acquaintance with brother McHenry who showed him the "ins and outs" of the fair city, but enough of this.

Becomes "Fly-by-Night"

Upon receiving an affidavit to proove that he had really spent four years at Roman Catholic, McHenry enrolled in the Fall of 1935 in the School of Commerce and Finance, Villanova College. From that time until now he has remained one of those fly-by-night students commonly called "day hops." The above statement may seem to be paradoxical, but when one analyzes the situation one finds that "day hops" are really fly-by-nights. They arise before dawn to catch a train out to school and at night one may see any number of them streaking to the station to catch a train for home.

Edits Yearbook

Bernard is the fourth of the house of McHenry to attend Villanova College (pass the cards please) and has admirably lived up to the standards set by his brothers. In his three full years "Mac" has been active in extra-curricular activities, serving on the Sophomore Cotillion and Mothers Days committees of the class of 39. He has been a member of the Study club, and the staff of the Belle Air. In his senior year he was chosen to edit the Belle Air.

They say Dr. Hartman has an original McHenry book report framed and hanging in his room. The story behind this rumor is one common to all college students. It seems that Dr. Hartman had assigned a certain book to be reported on by his history class.

Submits "Treatise"

Our friend "forgot" to read the book and so on the day the report was due, brother McHenry hurriedly jotted down a few wise cracks and jokes, punctuated them with a few facts noted while thumbing through the book, and handed the masterpicec in.

Nothing more was heard for some time and so "Mac" felt sure Dr. Hartman had followed time honored tradition and had thrown all reports into the waste basket, but woe and alack-a-day. Dr. Hartman had found the paper amusing and after having it properly framed he called in the rest of the faculty to admire prof. McHenry's treatise on the "Kings Council."

'Nuff said about this business of book reports. We shall try to find what interests other than school our friend has.

Searching through the files we note our friend McHenry has been seen going places with a certain JERRY and if we don't sign off soon we fear we will be told to go places too.

THE CITIZEN PAYS AND PAYS

STUDENTS who desire a concrete example of the municipal bungling discussed in a recent editorial need search no further than neighboring Philadelphia where a stupid city council facing jail for its dilatory puerility is resorting to extraordinary and ill-advised measures to meet a condition resulting from years of mismanagement.

"Corrupt and contented" is a label that aptly describes Philadelphia, for in the City's worst hour when its financial plight is worse than ever before, not to mention the civil misdemeanors charged by various investigating bodies, the politicians continue their selfish practice of putting the survival of the party above the securing of good government. They continue to shield a stealthy source of the City's financial loss the drones. They have become a legend in Philadelphia. Everybody talks about them but no one throws them out.

Various proposals are offered by the City Council, but strangely enough this drain of taxpayers' money to support the army of political henchmen is not mentioned as a possible source of curtailment. The methods allegedly offering surcease from the present financial worries are inequitable. They place too much of a burden on the poor man. A strong method of saving not to be disregarded in solving the present crisis is the unseating of the political drone.

Let the Philadelphia politicians responsible for this mess through their long continued budget juggling take notice that they are not playing a long sighted game in protecting these political parasites because when the voters feel the sting of corruption in their pocket books so sternly as they will in the City ofBrotherly Love they will not be long in ousting those guilty of the situation.

SATISFYING A NEED

AN ADVANTAGE at Villanova secured through the initiative of the students themselves is the service of seminars which provide for further study in subjects one is particularly interested in. The small group with mutual interests whose members are present not because they have to be but because they want to be inspires the faculty moderator, who loves the subject himself, to his best efforts and gives a lift as well to the students who do most of the talking themselves for a change.

Such a pooling of knowledge obtained through reading and reflection brings the subject alive with all the color satisfying to a deep interest in truth. The informal character of the meetings adds a zest to the subject which delights the sincere student. Here free from pedagogical restrictions he can bring up questions that cannot be covered in class, and, as one might say, get the inside story on the subject.

It is noteworthy that the seminars have been instituted through the endeavors of the students rather than the administration. It is indicative of a growing appreciation of learning on the campus. It may be remembered by upper classmen that among the pioneers in this movement was the defunct Study Club, sponsored by Father Vrana, whose topics are now handled by the History Seminar and the Sociology Seminar. The moderators are to be congratulated for encouraging such extra-curricular activities by giving unselfishly of their time.

Glorifying under faculty auspice the famous bull sessions of a few years ago is possible only in a small college where the intimate associations of teacher and pupil make intercourse readily enjoyable.

SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

THE annual Xmas rush again is inundating us with its flood of stock formulas, decorations, sales, crowds — and Santa Claus.

To the child this last perhaps is the most important feature of the holiday. Children—even Catholic children—connect with Christmas that mythical person, Santa Clause. Nor would the situation be so bad if he were properly known in his relation to Christ.

It is a far cry from the original St. Nicholas to the Santa Clause of the department stores who usurps the place of Christ himself. Though it may not commonly, be known, the costume of this figure is a corruption of the old episcopal habit worn by the real St. Nicholas.

Parents, teachers, merchants, all impress on the child's consciousness this Santa Clause until he is the only thing which comes to the child's mind when Christmas is mentioned.

We are drifting away from Christ — even on the anniversary of his birth. Children must be made to realize that Christmas is the day of the Christ Mass. Our modern American Santa Clause must be made to assume his proper subordinate position. Christmas is to be preserved as the Mass of Christ.

CONGRATULATIONS!

FOR COMBINING the beauty of modern publishing genius with accuracy of the scientific content of its research articles our hats are off to the Mendel Bulletin which has just come to our desk. Always eager to support student activities our heartiest congratulations are offered to the staff of the Mendel Bulletin, the moderator, and all who shared in its achievement!

Success

BY

Harry S. Benche, M. S., E.E.

SUCCESS is a relative term and varies in its meaning with the nature of one's business in life. The successful accomplishment of a task, the profitable extension of trade by a merchant, the discovery by a scientist of some new physical law, these may be indicative of a success that is relatively, more or less, complete. And none the less surely does he succeed in life, who, it may be as an unknown and humble toiler, earns an honest living by useful labor, and by uprightness of his life, example and influence adds to the sum total of private and civic virtue.

For to do good and become good is the noblest pursuit of mankind. Goodness is everlasting and rewards its possesor with its length of days. He who has done his best to obtain goodness has reached the very highest success that the heavens know. This is a success, open to all who will only try to acquire it.

To most of us another meaning may be given to the word success. Unfortunately, it is too often limited to the mere getting of wealth or to the winning of a great name among men.

Be it as it may, the latter definition is the one which will influence many and which will bear amplification.

In times like the present it would be well for the student who is preparing for his life's work to take stock of his likes, desires and ambitions. He should ascertain if his present work will lead him into the proper channel which he wishes to pursue. He should visualize himself several years hence and make plans now so as to accomplish the desired results.

For example, graduation for some is very near yet what effort have they made to ascertain the employment condition in their field of endeavor. Many prospective employers would be pleased to discuss the question of a job and give excellent adice if they were not required to produce an opening. Contacts thus made during the Summers or other vacation periods may prove most valuable at graduation time.

Again the student should ask himself if he were to be interviewed tomorrow, what is he able to accomplish. What can he offer the employed in return for the compensation which he expects f receive? Make a list of accomplishments and then sell yourself to the prospective employer on the basis of this list. Given thought to this matter will enable the student to gain confidence in his abilities.

In these days of constantly multiplying machinery and appliances the tendency is to force men into special lines of efforts if they would succeed. The student should guard against specializatoin, if possible, in College, but at the same time should be able to do well, a few things in his chosen field so that too long a time would not have to be spent in the employ of a company without some sort of return being made to the company for his efforts.

Many of these so called specialized accomplishments may be secured during vacation periods even though the remuneration be small. Capitalization for this specialized knowledge may then come when a more permament job is secured after graduation.

Any person with average intelligence, high ideals, a disposition to work, willing to bear needful trials, and above all with a careful planning of his course, is sure to crown his life with success.

Retiring Columnist Writes His Last Contribution

END OF A long, but pleasant experience is marked by this writing of our last column.

Next month, after the Christmas vacation, a new staff will take over, as the terms of the present senior members END.

END of his VILLANOVAN coeditorship will undoubtedly cause no little regret to Jim Tofani.

His constant, never wavering interest in weekly turning out the best composed laid out, and written paper of which he is capable, with no consideration of personal effort and sacrifice, is common knowledge among those on the staff.

Jim has what it takes. We have yet to witness his failure in any venture, large or small, upon which he has once really set his desire.

It is with deep regret, that after four not-soon-to-be forgotten years of almost daily association with him, we must now reach the END.

END of our contact with Father McKee, active but not domineering moderator of the VILLANOVAN, calls forth at this time, a deep recognition of his untiring and progressive activity in behalf of this publication.

We hope that his work in this capacity will not, for many years to some, END.

• • •

END of Bob Howe's term as coeditor will signify the loss of a sincere and able officer of this paper.

"Sincere" is the underlying motif of his character.

Trying to help the other fellow is a habit with him—a habit that probably has made him one of the most liked members of the staff.

Nothing "assumed" or "make believe" about Bob, yet every inch a gentleman—he is one of the most sincere persons we have ever had the pleasure of meeting.

It is with much concern, that to our present affiliation with Bob Howe, it has come time to write 'END'.

END of Harry McGlade's seemingly effortless and smooth operation of the circulation department, high-lighted by his strict regularity in mailing the paper each week, will be a distinct loss to the VILLANOVAN.

Let's hope, however, that the many fine policies inaugurated by him, will not, with his passing, END.

END of a hundred-and-one different college publications constantly haunting the dreams of Frank Real, "College Chatter" editor, will bring with it, we venture to say, no joy.

That perpetual smile of your's Frank, will undoubtedly prove to be one of your greatest assets in later life, just as it has in your College days, which are just about to END.

END of our writing, "Varieties," will necessitate the appointment of a new editor for this column.

To our successor, Bill Toy, we take this opportunity to wish the best.

In the next issue, he will take up from where we will, in a few moments, END.

END of those high-pressure phone calls to hard-boiled advertisers will probably leave Pete Macklin, Business Manager de-luxe, in a very bewildered and unaccustomed frame of mind for a time.

But even as for the rest of us, so too must the activities of the crack "add" salesman finally END.

END of the following senior's writing for the VILLANOVAN, will also come about with this issue. They will have by today "punched out" their last story.

Joe Pagano, a little man, with capabilities all out of proportion to his size; Bill Ward, and his top-notch "biogs"; Bill Dobbins, and his "in-the-nick-o-time" cartoons, that were well worth waiting for; Bert Passanante and his big-black copy editor's pencil; Tom Carbine, Tom O'Mahoney, Al Zogby, Len Flinkman—with his interesting interviews, Lawrence Knapble, Paul Juergens, all of these, in-so-far as their activity on this publication is concerned, have now reached the END.

END of this, our last column, is almost a reality.

But those pleasant memories of:
—Friday afternoon dead-lines;
—Monday noon dead-deadlines;
—endeavoring to obtain our mail while it was still in readable condition;
—Jim Tofani acting as mailman, in bringing that same mail to us in-between classes;
—"traveling" around the globe with foreign students and profesors via our Frosh and Sophomore column "Globe Trotting";
—tabulating that band-actor-actress Poll;
—listening to a hundred rumors near the Sports Editors desk, especially about "next year's" schedule;
—those Father McKee "huddle" discussions;
—writing "Varieties";
—looking for the first time at the completed paper every Tuesday at noon;
—all those VILLANOVAN members mentioned above;

All this and countless more of the like, is that which will never, in our memory, end, but will for many years to come, CONTINUE.

INTRODUCING

By ALBERT A. ZOGBY

Belle Air Editor Has "Treatise" Framed; Attended Catholic High

THE DOOR BELL rang furiously, brring, brring. Mr. Nicholas McHenry (senior) stirred uneasily in his easy chair and mumbling what sounded like "dogone I wonder who that bird is ringing the bell at this time of the night." He arose to answer the summons of the bell which continued to ring until he had opened the door.

Standing outside was a tall long-legged, long-nosed individual who greeted Mr. McHenry politely. The fellow had on a uniform, the cap of which indicated he was a special delivery messenger.

Enter "Little Mac"

Reaching into an inner pocket the chap withdrew a delivery book and thumbed through it until he reached the page he was searching for and handed the book to the elder McHenry to sign on the dotted line. Not having ordered anything from Sears Sawbuck and Company, naturally Mr. McHenry was a bit puzzled and read over the delivery slip.

This is what he saw: One bundle from heaven to Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas McHenry, Philadelphia, Penna., September 18, 1916. Signing the slip and returning the book to the messenger he promptly received the package which by this time was raising an awful rumpus.

Called a Huddle

Hurrying inside again, Mr. McHenry called the members of his family together. After much fumbling the package was finally opened to reveal the noise maker, a pink-toed, rosy-cheeked, young fellow who was mighty displeased with being stared at.

Not having notified the milk man to leave an extra quart of milk, Mr. McHenry sent out for two hamburgers and a bottle of lemon pop which the newcomer devoured quickly.

Seriously though, my friend, Bernard J. McHenry, is a very modest chap and getting facts concerning his past life was about as easy as removing a rear molar from the mouth of a somewhat reluctant patient.

Enrolled at St. Columba's

It seems that back in the early days when Catholic educators in the City of Philadelphia were searching about for likely spots to erect parochial schools, they foresaw the possibility of the coming of a McHenry and so decided to locate a school convenient to the McHenry family. This school was placed under the patronage of St. Columba. Young McHenry, on becoming of age, enrolled in the school and remained there for eight years.

After eight years spent here our friend bid a fond farewell to the hallowed walls of old St. Columba's and set out to find the highest of all Catholic High schools in Phila. This proved to be Roman Catholic High which is twenty steps from the street level.

Met Matt Kuber

Here it was that Bernard made the acquaintance of two other Villanova-bound fellows: Matt Kuber and Bud O'Connell, who had just crossed the great waters of the Del. aware from Collingswood, N. J., to take up residence in the city of brotherly love, Phila.-on-the Delaware.

The four years spent at Roman Catholic passed pleasantly for our friend. It is said that Brother O'Connell benefited greatly from his acquaintance with brother McHenry who showed him the "ins and outs" of the fair city, but enough of this.

Becomes "Fly-by-Night"

Upon receiving an affidavit to proove that he had really spent four years at Roman Catholic, Mr. Henry enrolled in the Fall of 1935 in the School of Commerce and Finance, Villanova College. From that time until now he has remained one of those fly-by-night students commonly called "day hops." The above statement may seem to be paradoxical, but when one analyzes the situation one finds that "day boys" are really fly-by-nights. They arise before dawn to catch a train out to school and at night one may see any number of them streaking to the station to catch a train for home.

BERNARD McHENRY

Edits Yearbook

Bernard is the fourth of the house of McHenry to attend Villanova College (pass the cards please) and has admirably lived up to the standards set by his brothers. In his three full years "Mac" has been active in extra-curricular activities, serving on the Sophomore Cotillion and Mothers Days committees of the class of 39. He has been a member of the Study club, and the staff of the Belle Air. In his senior year he was chosen to edit the Belle Air.

They say Dr. Hartman has an original McHenry book report framed and hanging in his room. The story behind this rumor is one common to all college students. It seems that Dr. Hartman had assigned a certain book to be reported on by his history class.

Submits "Treatise"

Our friend "forgot" to read the book and so on the day the report was due, brother McHenry hurriedly jotted down a few wise cracks and jokes, punctuated them with a few facts noted while thumbing through the book, and handed the masterpiece in.

Nothing more was heard for some time and so "Mac" felt sure Dr. Hartman had followed time honored tradition and had thrown all reports into the waste basket, but woe and alack-a-day. Dr. Hartman had found the paper amusing and after having it properly framed he called in the rest of the faculty to admire prof. McHenry's treatise on the "Kings Council."

'Nuff said about this business of book reports. We shall try to find what interests other than school our friend has.

Searching through the files we note our friend McHenry has been seen going places with a certain JERRY and if we don't sign off soon we fear we will be told to go places too.

AUGUSTINIAN CLERIC LAUDS NEW POLICIES OF SPANISH REGIME

Order, Peace Prevalent in Reconstruction Under Generalissimo Franco

A brief insight to the new Nationalist Spain is given by Rev. F. A. Cano, Augustinian Superior from Spain in a letter addressed to the Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., instructor of Spanish at Villanova. The translation from the Spanish follows:

"It is very discouraging to see how Nationalist Spain is still misunderstood in America. This is due to the most insidious propaganda of our enemies abroad.

"Certainly the fight a' the front is still going on, with new and consistant victories on the part of our soldiers. But the fighting of the war is not all that the Franco Government has done. His whole aspect of life behind the front has changed for the better.

"Order, peace, an' contentment are the results of the new reconstruction of Spanish society carried on by 'Auxilio Social.' Industry, commerce, and labor, working hand in hand have intensified national production. Everybody is anxious to work, and there is work for everybody. Financial resources seem to be unlimited. In fact, Spaniards can now eat and dress as they never did before. They realize that they can trust their officials, and most of all they can have unbounded confidence in their providential leader, the Generalissimo Franco.

"As far as religious affairs are concerned, needless to say, the new regime not only sympathizes with the Catholic Church but is fully in accord with the spirit of Catholic Religion. The Catholic Church enjoys complete freedom and official protectoin, and so nothing is tolerated that may be offensive against Christian tradition. The State has become officially, genuinely Catholic, and the authorities themselves are the first to attend the religious services. The press is likewise Catholic. There is nobody who would dare to molest the religious or secular priest. On the contrary, everybody seems to show a great respect and veneration for them."

VILLANOVAN MEETS

Discussion of plans for the annual Dinner-Dance will highlight the meeting of the VILLANOVAN staff this afternoon at 1:00 P. M. in the college newspaper office.

RECEIVE IMPORTANT POSITIONS ON STAFF OF VILLANOVAN

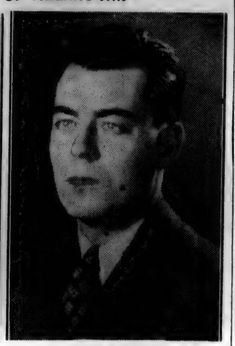
JOSEPH BONGIOVANNI



JOHN MAHER

Harrington Named Villanovan Editor

Peter C. Mackin, who had been business manager for the past two years. Appointed with him in this line of work will be John P. Maher who has been named adveritsing manager.

The remainder of the newly appointed staff is composed of Murray P. Zealor, sophomore commerce student, literary editor; Joseph N. Bongiovanni, junior artsman, copy edittor; and Joseph Bee, freshman engineer, art editor. Henry Mancuso, sophomore engineer, was renamed photography editor.

Those to whom regular columns have been assigned on the incoming staff include William F. Garrity, junior artsmanfi who will do the column "Odds and Ends." Barnard A. Bellew, junior pre-medical student, will do "College Chatter." William P. Toy, sophomore commerce student, will do "Varieties."

Co-Editors Retire

With the inception of the above staff, there will come to a close the collegiate journalistic career of many of the former staff. The Co-Editors-in-Chief, James P .Tofani, and Robert G. Howe, are rounding out their fourth year on the staff as is Joseph Pagano, the former sports editor.

gree," "Brow-Beater," and "Faculty Stooge" We were forced to "crack the whip" at times...but when it struck it was as the "waft of the willows."

Many instances found the editors of the VILLANOVAN in dire need of co-operation. Never has this assistance been denied.

More valuable than words can express...the good will of the student body...the invaluable counsel of an amiable moderator, Father McKee...the deep-felt co-operation of an understanding priest, President Stanford...the timely "fill-ins" rendered by P. F .Banmiller...the innumerable occasions of aid from the personnel...comments from the faculty...co-operation from organizations and campus publications... and the "boys" at the Main Line Times who made Monday afternoon a combination of work and play.

Blind is the worm...but not so blind that he fails to recognize those who are nearest to him. So, in all sincerity, we commend members of the staff...they have made our association with the VILLANOVAN a pleasant one, an easier one.

Vivid are the "passing" quotations of many of them. Joe Pagano ..."It'll come out Tuesday. It always has." (luckily, Joe has been correct) ... Pete Mackin ... "Got room for an ad on page seven?... (and Pete made room)...Harry McGlade.. "Have that fan-mail in Friday."...Bert

Now it's all over. The "worm has had his day.

In this, our last issue, we wish to offer a word of encouragement to the new members of the staff. You are new; we know you are willing and anxious to do and to learn. Take advantage of every opportunity to better your scholastic standing...and then...plug the VILLANOVAN to All-America!

BETA GAMMA GROUP MEETS ST. JOHN'S

Also Engage Mt- St. Vincent College During Past Week

Before a small audience composed of Seminarians, some students, and several members of the faculty, Beta Gamma engaged St. John's University in a debate on Pump Priming last Thursday night in the Amphitheater.

Although the factual evidence adduced was scanty, the speakers held the attention of the listeners throughout. The conflict was marked by brilliant exhibitions of wit on both sides. Bradley McManus speaking first for the affirmative (Villanova) set forth the facts and figures that were referred to throughout the rest of the encounter. Murray Zealor and James Donovan were the other members of the Villanova team. For St. John's University the speakers were James Clark, Harold Graves, and Thomas McDonald. Thomas Delate acted as chairman.

On Saturday morning Villanova College was host to a team from Mount Saint Vincent College, of New York City. The topic was the same with the sides reversed. Miss Josephine Doody and Miss Marie Tower held the floor for the visitors while Robert O'Brien and Robert Wilderotter spoke for Villanova. The Misses Doody and Tower had debated against Rosemont on the evening previous. James Donovan, manager of Beta Gamma, acted as chairman.

Cochrane Voted Honorary Captain Of Grid Team

Sportorial

By Joe Pagano
Sports Editor

WELL FOLKS, here we are at the end of the trail. . .this is the last time that yours truly will bang out a Sportorial. But before doing so, I want to introduce you to our next Sports Editor. A boy who has worked faithfully as a staff member for three years and one who will do a good job at this position. Phil Dunn is that individual who has been destined to carry on the duties of this department. Wish you all the luck in the world, Phil, and may your stay be an enjoyable one.

—V—

Awards and recognition are still coming Johnny Wysocki's way . . . last week, John, with two other Villanova and three Pennsylvania boys were presented with trophies by Mr. Lamaze of the Warwick Hotel, for outstanding football performances throughout the past grid season. Matt Kuber, versatile guard, and Frank Bukowski, stellar end, were the other Wildcat gridders to be thus awarded. Matt and Frank worked over the Summer for Lamaze, an ardent sports fan.

Joe Pagano

Incidentally, Villanova's brilliant ball-handler and varsity pivot-man, Jim Montgomery, is laid up with the grippe and was unable to play against Albright last Saturday night. Here's hoping he gets well soon because his presence has been and always will continue to be a big help to the Villanova squad.

—V—

Al Severance's basketeers have proved to be a second half ballclub from the contests that we have observed thus far this season. Now this is a quality which must be admired. . .however, we hate to think of a situation which is not too far-fetched. . .one in which the 'Cats would find themselves stacked up against a quintet that would unleash a scoring spree in the second period and catch the Blue off guard. Notre Dame was a second half ball club this football season but failed to come back against S. C. U. and saw their hopes of an undefeated season go glimmering.

—V—

Before winding up this column I want to take this opportunity to thank all those individuals who were instrumental in turning out this sports section. To those staff members, doing their work earnestly, I have nothing but the highest praise for . . . it was a pleasure to work with you. To Kerby Cushing, a lot of credit must go, especially for those pictures and information concerning our opponents. "Clipper" Smith's column was one of the most widely read and one of the highlights of our section. Wishing all the graduating seniors performing for the Blue in athletic sports all the success that's coming to them and may what you learned at Villanova go a long way in helping you attain that success. . . . So long fellas.

VILLANOVA QUINTET MEETS TWO STERN RIVALS THIS WEEK

Plays Host to Western Maryland Thursday, Travels to Baltimore Saturday

TOMICHEK LEADS TERRORS

On Thursday evening, December 15, Coach Bruce Ferguson of Western Maryland will bring his charges to the Villanova Field House to engage our Wildcats in a battle of baskets.

The Green Terrors have lost "Hi" Koegal, their star last year; but nine of his former teammates have returned to the fold and present a veteran combination that will be hard for anyone to stop.

Tomichek Leads the Terrors

This season's outstanding basketeer seems to be Captain John Tomicheck, a guard. He has shown up well in pre-season scrimmages and looksalmost as good as Koegal, his running mate last year. Other members of this squad to watch are Bob Stropp, center, and Don Honeman, forward.

Despite their loss to Georgetown on Friday, the Green Terrors should be in top form for the Villanova game. They will have four games under their belts at that time and by then this all-veteran combination should be functioning smoothly.

'Cats Travel to Baltimore

Another game to take place over the holidays pits the 'Cats against the U. of Baltimore "Bees." This contest will be played in Baltimore.

The "Bees" are coached by cagey Bucky Miller and present a very

M'GURK SELECTED ON ALL-AMERICAN

Lightweight End Recognized by Sports Editors for Pass Receiving Ability

Don McGurk, Villanova's star 150-pound end received recognition from the selectors of the All-American 150-pound team when he was placed on their first team selections.

Don was the lone lightweight to make the number one team. However three other teammates were given third string honors, two backfield men and one lineman. Al Woods was placed at tackle and Frank Lombardo, by far one of the best defensive backersup in the league, and Brad McManus were placed at halfback and fullback respectively.

Picked for Pass Receiving

McGurk's brilliant pass snatching, scoring two out of the three Villanova touchdowns in this manner, earned him the selection, according to Ed Isaac, Sports Editor of the Rutgers' Targum. Issacs conducted the poll with the co-operation of the Sports Editors of the various institutions represented in the Eastern Intercollegiate 150-pound League.

German, Walker, Unanimous Choices On Wildcat All-Opponent Eleven

Detroit's Sensational Palumbo, Auburn's McGowan and Haynesworth Round Out Backfield; "Bo" Russell Again Selected by Smithmen

If the Villanova all-opponent team lined up for a ball game end to end and quarterback to fullback, woe would it be unto their rivals, for we doubt if any one team could be so powerful.

The 1938 team picked by the Wildcat squad presents one of the most unbiased selections, regardless of fame and popularity, ever picked.

It was the honest belief of the selectors that their choices were based upon actual play against said opponents and not upon newspaper accounts of games played elsewhere.

German, Walker, Unanimous

To Jerry German of Centre College's Praying Colonels, and Johnny Walker of Boston University go the honors of being unanimous choices for the quarterback and center positions respectively.

German's sparkling runs in the Shibe Park tussle, which ended 35-6 in favor of the locals, and the sterling line play of his teammate, Coop, a tackle, who also was voted a first team position, were the only shining moments of an otherwise dismal afternoon for the Colonels.

Walker was the entire show up in Boston, playing all but five minutes of the contest. His savage tackling and line backing was a thing to see. Walker is a repeater on this team having been voted on the honor team last year.

Russell Repeats as All-Opponent

Another repeater as an all-opponent is "Bo" Russell, Auburn's sensational captain. Russell made tackle on the Southeastern Conference team last year and is an outstanding candidate for All-American honors.

One Temple gridiron star cracked the "all" team. He is Joe Drulis, veteran guard, of the Cherry and White squad. Drulis played brilliantly against the Wildcats. His play brought many plaudits from local football men and from "Clipper" Smith.

Sharing a guard post with Drulis is Jerry Fall, lone Manhattan player, to be thus honored. Voting was very close on this position and it was a matter of a few votes that gave him the post over Detroit's Alex Froelich.

Craig, McMillan Ends

South Carolinia's crashing end, Larry Craig, was picked by the Blue team for one of the wing positions. Craig played a superb brand of defensive football against the 'Cats and was instrumental in the Gamecocks tying the Villanova boys.

Jim McMillan, the colored boy who played havoc with the Wildcats in the Detroit fracas got the call over a teammate and his captain, Alex Chesney, for the remaining end position.

Teaming with German in the backfield are Ed Palumbo, Detroit's ace backfield man, and McGowan of Auburn at the halfback slots; another Plainsman, Charley Haynesworth gets the fullback position.

Palumbos' great exhibition of passing and kicking will never be forgotten. The all-around work of Jack Meagher's boys McGowan and Haynesworth netted them their positions. McGowan is only a sophomore and promises interesting competition to the 'Cats in the next few years.

Loyola, Rider, and Albright Go Down Before Blue Second Half Rallies

YUND IS CATS' NEW STAR

By PHIL DUNN, '40

Villanova's basketeers emerged victorious against Albright Saturday night and in so doing completed a very busy and highly successful week on the Field House court. Earlier in the week they had won decisively from Loyola of Baltimore and Rider College.

Each of these games was rather closely contested during the first half, but the visitors seemed to tire easily. When they came out to play the second half, it looked like an entirely different game with the Blue and White piling up point after point.

Montgomery Stars

Jim Montgomery was the star of the Loyola game—if any one man can be singled out as a star. His spectacular one-hand shots from under the basket had the crowd roaring approval. Jim amassed a total of ten points during the night to lead the Cats in this department.

Lou Dubino, subbing for "Monty," sank four field goals in short order near the end of the game to tie Mike Lazorchak at eight points each. The defensive work of "Chuck" Yung must also be mentioned as a feature of the game.

GRIDDERS REWARD RELIABLE LINEMAN

Bill Cochrane, Converted From End Position, Reinforces Forward Wall at Tackle

Fighting spirit, all-around team play, and a yen for the gridiron sport were rewarded last Tuesday, when Bill Cochrane veteran tackle was elected Honorary Captain of the undefeated Wildcats of 1938, by members of the squad.

Cochrane a senior in the Department of Education was one of the real line contributions to an undefeated football campaign.

Converted from End

Converted from an end to a tackle post at the end of last season he played brilliantly for almost 60 minutes of each game in which he participated. Injuries sustained in the Auburn tussle this year, kept him on the sidelines in two games. He played against Temple with bandaged shoulders and knees.

Cochrane was a "God send" to "Clipper" Smith who found himself at the start of the campaign without any tackles and knee-deep in other positions. He was forced to convert three ends and a guard for the tackle position. Cochrane proved to be the man Friday. Team-

Students Prepare for Mural Boxing Show

Varsity Mittmen To Meet Shanahan C. C. in Wind-up

Many Celebrities Expected To Be Present; Bryan Hayes, Noted Referee, Will Officiate; Wrestling Bouts Highlight Gala Spectacle

ALUMNI HALL IS DEFENDING CHAMPION

As a feature of the annual Intramural boxing show on January 9, Ray Gadsby's varsity ringmen will meet the Shanahan Catholic Club of Philadelphia. Shanahan presents one of the leading club boxing teams in this district and will provide plenty of opposition for the Villanova mittmen.

As was customary in past events the audience will sparkle with celebrities. Bryan Hayes will again do the refereeing. Hayes is well-known in boxing circles all over the east, officiating at most of the outstanding collegiate matches.

Celebrities at last year's event included Roy Mack, Tommy Loughran, Jimmy Dykes, Marty McLaughlin, and Gerry Nugent. Connie Mack attended the show in 1937.

Participants Report Early

The intramural contests, as usual, will be the main events. All students are encouraged to participate. Training for expectant participants should begin immediately. Ray Gadsby and his varsity ringmen are willing and eager to give any students all the help they desire to prepare for the big night. It will be imperative for students to get started before the Christmas vacation begins. Report to the gym for further information.

Last year's intramural boxing show was won by Alumni Hall, which makes them defending champs this season, while Austin Hall occupies the runner-up position.

Every consideration is being given the boys to make sure that none will be hurt. All bouts will be between members of the same class in weight and experience; thus the novices who compete will be pitted against other novices of about the same weight, and any varsity men taking part in the exhibition will meet varsity opponents.

All Students Eligible

At this time it is not definitely known who the participants will be. All students, however, are eligible; therefore anyone with a yen to "slug," or anyone who wishes to know more about the manly art of self defense should make himself known by presenting himself to Ray Gadsby at the gym.

In addition to the numerous boxing events a few exhibitions of wrestling will be staged to take care of those who wish to grunt and groan. Opponents in these matches will also be selected according to their weights, but there is little danger of the participants being injured.

Father McKee, director of the Villanova Intramural Program will be in full charge of the show.

league, dominated the selection, placing four men on the first team. Yale finishing third in the league fight placed three men on the initial eleven. Rutgers tied for second by Cornell in the standing, placed two men. Villanova and Cornell being represented by one gridder apiece. This was the fourth time that an All-American team has been picked.

Princeton scored 146 points to their opponents' 29 to become champions of the circuit. By finishing first this season Princeton now holds one and one-half legs on the George Foster Sanford trophy as does Yale. Rutgers however, is in the lead with two legs and needs but one championship to retire the trophy.

strong five. Richard Edell and Ed Pulvino are high scoring forwards, the former a left hander who is evidently "hot." Long John Ross plays center and his six-feet three inches of height aid him no little in this capacity.

So far this year the "Bees" have beaten Wilson College, Blue Ridge College, and Penn A. C. The game with the Wildcats will be the fourth contest on their schedule.

Basketball Sidelights

MUCH to his surprise, Lloyd Rice, after some inquiries about Paul Rice, star forward of the Roanoke basketball team, learned that he was a distant cousin of his and came from the town of Lloyd's birthplace, Lexington, Virginia. Lloyd must have felt at home with those Southerners surrounding him. Hiya Rebel!

The official scorer at Friday night's basketball game between Lost Nation and Goose Lake, Iowa, was recovering today from a gruelling workout. The Lost Nation team was victorious by the overwhelming score of 104-4.

The so-called battle between Guokas, and Mike Bloom, rivals in their college days at St. Joseph's and Temple, failed to materialize in the Sphas-Wilkes-Barre professional basketball game played Saturday evening at the Broadwood Hotel in Philadelphia. Bloom scored five points for a winning cause and Guokas leading the losing cause with four points. The Sphas topped the Barons by the score of 45-26.

If you think they have tall players in the East, wait until Oregon, champion of the Northern Division of the Pacific Coast Conference, comes East to play St. Joseph's, December 19.

"Slim" Wintermute towers 6 feet, 8 inches from head to toe. Accompanying Wintermute will be Laddie Gail, 6 foot, 4, who ran up the grand total of 408 points last season, and Wally Johansen, who with Gail was honored with a berth on the Coast honor team.

In the Sportlight

By BOB FUNABASHI, '42

SURE 'twas a great day for the Irish, when Mrs. Murphy's son, Harold, first saw the light of day in the little old town of New York. That day goes back twenty-one years ago and while "Murph" was sleeping peacefully in his mother's arms there was a war going on abroad. Little did he care.

Today this lad resides on our fair campus at Fedigan Hall, deeply entrenched in an Electrical Engineering course, but with his heart in the sport world. Indeed "Murph" is the lover of all sports, with fame in the gridiron world as a blocking back of the 150's and a key man on the Fedigan Hall intra-mural basketball team.

Starred on Court and Diamond

Harold started his athletic career in New York City where he attended All-Hallows High. Although he did not play football in high school, he starred on the baseball and basketball teams. After two years in the Bronx, "Murph" moved to the Garden State, across the Hudson, and attended Red Bank Catholic for a post - graduate course. Taking time off from studies he rocketed to the sportlight once again playing basketball and baseball.

With three years of 150-lb. football behind him, "Murph" is sorry to put away his uniform, which bears the No. 40 on it. That No. 40 was indeed the mainstay of the lightweights, featured as a hard blocking back which met the charging opposition. In his Junior year, Harold gained considerable recognition by placing himself on the All-American second team for lightweights.

Loses a Molar

Besides the gridiron interests, this brown haired lad, has taken into his fold four years of Intramural basketball, softball, and swimming. It must have been Mrs. Murphy's stew that kept her son from mingling with injury, for in his four years just one little molar has been knocked out. He's been knocked around on the athletic field a lot but still comes up smiling and ready to go again.

Besides his athletic prowess, Murphy rates well in the field of learning. He has been a Phi Kappa Phi man for three years and during his Junior year was elected Treasurer of the club.

This year he has the position of chairman of the Engineers Basketball team, of which he is a member. Murphy says it was the catalogue that enthused him to come here but we are inclined to think that he ventured into these portals for some knowledge of Engineering, plus a bit of social and athletic activities. When Harold Murphy's name is called on commencement day next June, it will be a bitter blow for the school for they will be losing a good all-around man.

Esquire is no name for Mr. Murphy, he ranks with the Duke of Windsor in fashion, even though he doesn't wear knickers. He stays right up with the modern trend and also every new edition of Esquire.

Murphy and Dunnigan, Pals

A close friend of Murphy's is Jack Dunnigan, a true Irishman at heart. Together they form two real friends, but in sake of argument they're miles apart in ideas and opinions. Of course athletics is the topic which is debatable so they both cast their ballots for hours on the subject.

Turning again to the serious side, we can only realize that Harold Murphy is truly an athlete and a scholar who has strove for almost four years now to attain the heights of honor and friendship so true of other loyal Villanovans who have passed from this great institution.

whom Loyola's offense centered, garnered eight markers. Dick would have had quite a few more if he had been "on," but most of his shots would not go down.

An interesting sidelight of the game is found in the fact that Loyola was held without a field goal for the first 17 minutes of the second half. The score climbed from 15-13 at the half through 27-14, 31-15, 36-16 to a final count of 42 to 21.

Rider Leads Cats

The Rider game started out with a bang—the Trenton lads making all the noise. The score reached 5-0 in favor of the visitors and for almost eight minutes the Wildcats could not dent the scoring column. When they did score, however, they soon took the lead and from that point on, were never headed. At half-time the Blue had a 13-8 lead which increased to a 41-24 final score.

"Chuck" Yund's all around play stamps him as the outstanding player in this contest. He was high scorer, chalking up 11 points, and played a beautiful defensive game as well. "Duke" Duzminski played his usual top-notch brand of ball. He garnered 10 points and was in there fighting all the time.

Benyon, Rider Sparkplug

..For the Rider team Oscar Larson, who put in three field goals and one foul, led the scoring despite the fact that Howard Benyon, who got six points, appeared to be the main factor in the Trentonian's attack. Tony Astrologes at center played a good game although slightly overshadowed by Montgomery. Dubino continued the streak he had started in the Loyola game by sinking his only shot of the evening. At this point he had made five consecutive shots.

The Albright game was probably the least interesting of the three as far as playing good basketball was concerned. Jim Montgomery was confined to bed and was not able to participate in this game. This seemed to glow the Cats up a little, despite the fact that Lou Dubiro played a very good game in "Monty's" absence. Duzminski was not up to his usual par as far as making shots goes, but he played well defensively.

At halftime the score stood at 21-12 in Villanova's favor, and this grew as the second half progressed until at the last whistle the count was 39-22. Hydock tossed in 12 of his team's total.

GADSBY DISCOVERS CAPABLE PROSPECTS DURING WORKOUTS

Johnny Nojunas May Box in Lightheavy Weight Division This Season

EDDIE KIRK REPORTS

With the boxing season still a month away, the Villanova ringmen are already showing their mid-season form. During the past week, the charges of Ray Gadsby have been working earnestly and rounding into excellent condition.

Confronted with the problem of finding a capable substitute for Jim Mulroy, who did not return to school, Coach Gadsby believes he has this predicament under control. Two boys that are proving themselves good enough to fill up this gap are Ponte, a former Allentown Prep boxer, and Mowen, a boy who is a newcomer to the ring.

Ponte, Mowen Wage Battle

Ponte and Mowen are waging a close battle to represent the Wildcats in the 115-pound class, and only time will tell the answer.

Another newcomer that promises to push plenty of leather during the coming season is Jerry Lynam. This lad has shown up very well, and will more than likely answer the bell as a 165-pounder.

Coach Gadsby also expects bigger and better doings from Captain Bill Duffy. Duffy has been showing his old form together with some recently acquired tricks. He leads the list of returning veterans, with Nojunas, Kirk and Metzinger, following. The latter has acquired some extra poundage, and by this his coach feels sure that he will undoubtedly assert himself as a leading junior middleweight.

Nojunas May Fight at 175

Nojunas this year will be fighting in the 175-pound class, and in this division Gadsby believes that he will be a worthy successor to Tony Sala, former Wildcat boxer who went undefeated three consecutive years in the Inter-Collegiate ring.

If he can find a man to fill up the opening in the heavyweight division Coach Gadsby believes the team will enjoy a very successful season.

On Court Games

With four ball games tucked safely under our belts one of the most important things that have ingrained themselves on us in the past two weeks is the realization that every game must be played in turn. Playing future games before you get around to your present opponent never pays. It is fortunate that our squad has realized that fact.

We have found that the "experts" rating us as "formidable" does not frighten even our weakest opponents.. They are all "from Missouri" and they have to be shown before they will believe.. So far we have managed to "show them." Let's hope that we continue to do so.

The four contests now complete have shown us that we had a definite need for more co-ordination in our ball-handling and for more adherence to the straight fundamentals of the game. The team is beginning to settle down to the playing of "system basketball," which is very necessary when the competition gets stiffer.

Two of our veterans, Johnny Krutulis and Art Vigilante, are beginning to show knowledge and balance when the heat is on. Their coolness and experience have made them a dangerous threat to our opponents.. I believe that the observations they made while on the bench in the early games have helped them no little.

The initial real test of this year's five will take place this Saturday night in Baltimore, when we meet the Baltimore outfit. They still smart from last year's defeat at the hands of Villanova and they eagerly await our coming. That they have a great aggregation down there this year is easily shown by the fact that they conquered the powerful Penn A. C, five by a margin of thirteen points. The Pennacs are as smooth a club as you will find anywhere and such an overwhelming victory for Baltimore means plenty.

It is necesary that we respect this victory, when we meet the Southerners.. We must be ready and able to take quick advantage of any breaks that come our way if we are to make any headway against them.. Added to the fact that they are a good ball club is the fact that we will be meeting them on their own floor. We have little knowledge of their floor and this will be a serious threat to our victory-hopes. The kind of a floor you are playing on makes a big difference to a basketball player. Before he can really play at top speed he must know his floor perfectly.

CLUB DISCUSSES FRENCH CRISIS

History Seminar Analyzes Daladier's Tactics in Present Crisis

The present situation in France was the principle subject of discussion at the regular meeting of the History Seminar last Tuesday December 6.

With the assistance of Dr. Harold Hartman, moderator of the organization, the members attempted to make an analysis of the facts which led up to the present situation in France. It was explained that Daladier, who has been confronted with considerable opposition, suppressed any antagonistic tendencies by military force. It seems that this opposition was interpreted as being primarily fascist tendencies existing in the country, to overthrow the socialist regime.

This was followed by a consideration of liberty and the factors which constitute true liberty.

NEW MEMBERS SOLICITED BY RESEARCH SEMINAR

Date of Meetings Changed From Thursday Evenings to Afternoons

Students who are not members of the Research Seminar are invited to speak on their specific piece of research, according to a new policy determined by the group at its last meeting.

Due to conflicting studies, it has been decided to change the time of the meetings from Thursday evening to Thursday afternoon; consequently, the meeting this Thursday in room 215 will be held at one o'clock.

DR. KRASE PRAISES SCIENTIFIC SPIRIT

The inspection tour of the Franklin Sugar Company was held by forty members of the Villanova Chemical Society on December 8. They were divided into three groups and taken throughout the building. It was surprising to the members to see the detailed work involved in so many of the processes.

On December 1, Dr. N. W. Krase, of the University of Pennsylvania, gave a talk on Chemical Engineering in general. He told how quickly Chemical Engineering has developed up to the present day. Dr. Krase also noted important characteristics that the student should possess if he intends to do graduate work.

The student, he said, should be in the first half of his class, have unlimited curiosity and, above all should have confidence that he is qualified for his work. He also stated that he was very pleased with the laboratories and courses of Villanova College.

Entrance to the honorary pre-medical organization has for a prerequisite a high scholastic ranking. All students in the School of Science are eligible for admission according to the judgement of the Acceptance Committee.

Plans for the annual fraternal dinner dance were discussed at the last meeting of the fraternity on December 15. According to latest developments the date for the dinner dance has been set for Thursday evening, April 15.

Doctor Powell, well-known Philadelphia optometrist, addressed the gathering at the last meeting. His topic was "Optica Appliances and Their Benefits to Mankind." Arrangements are being made by members of the fraternity to secure a guest speaker for this Thursday evening.

Each year Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity accepts a maximum number of students from the School of Science. Initiation is usually conducted in the early part of February. Further information on the activity of the fraternity will be posted on the Science School bulletins.

Deans Release Names Of Students Included In Quarterly Honor Rating

Quarterly honor rolls of the various schools on the campus have only recently been released by the deans of the respective departments. According to an unofficial survey which based the enrollment of Villanova on a total of nine hundred students, nearly twelve per cent of the total registered students have gained honor ratings. Among the individual schools the Department of Science ranks the highest with thirty of its students on the honor list.

No honor list was compiled for the School of Arts since it has not been compiled as yet.

The Commerce and Finance School has divided its honor list into two separate classes: members of the first group have received a grade of excellent in studies, and the latter have earned a distinguishing mark of merit. They are as follows: seniors—Hugh McGlincy, George Bishop, and John Costello; juniors—Frank Pimpinella, Charles Cavanaugh, Frank Conners and Charles Voiz; sophomores — Paul D. Nugent, Raymond Valentine and Clifford Randolph; freshmen—Thomas Sullivan, Thomas Doyle and Anthony La Brasca.

Those who comprise the second group are: seniors—Norman Klein and James O'Brien; juniors—Gerald Lynam, Bradley McManus and Ronald Tornwall; sophomores—James McGarey and Anthony Vinci; freshmen—Edward Frank and James Pike.

To the Science School goes the honor of having the largest number of honor students. The high-ranking students of this section are: seniors — Augustine Giordano, Edward Lucente, Robert Howe, Benedict Cusani, Bernard Miller; juniors—Charles Lodowski, A. Bongiovani, Louis Petril, Justin Rubin, Richard Martin, Bernard Singer, Richard Refowich; sophomores — Edward Steinhart, Harry Goodman, Columbus Gangemi, Raphael deHoratius, Theodore Kraus, Anthony Galeski, Joseph Camarda, Valdimir Mohnach; freshmen — Salvatore Campo, Isadore Merlinsky, Thomas Sheey, Joseph Nelson, Joseph Scornavacchi, Bernard Evans, Leanord Bortin, Frank Mattei, Robert Boggiano and John Healy.

AMERICANS MUST DO THEIR DUTY

WISHING to align the great democracies of the world to their cause the chief propagandists of John Bull have avowedly expressed their purpose of infusing this nation with favorable British feelings; Britain is now sending her great diplomats, literary figures, and personages.

America is falling to their beliefs and is disregarding the sacred traditions of our Monroe Doctrine, and is leading the world in protesting against foreign atrocities, criticizing dictatorial powers, and in general "meddling in foreign affairs."

What benefits have we as a nation derived from these personal outbursts? None. Ill feeling toward America is reaching its climax particularly in Germany and Italy. The dictators take every opportunity to ridicule our country's activities. Most important to America is the known fact that our trade with these countries has fallen, and trade agreements are becoming more difficult to cement.

The favorite comeback from the targets of our denounciation is the request to mind our own business and straighten out our own domestic affairs before we try to tell others how to run theirs. There is food for thought in that retort.

AMERICA IS FREED

GOVERNOR Olson's pardon of Thomas J. Mooney disposes of an unhappy case as well as it ever can be. Time has brought our reason to believe that his was a miscarriage of justice accomplished by perjured testimony.

For 22 years Mooney has been a symbol of persecution in this country and abroad. His fight for freedom has been long, but fruitful. Honest, gnawing doubt of those whose ideals revolt against those he stands for, freed him.

Thomas Mooney remains a "radical;" he has pledged his life in the "replacing" of what he regards as a "decaying" economic system. But important in this case is that the troubling doubt of his conviction is removed. Whether it be mercy or justice, the nation approves the action of Governor Olson.

THE PATH IS CLEAR

WITH the advent of the second semester the several organizations and clubs of the Villanova campus will extend to all freshmen cordial invitations to membership. Of course, there are further restrictions of eligibility entailed, but the major one has been removed. Consequently, you can hardly be urged too much to take advantage of these various opportunities to enhance both your scholastic and social prestige.

Though these groups fall into the category of extra-curricular activity, they indeed do have a very prominent position in your educational scheme. They should be cataloged in education second only to the regular scholastic curriculum. Naturally they do not rate a place parallel with the "summum bonum," but when paid the correct amount of attention they guarantee very promising dividends. In this light they cannot be overlooked.

Again, there is to be reckoned the more than large amount of personal enjoyment and recreation which these organizations constitute if participated in with the average amount of enthusiasm and co-operation. During the collegiate year social events and other affairs of a similar nature are engaged in by the members of the campus organizations already alluded to and are restricted to members. The benefits to be derived along these lines are "ipso facto" evident.

It is generally the rule when selection of officers are made by these clubs that only those are eligible who have the longest period of service to their credit in the particular organization. Of this freshmen should take special notice.

FINDING CHRIST

SKEPTICS throughout our country, comparable to the perennial lad from Missouri blast our Catholic advise which urges a return to the teachings of Christ in order to cure many of the modern world's ills. They term it pure idealism, something not at all applicable to practical uses. Even though these people admit our premise that the world does have many maladies to be eradicated, they don't see just how the Catholic teachings can help matters any. In other words they want to be shown.

On the other hand we as Catholics firmly believe that the advice and counsels of the Church as set forth in the many and learned messages of the Holy Father, Pope Pius, are not merely to be admired and handled as petty, fragile epithets not worth an iota of practical value.

The law of Christ, contained in the Ten Commandments, can help us not in our investigation for the right road if there is not a general consensus of action along this line. United perserverance is wanted in the attempt to make Christ's laws practical. One person living an exemplary Catholic life is not going to accomplish this end by himself, but he is going to give others who come in contact with him an incentive to follow his procedure. Good actions are not lost, although they sometimes seem so.

Ordinary acts done to the best of our ability with the innate intention to make them coincide as closely as possible to the moral code of Christ are asked. If this movement of individuals imbued with these ideas becomes general and sweeping, the problem will be solved. And this goal is not will-of-the-wisp. It is real and attainable.

The Place of Literature

BY

Gilbert Macbeth, Ph. D.

MANY college students today are inclined to minimize the value of literature in their educational program. More and more the young men and women attending college are demanding an education that will prepare them for a definite career; consequently they give their greatest attention to what they call the practical subjects.

By these they mean those subjects that give them information and techniques they will use later in the profession or occupation they have chosen for themselves. Courses which fail to meet these requirements they may regard as pleasant and ornamental, but not essential. To this latter class belongs the study of literature.

Yet the study of literature can perhaps be more readily justified on the basis of practicality than any of the subjects which are ordinarily regarded as practical. This is true because the study of literature achieves more immediately and directly the same end that is achieved by the practical studies.

The aim of the latter is to prepare the student for activities that will aid him in earning a living and perhaps permit him to enjoy some of the finer things of life as well. But the goal of literature is in part one that is arrived at immediately. Its rewards are available at once, not after the lapse of months and years.

Hence it is true that the student who neglects the possibilities of literature (and other arts as well) for the sake of preparing himself for an uncertain future when he may be in a position to enjoy such things is making a mistake. For one thing, the study of literature can be pursued without any detriment to the student's practical studies.

Every student feels that he is a very busy person, but actually most students waste a great deal of time on activities that bring few or no rewards. The typical student uses up a couple of hours a day doing things that yield neither immediate nor eventual profit, talking at random, thinking aimlessly, reading stereotyped stories from popular magazines. "But we need relaxation," students will say, to justify profitless reading. Yes, but it is possible to find relaxation in good reading, relaxation that is even more satisfying than that derived from commercial literature; and good literature will have other values as well, especially the broadening of sympathies and the sharpening of sensitivity to the finer experiences of life.

Another danger connected with the putting off literary study till later years is that when the time comes the person may find it hard to adjust himself to the appreciation of literature in his mature years. The muscles of the mind may have become set and impervious to new impressions.

If one has not learned to enjoy good books, music, and paintings while he is growing up, it is probable that he will never learn to enjoy these things. A famous scientist of the nineteenth century lamented in his old age that because of a lifetime absorption in his work he had lost his taste for music and poetry.

As a youth he had a strong love for these things, but it was lost because of a lack of occasional gratification. What chance, then, is there for the development in later years of a faculty that was not cultivated at all in youth? Students must not make the mistake of the busy bee of the fable who did not find time to eat and consequently starved to death.

A few hints on the reading of literature may be helpful. Of course the first essential is one that must exist in the student himself: a desire to make the most of his opportunities and win the maximum development for his capacities. For such a student I should make two or three suggestions. First, he should read some good literature regularly, if possible every day for an hour or more. Second, he should read from the older authors as well as those writing at the present time. Finally, he should strive to read better and better books. While we should always read with pleasure, we should nevertheless feel that our standard of appreciation is constantly rising, until we eventually reach the level of reading where we find the greatest satisfaction in such masters as Homer, Dante, Goethe, and Shakespeare.

Literature, like all art, is a record of the best of human experience. By the enjoyment of a good novel, essay, or poem we are permitted to look for the moment through the eyes of a human being who had a special insight into the world about him. The study of literature makes possible for each of us a heightened sense of awareness that makes life more worth living. It also places us in a truer relation to the rest of the world and helps us in our efforts to escape from narrowness and provinciality of outlook.

The road that leads to the enjoyment of the best in literature is a delightful one, and it is made even more delightful by the anticipations of what the future has in store for the lover of good reading.

Steady There, Uncle!

College Chatter

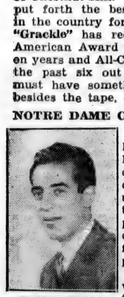
By Barney Bellew

AFITTING initiation of this column for the new year would be a token of appreciation to our preceeding columnist, Frank Reale. Frank was probably the most forceful writer ever to bang out College Chatter weekly. Here's Hoping!

ALIAS:

Mt. St. Josephs College is now travelling under the name "College of Chestnut Hill." Incidentally they put forth the best quarterly mag in the country for their class. The "Grackle" has received the All-American Award for the past seven years and All-Catholic award for the past six out of seven. They must have something on the ball besides the tape.

NOTRE DAME CAMPUS:



Notre Dame has one of the largest college cafeterias in the country. It is not unusual to serve ten thousand people during the day when the football squad plays at home.

One of the favorite dishes of FRANK REALE the "Fighting Irish" for a noonday meal is spaghetti. And if one of the students were to lay each strand of spaghetti end to end, I wouldn't be surprised.

Nearly three hundred milkshakes are drained every day by thirsty students. On a busy day this number mounts to double and triple. Apple pie is the chief dessert.

SIENA NEWS:

Hickory-dickory-dock!
Two mice ran up the clock.
The clock struck one;
The other one ducked.

FIVE CENTS A DANCE:

The nickel dance was recently inaugurated at Scranton-Keystone Junior College. The dances are conducted during the noon hour and approximately fifty students attend. The dances are held for half an hour twice a week to popular hits by popular bands. The receipts will go toward improving the campus.

GERMAN REFUGEES:

A movement has recently been started by undergrads at Harvard to aid youthful refugees of the Nazi persecution. The plan has met with the approval of many colleges and universities who are entering the movement. They intend to provide for living expenses, suitable employment, proper orientation to the cities and universities, and a suitable scholarship.

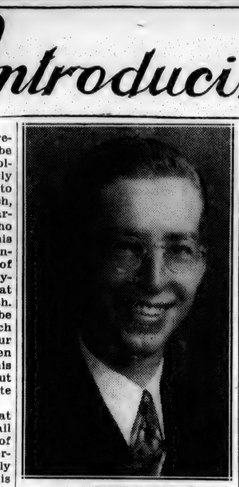
ANNAPOLIS LOG:

The train robber was holding up a pullman car, "Out with your dough or I'll kill all the men without money and I'll kiss all the women."

An elderly man said, "You shall not touch these ladies:"

An old maid in an upper berth shouted, "You leave him alone; he's robbing this train."

Introducing—



A. NORMAN KLEIN

By ANDREA J. D'ANGELO

WHEN informed by your reporter that he was to be the subject of this week's column, Norman Klein indignantly protested. "Why do you want to write about me?" he asked. "Gosh, I haven't done anything to warrant this. Interview somebody who has set the school afire with his zeal, and who has carried the banners of Villanova to the heights of fame. Me? I haven't done anything here!" Taken somewhat aback, I tried a different approach. Surely, I told him, there must be something you have done which might prove interesting to your classmates. Some long-forgotten family skeleton, perhaps? To this he replied, "I don't doubt that, but I still think that you should write about somebody else."

Finally convinced of the fact that it was all proper and not at all demoralizing to the standards of journalism for him to be interviewed, Norman Klein graciously condescended to unravel for this column the interesting course of his young life.

Almost Named Woodrow

While the war clouds were hovering and bursting over most of the world, excitement reigned at 767 Monroe St., Brooklyn, for on December 28, 1915, the stork had decided to pay a visit to the Klein household and leave his calling card. An anxious discussion ensued as to what name should be chosen for this new addition. His parents thought of calling him Woodrow, after President Wilson, but just at the very mention of this name the infant gave vent to such boisterous signs of dislike that they decided to name him A. Norman Klein. Thus very early in life did this energetic senior make himself heard and his opinions heeded.

Reveals Secret

"What's the 'A' stand for, Norman?" I asked.

"It's very curious," he answered, laughingly, "but everyone seems to ask me that same question. For four years I have signed my name that way and have successfully kept the secret of my first initial from my classmates, but I guess that since I'm graduating soon, it won't hurt much to tell about it. As much as I hate to admit it, the initial sands for Albert. There, it's out at last.'

During the process of his childhood, the Klein family decided to move to Larchmont, New York, where Norman attended grammar school. When he had completed his course there, he enrolled in the Mamaroneck high school, because he was the "victim of overlapping governments," since the towns of Larchmont and Mamaroneck had incorporated themselves into one school district. It was here that he spent seven years. He explained this enigma by saying that he attended two years of junior high, four years of regular high school, and did one year of post-graduate work at the same place.

Sports Enthusiast

While at high school Norman developed a keen interest in sports, as a spectator, which he has fostered and kept up. He gave vent to his athletic inclinations by working himself up to the position of sports editor of the high school newspaper, which post he held for a period of two years. After he finished the post-graduate course at Mamaroneck, he decided to venture out into the business world and work. It wasn't until a year later that his thirst for higher learning led him to consider the idea of going to college.

When asked how it came about that he chose Villanova College to be his future alma mater, Norman characteristically replied: "Well, you see, it was this way. I had read some literature describing the place, and I was interested. I went to see a priest who had been at Villanova, but he told me that it had been so long since he had been there that he had forgotten all about how the place looked, so he advised me to come down here and see for myself. When I got here, I was encountered by Mr. Bammiller, then newly appointed registrar. He showed me around the college, and his sales talk was so enthusiastic and convincing that I guess I became sold on the idea of coming to school here right then and there."

Consistent Honor Student

Being somewhat business-minded, Norman Klein registered in the School of Commerce and Finance, majoring in marketing, where he has assiduously worked for four years and has achieved the enviable scholastic record of having been on the honor roll for the entire period of his college career up to this day.

Keeping up his high scholastic rating and working, he says, did not leave much time for extra-curricular activities. However, his record shows that Norman Klein has been rather active in his class affairs. He was a member of the Study Club and the Holy Name Society. Last year he was a prominent member of the blazier committee. He is also secretary-treasurer of the Student Council, as a result of a special election last year. Not bad for a person who hasn't much time!

Cites Success Formula

When asked if he, as an embryo business man, believed in following any special form for a successful career, he replied, "I believe that business men should not meddle in politics." He let it stay at that because he knew that his fame as a politician in Villanova had preceded him.

Since he doesn't believe in crossing bridges until he comes to them, Norman stated that his present will have been realized in June with the acquisition of his diploma. His most enjoyable year? Why, the freshman year, of course, he replied. "Boy, I'll never forget that year as long as I live." Taking an active part in the dorm "bull-sessions" has been his favorite pastime while at Villanova. Characteristically enough, he spends all his spare time, holidays, and vacations working. Chuckling, he confided that some of the funniest incidents in his life have happened to him while he was employed as a retail clerk in a store, where, as he so aptly puts it, "I sold everything from needles to under-pretties."

Goodman Graduates Jones; Deanna Durbin Studies Music at High School!

By WILLIAM J. TOY

WITH trepidation in my heart and a profound admiration for my predecessor, Fred Waters, I am assuming the duties he so ably filled during his stay as a columnist. May he do as well in the outer world as he did as a member of the inner circle of the Villanovan.

FRED WATERS

Breaking away from the serious element your columnist has been informed that Deanna Durbin who pursues her high school studies under the supervision of a private tutor on the studio lot must take a course in elementary music appreciation under orders from the State Board of Education. Deanna could probably give the teacher a few pointers. We wonder if she will pass.

Benny Goodman, recently voted Number 1 Swing Band in the Down Beat poll, has given his approval to Harry James to leave his musical college. According to releases Goodman declared James is now able to conduct a band of his own and that he may follow Gene Krupa with the maestro's blessings. The King of Swing again entered the stately portals of Carnegie Hall on Saturday when he played the world premiere of a newly written classical duet. He is one of the few men who can boast of playing both Jazz and legitimate music in this New York spot.

FIX OF THE WEEK—(With apologies to my predecessor)

"The Duke of West Point" starring Joan Fontaine in the feminine lead and Louis Hayward and Tom Brown sharing the male roles. It may be viewed at Philadelphia's Aldine.

HOLLYWOOD TANTRUMS

With due apologies to the hurt dignities of those concerned this dastardly piece of snooping is released to the eagerly waiting (we hope) general public.

James Stewart has been attending rehearsals of the latest Earl Carroll show in Hollywood. We wonder why?

Lew Ayres is a proponent of the art of spelling words otherwise known as "word games" and has been unofficially proclaimed the champion of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio.

Groucho, Chico, and Harpo Marx all went different places for the holidays. The idea was to get rid of each other. Do you blame them?

Robert Young and Allen Jones were seen with hammers and saws building five new stalls at their Bell Air (no relation to the Villanova yearbook) stables. They should talk to Bing Crosby, perhaps they have worries in common, or maybe they win a race now and then.

ATTENTION ALL BLONDES:

Any blonde girl who possesses unbobbed hair may land a cinema job. She must be a "1939 streamlined model" and able to win the affections of Mickey Rooney. Truly a woman's sized job.

What do you think? That is the question so often placed before Paul Whiteman these days. When asked recently whom he considered George Gershwin's successor in modern music, he named Artie Shaw, Duke Ellington, Roy Bargy, Ferde Grofe, Raymond Scott, and Morton Gould as some of the outstanding men in line. When asked he was looking for in Economics class last Thursday was just a little humming bird in the last row.

When the professor asked Sam Monaco if the bell at the end of class distracted him Walt Nowak added this witty bit: "No, Prof., it just wakes him up!"

I thoroughly agree with Steve Alsenbrey on the subject of the beauty and charm of Baldwin, Long Island girls. They're super, Steve.

Well, as the firefly said: "Let's close this illuminating session." Paul Fitzmaurice adds these words of advise: "Hit the books, fellows; mid-years are only two weeks off."

The first resident students at Villanova were lodged in a farm house.

During the scholastic year 1890-91 every Thursday was a visiting day, and free from class duties.

Nineteenth century Villanova students were required to memorize from fifty to one thousand lines for a breech of regulations.

Larry Clinton, one of radio's foremost arrangers has been engaged at this occupation since he was 14 years old. During this time he has turned out 1500 orchestrations for many varied combinations. In the unique style that puts him in such popular demand. Although his musical ability is not top flite in instrumentalism he makes up for this deficiency with his sparkling stylings. Bea Wain also helps the band with her swet renditions and easily rates the number 1 slot for feminine vocalists.

TIIINGS YOUR CORRESPONDENT HEARD:

Benny Goodman has won the Paramount band poll for the second straight year. Must get monotonous, Benny.

Eddie Cantor has advocated showing popular radio programs on road tours as the next development of radio. Good idea.

"The most glamorous stars do the most clowning." This is the statement of Bob Hope. Constance Bennett, Pat O'Brien and Joan Bennett did the most clowning. Pat O'Brien who worked all during the rehearsals on the script and added many good jokes ended up doing a buck and wing for the audience as a guest on Bob Hope's program.

ODDS and ENDS

By Bill Garrity

CHRISTMAS is over once more and here we are with six new ties, an honorable discharge from the ranks of Mr. Farley's men in grey, and full of pep, vim and vigor.

A great many Villanovans returned with sore pedal extremities after giving their all in their local post offices. Buzz Howlett got a big kick out of being able to boss Dave DiFilippo around the loading platform at the 30th St. P. O.

Before he went home for the vacation Bill Gilligan got shaved in the campus tonsorial establishment. After several laughs by Charles the Artiste, Bill overcame his usual timidity and asked for a razor with which to defend himself.

One of our more popular and prominent professors likes to tell a joke during his lectures if a suitable occasion for such joke arises. An occasion arose yesterday in one of his classes and the following is what happened:

Prof: (in the middle of a joke) "Have I ever told this joke in class before?"

Class: (in chorus) "Yes."

Prof: "Good, you'll probably understand it this time."

Bob Keeler when questioned in class about the impartiality of certain publications gave the following startling answer: "The only truly impartial publication I know of is the telephone book."

Those jam sessions being held of late in Austin and Fedigan really have the "hep-cats" and "rug-cutters" going. Ed Cogan can compete with Carmen Mastern on that guitar of his and "Doc" Panceri is our selection for a really hot clarinet.

While home I heard of an interesting sign which was posted in the administration building at one of our better colleges. It went something like this: "Reverible topcoat, for sale. Student forced by circumstances to sell roommate's coat to buy English books."

If a girl should ever ask Johnny Heck to dance he would be on HER feet in a second.

I wonder if Tommy Carbine has discovered yet that the airplane he was looking for in Economics class last Thursday was just a little humming bird in the last row.

When the professor asked Sam Monaco if the bell at the end of class distracted him Walt Nowak added this witty bit: "No, Prof., it just wakes him up!"

AMERICANS MUST DO THEIR DUTY

WISHING to align the great democracies of the world to their cause the chief propagandists of John Bull have avowedly expressed their purpose of infusing this nation with favorable British feelings: Britain is now sending her great diplomats, literary figures, and personages.

America is falling to their beliefs and is disregarding the sacred traditions of our Monroe Doctrine, and is leading the world in protesting against foreign atrocities, criticizing dictatorial powers, and in general "meddling in foreign affairs."

What benefits have we as a nation derived from these personal outbursts? None. Ill feeling toward America is reaching its climax particularly in Germany and Italy. The dictators take every opportunity to ridicule our country's activities. Most important to America is the known fact that our trade with these countries has fallen, and trade agreements are becoming more difficult to cement.

The favorite comeback from the targets of our denounciation is the request to mind our own business and straighten out our own domestic affairs before we try to tell others how to run theirs. There is food for thought in that retort.

AMERICA IS FREED

GOVERNOR Olson's pardon of Thomas J. Mooney disposes of an unhappy case as well as it ever can be. Time has brought our reason to believe that his was a miscarriage of justice accomplished by perjured testimony.

For 22 years Mooney has been a symbol of persecution in this country and abroad. His fight for freedom has been long, but fruitful. Honest, gnawing doubt of those whose ideals revolt against those he stands for, freed him.

Thomas Mooney remains a "radical;" he has pledged his life in the "replacing" of what he regards as a "decaying" economic system. But important in this case is that the troubling doubt of his conviction is removed. Whether it be mercy or justice, the nation approves the action of Governor Olson.

THE PATH IS CLEAR

WITH the advent of the second semester the several organizations and clubs of the Villanova campus will extend to all freshmen cordial invitations to membership. Of course, there are further restrictions of eligibility entailed, but the major one has been removed. Consequently, you can hardly be urged too much to take advantage of these various opportunities to enhance both your scholastic and social prestige.

Though these groups fall into the category of extra-curricular activity, they indeed do have a very prominent position in your educational scheme. They should be cataloged in education second only to the regular scholastic curriculum. Naturally they do not rate a place parallel with the "summum bonum," but when paid the correct amount of attention they guarantee very promising dividends. In this light they cannot be overlooked.

Again, there is to be reckoned the more than large amount of personal enjoyment and recreation which these organizations constitute if participated in with the average amount of enthusiasm and co-operation. During the collegiate year social events and other affairs of a similar nature are engaged in by the members of the campus organizations already alluded to and are restricted to members. The benefits to be derived along these lines are "ipso facto" evident.

It is generally the rule when selection of officers are made by these clubs that only those are eligible who have the longest period of service to their credit in the particular organization. Of this freshmen should take special notice.

FINDING CHRIST

SKEPTICS throughout our country, comparable to the perennial lad from Missouri blast our Catholic advise which urges a return to the teachings of Christ in order to cure many of the modern world's ills. They term it pure idealism, something not at all applicable to practical uses. Even though these people admit our premise that the world does have many maladies to be eradicated, they don't see just how the Catholic teachings can help matters any. In other words they want to be shown.

On the other hand we as Catholics firmly believe that the advice and counsels of the Church as set forth in the many and learned messages of the Holy Father, Pope Pius, are not merely to be admired and handled as petty, fragile epithets not worth an iota of practical value.

The law of Christ, contained in the Ten Commandments, can help us not in our investigation for the right road if there is not a general consensus of action along this line. United perserverance is wanted in the attempt to make Christ's laws practical. One person living an exemplary Catholic life is not going to accomplish this end by himself, but he is going to give others who come in contact with him an incentive to follow his procedure. Good actions are not lost, although they sometimes seem so.

Ordinary acts done to the best of our ability with the innate intention to make them coincide as closely as possible to the moral code of Christ are asked. If this movement of individuals imbued with these ideas becomes general and sweeping, the problem will be solved. And this goal is not will-of-the-wisp. It is real and attainable.

The Place of Literature

BY

Gilbert Macbeth, Ph. D.

MANY college students today are inclined to minimize the value of literature in their educational program. More and more the young men and women attending college are demanding an education that will prepare them for a definite career; consequently they give their greatest attention to what they call the practical subjects.

By these they mean those subjects that give them information and techniques they will use later in the profession or occupation they have chosen for themselves. Courses which fail to meet these requirements they may regard as pleasant but ornamental, but not essential. To this latter class belongs the study of literature.

Yet the study of literature can perhaps be more readily justified on the basis of practicality than any of the subjects which are ordinarily regarded as practical. This is true because the study of literature achieves more immediately and directly the same end that is achieved by the practical studies.

The aim of the latter is to prepare the student for activities that will aid him in earning a living and perhaps permit him to enjoy some of the finer things of life as well. But the goal of literature is in part one that is arrived at immediately. Its rewards are available at once, not after the lapse of months and years.

Hence it is true that the student who neglects the possibilities of literature (and other arts as well) for the sake of preparing himself for an uncertain future when he may be in a position to enjoy such things is making a mistake. For one thing, the study of literature can be pursued without any detriment to the student's practical studies.

Every student feels that he is a very busy person, but actually most students waste a great deal of time on activities that bring few or no rewards. The typical student uses up a couple of hours a day doing things that yield neither immediate nor eventual profit, talking at random, thinking aimlessly, reading stereotyped stories from popular magazines. "But we need relaxation," students will say, to justify profitless reading. Yes, but it is possible to find relaxation in good reading, relaxation that is even more satisfying than that derived from commercial literature; and good literature will have other values as well, especially the broadening of sympathies and the sharpening of sensitivity to the finer experiences of life.

Another danger connected with the putting off literary study till later years is that when the time comes the person may find it hard to adjust himself to the appreciation of literature in his mature years. The muscles of the mind may have become set and impervious to new impressions.

If one has not learned to enjoy good books, music, and paintings while he is growing up, it is probable that he will never learn to enjoy these things. A famous scientist of the nineteenth century lamanted in his old age that because of a lifetime absorption in his work he had lost his taste for music and poetry.

As a youth he had a strong love for these things, but it was lost because of a lack of occasional gratification. What chance, then, is there for the development in later years of a faculty that was not cultivated at all in youth? Students must not make the mistake of the busy bee of the fable who did not find time to eat and consequently starved to death.

A few hints on the reading of literature may be helpful. Of course the first essential is one that must exist in the student himself: a desire to make the most of his opportunities and win the maximum development for his capacities. For such a student I should make two or three suggestions. First, he should read some good literature regularly, if possible every day for an hour or more. Second, he should read from the older authors as well as those writing at the present time. Finally, he should strive to read better and better books. While we should always read with pleasure, we should nevertheless feel that our standard of appreciation is constantly rising, until we eventually reach the level of reading where we find the greatest satisfaction in such masters as Homer, Dante, Goethe, and Shakespeare.

Literature, like all art, is a record of the best of human experience. By the enjoyment of a good novel, essay, or poem we are permitted to look for the moment through the eyes of a human being who had a special insight into the world about him. The study of literature makes possible for each of us a heightened sense of awareness that makes life more worth living. It also places us in a truer relation to the rest of the world and helps us in our efforts to escape from narrowness and provinciality of outlook.

The road that leads to the enjoyment of the best in literature is a delightful one, and it is made even more delightful by the anticipations of what the future has in store for the lover of good reading.

College Chatter

By Barney Bellew

A FITTING initiation of this column for the new year would be a token of appreciation to our preceeding columnist, Frank Reale. Frank was probably the most forceful writer ever to bang out College Chatter weekly. Here's Hoping!

ALIAS:

Mt. St. Josephs College is now travelling under the name "College of Chestnut Hill." Incidentally they put forth the best quarterly mag in the country for their class. The "Graekle" has received the All-American Award for the past seven years and All-Catholic award for the past six out of seven. They must have something on the ball besides the tape.

NOTRE DAME CAMPUS:

FRANK REALE

Notre Dame has one of the largest college cafeterias in the country. It is not unusual to serve ten thousand people during the day when the football squad plays at home.

One of the favorite dishes of the "Fighting Irish" for a noonday meal is spaghetti. And if one of the students were to lay each strand of spaghetti end to end, I wouldn't be surprised.

Nearly three hundred milkshakes are drained every day by thirsty students. On a busy day this number mounts to double and triple. Apple pie is the chief dessert.

SIENA NEWS:

Hickory-dickory-dock!
Two mice ran up the clock.
The clock struck one;
The other one ducked.

FIVE CENTS A DANCE:

The nickel dance was recently inaugurated at Scranton-Keystone Junior College. The dances are conducted during the noon hour and approximately fifty students attend. The dances are held for half an hour twice a week to popular hits by popular bands. The receipts will go toward improving the campus.

GERMAN REFUGEES:

A movement has recently been started by undergrads at Harvard to aid youthful refugees of the Nazi persecution. The plan has met with the approval of many colleges and universities who are entering the movement. They intend to provide for living expenses, suitable employment, proper orientation to the cities and universities, and a suitable scholarship.

ANNAPOLIS LOG:

The train robber was holding up a pullman car, "Out with your dough or I'll kill all the men without money and I'll kiss all the women."

An elderly man said, "You shall not touch these ladies."

An old maid in an upper berth shouted, "You leave him alone; he's robbing this train."

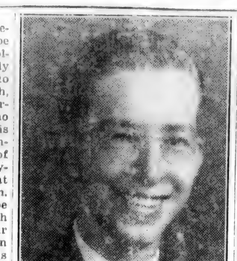
Introducing—



A. NORMAN KLEIN

By ANDREA J. D'ANGELO

WHEN informed by your reporter that he was to be the subject of this week's column, Norman Klein indignantly protested. "Why do you want to write about me?" he asked, "Gosh, I haven't done anything to warrant this. Interview somebody who has set the school afire with his zeal, and who has carried the banners of Villanova to the heights of fame. Me? I haven't done anything here!" Taken somewhat aback, I tried a different approach. Surely, I told him, there must be something you have done which might prove interesting to your classmates. Some long-forgotten family skeleton, perhaps? To this he replied, "I don't doubt that, but I still think that you should write about somebody else."

Finally convinced of the fact that it was all proper and not at all demoralizing to the standards of journalism for him to be interviewed, Norman Klein graciously condescended to unravel for this column the interesting course of his young life.

Almost Named Woodrow

While the war clouds were hovering and bursting over most of the world, excitement reigned at 767 Monroe St., Brooklyn, for on December 28, 1915, the stork had decided to pay a visit to the Klein household and leave his calling card. An anxious discussion ensued as to what name should be chosen for this new addition. His parents thought of calling him Woodrow, after President Wilson, but just at the very mention of this name the infant gave vent to such boisterous signs of dislike that they decided to name him A. Norman Klein. Thus very early in life did this energetic senior make himself heard and his opinions heeded.

Reveals Secret

"What's the 'A' stand for, Norman?" I asked.

"It's very curious," he answered, laughingly, "but everyone seems to ask me that same question. For four years I have signed my name that way and have successfully kept the secret of my first initial from my classmates, but I guess that since I'm graduating soon, it won't hurt much to tell about it. As much as I hate to admit it, the initial sands for Albert. There, it's out at last.'

During the process of his childhood, the Klein family decided to move to Larchmont, New York, where Norman attended grammar school. When he had completed his course there, he enrolled in the Mamaroneck high school, because he was the "victim of overlapping governments," since the towns of Larchmont and Mamaroneck had incorporated themselves into one school district. It was here that he spent seven years. He explained this enigma by saying that he attended two years of junior high, four years of regular high school, and did one year of post-graduate work at the same place.

Sports Enthusiast

While at high school Norman developed a keen interest in sports, as a spectator, which he has fostered and kept up. He gave vent to his athletic inclinations by working himself up to the position of sports editor of the high school newspaper, which post he held for a period of two years. After he finished the post-graduate course at Mamaroneck, he decided to venture out into the business world and work. It wasn't until a year later that his thirst for higher learning led him to consider the idea of going to college.

When asked how it came about that he chose Villanova College to be his future alma mater, Norman characteristically replied: "Well, you see, it was this way. I had read some literature describing the place, and I was interested. I went to see a priest who had been at Villanova, but he told me that it had been so long since he had been there that he had forgotten all about how the place looked, so he advised me to come down here and see for myself. When I got here, I was encountered by Mr. Bannniller, then newly appointed registrar. He showed me around the college, and his sales talk was so enthusiastic and convincing that I guess I became sold on the idea of coming to school here right then and there."

Consistent Honor Student

Being somewhat business-minded, Norman Klein registered in the School of Commerce and Finance, majoring in marketing, where he has assiduously worked for four years and has achieved the enviable scholastic record of having been on the honor roll for the entire period of his college career up to this day.

Keeping up his high scholastic rating and working, he says, did not leave much time for extra-curricular activities. However, his record shows that Norman Klein has been rather active in his class affairs. He was a member of the Study Club and the Holy Name Society. Last year he was a prominent member of the blazier committee. He is also secretary-treasurer of the Student Council, as a result of a special election last year. Not bad for a person who hasn't much time!

Cites Success Formula

When asked if he, as an embryo business man, believed in following any special form for a successful career, he replied, "I believe that business men should not meddle in politics." He let it stay at that because he knew that his fame as a politician in Villanova had preceded him.

Since he doesn't believe in crossing bridges until he comes to them, Norman stated that his present will have been realized in June with the acquisition of his diploma. His most enjoyable year? Why, the freshman year, of course, he replied. "Boy, I'll never forget that year as long as I live." Taking an active part in the dorm "bull-sessions" has been his favorite pastime while at Villanova. Characteristically enough, he spends all his spare time, holidays, and vacations working. Chuckling, he confided that some of the funniest incidents in his life have happened to him while he was employed as a retail clerk in a store, where, as he so aptly puts it, "I sold everything from needles to under-pretties."

Goodman Graduates Jones: Deanna Durbin Studies Music at High School!

WITH trepidation in my heart and a profound admiration for my predecessor, Fred Waters, I am assuming the duties he so ably filled during his stay as a columnist. May he do as well in the outer world as he did as a member of the inner circle of the Villanovan.

FRED WATERS

Breaking away from the serious element your columnist has been informed that Deanna Durbin who pursues her high school studies under the supervision of a private tutor on the studio lot must take a course in elementary music appreciation under orders from the State Board of Education. Deanna could probably give the teacher a few pointers. We wonder if she will pass.

Benny Goodman, recently voted Number 1 Swing Band in the Down Beat poll, has given his approval to Harry James to leave his musical college. According to releases Goodman declared James is now able to conduct a band of his own and that he may follow Gene Krupa with the maestro's blessings. The King of Swing again entered the stately portals of Carnegie Hall on Saturday when he played the world premiere of a newly written classical duet. He is one of the few men who can boast of playing both Jazz and legitimate music in this New York spot.

PIX OF THE WEEK—(With apologies to my predecessor)

"The Duke of West Point" starring Joan Fontaine in the feminine lead and Louis Hayward and Tom Brown sharing the male roles. It may be viewed at Philadelphia's Aldine.

HOLLYWOOD TANTRUMS

With due apologies to the hurt dignities of those concerned this dastardly piece of snooping is released to the eagerly waiting (we hope) general public.

James Stewart has been attending rehearsals of the latest Earl Carroll show in Hollywood. We wonder why?

Lew Ayres is a proponent of the art of spelling words otherwise known as "word games" and has been unofficially proclaimed the champion of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio.

Groucho, Chico, and Harpo Marx all went different places for the holidays. The idea was to get rid of each other. Do you blame them?

Robert Young and Allen Jones were seen with hammers and saws building five new stalls at their Bell Air (no relation to the Villanova yearbook) stables. They should talk to Bing Crosby, perhaps they have worries in common, or maybe they win a race now and then.

ATTENTION ALL BLONDES:

Any blonde girl who possesses unbobbed hair may land a cinema job. She must be a "1939 streamlined model" and able to win the affections of Mickey Rooney. Truly a woman's sized job.

What do you think? That is the question so often placed before Paul Whiteman these days. When asked recently whom he considered George Gershwin's successor in modern music, he named Artie Shaw, Duke Ellington, Roy Bargy, Ferde Grofe, Raymond Scott, and Morton Gould as some of the outstanding men in line. When asked to rate the best among these men he declined and said "That's up to the public."

Larry Clinton, one of radio's foremost arrangers has been engaged at this occupation since he was 14 years old. During this time he has turned out 1500 orchestrations for many varied combinations. In the unique style that puts him in such popular demand. Although his musical ability is not top flite in instrumentalism he makes up for this deficiency with his sparkling stylings. Bea Wain also helps the band with her sweet renditions and easily rates the number 1 slot for feminine vocalists.

THINGS YOUR CORRESPONDENT HEARD:

Benny Goodman has won the Paramount band poll for the second straight year. Must get monotonous, Benny.

Eddie Cantor has advocated showing popular radio programs on road tours as the next development of radio. Good idea.

"The most glamorous stars do the most clowning." This is the statement of Bob Hope, Constance Bennett, Pat O'Brien and Joan Bennett did the most clowning. Pat O'Brien who worked all during the rehearsals on the script and added many good jokes ended up doing a buck and wing for the audience as a guest on Bob Hope's program.

ODDS and ENDS

CHRISTMAS is over once more and here we are with six new cities, an honorable discharge from the ranks of Mr. Farley's men in grey, and full of pep, vim and vigor.

A great many Villanovans returned with sore pedal extremities after giving their all in their local post offices. Buzz Howlett got a big kick out of being able to boss Dave DiFilippo around the loading platform at the 30th St. P. O.

Before he went home for the vacation Bill Gilligan got shaved in the campus tonsorial establishment. After several laughs by Charles tha Artiste, Bill overcame his usual timidity and asked for a razor with which to defend himself.

One of our more popular and prominent professors likes to tell a joke during his lectures if a suitable occasion for such joke arises. An occasion arose yesterday in one of his classes and the following is what happened:

Prof: (In the middle of a joke) "Have I ever told this joke in class before?"

Class: (in chorus) "Yes."

Prof: "Good, you'll probably understand it this time."

Bob Keeler when questioned in class about the impartiality of certain publications gave the following startling answer: "The only truly impartial publication I know of is the telephone book."

Those jam sessions being held of late in Austin and Fedigan really have the "hep-cats" and "rug-cutters" going. Ed Cogan can compete with Carmen Mastern on that guitar of his and "Doc" Panceri is our selection for a really hot clarinet.

While home I heard of an interesting sign which was posted in the administration building at one of our better colleges. It went something like this: "Reversible topcoat, for sale. Student forced by circumstances to sell roommate's coat to buy English books."

If a girl should ever ask Johnny Heck to dance he would be on HER feet in a second.

I wonder if Tommy Carbine has discovered yet that the airplane he was looking for in Economics class last Thursday was just a little humming bird in the last row.

When the professor asked Sam Monaco if the bell at the end of class distracted him Walt Nowak added this witty bit: "No, Prof., it just wakes him up!"

I thoroughly agree with Steve Alsenbrey on the subject of the beauty and charm of Baldwin, Long Island girls. They're super, Steve.

Well, as the firefly said: "Let's close this illuminating session." Paul Fitzmaurice adds these words of advise: "Hit the books, fellows; mid-years are only two weeks off."

HISTORY STUDY CLUB PROBES ITALIAN AND FRENCH RELATIONS

Foreign Policies Changed by Domestic Affairs of the Two States

LATE UNIFICATION CAUSE

"Current Relations between Italy and France," was the topic discussed by members of the History Seminar at the final meeting before the holidays, Thursday, December 13.

The group treated the various factors and elements which have in the past been the cause of estranged relations between these two powers, and also the bearing which these former factors have had on the situation as it exists today. It also took note that, since 1933, domestic developments in both Italy and France modified the enforcement of their conflicting foreign policies.

Particular emphasis was placed upon the fact that "belated Italian political liberation and national unification influence present problems." It is also important to remember that the reasons influencing the adoption of colonial expansion policies in Italy, at present, are essentially the same as they were in a former era when France and England undertook the task to develop colonies in fruitful territories.

Various students voiced their personal opinions concerning the respective positions of Italy and France.

For the next several weeks, the seminar will continue consideration of similar European problems. It will attempt to ascertain whether or not European nations will be successful in bringing about peaceful agreements and compromises instead of resorting to war.

During the second semester the problems associated with the enforcement of policies in the present Roosevelt administration will dominate discussion. Special attention will be paid to the Supreme Courts interpretation of the National Labor Relations Act, and to Congress's attitude concerning modifications of certain provisions of this labor statute.

ALUMNI, STUDENTS ATTEND CLUB DANCE

Wilkes-Barre Club Already Preparing for Easter Affair

Hotel Sterling in Wilkes-Barre provided the scene of the annual dance of the Wilkes-Barre Club during the Christmas holidays. Not only did the majority of the undergraduate members of the club attend this social event on December 26, but also quite a few of the alumni of that section.

Gilbert Noll, president of the organization wishes to thank all who contributed to the social and financial success of the affair either by their attendance or other means. To quote him: "The co-operation shown in this dance was really remarkable. My personal thanks to all who made it possible. However, as yet financial matters have not totally been cleared up. This should come in the near future after a meeting of the entire club."

In order to discuss this matter and other pertinent problems a general meeting of the club members has been called for Wednesday evening, January 11, This will get under way immediately after chapel services in a room which Noll will make known to the members shortly. The leading point of discussion will be the early preparations and committee appointments for the Easter dinner dance for the Wilkes-Barre Club members. All interested are requested to be present.

RUBIN EXPLAINS AMEBOID THEORY

The Theory of Ameboid Movement was the topic discussed and explained by Justin Rubin, science student, at the last meeting of the Research Seminar.

Rubin first discussed the various theories promulgated in the past, especially the Surface Tension Theory of Rhumbler, and then spoke on the theories of today.

Inter-Faith Group Is Promoting Aims Of Social Justice

Thirty Colleges Representing Catholics, Jews and Protestants Attend Conference

The creation of inter-faith groups on every college campus to promote the principles of democracy, achieve social justice and eliminate religious and racial prejudice, was urged by delegates from 29 colleges and univresities in the East at a three-day conference at Drew University, Madison, N. J., which closed Friday, December 30. The conference was held under the auspices of the National Conference of Christians and Jews with hearquarters at 300 Fourth Ave., New York City.

It was agreed by the delegates that all groups of students could work together for social justice, that in proportion that social justice is achieved, Communism need not be feared, and that Fascism is always the result of a fear of Communism.

During the conference, the delegates visited the Jewish Center in Morristown, N. J., where Rabbi Leo J. Young, of New York City, explained to them the meaning of Jewish symbolism and the fundamental aims and beliefs of Judaism. The group then went to St. Vincent's Roman Catholic Church in Madison, N. J., to hear Father C. B. Haag explain the meaning of the Mass and the ritual of the Roman Catholic Church. The visitation program was concluded in Grace Episcopal Church in Madison, where the Rev. Victor Mori, the Rector, spoke on the meaning and history of Protestantism.

Delegates to Read Papers on Aspects of Pump-Priming

Another of the popular "Town Hall" form of discussions will be sponsored by Rosemont College during February on a topic not yet determined. Villanova and St. Joseph's College have already sponsored discussions on Reciprocal Tariffs and The Munich Pact respectively.

When Manhattan College visits Villanova, Beta Gamma intends to convert that debate into a "Town Hall." Invitations for delegates will be sent to Swarthmore, St. Joseph's, Pennsylvania, Temple, Drexel Institute, Haverford and La Salle. This "Town Meeting" will be used as a means of synthesizing the views of the various debate clubs on the present national debate topic — "Pump Priming." Papers by the delegates on the economic, political, and social aspects of the problem will be read and the separate aspects treated individually in the discussion.

This afternoon the students will begin preparations for discussing the current topic. On Tuesday the economic aspect will be prepared, on Thursday the social aspect, and next Tuesday, the seventeenth, the political side of the subject. Thursday, January 19, the round table form of discussion will be used.

The Suspense was Awful!

It was a pretty sad week-end at first with exam grades being given out back at college and no one knowing the results. But Archie stepped right up with that amazing intelligence of his. He simply turned to the telephone, called the school and soon had the facts for us. It was good news for all, so then the fun began!

Smart college people seldom stay uncertain. They let the telephone relieve their minds—quickly, easily, inexpensively.

Paced by Wilba Kautz and Mike Novak Loyola's undefeated Ramblers trimmed Villanova's Wildcats 52-31 before a 5500 capacity throng at the 132d Armory in Chicago last night. Both Kautz and Novak had 15 points. The former rang up five field goals and five fou's for his total while Novak made 11 out of 13 free throws and two baskets for his points.

Villanova played a rough game, committing 23 personal fouls and three technicals Lanky Jim Montgomery led the locals in scoring by garnering 11 markers, but he could not cope with the 6-foot-9-inch frame of the Ramblers' Novak.

It was obvious from the start that the Loyola club would win. They scored first and were never headed.

UNDEFEATED SOPHS LEAD FRAT LEAGUE

Freshmen Take Second Place as Upperclass Teams Fall

Because the Juniors forfeited their game to the Freshmen, only one game was played in the Phi Kappa Pi League this week. In that the Sophomores gave the Seniors a 44-15 spanking. Tony Scelba, Sophomore ace, made more points himself than the entire Senior team could muster.

Scelba's mark was 20 points, while Abbott and Dalina contributed 10 and eight respectively and Delehanty added the remaining six. Jack Dunigan paced the losers with seven points; Hal Murphy got four, and Frank Mozzi and Jim Carroll made two each.

This victory leaves the Sophs undefeated and in first place. The Frosh, Seniors and Juniors follow in that order.

The lowly Juniors are not living up to expectations. Supposed at first to be the class of the league, they have not yet managed to eke out a win. When, in the

BOXING TEAM GOES TO WASHINGTON TO TANGLE WITH CARDS

Five Veterans Head Strong Team Seeking to Settle Old Score

Villanova's leather slingers will attempt to square an old account when they meet the Cardinals of Catholic University at Washington on Saturday evening, Jan. 14.

Last year, in their initial meeting, leather flew thick and fast with the Capitol City lads coming out on top 6-2. But many were of the opinion that the locals deserved a little more consideration on the decisions. Several Washington dailies also expressed this thought.

But this is a new season and new things are expected. Boxing is the major winter sport at C. U. and each meet draws about five thousand fans. The Washingtonians have a veteran squad which includes Bernstein, Guinan, Bunsa, and several newcomers.

There may be a few who do not know it; so we will mention the fact that "Duke" Duzminski was hurt in the last minute of play in the Baltimore game. The "Duke" hurt his leg and on last reports it was just out of the cast.

—V—

They tell us that the game with Illinois was a honey. The loss is attributed to the absence of Duzminski and the fact that Villanova played a defensive game. The boys did not take enough shots.

PHIL DUNN

The fellows really should not be afraid to shoot. The team so far (in the first seven games) has made 114 out of 361 shots for a percentage of .316. That is very high. Perhaps they were trying to keep it up there against Illinois and would not throw them up.

—V—

Speaking of basketball percentages we might as well tell you that Lou Dubino has the highest on the squal, .450. Duzminski has taken the most shots, 71, and has a .324 average. Montgomery, Lazorchak, and Vigilante make one out of every three, while Rice and Krutulis average .308 and .267 respectively.

We noticed in one of the papers that over 500 people attended a testimonial dinner tendered Coach Andy Stopper and his undefeated North End Collegians, winners of the Greater Reading Amateur Football Conference championship, at Reading (Pa.) on Dec. 17. The guest speaker? Why "Clipper" Smith, of course.

"Clipper" also gave a talk at the annual convention of the National Football Coaches Association at Chicago. Mr. Smith's topic was "Defenses for Spinners, Reverses, and Traps."

Varsity Meets Haverford As Alumni Takes Murals

Captain Duffy, Nojanus and Kirk Lead Assault on A. C. Team; DiPetrillo, Melagrana and Brennan Win Outstanding Intramural Battles

PISCIONE AND BUSHEK GIVE BEST SHOW

In a card that contained 16 matches Alumni Hall walked off with Intramural boxing championship and the Villanova Varsity Boxing team met Haverford A. C. in no-decision exhibition bouts in the Main Liners' Field House last night. The varsity boxers to take part in the show included Captain Billy Duffy who engaged in a tough battle with Tom Higgins, Amateur Silver Glove boxing champ, in the final bout of the evening.

The first event of the program was a wrestling exhibition between Ed Cruse and George Bourus which ended in a draw. Next two 145 pounders took the spotlight and the result was a win for Nat DiPetrillo over Ed Walsh, both boys being Mendelites. Al Holl met and defeated Ed Larkin in the next bout—both men weighing 135 and wearing Day-Hop colors. Frank Melograna, Fedigan, was the next winner. He won from Ed Kauffman, a Day-Hop, in one of the evening's best bouts.

A varsity member, Mike Arnano, then fought Dan Murray of Haverford in an exhibition. This was followed by a draw between Lozowski and Galysh, both of Alumni, and then came the bout of the evening. In this Bill Piscione mixed it up with John Bushek. The referee, Bryan Hayes, did not even try to stop the shouting during this event. Rumored as a grudge fight, it was quite a battle and in the end it was declared a draw, to the displeasure of some of the fans

Alumni's Buzz Mowen and Austin's Jack Brennan defeated Werner and Schreck, both from Mendel in the next two matches; then after Gerry Lynam sparred with McLamney, of Haverford, another wrestling event went on. This was a comedy match and ended when Dave DiFilippo and Tony Anderson

Swarthmore, U. of P., F. & M., Fordham, St. Francis and Rider are yet to be met, and most—if not all—of these schools have very good swimming teams. Dr. Flocco, swimming coach, is looking toward a very successful season, however, because he has good material and enough of it.

Villanova's Freshman basketball quintet annexed their fourth consecutive victory of the season by defeating the Germantown Highlanders squad 21-15, in the Main Line field house.

Leading by a slight margin throughout the game, and holding a 13-7 advantage at half time, the Blue coasted into victory with little trouble. Although the Germantown lad offered the best home competition that the Frosh have so far encountered they too were victims of the "winning ways" of the Blue and fell beneath their vengence, landing on the short end of a defensive score.

HISTORY STUDY CLUB PROBES ITALIAN AND FRENCH RELATIONS

Foreign Policies Changed by Domestic Affairs of the Two States

LATE UNIFICATION CAUSE

"Current Relations between Italy and France," was the topic discussed by members of the History Seminar at the final meeting before the holidays, Thursday, December 13.

The group treated the various factors and elements which have in the last years the cause of estrangement and tension between these two powers, and also the bearing which these former factors have had on the situation as it exists today. It also took note that, since 1933, domestic developments in both Italy and France modified the enforcement of their conflicting foreign policies.

Particular emphasis was placed upon the fact that "belated Italian political liberation and national unification influence present problems." It is also important to remember that the reasons influencing the adoption of colonial expansion policies in Italy, at present, are essentially the same as they were in a former era when France and England undertook the task to develop colonies in fruitful territories.

Various students voiced their personal opinions concerning the respective positions of Italy and France.

For the next several weeks, the seminar will continue consideration of certain European problems. It will attempt to a certain whether or not European nation will be successful in bringing about peaceful agreements and compromises instead of resorting to war.

During the second semester the problems associated with the enforcement of policies in the present Roosevelt administration will dominate discussion. Special attention will be paid to the Supreme Courts interpretation of the National Labor Relations Act, and to Congress attitude concerning modification of certain provisions of this labor statute.

Business Five Bests Day-Hops In Reopener

Gigolos Swamp Austinites; Greenies Lose To Mendel

McGurk, Sandor and Crumb Pace Their Respective Teams to Victories in Opening Contests of Second Half

WHITES LOOM AS THREAT TO LEADERS

Intramural basketeers lost no time in getting the second half season started. On Thursday afternoon the C. & F. Day-Hops met and defeated their commuting rivals from Mendel, and in the evening Fedigan and the Mendel Residents won from Austin and Alumni.

The C. & F. outfit, a definite threat to the other teams who expect to lead the league this half, soundly trounced their opponents by a score of 32-25. McGurk led the Businessmen in scoring by bucketing six field goals and two fouls for 14 points. "Mac" is a veteran from last year who was too taken up with 150-lb. football to help the Business five in the first half. His addition to the squad should be a big help to the Whites.

Dan Keating again topped the Mendel scorers. His total of 11 points was not approached by any of his teammates.

Sandor Paces Champions

Vic Sandor, the only small man on the Fedigan team, led his crew to a 28-14 win over the Austinites. Vic was the only Gigolo who is much under six feet tall, but the little fellow made six of the champions' points while Murphy, Hart, and Carroll each garnered four.

On the Austin side Gerry Cassidy was the only man to chalk up more than one basket. He made two.

In the week's final game, the best of the three, the Penthousers came out to top the Greenies by a scant two-point margin. Thirty-five to thirty-three was the final score of a hectic battle, which saw the eventual winners come from behind after trailing at the half.

For the Mendelites' Bernie Crumb supplied 11 markers to lead both teams. "Buzz" Mowen's nine points were enough to top the Alumni scorers, but not enough to change the tide of battle.

Today more hot contests are scheduled for the old gym when C. & F. will meet Austin, Fedigan plays the Mendel Residents, and Alumni engages the Day-Hops.

Kelley

most the same score. Walter Kelley and Charlie Barret each contributed eight points to the 'Cats' total, and both put forth their efforts in the 440-yard free style relay that clinched the meet for Villanova. This relay was the last event on the program and had it been won by Delaware the contest would have been a tie.

Ed Leahy, Charlie Timmins and Moore helped the Villanova cause with wins and Captain Bill Bailey added four points by placing in two events. Maher and Burns made one point each.

For the Delaware lads Monihan gave a good account of himself by winning the 220 and 440 free style races. In the 220-yard event he established a new Delaware record of 2:25.6. Walter Kelley, Villanova flash, set a new pool record when he swam 100 yards in 55.2 seconds in a free-style contest.

The first event on the program was a 300-yard medley relay, D. U. won it and jumped to a five-point lead. After Monihan won the 220, they led by six points. In the 50-yard free style race Barret and Burns finished first and third to make the score 13-10. Timmins won the diving, Kelley set his record, Leahy took the backstroke, and Moore won the breaststroke to give the 'Cats a sweep of the next four events and pull the count up to 34-24 in favor of the Blue.

Monihan then took the 440 and before the last race the score was 37-30. Since seven points go to the winner of the last event—the 440-yard free style relay — D U. was in a position to tie the meet. But the combined efforts of Burns, Phoieric, Barret and Kelley were too much for the Newark boys and Villanova came home with their first victory.

Jimmy Mulroy in the 118 pound class and came out a close winner. Tex Guinan topped Mike Ariana in a slow bout. Bunsa, former Staunton Military ace, was out last year with injuries, but reports indicate he is back in top shape again.

Villanova, on the other hand, has its strongest team in history. Led by Captain Billy Duffy, who has only tasted defeat once in college encounters, and backed up by men like Mentzinger, Kirk, Nojunas, and Ariano, they inspire Blue and White followers to look for the most successful boxing season in history.

Coach Ray Gadsby has not selected his complete squad, but the night of January 14th will probably see the following don mittens:

Buzz Mowen, making his first boxing appearance, will start the festivities in the 118 class, probably against Bernstein.

Mike Ariano will attempt to settle things with Guinan in the 125 class. Mike has a strong left which has improved.

Eddie Kirk, who last year was on the injured list with a case of appendicitis, should return to his old form in the 135 lb. weight. Kirk, a fast and classy scrapper, had a successful season in '37 and hopes to continue in this category.

Captain Bill Duffy, as usual, will handle the 145 division. Duffy spent the Xmas vacation down South and feels this rest was all he needed for a successful start.

Bob Mentzinger, of the famous left hand, will handle the mittens in the 155 class.

Johnny Nojunas, slugging gridman who last year was successful against Fred Stant of the Cardinals in the 175 division, looks for a repeat in this weight.

Jerry Lynam, a newcomer who created a mild furore in workouts with his hard punching power, will probably tangle in the 165 class.

Heavyweight Unknown

The heavyweight division representative is still undecided with several candidates listed. Coach Gadsby is still trying to interest Paul Stenn, huge freshman tackle, and Ed Killian, who handled the division last year, in the possibilities of leather slinging.

The local team along with Coach Ray Gadsby and Manager Joe Pagano will embark for the Nation's headquarters on Friday. Several carloads of students intend to accompany the team.

Varsity

rammed heads and knocked each other out.

Following this the varsity put on their remaining four bouts. Bob Mentzinger and Jim Boyle, the latter a visitor, lasted two rounds and was called when Boyle developed a cut over the eye. Ed Kirk gave Jim Gallagher a terrific beating at the end of the second round and kept it up in the third in a good show.

John Nojanus stopped Joe "Red" Fenney in the next to last bout. Nojanus showed plenty of form in this fight and would have easily earned a decision had one been given. Then came the final bout. Duffy put on a spurt in the third round which looked good and sent the fans away contented.

The intramural score read: Alumni 11, Mendel 7, Austin 6, Fedigan 6, and Day-Hops 5.

Dickinson

who have been gaining momentum as the season progresses.

Early season losses were attributed to inexperience, which was probably the case for the Devils have improved tremendously in their last few games. This is shown by the fact that they performed so well against Rutgers Friday night.

At least four, and perhaps all, of the members of the line-up Dickinson starts against Villanova on Friday will be sophomores. Last year the Carlisle lads had a remarkable freshman team; and since these boys outshine the men who have been held over, there is a strong possibility that last season's frosh quintet will start against the Wildcats.

Probable Line-up

Dick Fox and John "Soup" Campbell, both sophs, are scheduled to handle the forward assignments. The latter—one of the nicest players Carlisle has seen—could not play in the early games because of an attack of mumps; but he is now fully recovered and his return to the team has strengthened D-son no end. Both men are deadly with their shots.

Coach MacAndrews has changed his guards from time to time, and it is hard to say just whom he will start at these posts. Bill Kerfoot, however, is reasonably certain to get the call. His running mate will most likely be chosen from the following: Don Geesey, Dick Wagner, or Dean Fencil, sophomores, and Howard Williams, a letterman.

Bernie Keating, also a sophomore, will start at center. Keating may be remembered as the boy who pitched against the Cat baseball team last year. Reports indicate that he is as good on the court as on the diamond.

first game of the season, they were beaten by the Senior team, the Seniors were figured as the "dark horse" and much was expected of them. But they also have fallen by the wayside.

This year there will be more games played in the Phi Kappa Pi League than there were in past years. Instead of only two rounds of play there will will be three. In other words each team will meet each other club three times before a winner is decided.

Since the crown last year was taken by the men who were then seniors ,there is no defending champion this year. All games are played on Saturday afternoons in the old gym.

United Press Selects Wildcat Team And Players As Outstanding In '38

Grid Combination Named One of Two Great Teams in Eastern Pa.; Wysocki and Basca Cited For Performances

A sports review of 1938, conducted recently by the United Press showed Villanova to be the most formidable college in eastern Pennsylvania athletics.

The outstanding teams of the past year, according to the survey, were Temple University's basketball team and Villanova's gridiron aggregation. It is interesting to note that Temple's basketeers were victims of the Villanova five, thus giving the Wildcats the edge in both sports.

Wysocki and Basca Mentioned

Johnny Wysocki, Villanova's much-honored left end, was selected as one of the outstanding individual performers of the hectic 1938 era. Don Shields, Temple's lanky basketball forward, and Penn's Walt Shinn, captain of the Quaker's football machine, were also rated as outstanding in the poll.

As the most promising athlete for 1939, based on 1938 performances the experts selected the Wildcat's sensational sophomore halfback, Nick Basca. According to the United Press, next season's Villanova football eleven has nothing to fear for they were picked as the most promising team of 1939.

The United Press heaped praise upon the brows of Johnny Wysocki and Nick Basca individually and the Villanova football team as a whole. Long John was singled out for his achievement in making All-American ranking for the second successive year, a rare occurrence.

Basca's passing and general all-around football ability earned him the "most promising for 1939" sobriquet. Oscar Fraley, renowned staff correspondent of the United Press, hailed Nick as a future All-American back.

Outlook Good

Villanova's 1939 footballers are slated to keep up the great record of their recent predecessors. As the U. P. dispatch states: "A host of returning veterans and the retention of "Clipper" Smith as coach promises much with an improved schedule."

Don Shields, who starred for the Owls even in defeat last year, was given considerable mention for his brilliance as an individual athlete. When the Temple men lost to Villanova last Winter, Shields proved his ability and "heart" with a sterling exhibition while his team was being outclassed by a superior band of Wildcat courtmen.

With Basca as "most promising" individually and "Clipper" Smith's gridders as the "most promising" team it appears to be a "Happy New Year" on the Main Line.

In the Sportlight

By BOB FUNABASHI

It was raining that day in Johnstown, Pennsylvania; not too hard but one of those showers which April plays host to each year. Down on Main street, a vivacious little lad opened his eyes for the first time and then settled down for a restful sleep. Twenty-three years have passed now and instead of a little freckled-face lad, we find amidst us ,a tall and rangy fellow, standing some 6 ft. 2 in. and weighing close to 180 lbs.

Sport fans, meet James Cameron Montgomery, the sharp-shooting center of the Villanova basketball quintet. Indeed this lad from the Buckeye state, to which he moved, is quite a deadshot on the offense. Last year he ranked well-up in scoring in the East and placed himself in second position for scoring in the Philadelphia district. He tallied 268 points while his teammate, Duzminski led the entire field with 296 points in the collegiate scoring-race.

Liked on Coast

This alert Austinite was quite a sensation during his school days, which were covered in many parts of the United States. From Pennsylvania, he moved to Ohio, across country to California and back and settled down from his wanderlust in Cleveland, Ohio. The fans on the West coast saw a real treat in Jim and as a flashy forward he made All-Southern California for high schools. Coming back to Ohio, he enrolled as a Junior in Ravenna High School and carried away the honors of belonging to the All-City team.

Basketball scouts immediately seized the chance to grab a new "find" and as soon as Jim received his diploma, he was a hunted man. The University of Michigan and Ohio University, along with our Alma Mater offered his lad scholarships to their havens, but Jim gifted his prowess to the Blue and White.

As a sophomore, he broke into the starting line-up and since then he has been absent from only one game, that being the Albright game of this year. Jim was confined to bed with the grippe and his bulwark on the defense was missed. The name of Montgomery started to buzz from ear to ear of sports writers and at the close of the second year his name stood out as the sensational sophomore of the Main Line.

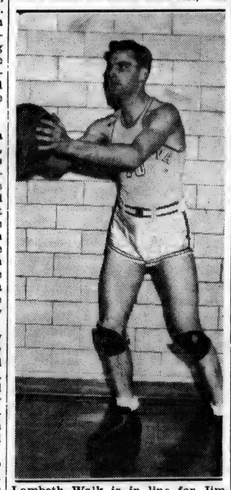
All-America Brother

At last the name of Montgomery was being carried to the spotlight again typical of the glory that another member of the family had once received. His brother Lindsay was chosen by sports writers from all over the country as their choice of All-America guard at Geneva College. That was when Jim was in high school and so his brother's calibre on the courts, inspired Jim to play like him, and carry on the family prestige.

Jim is the altruistic type who realizes all play and no work does not work out so well. So a business career is being fashioned out down at the Commerce and Finance school. "Opportunity is knocking," so Jim says; and he is not wasting any time about the future. A slight case of Corporation Finance seems to be the favorite subject of this agile athlete and Prof. Dougherty seems to be the lucky teacher to have this worthy scholar.

Dances to Relax

Every once and a while people wonder what the athletes do for relaxation from their strenuous sports. It seems that Jim should give his weary feet a rest from running around for four months, but no, Jim has to get his relaxation from dancing. Since Artie Shaw heads his dance band list, the Lambeth Walk is in line for Jim to try out. Yes sir, it's the "Flat Foot Floogie with the Floy Floy," for Jim Montgomery, when he's out to take a fling.



Back home at Cleveland is the faithful heart throb whom Jim remains true to at school. Rosemont, Immaculata, Baldwin and Harcum are just namesto Jim; just another name on the map of Pennsylvania. In the way of extra-curricular activities Jim is very shy. His time is too devoted to his game of basketball and his studies.

There's a gypsy in Jim's soul, sure as you're born, for he is one who has been all over the United States, North, South, East and West; Montgomery knows about them all. Perhaps he will become an author writing on his travels and adventures.

Pro offers from the West coast seem to have Jim tied up when he graduates, but he might forget them and stick to a business profession.

Frosh

was hapless Perth Amboy. The Philadelphia Business School, although offering stiff competition throughout the game was downed by the score of 38-30. The Germantown crew then visted the field house and were tamed by a 21-15 count.

The opener, which was the only loss, has aided the freshmen in gathering experience. Their record which is an eample of progressiveness is a credit to Coach Severance and to the boys themselves.

For the surprise of the year the yearlings offer their star forward, Dick Gray. This lad's constantly fine play on both offense and defense make him "varsity timber No 1" for next year.

Gerland, the lanky eagle - eyed center of the first year lads, is an expert on set shots and plays a remarkably fine floor game for his side. Parpan Tamerro, and Stakem round out the Freshman starting five; but from the first practice session they have been pressed for their positions by Finan and Laskey.

Now several other players, late additions to the squad and all of them football men, are challenging the regulars from starting berths. Chief among these are Worthington and Famalette. The former was the star of the game against Germantown — the first either of them played—and the latter was a member of last year's Hazelton five which won the State championship.

Basketball Sidelights

By LOU DUBINO

Villanova College seems to have a monopoly on basketball players from John Adams High School in Ozone Park, New York. No less than five basketball players and one basketball manager are listed as students of Villanova and are participating in this sport.

Long Island University seems to be the outstanding team in the Eastern area. She can lay claim to this on her past performances which total to nine victories. Among her victims were the highly-publicized Trojan team from California and the Wildcats from Kentucky University. To be found on the Long Island University squad is one "Tiny" Largenberg, understudy to Hillhouse. Largenberg was a member of the 1936-37 freshmen basketball squad here at Villanova.

Orchids to Jim Montgomery for the fine performance he gave in holding Dehner, record - breaking center for the Illinois U. team. Two nights before the Villanova encounter Dehner scored ten field goals and five fouls for the record-breaking total of 25 points against Manhattan College. In the game against Villanova he registered three field goals and one foul for the small total of seven points.

Paul Nugent, ambitious substitute forward, did more than his share in scoring seven points in the short time he remained in the game. It only brings out the fact that a substitute is more than a "Sub," and the only reason he is sitting on the bench is because only five men can play at one time.

Villanova seems to get more than its share in record-breaking performers. Kraut, star forward of the Loyola University (Chicago) team has scored 101 points in the first four games he played.

After performing so impressively against Temple in Philadelphia, the Southern California Trojans were a disappointing band of basketball players against Long Island University. Sport writers immediately investigated the doings of the team and found that they had spent some of their time visiting the different night spots in New York City. One excuse is as good as another — perhaps it is against the principles of basketball to have an off-night.

HERE and THERE

By HARRY MAZZEI

HARRY MAZZEI signed to a Boston College contract. This would be a sad blow indeed if it were true, but on good authority you may relax your furrowed brows for the rumors are just pleasant "pipe dreams" caused by constant thinking about a certain figure — that figure being M. J. "Clipper" Smith

Those of you who have been worried by the "Clipper's" absence from his usual campus haunt, the gym may be interested to know that he is at present touring the hinterlands where he has been "barking for his biscuits" i. e. making after-dinner speeches. In probability Mr. Smith will be one of us when this issue goes to press.

Glancing through the Philadelphia Catholic Standard and Times, yours truly came across the last "all"-team of the year (we hope). It was the All-Catholic team picked by Paddy Driscoll, Marquette University grid coach, whose team, according to the latest reports, will meet Villanova in Chicago next Fall.

The only Blue and White stars to be honored were Johnny Wysocki and Andy Chisick. Wysocki was chosen as a first team end for the second year in a row, while Chisick, who has received all too little favorable comment this year, garnered an honorable inention. It seems strange that only two members of the Wildcats' star-studed aggregation were signally honored. Wonder what caused Paddy to overlook some of the other boys?

Wysocki, incidentally, has just returned from San Francisco where he spent New Year's Day (th. one the working people celebrated) pounding the greensward of Kezar Stadium. If any or you are still unaware of the fact, "Wy" played with the All-East team against the All-West contingent in the annual Shriners' Charity tussle.

Still on the subject of football, the date for the gridders' yearly banquet has finally been set. January 18 is the big night, with the affair being held at the Bellevue-Stratford —as usual. The delay in setting the date was caused by the Bowl offers the 'Cats were expected to receive. The alumni refrained from arranging the date until the Main Liners definitely announced they would not play any post - season games. By that time the suitable dates were filled, and the Alumni were forced to wait until this removed evening.

After returning from their Chicago trip, the basketeers will have a comparatively easy time until the exams are terminated. Until then only four games will be contested; two at home and two at Convention Hall

Unfortunately the Temple game comes on the 27th of this month, the 27th being the end of exam week. Which means that the boys will be suffering from multiple strains and may not be able to rise to last year's heights against the Owls. Then again the relief at being finished with the dreaded affairs may be so great that they will blast the Cherry and White out of the hall. Time will tell.

ENGINEER PRESENTS PAPER TO SOCIETY AT INITIAL MEETING

Determinents Discussed in Organization Composed Entirely of Freshmen

The Mathematics Club, newest organization on the campus, met yesterday at 1:00 P. M. in Room 207, Mendel. The members were addressed by Thomas Junker, who read the paper on "Determinants."

President Paul E. Brown presided, and in the business session preceding Junkers talk he presented for discussion a draft of a constitution which he and a committee were drawing up. This committee is made up of the club's other newly-elected officers: Vincent J. Gordon, vice president; Edmund J. Hagan, secretary, and Joseph Dorsey, treasurer.

This club has been organized recently by Mr. Emil Amelotti, and is composed of Freshmen Engineers with A's or B's in mathematics. At present it has fifteen members, and this number is not likely to be increased, but later on associate membership for those who haven't the necessary grade may be arranged.

Junker's paper was the first of a series scheduled to be presented by members, most of whom are already working on various subjects. These papers will deal with various phases of mathematics not covered in the regular course, and later on outside speakers will be invited to present even more advanced work.

The present policy of freshman membership only will be held to this year, but it is planned to have the club grow with the Class of '42, so in time it will have members from all four classes.

Austin Displays Varied Talent In Amateur Nite Win

Comedy, Drama, Music Featured in Gala Intra-Mural Show

At the annual amateur night performance of the Villanova College student body, Austin Hall was victorious by virtue of a first-class show featuring a band and several other varied acts. Second in line at the affair was Fedigan Hall who gave Austin some fine competition.

This year's amateur night is the second in the history of the college and was attended with great success. Many laughs were attained together with an unexpected display of talent. This annual affair is fast becoming one of the eagerly awaited for events on the intramural schedule.

Thomas A. Daly, Philadelphia Poet Recalls Life History In Interview

By JOHN J. HARRINGTON

More than fifty years ago a boy's mind was being formed on this campus under the influence of a beautiful natural environment and an intensive love of reading. Already he was contributing to "Golden Days," a Philadelphia children's paper. There was no publication at Villanova then.

Tom Daly has been writing ever since — at present a sprightly "Rhymes and Ripples" column thrice weekly for the "Philadelphia Bulletin."

Although his humorous, especially dialect, poems are the most popular, yet, like the comedian playing Hamlet, he told me his personal favorite is of a serious nature, the "Ode to a Thrush."

He also related the origin of the Macaroni Ballads. "At the American Press Humorists' Convention 30 years ago at the St. Louis World's Fair, I was called on to give a spech and the only thing I could think of was an old Italian baseball story I had told before. It made a hit, and I had to tell it everywhere I went. I grew tired of it so after a while I began to write ballads on it. I had worked among Italians for a long time as a reporter, and I knew their dialect pretty well."

He picks as the outstanding modern American humorists Franklin P. Adams, Christopher Morley, H. I. Phillips, and Don Marquis.

As a student he slept on the upper floor of Alumni Hall for seven years in the northwest dormitory. Between that and the southwest dormitory was the wardrobe where one might get out a clean shirt on Saturday. He doesn't know why his locker number was 84, because there weren't that many fellows in the school.

Thomas Augustine Daly was born May 28, 1871. He entered Villanova College at nine. After seven years he went to Fordham University, where he was an editor of the "Fordham Monthly." Owing to his father's illness, he was forced to leave when he had completed only two years. Later they presented him with an honorary A. M., and, still later, the same institution awarded him an Litt.D. Notre Dame in 1917 gave him an LL.D., and Boston College in 1921 gave him another LL.D. For seventeen years he was general manager of the Catholic Standard and Times.

DR. DRESSLER, M. S. NOTED OSTEOPATH SPEAKS TO SEMINAR

Success and Its Attainment Topic of Discourse to Science Students

Success and the laws governing it was the topic of the discourse of Dr. Dressler, D. O., M. Sc., to the junior and senior class at the meeting of the Science Seminar last Thursday morning.

Among the various conditions essential for success, Dr. Dressler emphasized the proper choice of a career, and the careful consideration of its suitability for the particular individual. He advocated the performance of ordinary duties extraordinarily well for the attainment of success.

He stated his preference for medical schools situated in large communities, due to the advantage of abundant clinical material. The doctor impressed his listeners with the value of time, and advised its conservation.

In conclusion, he briefly defined the differences between the training of alipathic and osteopathic physicians. He was inclined to believe that the osteopath had the advantage of the knowledge of a perfected system of body manipulation.

Mr. Schacterle, director of Admissions at the Phila. College of Osteopathy, in presenting the speaker of the day, spoke a few words of introduction. He impressively remarked that he was envious of the American students' privilege of being able to receive an unconstrained and impartial education.

Both gentlemen are eminent educators from the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy.

ENGINEERS TO VISIT MACHINE COMPANIES

Uses of Diesel Power Related by A.S.M.E. Representative

Trips to plants of the Sellers' Machine Companies, have been arranged by the Villanova branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Raymond MacGregor, president, announced today. These trips will take place after the mid-year examinations. MacGregor said that last year's trip to the Arsenal was so successful it was decided to repeat it this year.

On January 12 a lecture was given by Mr. Harte Cooke, vice president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. Mr. Barber, the faculty advisor, arranged for this engagement. Mr. Cooke gave a talk on "Diesel Power Plants, Diesel Locomotives and Diesel Marine Engines."

A regular business meeting was held by the society January 11. Membership pins and magazines were distributed to those members who joined within the last few months.

Mr. Barber is arranging with the Combustion Engineering Company for motion pictures of power plant equipment. The society recently registered with the General Motors Public Relations Division to obtain films lent by that company.

The next issue of the VILLANOVAN will not be published until the 14th of February. The long period between these last two issues is due to the mid year examinations and the annual retreat. All staff members are requested to seek their assignments as soon as the examinations are over.

Cierkowski, Kunberger, Gaston, Wilson, and Seelaus Also Receive Positions

Joseph A .Gallagher, and Clement Dinon, were appointed to assume the duties of co-editors of the "Villanova Engineer" one month before the customary time, as Joseph Quinn was forced to undergo an emergency operation during the recent vacation. Gallagher and Dinon are junior civil engineering students, and have had extensive experience on the college publications.

STUDENTS PREPARE LITERARY MATERIAL

Delate, Calabro, Harrington, D'Angelo, Castles, and Bongiovanni Among Contributors

With the necessary approval of the school administration lacking, plans for the proposed literary magazine are nearing completion, it was revealed today.

Various students have been approached and asked to make contributions. Thomas Delate, senior in the School of Arts and Philosophy, has promised to write an article entitled "Newman the Philosopher." Pershing Calabro also a senior in the School of Arts and Philosophy, is writing an article on Hypatia. Calabro has done some original research on this subject.

John J. Harrington, a junior in the same school, is writing an article deliniating an example of the transfer of training. As yet the exact title has not been determined. Andrea D'Angelo, sophomore in the School of Education, has written a sonnet on music. Frank Castles, senior in the School of Arts and Philosophy, has also submitted a few poems. Castles is working on a Short- Story.

Joseph N. Bongiovanni, junior artsman, who is a member of the committe backing the proposed publication, said, "As yet no students from the Commerce and Finance School have offered to co-operate. Perhaps this is because they have not heard about our plans. We earnestly invite students from this school to join us in promoting this magazine."

SIMPSON HALL

Above picture shows view of Simpson Hall, recently donated to Villanova College by William Simpson, trustee. The newly acquired buildings will be ready next month and will be used by various student seminars. The Hall consists of a three-story 20-room residence, and a garage with living quarters in upper floor.

GALLAGHER, DINON NEW CO-EDITORS OF ENGINEER MAGAZINE

Appointments Month Earlier Owing to Predecessor's Recent Illness

NEW EDITORS PLANNING LARGE EDITORIAL STAFF

Cierkowski, Kunberger, Gaston, Wilson, and Seelaus Also Receive Positions

Joseph A .Gallagher, and Clement Dinon, were appointed to assume the duties of co-editors of the "Villanova Engineer" one month before the customary time, as Joseph Quinn was forced to undergo an emergency operation during the recent vacation. Gallagher and Dinon are junior civil engineering students, and have had extensive experience on the college publications.

Several new appointments have been made to the staff with the approval of the moderator, Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A. Those appointed include Edward Cierkowski, a junior chemical engineer, as business manager; Harry Kunberger, a junior chemical engineer, assistant business manager, Melchor W. Gaston, a junior civil engineer, and George Wilson, a junior electrical engineer, as associate editors; Edmond Hagan, a freshman chemical engineer, as copy editor, and John Seelaus, a junior mechanical engineer, was appointed circulation manager. Seelaus held the same position on last year's staff.

"The new editor's have expressed the intention of appointing a fairly large editorial staff from the freshmen, sophomore, and junior classes. The underclass men of last year's staff will very likely continue in their respective positions.

In the January issue, which will be distributed soon, the feature article will be a non-technical essay on the importance of economics to the engineer, by Professor John A. Onkey.

STUDENTS PREPARE LITERARY MATERIAL

Delate, Calabro, Harrington, D'Angelo, Castles, and Bongiovanni Among Contributors

With the necessary approval of the school administration looking, plans for the proposed literary magazine are nearing completion, it was revealed today.

Various students have been approached and asked to make contributions. Thomas Delate, senior in the School of Arts and Philosophy, has promised to write an article entitled "Newman the Philosopher." Pershing Calabro also a senior in the School of Arts and Philosophy, is writing an article on Hypatia. Calabro has done some original research on this subject.

John J. Harrington, a junior in the same school, is writing an article delinating an example of the transfer of training. As yet the exact title has not been determined. Andrea D'Angelo, sophomore in the School of Education, has written a sonnet on music. Frank Castles, senior in the School of Arts and Philosophy, has also submitted a few poems. Castles is working on a Short- Story.

Joseph N. Bongiovanni, junior artsman, who is a member of the committe backing the proposed publication, said, "As yet no students from the Commerce and Finance School have offered to cooperate. Perhaps this is because they have not heard about our plans. We earneestly invite students from this school to join us in promoting this magazine."

SIMPSON HALL

Above picture shows view of Simpson Hall, recently donated to Villanova College by William Simpson, trustee. The newly acquired buildings will be ready next month and will be used by various student seminars. The Hall consists of a three-story 20-room residence and a garage with living quarters in upper floor.

Flowering In The Spring

AMERICA sowed Spring wheat last September to live.

Europe conceded in the Pact of Munich in September to die.

The leaders of our nation are anticipating a bumber crop of wheat for the harvest.

The leaders of Europe are anticipating in the Spring the grim reaper.

On January 10, two of America's leading ambassadors, Mr. Kennedy to England, and Mr. Bullitt to France, related to the joint session of the House and Senate Military Committees the utterly chaotic conditions in Europe. They foresee the event of a major war in the Spring.

On January 13, two of Europe's most powerful dictators, Mr. Hitler of Germany and Mr. Mussolini of Italy engaged in a conference over the wire. Mr. Hitler asked that Mr. Mussolini refrain from war for one year. He asked that the democracies be given one year's grace before he proceeds to make war for the inforcement of his demands.

Today Europe is sowing seeds of propaganda in America.

Today Europe is seeking and inviting the sowing of American dollars in Europe for the war in the Spring.

America, although she is to harvest her crop of Spring wheat, might also be entangled in this oncoming international situation. Propaganda has been slipping into America via many channels.

Chamberlain after the President's speech said in so many words that he was glad that "America was ready to do its part" in the agitation against the dictatorships.

France rejoiced that American public opinion was revolting against the religious persecutions, and the new tyranny under dictatorial regimes.

The newspapers raise our fears to greater heights by other reports than those of ambassadors or leaders of Europe. Colonel Lindbergh in a recent report to the State Department is quoted as saying that Germany has the mightiest air fleet in the world.

"Our people and our resources are pledged to secure that protection. (From the dictatorships) From the determination no American flinches. (President Roosevelt, January 5, 1939)

"As ye sow, so also shall ye reap."

Limiting Classes

AN EDUCATIONAL principle of undeniable value is a small class body. A professor could instruct and guide a small group of students to greater advantage and with better results than he can a group of students of such proportions as confronts him in the modern major university. For, unfortunately, the number of faculty members in today's average university is quite inadequate to deal with the huge enrollment.

In comparison with the average undergraduate school, Villanova is quite small, for its officials have always stressed the importance of limited classes. Their foresight has been rewarded, for the results have been particularly satisfying. However, due to Villanova's ever better reputation, its enrollment has been growing steadily, whereas the size of the faculty staff remains practically stationary. This is especially true of the Commerce and Finance school, since its high rating has attracted enough high school graduates to make it the largest group on the campus. The present enrollment and the small number of professors necessitate large classes, which is unfortunate in those subjects which require close student observation.

In the future, it would be undesirable to lose the advantage of small classes at Villanova. The deans of the various schools select the most promising high school graduates, and small class bodies can help them to gain the utmost from our sound educational system.

GOOD COMPETITION — GOOD FOLLOWING

THERE is an old saying in Economics that "Competion is the spirit of industry." This also applys to sports competition, and in this case we refer to the schedule of the freshman basketball team.

This year the frosh have already played six games, but we guarantee that not one Villanova student remembers, or wants to remember, their opponents. That is because the competition has been poor. Not one opponent represendt a high or preparatory school. What does it mean for a strong college team to beat such teams as the Conshohocken Rattlers or the Tuscarora Terrors. True it helps to build up a nice winning streak, but when matched with other schedules it doesn't mean a thing.

We do not know who is responsible for this mistake, but we feel that they will accept a few suggestions which have come direct from Villanova students. Meet these teams which the freshman teams of Penn, Temple and St. Joseph's meet. There are about 25 eligible teams in the Philadelphia area, among them strong Catholic high and prep teams.

Let these teams combat Villanova's and the result will be the aquisition of hundreds of followers who, coming to see their own team play, will carry away thoughts of Villanova sports. Villanova wants to get in the sport "select circle" in the Philadelphia area. This will be a factor in bringing such results. Villanova College has the best teams in the area, so why not give the fans an opportunity to see them in action.

Can The Novel Teach?

Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., A. B. (Oxon)

THERE was a time when it was necessary to defend the novel. It was considered a time waster, a trivial thing, a series of uninstructive, unprofitable pages. It was overlooked or believed absurd that the novelist could interpret current life, that his characters could conceivably experience the emotions and adventures which living people met daily.

We need not deride such a notion for it was partially justified. Its shortsightedness lay in the fact that it failed to distinguish between good and poor novels. In the following remarks we refer only to the former group.

In assigning a useful purpose to the novelist some caution must be taken to avoid overstatement. The novel is not a handbook of sociology. Information is not its primary intention for on this point it competes with the textbook and loses its identity as a work of art. There can be no objection, however, to the interpreting or dramatizing of problems by the novel.

Indirectly but nonetheless effectively, the novel can teach. This statement records no discovery, but it should call attention to the circumstance that the novel is a potential factor for benefits far beyond an hour or two of pleasant reading.

We must realize its usefulness in this regard. The Scarlet Letter offers a convincing example. The force of conscience has frequently been discussed in literature by Plato, by Francis Bacon and by others. But were the insistance and demands of conscience ever more vividly presented than we find them in Hawthorne's novel?

We have admitted that the pedagogic or didactic character of the novel is indirect. We insist too that this does not lessen its power to instruct. Some particular instances of this might be examined.

Frank Swinnerton says that the novel is, for most people, the best existing interpretation of life. He continues: "The novelist's one concern is with human beings, their actions, thoughts, vagaries and fates." Swinnerton is himself, of course, a novelist and naturally enthusiastic about his medium. But on closer analysis his statements will be found less challenging and controversial than their dogmatic utterance might suggest.

There is unlimited signiificance in the phrase "interpretation of life." It suggests a universal quality; it would indicate the extensiveness of the novelist's subjects. And is there any limitation to the novel's scope other than its creator's imagination? Innumerable possibilities lie before the novelist and by some happy necessity his work covers every phase of life. We have Joseph Conrad's ignorant boatswains and William Thackeray's social climbers. Even the future has already received the attention of H. G. Wells and Aldous Huxley.

Yet despite the special interest of the two gentlemen just named the novel can best and most adequately concern itself only with the past and the present. This division is unfortunately general, but it is inevitable.

As a sphere of novel writing, the past has been accepted for over a century. The value of the historical novel is evident. It is not our purpose to inquire what advantages it may possess as an aid to the study of history. It cannot be denied, however, that this species of novel has vitalized the past. More important, it has showed conclusively that human hopes, temptations, and difficulties of adaptation differ very little over a period of centuries.

The present in the novel holds out even more practical attractions. In modern times new problems have presented themselves. New solutions are proposed. But the very number and complexity of the present-day novelist's subjects would seem to offer us a really chaotic picture. Generally speaking, this is not true.

Several divisions of the modern novel are possible. Without further ado, let us distribute them into two classes: the wholesome and the unwholesome. This division is confessedly arbitrary but, keeping derivable benefits in mind, it is useful. It might also be noted that the "unwholesome" group includes only those of a materialistic, pessimistic, or class-consciousness type. Novels offering merely obscenity and degeneracy have never proved themselves as worthy, however remotely, for a place in literature.

The first type, the wholesome novel, requires little comment. Any work which advocates better living, higher ideals, or more decent conduct carries its recommendation before it. It is of unquestionable educational value.

But what of our second class? What can we hope to learn from the records of hopelesa post-War disillusion, from the fictionalized biographies of brutal men whose only virtue may be, let us say, a kind of animal loyalty to others?

"STEP BY STEP FROM MUNICH"

College Chatter

By Barney Bellew

WHAT'S IN A NAME:

This will probably surprise all you wildcat rooters. There are fourteen colleges in the country which travel under the name of "Wildcats."

Leading in nicknames for colleges is the "Tiger" which 22 colleges have adopted. And running a close second is the "Bull Dog," with 21 colleges to its credit.

There are many odd nicknames such as the Bullets, Zippers, Mocosins, Senators, Colonels, Presidents, Commodores, Miners, Boilermakers, Cornhuskers and Moundbuilders.

NO MAN'S LAND:

The largest state woman's college is Texas State College for Women. It has a total of 2,689 femmes. The Woman's College of the University of North Carolina has 2,041 of the weaker sex. Florida State is third with 1,766 students. Winthrop and Georgia State trail with 1,630 and 1,495.

Hunter College, of New York City, continues to be the largest of any woman's college, having 7,000 students.

TAKE IT EASY:

Peachy (to one arm driver) "For goodness sakes, use two hands!"

Kolmer (one arm driver) "Can't, got to drive with one."

HORSES, HORSES, HORSES:

Princeton's polo team has been improved greatly by the addition of eight polo ponies. The bangtails were a gift from John E. Madden, Jr., ex-'17. This makes Princeton the best mounted collegiate polo team in the east. Having struggled along in the past years, they turned tables and won the first three encounters, this year. It only knows that ponies make the polo team.

SEVEN WAYS TO WIN A GIRL:

1. Get a car.
2. Get some money.
3. Get a car.
4. Dress well.
5. Get a car.
6. Always agree with her.
7. Get a car.

If this doesn't work, you probably don't have a flashy enough car, or you're not a football hero.

WEDDING BELLES:

Staid Harvard is willing to provide a course on marriage guidance but they mustn't expect mention of "necking."

"The students know more about this phase than the instructors," said one of the professors. I wouldn't be surprised if he was right.

Somewhat paradoxically, we may learn much. We shall observe that the novels under consideration stress the wrong values, that despair is inevitable when men have stifled their spiritual and moral responsibilities over a lifetime. We shall notice that the authors who sympahtize with and create such types prove what they utterly reject, wittingly or not. Their heroes have no faith and hoot at ideals. But is their unhappiness not a suggestion that they have neglected what is really essential? Negatively but successfully, even a novel with an unwholesome atmosphere may teach a strong lesson.

A good novel is stimulating. Were it nothing more, that fact should be its most cogent recommendation. It does more. It shows us the reactions, the sorrows, the joys of others. It instructs.

Will Osborne And Lynn Davis Lead Strenuous Life In Careers Dedicated To Relaxation Of Others

Compensations Include Beautiful Clothes and Adulation of Pleasure-Seeking Public

By JOE McCABE

"Would you mind waiting a few minutes?"

"No, that's quite alright, but while I'm waiting could I see Miss Davis?"

"Certainly, I should have thought of that before."

"Yo Lynn — here's a chap from Villanova whod like to talk to you."

"Swell, send him up."

With this encouragement I was ushered into the dressing room of Miss Lynn Davis, the vocalist featured with Will Osborne and his Slide Orchestra at the Earle Theater.

"Take off your coat and let me see what I can do for you."

"Well, Miss Davis, since you are to sing with the band at the Villanova Senior Ball, I'd like to ask you a few questions."

"Alright, let's have them."

"When did you first begin singing?"

"Well, I got my start with Lew Davies band now playing in Ashland, Kentucky. He was a distant relative of mine and we finally coaxed my family into letting me sing profesionally."

Still on the question of singing and music, Miss Davis said she preferred to sing sweet songs rather than those of the swingy type.

Asked whether she had any superstitions she replied "No, but I do have a craving for shoes." And prodding her a little further I learned that she owns thirty pairs of shoes.

Realizing many of the students would be anxious to know whether or not they would be able to dance with her I asked her opinion on this point to which she replied: "I'd like to very much, but it's against the laws of the band and for that reason it will be impossible."

Queried as to her definition of a "jitterbug" she replied: "Jitterbugs get on my nerves."

As a firing shot I inquired whether or not she was married or single. With a wry smile she answered: "Single . . ."

LYNN DAVIS

Taking leave of this gracious lady I proceeded to the dressing room of the leader of the band, Will Osborne.

In an atmosphere most impromptu for the occasion, Mr. Osborne said that he was born in Toronto, Canada, and was 32 years old.

Asked what his original ambition was, he replied, very definitely, "Music."

"Why did you patent your style of music?"

"Because I wanted protection for my style. Since it was the first time that a style of music ever was patented, it took over a year and a half to obtain a patent but we finally got it."

As all people in show business Since all band leaders today are asked their definition of swing, I wishing to be different decided to ask Mr. Osborne what was his conception of corny music. His reply: "A style of swing music which is accentuated—one wherein there is no attention to rhythm."

"Mr. Osborne, are you married?"

"Yes."

Concluding I inquired as to what hobbies, if any, a popular band leader might have. To my amazement he answered: "Photography . . . another one of the millions that the bug has bitten."

Next in line we inquired about the difficulty entailed in the conduction of so popular an orchestra as his. The best way of demonstrating his point is to give an The second item is the special insight to the schedule which his organization had to follow. During the engagement at the Earle Theater personal appearances were required about every two and a half hours, exclusive of the time needed for dressing.

With these words I took my leave of the leader of the band with the slide trombones, and look forward to an enjoyable evening dancing to the music of this versatile gentleman with the songs of his gracious feminine vocalist.

Introducing

By JAMES F. DONOVAN

I must admit that I was nonplussed! Here I had to get Don Mackowski to talk for twenty inches and I find his room simply jammed with the Macuby and Co. boys. Hugh Riley and Jim Dwyer were setting up an awful howl! No place to go on no money. Buck Kane was murmuring a vague something about his breakfast, his laundry, and his electric razor. My appearance slowed down things a bit at the start, but pretty soon the Grand Central-like room was Times Squarey as ever. Don was hidden somewhere on the upper deck so I roared my mission at the top of my lungs.

"What's too few?" asked Don as the pictures began to shake.

"No, not few, interview!" I screamed. This newspaperwork isn't exactly a drop-the-handkerchief line.

By expert yelling and signal sending Don caught the drift. Now we were getting somewhere. Then the boys caught wise on what America was doing.

"Oh you want Mackowski to talk about himself," said Jim Dwyer. "Well, at last he has someone to listen to him."

"He owes me fifteen cents," ventured Hugh with a want-to-be-appreciated air. I glanced at him coldly.

"Well," said Don, "I was born in Bradford, Pa., on August 31, 1914—the second in a family of five."

"He's an oil region boy," again Florence-Nightengaled Hugh. "Didn't you ever hear of Bradford's oil? The best in the world."

"Don't mind the children," said Don. "Well, when I was old enough to say 'Another helping please' I attended St. Bernard's Parochial School; a mighty fine little school. Scholastically—its tops. Wonderful equipment and. . ."

The Ohio pride of the Rileys spoke again. "He's really too modest to mention the fact that he was one of the best ends Bradford ever saw and was President of the Senior Class. And besides what a heart breaker he was!"

DONALD E. MACKOWSKI

"After graduation from high school"—Don was getting desperate so Bucky and Jim moved over toward Hugh and the hecklers represented a united front. "I went to work in a brokerage firm for two years. It was very fine work and I soon became interested in brokerage as a profession. After those two years, I decided to study the subject in college. My pastor told me of the glories of Villanova. The brokerage was fine, so I lit out for here."

"The land of the spree and the home of the Knave."—Bucky's contribution.

Don kept on, "Don't n-o-t-i-c-e him. Well in my freshman year, I made the Glee Club and picked up with characters of little worth or reputation."

Jim blinked. The conspirators held a whispered consultation and decided that the remark had all the earmarks of a "dirty crack." The boys resented it.

"The year after that," Jim took up the narrative, he became the terror of the freshmen on the Orientation Committee and blossomed out as a social hound on the Cotillion Committee."

Bucky then grabbed the floor, "After that year, there was nothing left for us to do but elect him class president for our Junior year. We needed a man with executive ability and all the trimmings. Don was swept into office. Besides running the "big year," the Bradford Bronco played end on the 150's and oiled his fountain pen as a sport writer on the Belle Air. Yes siree, our little Donald did one sweet job as Junior Correspondent."

"Now take this year for instance," Hugh Riley now, "He's Sports Editor of the Year Book and the very life blood of Father Falvey's yearly contribution to the world of letters. Besides that he's a perfect Roosevelt—the very epitome of perfection at checks and fishing. Not only that, he skates and skis like an Alpine climber. He's been trying ever since freshman year to make Bradford Villanova conscious and vice versa."

"He's quite a good looking apple isn't he," teased Jim, "but he's strictly passive about Rosemont and the rest of these brain stores."

Don was getting red. Well, that had been pretty easy. For a man who has been a leading figure in executive ability, glee club, dance committees and Belle Air, Don Mackowski had certainly managed to attract quite a few friends to his pleasing personality. "The busiest man on the campus," they called him last year.

"Well, thank's a lot, Don," I said, according to Hoyle.

"That's all right," murmured Jim, Hughie, and Bucky, "only don't say he goes with us."

I left. Once more the room assumed noon-at-the-pie-shop proportions. I had interviewed a man of whom Villanova—and Bradford—is proud. I give you Donald Mackowski.

CHORALISTS TO SING AT AFFAIR

The Villanova Glee Club will be a feature of the entertainment bill at the annual football banquet to be held at the Bellevue-Stratford tomorrow night. The repertoire of this musical group includes many selections of Polyphonic Music arranged from 16th Century Polyphony.

Reverend Ralph E. Handran, O. S. A., moderator, released a list of selections to be sung. In opening, the entire group will sing "Duna," followed by "Deep River," by Burleigh; "Lo, How A Rose," by Praetonous, and "Passing By," by Archibald T. Dandeon.

The next selection on the program will be a trio of songs sung by a quartet consisting of Charles Cavanaugh, Joseph York, John D'Ippolito and William Appel. They will present "Alexander," "Jolly Roger," and "Shadow March." Charles Lozowski's violin solo of the Meditation from "Thais" by Massenet will conclude the musical part of the evening.

This is the beginning of the new year's activities for the choral group, who expect to have a very busy season.

Flowering In The Spring

AMERICA sowed Spring wheat last September to live.

Europe conceded in the Pact of Munich in September to die.

The leaders of our nation are anticipating a bumber crop of wheat for the harvest.

The leaders of Europe are anticipating in the Spring the grim reaper.

On January 10, two of America's leading ambassadors, Mr. Kennedy to England, and Mr. Bullitt to France, related to the joint session of the House and Senate Military Committees the utterly chaotic conditions in Europe. They foresee the event of a major war in the Spring.

On January 13, two of Europe's most powerful dictators, Mr. Hitler of Germany and Mr. Mussolini of Italy engaged in a conference over the wire. Mr. Hitler asked that Mr. Mussolini refrain from war for one year. He asked that the democracies be given one year's grace before he proceeds to make war for the inforcement of his demands.

Today Europe is sowing seeds of propaganda in America.

Today Europe is seeking and inviting the sowing of American dollars in Europe for the war in the Spring.

America, although she is to harvest her crop of Spring wheat, might also be entangled in this oncoming international situation. Propaganda has been slipping into America via many channels.

Chamberlain after the President's speech said in so many words that he was glad that "America was ready to do its part" in the agitation against the dictatorships.

France rejoiced that American public opinion was revolting against the religious persecutions, and the new tyranny under dictatorial regimes.

The newspapers raise our fears to greater heights by other reports than those of ambassadors or leaders of Europe. Colonel Lindbergh in a recent report to the State Department is quoted as saying that Germany has the mightiest air fleet in the world.

"Our people and our resources are pledged to secure that protection. (From the dictatorships) From the determination no American flinches. (President Roosevelt, January 5, 1939)

"As ye sow, so also shall ye reap."

Limiting Classes

AN EDUCATIONAL principle of undeniable value is a small class body. A professor could instruct and guide a small group of students to greater advantage and with better results than he can a group of students of such proportions as confronts him in the modern major university. For, unfortunately, the number of faculty members in today's average university is quite inadequate to deal with the huge enrollment.

In comparison with the average undergraduate school, Villanova is quite small, for its officials have always stressed the importance of limited classes. Their foresight has been rewarded, for the results have been particularly satisfying. However, due to Villanova's ever better reputation, its enrollment has been growing steadily, whereas the size of the faculty staff remains practically stationary. This is especially true of the Commerce and Finance school, since its high rating has attracted enough high school graduates to make it the largest group on the campus. The present enrollment and the small number of professors necessitate large classes, which is unfortunate in those subjects which require close student observation.

In the future, it would be undesirable to lose the advantage of small classes at Villanova. The deans of the various schools select the most promising high school graduates, and small class bodies can help them to gain the utmost from our sound educational system.

GOOD COMPETITION — GOOD FOLLOWING

THERE is an old saying in Economics that "Competion is the spirit of industry." This also applys to sports competition, and in this case we refer to the schedule of the freshman basketball team.

This year the frosh have already played six games, but we guarantee that not one Villanova student remembers, or wants to remember, their opponents. That is because the competition has been poor. Not one opponent represendt a high or preparatory school. What does it mean for a strong college team to beat such teams as the Conshohocken Rattlers or the Tuscarora Terrors. True it helps to build up a nice winning streak, but when matched with other schedules it doesn't mean a thing.

We do not know who is responsible for this mistake, but we feel that they will accept a few suggestions which have come direct from Villanova students. Meet these teams which the freshman teams of Penn, Temple and St. Joseph's meet. There are about 25 eligible teams in the Philadelphia area, among them strong Catholic high and prep teams.

Let these teams combat Villanova's and the result will be the aquisition of hundreds of followers who, coming to see their own team play, will carry away thoughts of Villanova sports. Villanova wants to get in the sport "select circle" in the Philadelphia area. This will be a factor in bringing such results. Villanova College has the best teams in the area, so why not give the fans an opportunity to see them in action.

Can The Novel Teach?

Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., A. B. (Oxon)

THERE was a time when it was necessary to defend the novel. It was considered a time waster, a trivial thing, a series of uninstructive, unprofitable pages. It was overlooked or believed absurd that the novelist could interpret current life, that his characters could conceivably experience the emotions and adventures which living people met daily.

We need not deride such a notion for it was partially justified. Its shortsightedness lay in the fact that it failed to distinguish between good and poor novels. In the following remarks we refer only to the former group.

In assigning a useful purpose to the novelist some caution must be taken to avoid overstatement. The novel is not a handbook of sociology. Information is not its primary intention for on this point it competes with the textbook and loses its identity as a work of art. There can be no objection, however, to the interpreting or dramatizing of problems by the novel.

Indirectly but nonetheless effectively, the novel can teach. This statement records no discovery, but it should call attention to the circumstance that the novel is a potential factor for benefits far beyond an hour or two of pleasant reading.

We must realize its usefulness in this regard. The Scarlet Letter offers a convincing example. The force of conscience has frequently been discussed in literature by Plato, by Francis Bacon and by others. But were the insistance and demands of conscience ever more vividly presented than we find them in Hawthorne's novel?

We have admitted that the pedagogic or didactic character of the novel is indirect. We insist too that this does not lessen its power to instruct. Some particular instances of this might be examined.

Frank Swinnerton says that the novel is, for most people, the best existing interpretation of life. He continues: "The novelist's one concern is with human beings, their actions, thoughts, vagaries and fates." Swinnerton is himself, of course, a novelist and naturally enthusiastic about his medium. But on closer analysis his statements will be found less challenging and controversial than their dogmatic utterance might suggest.

There is unlimited significance in the phrase "interpretation of life." It suggests a universal quality; it would indicate the extensiveness of the novelist's subjects. And is there any limitation to the novel's scope other than its creator's imagination? Innumerable possibilities lie before the novelist and by some happy necessity his work covers every phase of life. We have Joseph Conrad's ignorant boatswains and William Thackeray's social climbers. Even the future has already received the attention of H. G. Wells and Aldous Huxley.

Yet despite the special interest of the two gentlemen just named the novel can best and most adequately concern itself only with the past and the present. This division is unfortunately general, but it is inevitable.

As a sphere of novel writing, the past has been accepted for over a century. The value of the historical novel is evident. It is not our purpose to inquire what advantages it may possess as an aid to the study of history. It cannot be denied, however, that this species of novel has vitalized the past. More important, it has showed conclusively that human hopes, temptations, and difficulties of adaptation differ very little over a period of centuries.

The present in the novel holds out even more practical attractions. In modern times new problems have presented themselves. New solutions are proposed. But the very number and complexity of the present-day novelist's subjects would seem to offer us a really chaotic picture. Generally speaking, this is not true.

Several divisions of the modern novel are possible. Without further ado, let us distribute them into two classes: the wholesome and the unwholesome. This division is confessedly arbitrary but, keeping derivable benefits in mind, it is useful. It might also be noted that the "unwholesome" group includes only those of a materialistic, pessimistic, or class-consciousness type. Novels offering merely obscenity and degeneracy have never proved themselves as worthy, however remotely, for a place in literature.

The first type, the wholesome novel, requires little comment. Any work which advocates better living, higher ideals, or more decent conduct carries its recommendation before it. It is of unquestionable educational value.

But what of our second class? What can we hope to learn from the records of hopeless post-War disillusion, from the fictionalized biographies of brutal men whose only virtue may be, let us say, a kind of animal loyalty to others?

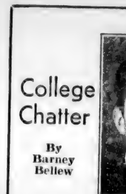
"STEP BY STEP FROM MUNICH"



College Chatter

By Barney Bellew

WHAT'S IN A NAME:

This will probably surprise all you wildcat rooters. There are fourteen colleges in the country which travel under the name of "Wildcats."

Leading in nicknames for colleges is the "Tiger" which 22 colleges have adopted. And running a close second is the "Bull Dog," with 21 colleges to its credit.

There are many odd nicknames such as the Bullets, Zippers, Moccasins, Senators, Colonels, Presidents, Commodores, Miners, Boilermakers, Cornhuskers and Moundbuilders.

NO MAN'S LAND:

The largest state woman's college is Texas State College for Women. It has a total of 2,689 femmes. The Woman's College of the University of North Carolina has 2,041 of the weaker sex. Florida State is third with 1,766 students. Winthrop and Georgia State trail with 1,630 and 1,495.

Hunter College, of New York City, continues to be the largest of any woman's college, having 7,000 students.

TAKE IT EASY:

Peachy (to one arm driver) "For goodness sakes, use two hands!"

Kolmer (one arm driver) "Can't, got to drive with one."

HORSES, HORSES, HORSES:

Princeton's polo team has been improved greatly by the addition of eight polo ponies. The bangtails were a gift from John E. Madden, Jr., ex-'17. This makes Princeton the best mounted collegiate polo team in the east. Having struggled along in the past years, they turned tables and won the first three encounters, this year. It only shows that ponies make the polo team.

SEVEN WAYS TO WIN A GIRL:

1. Get a car.
2. Get some money.
3. Get a car.
4. Dress well.
5. Get a car.
6. Always agree with her.
7. Get a car.

If this doesn't work, you probably don't have a flashy enough car, or you're not a football hero.

WEDDING BELLES:

Staid Harvard is willing to provide a course on marriage guidance but they wouldn't expect mention of "mecking."

"The students know more about this phase than the instructors," said one of the professors. I wouldn't be surprised if he was right.

Somewhat paradoxically, we may learn much. We shall observe that the novels under consideration stress the wrong values, that despair is inevitable when men have stifled their spiritual and moral responsibilities over a lifetime. We shall notice that the authors who sympathize with and create such types prove what they utterly reject, wittingly or not. Their heroes have no faith and hoot at ideals. But is th ir unhappiness not a suggestion that they have neglected what is really essential? Negatively but successfully, even a novel with an unwholesome atmosphere may teach a strong lesson.

A good novel is stimulating. Were it nothing more, that fact should be its most cogent recommendation. It does more. It shows us the reactions, the sorrows, the joys of others. It instructs.

Will Osborne And Lynn Davis Lead Strenuous Life In Careers Dedicated To Relaxation Of Others

Compensations Include Beautiful Clothes and Adulation of Pleasure-Seeking Public

By JOE McCABE

"Would you mind waiting a few minutes?"

"No, that's quite alright, but while I'm waiting could I see Miss Davis?"

"Certainly, I should have thought of that before."

"Yo Lynn — here's a chap from Villanova whod like to talk to you."

"Swell, send him up."

With this encouragement I was ushered into the dressing room of Miss Lynn Davis, the vocalist featured with Will Osborne and his Slide Orchestra at the Earle Theater.

"Take off your coat and let me see what I can do for you."

"Well, Miss Davis, since you are to sing with the band at the Villanova Senior Ball, I'd like to ask you a few questions."

"Alright, let's have them."

"When did you first begin singing?"

"Well, I got my start with Lew Davies band now playing in Ashland, Kentucky. He was a distant relative of mine and we finally coaxed my family into letting me sing profesionally."

Still on the question of singing and music, Miss Davis said she preferred to sing sweet songs rather than those of the swingy type.

Asked whether she had any superstitions she replied "No, but I do have a craving for shoes." And prodding her a little further I learned that she owns thirty pairs of shoes.

Realizing many of the students would be anxious to know whether or not they would be able to dance with her I asked her opinion on this point to which she replied: "I'd like to very much, but it's against the laws of the band and for that reason it will be impossible."

Queried as to her definition of a "jitterbug" she replied: "Jitterbugs get on my nerves."

As a firing shot I inquired whether or not she was married or single. With a wry smile she answered: "Single . . . ."

LYNN DAVIS

Taking leave of this gracious lady I proceeded to the dressing room of the leader of the band, Will Osborne.

In an atmosphere most impromptu for the occasion, Mr. Osborne said that he was born in Toronto, Canada, and was 32 years old.

Asked what his original ambition was, he replied, very definitely, "Music."

"Why did you patent your style of music?"

"Because I wanted protection for my style. Since it was the first time that a style of music ever was patented, it took over a year and a half to obtain a patent but we finally got it."

As all people in show business Since all band leaders today are asked their definition of swing, I wishing to be different decided to ask Mr. Osborne what was his conception of corny music. His reply: "A style of swing music which is accentuated—one wherein there is no attention to rhythm."

"Mr. Osborne, are you married?"

"Yes."

Concluding I inquired as to what hobbies, if any, a popular band leader might have. To my amazement he answered: "Photography . . . another one of the millions that the bug has bitten."

Next in line we inquired about the difficulty entailed in the conduction of so popular an orchestra as his. The best way of demonstrating his point is to give an The second item is the special insight to the schedule which his organization had to follow. During the engagement at the Earle Theater personal appearances were required about every two and a half hours, exclusive of the time needed for dressing.

With these words I took my leave of the leader of the band with the slide trombones, and look forward to an enjoyable evening dancing to the music of this versatile gentleman with the songs of his gracious feminine vocalist.

CHORALISTS TO SING AT AFFAIR

The Villanova Glee Club will be a feature of the entertainment bill at the annual football banquet to be held at the Bellevue-Stratford tomorrow night. The repertoire of this musical group includes many selections of Polyphonic Music arranged from 16th Century Polyphony.

Reverend Ralph E. Handran, O. S. A., moderator, released a list of selections to be sung. In opening, the entire group will sing "Duna," followed by "Deep River," by Burleigh; "Lo, How A Rose," by Praetonous, and "Passing By," by Archibald T. Dandeon.

The next selection on the program will be a trio of songs sung by a quartet consisting of Charles Cavanaugh, Joseph York, John D'Ippolito and William Appel. They will present "Alexander," "Jolly Roger," and "Shadow March." Charles Lozowski's violin solo of the Meditation from "Thais" by Massenet will conclude the musical part of the evening.

This is the beginning of the new year's activities for the choral group, who expect to have a very busy season.

Introducing

By JAMES F. DONOVAN

DONALD E. MACKOWSKI

I must admit that I was nonplussed! Here I had to get Don Mackowski to talk for twenty inches and I find his room simply jammed with the Macuby and Co. boys. Hugh Riley and Jim Dwyer were setting up an awful howl! No place to go on no money. Buck Kane was murmuring a vague something about his breakfast, his laundry, and his electric razor. My appearance slowed down things a bit at the start, but pretty soon the Grand Central-like room was Times Squarey as ever. Don was hidden somewhere on the upper deck so I roared my mission at the top of my lungs.

"What's too few?" asked Don as the pictures began to shake.

"No, not few, interview!" I screamed. This newspaperwork isn't exactly a drop-the-handkerchief line.

By expert yelling and signal sending Don caught the drift. Now we were getting somewhere. Then the boys caught wise on what America was doing.

"Oh you want Mackowski to talk about himself," said Jim Dwyer. "Well, at last he has someone to listen to him."

"He owes me fifteen cents," ventured Hugh with a want-to-be-appreciated air. I glanced at him coldly.

"Well," said Don, "I was born in Bradford, Pa., on August 31, 1914—the second in a family of five."

"He's an oil region boy," again Florence-Nightengaled Hugh. "Didn't you ever hear of Bradford's oil? The best in the world."

"Don't mind the children," said Don. "Well, when I was old enough to say 'Another helping please' I attended St. Bernard's Parochial School; a mighty fine little school. Scholastically—its tops. Wonderful equipment and. . ."

The Ohio pride of the Rileys spoke again, "He's really too modest to mention the fact that he was one of the best ends Bradford ever saw and was President of the Senior Class. And besides what a heart breaker he was!"

"After graduation from high school"—Don was getting desperate so Bucky and Jim moved over toward Hugh and the hecklers represented a united front. "I went to work in a brokerage firm for two years. It was very fine work and I soon became interested in brokerage as a profession. After those two years, I decided to study the subject in college. My pastor told me of the glories of Villanova. The brokerage was fine, so I lit out for here."

"The land of the spree and the home of the Knave."—Bucky's contribution.

Don kept on. "Don't n-o-t-i-c-e him. Well in my freshman year, I made the Glee Club and picked up with characters of little worth or reputation."

Jim blinked. The conspirators held a whispered consultation and decided that the remark had all the earmarks of a "dirty crack." The boys resented it.

"The year after that," Jim took up the narrative, he became the terror of the freshmen on the Orientation Committee and blossomed out as a social hound on the Cotillion Committee."

Bucky then grabbed the floor. "After that year, there was nothing left for us to do but elect him class president for our Junior year. We needed a man with executive ability and all the trimmings. Don was swept into office. Besides running the 'big year,' the Bradford Bronco played end on the 150's and oiled his fountain pen as a sport writer on the Belle Air. Yes sirec, our little Donald did one sweet job as Junior Correspondent."

"Now take this year for instance," Hugh Riley now. "He's Sports Editor of the Year Book and the very life blood of Father Falvey's yearly contribution to the world of letters. Besides that he's a perfect Roosevelt—the very epitome of perfection at checks and fishing. Not only that, he skates and skis like an Alpine climber. He's been trying ever since freshman year to make Bradford Villanova conscious and vice versa."

"He's quite a good looking apple isn't he," teased Jim, "but he's strictly passive about Rosemont and the rest of these brain stores."

Don was getting red. Well, that had been pretty easy. For a man who has been a leading figure in executive ability, glee club, dance committees and Belle Air, Don Mackowski had certainly managed to attract quite a few friends to his pleasing personality. "The busiest man on the campus," they called him last year.

"Well, thank's a lot, Don," I said, according to Hoyle.

"That's all right," murmured Jim, Hughie, and Bucky, "only don't say he goes with us."

I left. Once more the room assumed noon-at-the-pie-shop proportions. I had interviewed a man of whom Villanova—and Bradford—is proud. I give you Donald Mackowski.

MID-YEAR RETREAT TO BE CONDUCTED BY VETERAN FRIARS

Chaplain Announces Fathers Rodgers and McGrath as Retreat Masters

FIRST TALK JANUARY 30

Villanova will open the Ninety-Sixth Annual Retreat in the college chapel on January 30. This year's retreat will be conducted by Rev. Robert E. McGrath, O.S.A., and Rev. Thomas J. Rodgers, O.S.A., both of the Augustinian Mission Band. Fr. Rodgers comes from Atlantic City, N. J., and Fr. McGrath from Oxnard, Cal.

Rev. J. I. Boyle, O.S.A., college chaplain gives this pre-retreat advice for the benefit of all students: "For the right-thinking student of Villanova, the college retreat is of utmost importance. He realizes that this time brings him closer to God and His Grace. He knows it is Villanova's way of telling him what God will have him do with his precious years at college.

"Wisely does your Alma Mater set aside a definite time that, free of scholastic pursuits, you might give complete and serious attention to advice of experienced retreat masters. They know what they are talking about — what is for your good. Attend to their words.

"And let the retreat not pass without making a fervent confession and communion. Who can tell—this may be your last retreat! An eternity in Heaven or in Hell may depend upon your co-operation with the graces of this retreat!"

The retreat will consist of Mass, conferences, benedicttion and will close with the Papal Blessing on February 3.

NEW STAFF ENTERS AS OLD SAYS ADIEU AT ANNUAL BANQUET

Moderator of VILLANOVAN Lauds Work of Retiring Officers

The VILLANOVAN dinner dance, given in honor of retiring members of the paper's staff, was held at the Arcadia International Restaurant, Philadelphia, last Thursday evening, January 12.

The Arcadia, also scene of last year's banquet, served dinner to a gathering of 83 persons. The many couples present danced to the music of Clem Williams, young society maestro ,and his orchestra. Most of the gathering remained to see the final floor show.

At the conclusion of the meal, Peter C. Mackin, former business manager and toastmaster of the evening, rose to introduce the Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., moderator of the publication and first speaker of the evening. Before he presented the keys to the rtiring staff, Fr. McKee lauded their efforts and warmly thankd them for their co-operation. He mentioned the fact that he had ,orgotten to announce that Charles A. Skowron, formerly of the circulation staff, was to receive a key.

James P. Tofani, retiring co-editor, enumerated the work of each of the senior members and praised both them and Fr. McKee. His partner, Robert G .Howe, advised the new staff to give their best work in order to preserve the high standards of the newspaper.

QUIGLEY TALKS ON PHILOSOPHY

James M. Quigley, senior arts student, will present a paper on the free will before the Philosophy Seminar, this afternoon.

Following the customary procedure of this organization, after the paper is read it will be reviewed by another student. Joseph Bongiovanni will review Quigley's paper this week.

Then there will follow a general discussion in which the whole group will participate. The usual procedure is that the other members of the seminar ask the speaker questions about the various things he has mentioned. In this way it is the hope of the organization to correct errors and to make progress toward the solution of the problem under consideration.

At the close of the meeting, Rev. Edward Dwyer, O. S. A., Ph. D., moderator of the seminar, will give a general criticism of the paper and the discussion that followed.

AFTER SIGNING CONTRACT WITH OSBORNE

James W. Dwyer (right), chairman of the Belle Air Ball, reminds Maestro Osborne that dancing is from 10 to 2, while Raymond F. Beaucaire, manager of the publicity committee, looks on.

around the brass section, the Osborne style emphasizes a glissando tone achieved by "sliding" from one note to another in a different register without hitting squarely any of the intermediate notes.

He is generally recognized as one of the first maestros to introduce a fourth man to the standard three man saxaphone section. He is under contract to record for Decca.

During the Summer, Osborne entertained at Hamid's Million Dollar Pier in Atlantic City and at the Glen Island Casino in Rye, New York, which is one of the better known "spots" for name bands.

Tickets for the Belle Air Ball were placed on sale yesterday. They may be obtained from James Dwyer or any member of the committee. They will remain priced at $4.50. The chairman urges students planning to attend secure their tickets as soon as possible.

In conjunction with the announcement of the selection of the Senior band, Bernard J. Miller, Senior Dinner Dance chairman stated that final arrangements are progressing favorably. Although the location has not as yet been chosen, the selection will be announced in the near future. He states as the reason for the delay in the announcement is his endeavor to cater to the preferences of the Senior Class as a whole. In this manner he plans to make the last Senior social function a solid representation of the Class of 1939.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION TO FETE GRIDDERS AT ANNUAL DINNER

Prominent Guests and Speakers to be Included in Festive Program

S. A., dean of the School of Science and Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., A., are also among the guests.

Other honored guests will include J. Stanley Smith, Esq., '93, President of the Alumni Association, Paetrus F. Banmiller, Secretary-Treasurer of the Alumni and leading figures in the athletic world along with prominent speakers. Chief among these is a man of national prominance whose name has not yet been released, but will be forthcoming in the near future.

Numerous committees have been organized to insure the care of every detail. The chairman of the various committees are as follows: Hon. Martin J. McLaughlin, Director of Public Works of Philadelphia, acting in the capacity of toastmaster; J. Joseph Cunningham, '20, as general chairman; Joseph D. Freney, chairman of the reservation committee; Nathan Leskin, who will head the seating committee and will work in collaboration with the reservation committee; Jeffery Docherty, who will head the important menu committee; John J. Stell, '35, director of the program committee; Matthew A. Lynch, in charge of the speakers and guests committee; Edward V. Flynn, chairman of the decorations committee; William H. Vincent, '28, head of the entertainment committee and James P. Leming, in charge of the Loyalty Cup Award.

Mr. Banmiller has requested that all reservations be made as soon as possible so that seat arrangements can be made. He said: "The reason for this is that all seats and tables will be assigned before the affair and those attending will receive a floor plan of the banquet hall showing the location of his table and place as well as those of everyone present. Music and entertainment will form an important part of the program and care has been taken to assure a successful show. Additional entertainment will be furnished in the form of a 'surprise' which the committee plans to have ready, but which they will announce later."

Eichman Recipient Of Loyalty Award From Local Group

Alumni Club of Philadelphia to Make Presentation at Banquet

Mr. M. Eugene Eichman, '18; will be awarded the Loyalty Cup of the Villanova Club of Philadelphia. This recognition is bestowed annually on the alumnus who has done the most during the year for Villanova College.

Eichman, a West Philadelphia real estate dealer, will receive the award for his outstanding work in behalf of the football team and other athletic organizations.

In addition to his personal interest in Villanova, his loyalty is evidenced by the fact that he has two sons and a nephew attending the college at present. They are: Eugene Eichman, sophomore in the School of Engineering; Edward Elchman, freshman in the School of Science, and the nephew, also Edward Eichman, is a sophomore in the School of Commerce and Finance.

The selection was announced by a committee of former recipients headed by Martin J. McLaughlin, Director of Public Safety in Philadelphia. Elchman will receive the award at the annual football dinner honoring Villanova's undefeated 1938 football team. The dinner will take place at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel Wednesday, January 18.

TALKS ON MEASUREMENT GIVEN AT A.I.E.E. MEETINGS

At the regular meeting of the A. I. E. E. in the Mendel amphitheatre, yesterday, Professor Emil Amelotti gave the first of his talks on "Dimensional Analysis." Two more talks on this same subject are scheduled for future meetings.

Professor Amelotti explained that this process uses the three elements of measurement, mass, velocity, and time; it can thus be used to check calculations involving any kind of dimensions. Because it is being increasingly used in industrial plants, this method of calculation is important to engineers, so Professor Amelotti intends to develop it completely in his coming talks.

Bill Duffy Declared Winner by Forfeit; Killian Bout Called Draw

PISCIONE T. K. O. VICTIM

By JIM HAUGHTON

A strong third round comeback by Ed Killian against Jule Sturges gave him a draw and Villanova a four and one-half to three and one-half victory over the Cardinals of Catholic University on Saturday night. A crowd of 3000 witnessed the bouts on the Washington campus.

Killian at 225 was lagging behind going into the third set, but turned on the heat with several hard rights that had Sturges sagging and thus came through with a well-earned draw and a victory for Villanova against a team which had not lost an intercollegiate meet since 1937.

At one time in the meet the Wildcats had a 4-1 lead, but victories by the Capitol City lads in the lightweight and lightheavyweight class matched things at 4-3 going into the final bout.

Catholic's Jay Turner repeated his knockout victory over a Villanova boxer by T.K.O.-ing Bill Piscione in the 165-lb. class. Piscione was strong in the first canto, but sagged in the second and Referee Denny Hughes awarded the victory to Turner after one minute and thirty seconds of the round. Last year Turner K.O'd Ben Morkum.

Both teams forfeited bouts, but the fighters in the forfeiting

Varsity Swimmers and Coach Add Exhibitions to Five Event Program

By JOE BARNES

This year's edition of the annual Villanova Intramural Swimming Championship takes place next Thursday night at 8 P. M. in the Field House natatorium.

Sponsored by Father McKee, majordomo of intramural activities, the meet promises to be a gala affair. In addition to the intramural events there will be a series of exhibitions by the Villanova varsity tankmen.

Doctor Fiocco, varsity mentor and former Junior National lowboard diving champion and holder of the Middle Atlantic diadem, will top the exhibition list with a fancy diving display.

Other varsity exhibitions will be a "Chinese Relay," a special Balloon race, and a comedy diving exhibition. The Chinese Relay promises to be wild and wooly. The event has been veiled with secrecy by Father McKee and other officials. Nobody knows what it is, so it seems likely that the majori-

CATS MEET TEMPLE IN CONVENTION HALL

DePaul Contest to be Played in City Also; Catholic U. Game Away

There comee a day when all Philadelphia sport addicts dig deep in their pockets, pull out a few shekels in defiant answer to an argument, and then pray that Dame Fortune casts a fair eye upon their favorite ball club, be it football, basketball, or other.

It has been a year since Temple was crowned National Intercollegiate Basketball champions, but the crown although a beautiful one, is slightly chipped in the center.

'Cats Won Last Year

They tell us that on a certain Friday evening last year on the Convention Hall floor, an infuriated Villanova Wildcat tore into the Temple Owl and clawed her way to a 36-28 upset win over a club which boasted of two All-Americans in Meyer Bloom and Don Shields. That, friends is why the crown is slightly off-center.

Temple is no National champion this year, but they are still strictly Class A. Regardless of the numerous defeats tagged on to the Owls, they will be heard from as the season advances.

Jimmy Usilton's charges have met the class of the country this season, having played Minnesota, Southern Cal., Georgetown, La Salle, Northwestern, Penn A. C., Penn State, and Marquette. They

MAROON ALSO FALLS BEFORE DETERMINED BLUE TEAM 58-26

Yund Leads Attack Against Dickinson by Scoring Twelve Points

SAINTS TROUNCED, 55-14

By HARRY MAZZEI

Scoring with machine-like precision, Villanova's varsity quintet romped to an easy 65-14 win last night over the hapless five representing St. John's of Maryland. This was the second Wildcat win in their last two starts, as they had defeated the Dickinson Red Devils on Friday by the overwhelming count of 58-26.

It was apparent from the start of the fray that the Saints from Annapolis were no match for the rampaging 'Cats, who opened up a 19-2 advantage soon after the opening whistle. Led by "Jungle" Jim Montgomery the Blue and White poured in basket after basket while holding the visitors without a field goal until only three minutes of the first half remained.

"Lethargic" Lou Dubino led the 'Cat scorers with 12 digits, while Jim Montgomery whose play, incidentally, sparkled with brilliance', followed with 10 markers. The contest also saw the return to action of "Duke" Duzminski, who has been on the inactive list since his knee injury in the Baltimore game.

In the preliminary contest the Frosh exhibited their best form of the year by handing the powerful Brown Prep team a 49-34 drubbing.

WILDCAT NATATORS CRUSH SWARTHMORE

Blue Onslaught Led by Kelley and Bailey Fells Little Quakers

Led by Walt Kelley, who established three new records, the Villanova swimming team swamped the Swarthmore mermen, 55-18, in a dual meet at the Main Line pool last Saturday afternoon.

Kelley, by out-swimming the former record holder Charlie Barrett, broke the pool and college marks in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle events. The Blue ace clipped 2.5 seconds from the 100-yard college standard, by covering the century in the record time of 54.1.

In the 50-yard dash, the Villanova sprinter topped Barrett's old mark of 24.3 and also clipped .3 seconds from the pool standard. The final achievement of the Blue finman was being the anchor man for the relay team in the 400-yard freestyle event, which was won in 4.19 for another new college record.

An outstanding performance from the board was given oy Charile Timmins, whose talented version of the running front twist was nothing short of spectacular, netting him 36 points. His front one and a half somersault was even more profitable as a point maker and added 39.6 markers to his score. His final total of 97.83 erased the former pool mark of 96.72, which was set by Bob Quinn

FROSH BASKETEERS WIN FROM RAIDERS

Worthington Stars in Season's Best Home Game for Yearlings

Paced by towering Addie Worthington, Villanova's freshmen five gained a thrilling 33-30 win over the Wayne Red Raiders of the Main Line Basketball League. Worthington, with 13 points, sparked a Kitten drive that brought them to the front at the close of the half and never saw them headed thereafter.

Although the contest was marked by some exceptionally fine play Worthington's performance stood out like a beacon. Not only did he lead his team in scoring, but he played a brilliant floor game retrieving loose balls all over the court and consistently getting the ball off both backboards. Stakem and Gerland turned in creditable performances as they garnered six and four points respectively. For the losers Lanzi was the best of a fine group of countmen as he chalked up 17 points as the result of five field goals and three fouls.

C. & F. Five Takes Intramural League Lead

Fedigan and Austin Fall Before White Onslaught

Alumni and Mendel Residents Lose Two Games During Week; Day-Hops Win Two as Fedigan and Austin Split

O'CONNELL AND SCHELLE SPARK WHITES

By BOB FUNABASHI

Fedigan Hall's glorious reign of Intramural heights was thwarted by a revamped C&F quintet on Thursday afternoon. After sporting an eleven-game winning streak since the beginning of the season, the proud Maroons were edged out in a 22-20 decision.

Playing the major roles in Fedigan's defeat were C&F's stalwart forwards, O'Connell and Shelle. It was O'Connell's shot that tied the contest at 20-20 and then a second later Shelle's two foul shots swished through the nets and turned the tide of battle. The Fedigan team, leading the way most of the game, were unsuspectingly the victims of the most surprising defeat of the year. The upset shoved them back into a second position tie with the Mendel Day-hops.

The Businessmen notched their third victory of the Intramural campaign on Tuesday afternoon when they subdued Austin Hall in a high scoring battle. The 46-37 victory gained by the C&F team was a big factor in placing them in first place for the initial time. McGurk, stepping from fame on the gridiron, and exchanging his football pants for a basketball suit, carried his prestige a bit further when he totaled 15 points. Right behind him in scoring honors was Coupe who tallied ten markers. Dwyer led the losers with nine points.

C&F Rallies to Win

At half-time Austin led the attack with a 23-21 margin, but the men in white came back strongly and the combined duo of McGurk and Coupe made 17 points between them. The Austin defense faltered and the C&F lads moved on to victory.

That same night Fedigan registered its second victory when they beat the Mendel Residents by the score of 37-22. Starting from the opening whistle, Fedigan's smashing drive relentlessly drove back their opponents and completely demoralized their floor offensive. By half-time the score stood at 23-11 in favor of the Maroon. The Mendel team was no match for their towering opponents and their shots did not fall very accurately. Conners, lanky center for the Maroon, threw in 12 points while Crumb led his team with ten points.

Day-hops Make Comeback

Another leading contender for the Intramural championships, namely the Mendel Day-hops led by Keating and company, stepped back into the win column and trounced the freshmen of Alumni Hall by the score of 37-23. Wood's 13 points behind the perfect execution of floorplays by his teammates sent the Alumni team spinning back into last place.

A 26-7 lead commanded by the Day-hoppers at the half proved too much for the Greenies to overcome, but they fought back valiantly and made sixteen points in the last half. Two nights later the Day-hops swamped the Mendel Residents in a high scoring fray by a 51-39 score. Dan Keating, blond center, threw in seven field goals.

Alumni lost their third straight game to Austin Hall in the first game of the Thursday night doubleheader. Burlington, former varsity center, led the Blue attack with 14 points. The 55-42 decision was a free-for-all with the Austin team decidedly gaining the advantage.

ty of the students will be on hand Thursday night to find out what it is all about.

Seven events are on the intramural program. The evening will start with the fifty yard freestyle race and terminate with the 75-yard medley relay. Last year the 50 yd. stretch was taken by Paul Fitzmaurice of Austin Hall. From his showing in the event Fitzmaurice made the varsity aggregation. The short distance freestyle is usually the most popular event on the program.

No Long Races

The second event of the program is the "100" freestyle, taking the place of the 200 yd. event held last year. Only three entrants turned out for the long event so it was decided to shorten the distance this year.

Third and fourth events are 50 yd. breaststroke and backstroke, respectively, followed by the fancy diving competition. Tom Moore, now a member of Dr. Flocco's varsity garnered the points in last years meet, but is ineligible this year as are all other varsity men.

In the diving competition the front and back dives, together with the front jack-knife are required. Two other dives are optional.

The semi-final event will be the 100 yard relay, won last year by the Mendel Residents. The 75-yard medley relay will bring the night to a close.

Day-hops Defend Crown

The Mendel Day-hops garnered team honors last year, mainly through the efforts of Tom Moore, who was individual high scorer with 14¾ points. Riley of Austin Hall followed in the individual tally with eight counters.

All students, not members of the varsity, are urged to enter the meet. Doctor Flocco will be on the lookout for material for his varsity team and there is no better way to make the varsity than by a good showing in the intramurals. Those who like the breaststroke are particularly urged to come out, for the varsity needs material in that event.

Maroon

White flashed alternatively hot and cold as they severely trounced the Dickinson Red Devils, 57-28. Playing before a snow-curtailed crowd, the Main Liners, led by sophomore Chuck Yund, gained an early lead and kept adding to it as the game progressed. Yund, with 12 digits as the result of six field goals, led the scorers, but he was closely followed by "Jungle" Jim Montgomery, Lou Dubino, and little Mike Lazorchak. The former two counting 11 markers each, while Mike hit the cords for 10.

Al Severance inserted Paul Nugent, the other sophomore sensation, into the starting line-up in an effort to find the winning combination, and while Nugent performed in a very creditable manner it is apparent that something more drastic is necessary. At times, especially in the first half, the Wildcats exhibited some of the court lore they are capable of, but during the second canto they seemed to bog down.

Sparked by Yund the 'Cats opened up with a terrific barrage of double-deckers that carried them to a 17-4 lead before the Red Devils could become accustomed to the merry pace. The sophomore star showed scintillating skill in converting looping passes from Dubino and Montgomery into Villanova baskets, and not until the second half could the Carlisle team check Yund's effective play.

Besides Yund, Lou Dubino and Paul Nugent, the Bronx speedboy, contributed to making Dickinson's opening moments miserable. Dubino cashed in with four follow-up baskets, while Nugent exhibited a fancy eye by arching two shots in from the side and scoring another on a beautiful fake.

Meanwhile Dick Fox and the diminutive Kinzie Weimer attempted to keep the Red and White in the chase by caging five markers each. Both of Weimer's scores came as the result of pass interceptions and full court dribbles. However, the Dickson outfit trailed at half-time, 34-14, despite these efforts.

With the start of the second frame it was evident that the Wildcat offense was not as potent as it had been, although the sharp officiating of Tom Devlin and Ben Emery slowed up the play on numerous occasions. In this half Lazorchak, Montgomery and Vigilante picked up the scoring habit and continued to increase the Main Liners' lead over their hapless foes. Lazorchak once again exhibited his expert marksmanship by popping four baskets through the cords from outside the 20-foot circle, as Montgomery and Vigilante riddled the Dickinsonian defense with lightening - like cuts to counter on lay-up shots. Keating came through with two heaves to lead Dickinson's second half scoring.

HERE and THERE

By HARRY MAZZEI

HARRY MAZZEI

According to all the official reports the football season ended with the playing of the multifarious bowl games on New Year's Day. Of course, the New York Giants, professional champions, are still barnstorming where the climes are a bit on the tepid side, but we must consider that they are playing for their "bread and butter," whereas the "bowl boys" were just out for the fun of it—so they tell us.

Still and all, football interest has not waned on this campus with the coming of the Winter months, because from all quarters comes that annual question "What's the schedule for this year? That question is just as certain as taxes, and at this time of the year, almost as difficult to meet.

This years schedule is still a mystery in the minds of the general public, but as usual there have been wild rumors floating around the Main Line regarding the probable oponents for the 1939 season. Guesses have ranged from our American International friends (who will not be met this year) to Notre Dame. If the Wildcats are going to play half of the teams rumored to be on their Fall calling list, they will have to play all thru the year and suspend all vacations.

It is fairly certain, though, that the age old difficulty of securing "name" games has cropped up again. Even with the fine background it has established over the past two seasons, Villanova can not crash into the so-called select brackets of big-time football. The "big fellows" seem to have their attention diverted to something else when Villanova is mentioned. This is, indeed, a deplorable condition and one which should be remedied.

In all probability the 1939 schedule will be a difficult assignment for any team to tackle and will be one filled with snares and pitfalls. Only there won't be any "Ivy League' teams on it, and "Ivy League" teams in this section of the country are considered THE teams to play. These venerable institutions may have perfectly legitimate reasons for not wanting to meet the Main Liners, but as yet, they have not produced any that would bear weight.

To combat this gridiron ostracism it has been suggested that other colleges in Villanova's predicament from an Eastern Football Conference—a league much the same as the one currently in use in basketball. The personnel of the association could be composed of Boston College, Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, Georgetown, Holy Cross, Temple, Manhattan, Syracuse, N. Y. U., Villanova, and perhaps a few others.

Each year the majority of each conference team's schedule could be made up of conference games. Each year too, the schedule could be rearranged so that one conference team could meet all the other league teams over a span of years; thus the impossible task of meeting every team each year would be solved.

In all probability, this suggestion, like so many others of the same type, will go no further than the page it is written on, but it is an idea and one that may be experimented with in a worthwhile manner. After all, the teams mentioned above play the highest brand of football and people really do want to see good football. So if this "dream league' suddenly materialized, it would provide enough competition for the "Ivy League" teams to force them to put "conference" teams on their schedule or allow their endowments to foster their athletic program.

Some of the teams mentioned seem to be doing well in their present positions, but a closer scrutiny will give lie to that belief. For instance let us examine Carnegie's schedule. We find that they played three top flight teams: Notre Dame, Pittsburgh, and Holy Cross; two teams with fair records; Duquesne and North Carolina State; and three teams that must come under the category of "set-ups"; Davis-Elkins, Akron and Wittenberg. If the proposed conference could aid a Sugar Bowl team's schedule, think of the help it would be to less fortunate grid aggregations.

There you have just one more suggestion to add to an already mountain-like heap of ideas. It may be turned aside like so many others (as in all probability it will), or it may possibly blossom into a future fact instead of a present fancy. We hope the latter action will accrue, although at the present we can only sit back and wait for developments.

By BILL CAREY

Find all the adjectives that relate to concientious, soft-spoken, and modest. With an assembly of such words do we get the character of Arthur A. Vigilante, who for the past three years has been the "fly in the ointment" to the high-scoring opponents of the Wildcat basketeers.

To get "Vig" to talk about himself was nothing short of pulling teeth; and if it had not been for the occasional blurts of his roommate, Mike Lazorchak, this story would have needed very little space. It was Mike who brought Art's successful athletic career to light.

Won Eight Letters

Art started his basketball activities at his home town high school in Morristown by crashing into the starting line-up in his freshman year, and holding the guard position until the time of his graduation. Not contented with this, "Vig," at the close of each basketball season would don a baseball suit and play at the backstop position for the school team.

As a result of this Art was the proud possessor of no less than eight hard earned M's.

He often felt the urge to try his hand at football but strict orders from his father prevented the urge from materializing. The Vigilantes have been more or less a tradition at Morristown High as eight brothers and a sister preceded Art and a younger sister will graduate this June.

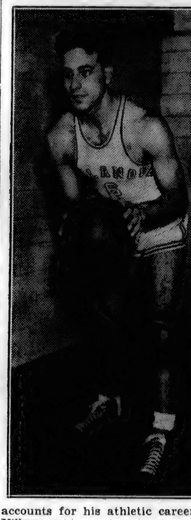
By his all around ability on the basketball court at Morristown Art earned the title of All-County guard three years in a row, and was named to the mythical All-State team in his last two years. He was also picked as the most valuable player on both the basketball and baseball teams during his senior year, receiving awards for both. This basketball award was really something to be proud of because in his last year the team won the North Jersey championship and reached the semi - finals in the State championship. This meant that he had to beat out a fast group of teammates to win such a title.

Scouted by Severance

It was in the State tournament that Art won his way to Villanova. Al Severance, the Villanova basketball mentor, scouted these games and was impressed by Art's defensive play. After the close of the tournament, Severance contacted him and sold him the idea of Villanova, and the following September Art entered the school of Commerce and Finance.

Captaining the frosh basketball team and catching on the baseball team held the interest of Art in his first year, but in his sophomore term he furthered his activities and devoted some time to being chairman of the Orientation Committee. Again his defensive ability on the court brought him honors as he was chosen to captain the squad as a junior.

That was Art's big year as he was the cause of the collapse of many great offensive teams. Game after game he passed the Wildcats to victory and held his opponents to three and four points. This year Art has been playing the same brand of ball and he just eats it up. In the Spring he hopes to hold the role of first-string catcher on the Wildcat nine, and that about accounts for his athletic career at Villanova.



Social life never meant much to Art, as it interfered with his training, but he expects a letter every Tuesday and Friday from a little miss back in his home town. And you can bet your boots he's true and loyal to her. As a movie fan he gives top-ranking to Sylvia Sidney and Spencer Tracy, and he also says that there is no better band on the air than Guy Lombardo.

Vig finds enjoyment in having differences of opinion with Mike Lazorchak, but has to agree to the fact that Mike's girl is plenty nice.

Upon graduation Art hopes to be placed in some New York firm and put his knowledge of Investments into practice.

classes put on exhibitions. In the 115 class, Davey Bernstein, Catholic's intercollegiate champ, toyed with local Buzz Mowen in an interesting bout. Mowen looked good in his first college fight, especially against a fighter of Bernstein's calibre. Captain Bill Duffy met Gleason in the other exhibition bout and put on his usual good showing.

Mike Ariano, Eddie Kirk and Bob Metzinger all contributed to the win column for the local biffers. Ariano peppered Tony Mesuri with a stinging left hand, but sewed up the decision with a staggering right hand at the second round bell that had the Washington lad leery. Kirk was hampered by his opponent's southpaw style in the 135-lb. division, but became accustomed to it in the second and went on to win easily. His stinging right hand rocked the C. U. representative several times in the third.

The 155-lb. bout was a humdinger with local Bob Metzinger and Catholic's Strang battling toe to toe for three rounds. Bob's strong left proved too much for Strang and Metzinger was awarded a decision.

Coach Ray Gadsby's boxers have as their next opponents the biffers of City College of New York on February 19 at Gotham.

of St. Francis Prep, in last year's interscholastics.

The Garnet squad splashed off to victory in the opening event, the 300-yard medley relay, but with only one other exception, failed to garner another first place all afternoon.

Captain Bill Bailey caused the visiting natators much trouble by chalking up a double triumph for the Blue lads. Bill led the field home in both the 220 and 440 free-style for a well earned twin win.

The Freshmen lost to the Garnet Jay Vees by the score of 38-28 despite the fine work of Bill Hooper who also set a new mark and performed in true varsity fashion for the duration of the meet.

The varsity have quite a few talented teams which they will meet in the near future but if they perform in the manner they displayed against the Garnet lads, the proteges of Coach Flocco will have little to fear from any squad they might encounter.

Basketball Sidelights

By LOU DUBINO

ENROUTE TO VILLANOVA ON THE "GOLDEN ARROW:"

When Johnny Krutulis was banished for four personal fouls he received some ribbing from the spectators behind the Villanova bench.

"How do you like it out West?" hooted someone in the stands.

Turning in the direction of the ribbing spectator Krutulis remarked, "Confidentially . . . ," (If you heard Mischa Auers' description of his dance pupil in "You Can't Take It With You" you will know the rest).

One of the sports writers sitting nearby heard Johnny's description and inserted it in his column concerning the game. Perhaps the sports writer thought Krutulis was an authority on hospitality and wished to inform the rest of Chicago what he thought of the place.

Loyola owes its victory to Mike Novak, 6-ft, 9-inch center who repeatedly tapped set shots away from the basket and forced Villanova to take time out and engineer a new method of attack. Novak planted himself under the Villanova basket on the defense and literally placed a cover on the basket by his unusual tactics of tapping away all shots which were, in many instances, certain counters. Villanova was astonished at this method and was forced to work the ball nearer to the basket and abandon long set shots.

In playing Loyola at Chicago, Villanova not only had to cope with the freakish tactics of Novak but also with the Mid-Western style of officiating. In summing up the fouls—Loyola had 26 attempts at the free throw line and made 19 of them count. Of the 13 free throws given Novak, he completed 11, three of them being on technical fouls. On the other side of the scorebook, Villanova was given 14 free attempts of which 8 were added to the score.

Had the Villanova team arrived in Chicago a day earlier they would have been the guest of the Loyola University basketball team at a hockey game between the Chicago Black Hawks and the Boston Bruins. The Loyola basketball manager informed John Costello, Villanova basketball manager, of his plans and also expressed his disappointment at the late arrival of the Villanova squad. He also planned to house the squad at a Chicago athletic club with the use of all facilities.

BACK AT VILLANOVA:

When Temple played Georgetown in Tech High Gym, Washington, D. C., two former All-Staters and team-mates at Asbury Park, N. J., opposed each other. McGowan, playing center for Georgetown outscored his former team-mate Don Henderson of Temple 11 points to 2. Georgetown beat Temple for their first victory in the Eastern Conference of which Temple is the defending champion.

LaSalle, in humbling Temple last week at Convention Hall in the first game of a double-header is playing good basketball and has its eye upon the mythical Philadelphia Championship. Incidently LaSalle does not play Villanova and the city championship will have to be determined by comparison of records. Villanova plays St. Joseph's and Temple. LeSalle also plays the two mentioned Villanova opponents.

While out in Chicago, the Villanova squad had the opportunity to witness the DePaul quintet in action against Duquesne in the first part of a double-header of which the Villanova-Loyola affair was the feature attraction. From the indications given in DePaul's defeat of a good Duquesne team, Villanova's five will have a battle on their hands when they meet De Paul in the first game of a double-header to be played at the Convention Hall in Philadelphia on January 21.

Rev. F. X. Coan, O. S. A., former professor of Biology at Villanova and ardent Villanova rooter, now a teacher at St. Rita's High School in Chicago, was our A No. 1 rooter at the game against Loyola. He sends his regards to all his friends back here at Villanova and wished to be remembered by them.

The team wishes to thank Bill Connelly, Villanova Alumus, Tony, Val, and Warren Fork for their telegrams expressing their moral support.

have defeated the last four clubs named.

Three Veteran Starters

Three veterans, all members of the starting combination that carried the Owls to the epitome of success and a trio of second stringers comprise the Temple combination this season.

Usilton has Don Henderson, a forward last year, using his six feet three inches to advantage at the pivot post this campaign. Henderson, Howard Black, and Ed Boyle, forward and guard respectively, were named on the All-Philadelphia and the Madison Square Garden All-American second and third teams.

Jimmy Usilton, son of the coach, and Al Freiberg, a guard, round out the starting five for the Broad Streeters. Usilton and Freiberg are both former Philadelphia Interscholastic flashes, the former starring for Temple High, while Freiberg was All-Scholastic at Southern and later prepped at Temple High. The latter is often replaced by Bob Nichol, a more consistent but less flashy player.

DePaul Here

Although the Temple game, because of the intense rivalry between the schools, is looked upon as the feature attraction of the coming week's contests, the game with DePaul—to be played in Convention Hall on January 21—bids fair to be a very exciting one.

Little is known about the "Pauls" in this sector, but the members of the basketball team on their return from Chicago brought back stories of a team that shoots and then shoots again. In defeating a very good Duquesne outfit the Demons showed that a team that takes many shots can, and often does, beat a club that uses a little discretion in that matter.

Against Illinois it is claimed that the 'Cats used too much discretion and, therefore, did not shoot enough. This merely means that the Blue and White will have to be very much on their toes to emerge from this game with a win.

On the 19th the basketeers journey to Washington and meet the Catholic U. quintet.

On Court Games

With the first half of the current basketball season coming to a close, Villanova finds herself with seven victories on the win side and two on the crying towel. It was evident that the Illinois game was not the best exhibition of basketball for the home sire, insofar as the first half was concerned. Although much might be said pro and con as to the style of play in the second half, the fact remains that we did get the shots but failed to convert. Statistics indicate that we had eighty-two tries at the basket and the percentage connecting was far from complimentary. However, such is the case in many instances in this sport.

Many thought that Villanova stressed her defense to the detriment of her offense. However, we would direct their attention to Illinois power against Manhattan, the night previous to the Villanova game, where she ran up sixty-three points. Dehner, center, secured twenty-five of them to set a new Garden record.

Loyola, utilizing a six-feet-nine center who never moved, either on the defensive or offensive basket the defensive of offensive basket and who, in addition, possessed the necessary physical attributes of height and reach, completely dominated this ball game. Villanova did play good system ball this night. The home contingent had little or no trouble setting up opportunities for shots; but every shot that was of a rim nature, was deflected with apparent ease by this giant center. Strict interpretation of body contact especially where this gentleman was concerned gave Loyola a nine-point lead before the game was five minutes old.

Although Loyola made nineteen of the twenty-six fouls called on the home team and this proved to be the margin of victory, this physical handicap, in my estimation, would have proved the margin of victory in a close contest. It was apparent to all that this man was both the offensive and defensive thrust of the Mid-Western team, who, in my estimation will boast of a very enviable record before this present season is over. To date they carry eleven consecutive victories.

Two men in particular are showing marked improvement and the past games have given them the "chill," so necessary for first class engagements. Both Paul Nugent and "Chuck" Yund, have developed into steady and reliable timber and I am sure they will indicate this by their style of play in the future games.

FELIX FRANKFURTER COURT APPOINTMENT ARGUED BY SEMINAR

Justice McReynolds' Compared With Possible Stand of Mr. Frankfurter

The recent appointment of Felix Frankfurter to the U. S. Supreme Court was discussed at the History Seminar Thursday, January 12.

Particular emphasis was placed on the fact that although Frankfurter, like Roosevelt, leans toward a liberal interpretation of the constitution, there is no guarantee that he will continue his liberal policies.

To substantiate this statement an example was cited in the appointment of Attorney General McReynolds by Wilson in 1915. McReynolds took office as a liberal but since his appointment, he has been a consistent conservative in his interpretation of the laws. However it was pointed out that the President has had much good fortune in his recent appointments of Supreme Justices Black and Reed.

After next Thursday's meeting there will be a recess of two weeks due to Mid-Term examinations and the Retreat. Meetings, next semester, will be held in the newly acquired Simpson Hall.

PLAN TOUR

Members of the A. S. C. E. held their first meeting of the new year yesterday, January 16. Plans were completed for the inspection tour of the Pennsylvania Railroad freight yards at 50th and Market Sts., in Philadelphia. The meeting was held in Room 214, Mendel Hall, at 1 o'clock.

program, which annually is the inaugural event of Junior Week, is to introduce Villanova to the mothers of the students. Through the activities which are especially conducted for them, the mothers come into contact with various traditions which are prevalent here.

O'Brien is consulting with Albert Holl, chairman of Mother's Day last year. The purpose of this is to include all the features that proved successful in last year'sprogram.

The remaining committee members for the Mother's Day program have yet to be selected and approved. Such a move will conclude the Junior appointments for the year, unless the Open House program will be re-established again.

Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., junior class moderator has announced a meeting to be held in the near future to note the progress that the various chairmen have made, and to lay further plans for Junior Week.

"FRONT" APPOINTS ASSOCIATE EDITOR

James M. Quigley, senior arts student, has been appointed associate editor of the Christian Front, a sociological magazine organized by Richard Deverall, a Villanova alumnus. A further addition to the staff was made in the person of Paul E. Brown, freshman engineer, who will write an article in the next issue.

Featured in the March issue will be an article by the recently appointed Attorney General of the United States, Frank M. Murphy.

This month's publication was given variety by the appearance of a new cover design. The Philadelphia record recently included an editorial which had appeared in the magazine.

FLINKMAN REVEALS EVIL OF MARIHUANA

Harmful Weed Subject of National Concern Research Group is Told

"The alarming spread of marihuana and its increasing use by a considerable number of youths in the United States, has not only aroused national concern but has also attracted the attention of the League of Nations." This was the statement made by Leonard Flinkman, senior Science student, at the meeting of the Research Seminar.

He explained that the unusual effect of this drug is that though not habit forming, the pleasing sensation which follows its use causes the person to have increasing desires to use it repeatedly.

Flinkman traced the growth of this plant from its origin in Central and Western Asia to its gradual spread all over the world. The methods of cultivation and ways of extracting the resin exuded by the plant were explained. Marihuana, also known as "reefer," "goof butts," "gage," and "muggles" produces both physical and mental states, the latter being the more dangerous. Many violent acts which are the result of irresistable impulses of suggestive origin, when under its influence have made the headlines in many of the newspapers of today.

The control of this weed is very difficult as it can exist in various climates and types of soil, but today in the United States it is a major crime to promote this drug in any form, with very few exceptions. Nations are closely cooperating with each other in attempting to eradicate the drug.

BETA GAMMA GROUP HITS SEASON'S PEAK WITH BUSY PROGRAM

Georgian Court, Rutgers, St. Peter's and Upsala To Be Engaged

EXTENSIVE TRIPS INVOLVED

Beta Gama delegates will travel extensively during the ensuing week, according to the schedule released by Thomas Delate, chairman of the Debate Committee. Four debates have been scheduled, plans for the various trips having been completed. Engagements have been arranged for contests with Georgian Court, Rutgers University, Saint Peter's, and Upsala.

Georgian Court, a college for girls, will be visited on February 15 by Robert Wilderotter, Murray Zealor and Robert O'Brien. The proposition of the debate will be "Woman's place is in the home." On the following day Fred Waters and Thomas Delate will meet Rutgers University.

Saint Peter's College, Jersey City, will be met on Sunday night, February 17. The subject will be "Pump Priming." James Donovan and Thomas Delate will support Villanova in this contest. Their opponents will be Kenneth Carson and James Murray. Saint Peters boasts a good debating team. An audience of 1500 is expected to hear this contest.

While the above-mentioned representatives of Villanova are engaged in Jersey City, Robert Wildrotter and Robert O'Brien will travel to Upsala College, East Orange, New Jersey.

The debating society, under the guidance of Mr. Frayne, has been quite active this month and engaged many of the leading colleges and universities during this period. Manhattan entertained Fred Waters and Thomas Delate on Febru-

CATHOLIC GROUPS ASSIST REFUGEES

Colleges Provide European Students With Opportunity to Continue Education

NEW YORK—Catholics are playing an active role in helping to bring refugee students from those countries in Europe where they are no longer allowed to continue their studies, it was announced by the International Student Service and the Intercollegiate Committee to Aid Student Refugees, which was recently set up to co-ordinate and to extend the fund-raising work in behalf of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish students. Not only have prominent Catholics and Catholic organizations agreed to sponsor the Intercollegiate Committee but also several Catholic colleges have already promised generous aid in the form of schoiarships.

Scholarships for Catholic students have already been arranged for at Fordham University, the Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, and Boston University. Fordham, through Father Gannon, has promised unlimited scholarships. These are however, contingent on the amount raised for board, lodging and other living expenses. It is to help raise such funds that will enable students to take advantage of scholarships that the Intercollegiate Committee is organized. The Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, though relatively small in size, is offering five full four-year scholarships. Boston University, its student committee reports, has promised five scholarships of $300 each and has arranged for the students to have free living quarters. Of the five scholarships three are earmarked, each for a Catholic, Jew and Protestant.

PRE-MEDICAL GROUP HOLDS INITIATION OF NEW APPLICANTS

Santaniello, Hanlon and Refowich Represent Upper-Classmen at Ceremonies

Lamba Kappa Delta, Pre-Medical fraternity, held its annual initiation ceremonies for the benefit of 21 new applicants on Wednesday evening, February 8, in the Alumni Hall gymnasium.

Under the direction of the class officers and the initiation committee, the new members were given varied types of torments. A shower marked the end of the proceedings.

Those initiaetd into the organization were: from the freshman class, John J. Arnold, Robert S. Baggiano, N. Cacciatore, Vincent Casaviell, James Donnelly, Robert Dugan, Salvatore Gagleano, Joseph Koch, Russell Levis, Thomas J. Lyons, Isadore Marlinsky, Joseph M. Scornavacchi, Sigismund Szlucha, and Henry Rzonca. The upperclassmen were represented by Joseph Santaniello of the sophomore class, and Peter Hanlon and Richard Refowich of the Junior class.

MANY MEMBERS GET CLASS RINGS

Sapphire and Spinel Lead as Most Popular Stones

Certain definite trends in the selection of the junior class rings have been sharply outlined insofar as the previous sales are concerned. Frank Pimpinella, chairman of the ring committee, stated that the two most popular stones selected have been the blue spinel and the sapphire. This choice shows a tendency to disregard birth stones and return to the colors of the college.

Approximately one hundred and twenty-five rings have been sold thus far, and of these, the three most popular settings out of a choice of twelve are a military finish on yellow gold, a similar finish on green gold, and a rose finish. Another instance of popularity can be seen in the selection of the 14 pennyweight as the chief weight. Behind this in the order of their importance as determined by the sales chart follow the 12 and 16 pennyweights.

The design of the Junior ring is essentially the same as that of last year. However, the stone and both the letters and the figures are more prominently raised. The sister type of ring, smaller than the regular man's ring, is quite evidently losing ground in the popularity race for orders calling for them have been in a decided minority.

Although the original contract with the company calls for a four-week fulfillment of an order, the usual amount of time required now is only three weeks.

FR. TOURSHER, O.S.A. SUCCUMBS AT ALTAR AFTER ACTIVE LIFE

Librarian, Translator, Confessor, Teacher Within Year of Golden Jubilee

Rev. Frances F. Tourscher, O. S. A., teacher of Villanova College, censor of books for the Philadelphia Archdiocese, and archivist of and the outstanding authority on the Augustinian Order, died suddenly on January 30 immediately after celebrating Mass at St. Mary's Chapel, Villanova.

Father Tourscher was stricken with a heart attack but continued to the end of the Mass and had to be helped to his room where he died a short while later. Recently he had suffered an attack of pleurisy.

Father Tourscher was born at Dushore, Pa., May 10, 1870, the son of John and Louise Widheurser Tourscher. He entered Villanova and became a member of the Augustinian Order on September 19, 1895. On September 29, 1898, he was ordained a priest by the Most Reverend Sebastian Martinelli.

He taught at Villanova College for more than forty years, teaching Latin, history and theology. Father Tourscher was an authority on the writings of the patron saint of the order. He was the author of

Rev. E. V. Stanford Stresses Merits Of Small Colleges

Pennsylvania's Privately Controlled Educational Institutions Promote Good Will

The outstanding contribution which the 50 privately controlled colleges and universities of Pennsylvania make to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in the form of "good will" is not sufficiently recognized, Doctor Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova College, told members of his faculty at the opening of the second semester.

Father Stanford revealed that a recent survey shows that the colleges of the State provide educational opportunities for 82,957 young men and women. They serve their home communities, first of all, by providing educational opportunities for 43,095 young men and women. They promote understanding and "good will" among the various communities of the State by yearly bringing into their respective college communities, 24,436 young men and women from other sections of the State. They bring Pennsylvania to the favorable attention of other States, by yearly attracting to their compuses, 15,003 young men and women, representing the District of Columbia and every State in the Union. They bring Pennsylvania to the favorable attention of foreign countries, by enrolling 423 students from a total of 57 foreign countries and territories.

'They Never Learn' Staged As Campus Musical Revue

Pre-Lenten Comedy Produced by Bert Passanante; Ward and Knaphle Write Script; Villanovans Present Specially Written Melodies

DOBBINS AND LUCENTE RENDER VOCALS

By THOMAS A. SHALLOW

"They Never Learn," a three-act musical comedy, written by William J. Ward and Lawrence J. Knaphle, seniors in the Department of Education, and directed by Bert Passanante, senior in the School of Science, will be presented in the Villanova Field House, next Tuesday evening.

Ed Lucente and Bill Dobbins have the lead singing roles, while Joseph Bach, John Gallagher, Max Schwartz, Wetold I. Kryawicki and Len Flinkman have other important parts. Musical accompaniment will be supplied by the "Villanovans," and Passanante also will lead them during the performance.

A feature of the revue, jointly sponsored by the band and the Belle Masque, will be the introduction of original songs by the soloists and the "Villanovans." They have been scored by Jimmy Cook, young West Philadelphia song writer, and professionally arranged by Victor Nelson. The catchy tunes to be presented publicly for the first time are "You Us'ta Be My Queen," "I Close My Eyes," "Eileen," "This Is the One," and "Dream Girl."

The play elaborates on the student "controlism" theme but it is not a satire and is not directed against any group. Its purpose is not to point a moral but simply to supply fun. One of its highlighted scenes is a dance routine by a chorus of football men, coached by Knaphle and Ward, and designed on the military motif.

A Mardi Gras originally had been scheduled for the shows' date by the Belle Masque, but Mr. Anthony J. Frane, dramatics coach, agreed to work on the musical comedy to help the band, because the pro-

NEW P K P MEMBERS FETED AT BANQUET.. HUMBLED IN ORDEAL

Initiation Precedes Annual Fraternity Dinner; Guest Speakers Present

The annual initiation and banquet of Phi Kappa Phi, held last Tuesday evening, February 7, in the Villanova dining hall, was attended by members of the faculty, a large group of alumni, and the 55 new members.

Those who spoke at the affair were Paetrus F. Banmiller, registrar of the college; John Keffer, class of 1925, former president of the society, now an active engineer of the Bell Telephone Company of New Jersey; Dr. E. L. Haenish, head of the chemical engineering department of the college; Mr. William Ehmer, connected with the Riley Stoker Company; and Rev. John S. O'Leary, O. S. A., moderator of the fraternity.

Mr. Ehmer, guest speaker of the evening, spoke on the importance of realizing that engineering has a human side as well as a technical one. Father O'Leary, in his talk, stressed the fact that students should try to achieve a higher outlook even when life is serious.

Raymond Shiek, senior civil engineer, presented the prize paddle to Dennis Dunne, a junior. The paddle signified that Shiek had taken the worst "beating" of last year's initiates and that Dunne had survived the hardest treatment this year.

SENIOR ACTIVITIES CLOSE WTH DANCES

Graduating Class Concludes Week With Affairs at Benjamin Franklin, Field House

The 1939 social season was opened Friday night with the annual Belle Air Ball. In spite of the inclement weather, a large group of students and their friends were on hand to dance to the music of Will Osborne and his orchestra.

The orchestra sat on a temporary stand placed in front of the stage In the center of the floor was an attractive display of flowers. The acoustic curtains and the false ceiling plus myriads of lamps added to the atmosphere.

The music started promptly at ten and continued till two with a few short intermissions and one-half hour intermission. The vocals were taken care of by the maestro himself and Lynn Davis. Dick Rogers added a novelty touch with an impersonation of a group of foreign dictators singing.

The orchestra gave very clever arrangement of "Danny Boy" with Will Osborne singing and the rest of the organization filling in behind him in glee club fashion. Lynn Davis followed by singing the hit "Deep Purple."

The faculty was well represented by the presence of Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., Vice President; Rev. Daniel Falvey, O. S. A., Dr Harold Hartman and many others.

Following the half-hour intermission, the Seniors had their grand march. The march was led by William Ward, president of the class and his guest, followed by the other Seniors and their guests. The march was followed by a dance exclusively for the Seniors.

Dancing continued then until 2 A. M. when the curfew rang ending

FELIX FRANKFURTER COURT APPOINTMENT ARGUED BY SEMINAR

Justice McReynolds' Compared With Possible Stand of Mr. Frankfurter

The recent appointment of Felix Frankfurter to the U. S. Supreme Court was discussed at the History Seminar Thursday, January 12.

Particular emphasis was placed on the fact that although Frankfurter, like Roosevelt, leans toward a liberal interpretation of the constitution, there is no guarantee that he will continue his liberal policies.

To substantiate this statement an example was cited in the appointment of Attorney General McReynolds by Wilson in 1915. McReynolds took office as a liberal but since his appointment, he has been a consistent conservative in his interpretation of the laws. However it was pointed out that the President has had much good fortune in his recent appointments of Supreme Justices Black and Reed.

After next Thursday's meeting there will be a recess of two weeks due to Mid-Term examinations and the Retreat. Meetings, next semester, will be held in the newly acquired Simpson Hall.

PLAN TOUR

Members of the A. S. C. E. held their first meeting of the new year yesterday, January 16. Plans were completed for the inspection tour of the Pennsylvania Railroad freight yards at 50th and Market Sts., in Philadelphia. The meeting was held in Room 214, Mendel Hall, at 1 o'clock.

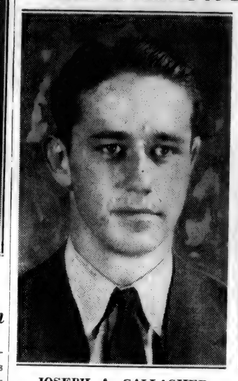
program, which annually is the inaugural event of Junior Week, is to introduce Villanova to the mothers of the students. Through the activities which are especially conducted for them, the mothers come into contact with various traditions which are prevalent here.

O'Brien is consulting with Albert Holl, chairman of Mother's Day last year. The purpose of this is to include all the features that proved successful in last year's program.

The remaining committee members for the Mother's Day program have yet to be selected and approved. Such a move will conclude the Junior appointments for the year, unless the Open House program will be re-established again.

Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., junior class moderator has announced a meeting to be held in the near future to note the progress that the various chairmen have made, and to lay further plans for Junior Week.

NEWLY APPOINTED CO-EDITORS OF "ENGINEER"



JOSEPH A. GALLAGHER

CLEMENT F. DINON

"FRONT" APPOINTS ASSOCIATE EDITOR

James M. Quigley, senior arts student, has been appointed associate editor of the Christian Front, a sociological magazine organized by Richard Deverall, a Villanova alumnus. A further addition to the staff was made in the person of Paul E. Brown, freshman engineer, who will write an article in the next issue.

Featured in the March issue will be an article by the recently appointed Attorney General of the United States, Frank M. Murphy.

This month's publication was given variety by the appearance of a new cover design. The Philadelphia record recently included an editorial which had appeared in the magazine.

BELLE AIR ORDERS TAKEN

Staff Members To Be Stationed At Several Campus Posts

Orders for additional copies of the Belle Air, annual college year book, will be taken at various places around the campus. In room 51, Mendel Hall, orders will be taken from the non-resident students. For the resident of Austin Hall, William Garrity will take the subscriptions, while in Fedigan Hall, William Smith will be available. Edward Holland of Alumni Hall will receive orders there. At present the price is five dollars but after March 1st, the cost will be seven dollars and fifty cents.

Bernard McHenry, editor, warns that as an assurance of orders being filled promptly, it is advisable to place them immediately.

FLINKMAN REVEALS EVIL OF MARIHUANA

Harmful Weed Subject of National Concern Research Group is Told

"The alarming spread of marihuana and its increasing use by a considerable number of youths in the United States, has not only aroused national concern but has also attracted the attention of the League of Nations." This was the statement made by Leonard Flinkman, senior Science student, at the meeting of the Research Seminar.

He explained that the unusual effect of this drug is that though not habit forming, the pleasing sensation which follows its use causes the person to have increasing desires to use it repeatedly.

Flinkman traced the growth of this plant from its origin in Central and Western Asia to its gradual spread all over the world. The methods of cultivation and ways of extracting the resin exuded by the plant were explained. Marihuana, also known as "reefer," "goof butts," "gage," and "muggles" produces both physical and mental states, the latter being the more dangerous. Many violent acts which are the result of irresistable impulses of suggestive origin, when under its influence have made the headlines in many of the newspapers of today.

The control of this weed is very difficult as it can exist in various climates and types of soil, but today in the United States it is a major crime to promote this drug in any form, with very few exceptions. Nations are closely cooperating with each other in attempting to eradicate the drug.

BETA GAMMA GROUP HITS SEASON'S PEAK WITH BUSY PROGRAM

Georgian Court, Rutgers, St. Peter's and Upsala To Be Engaged

EXTENSIVE TRIPS INVOLVED

Beta Gama delegates will travel extensively during the ensuing week, according to the schedule released by Thomas Delate, chairman of the Debate Committee. Four debates have been scheduled, plans for the various trips having been completed. Engagements have been arranged for contests with Georgian Court, Rutgers University, Saint Peter's, and Upsala.

Georgian Court, a college for girls, will be visited on February 15 by Robert Wilderotter, Murray Zealor and Robert O'Brien. The proposition of the debate will be "Woman's place is in the home." On the following day Fred Waters and Thomas Delate will meet Rutgers University.

Saint Peter's College, Jersey City, will be met on Sunday night, February 17. The subject will be "Pump Priming." James Donovan and Thomas Delate will support Villanova in this contest. Their opponents will be Kenneth Carson and James Murray. Saint Peters boasts a good debating team. An audience of 1500 is expected to hear this contest.

While the above-mentioned representatives of Villanova are engaged in Jersey City, Robert Wilderotter and Robert O'Brien will travel to Upsala College, East Orange, New Jersey.

The debating society, under the guidance of Mr. Frayne, has been quite active this month and engaged many of the leading colleges and universities during this period. Manhattan entertained Fred Waters and Thomas Delate on Febru-

CATHOLIC GROUPS ASSIST REFUGEES

Colleges Provide European Students With Opportunity to Continue Education

NEW YORK—Catholics are playing an active role in helping to bring refugee students from those countries in Europe where they are no longer allowed to continue their studies, it was announced by the International Student Service and the Intercollegiate Committee to Aid Student Refugees, which was recently set up to co-ordinate and to extend the fund-raising work in behalf of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish students. Not only have prominent Catholics and Catholic organizations agreed to sponsor the Intercollegiate Committee but also several Catholic colleges have already promised generous aid in the form of scholarships.

Scholarships for Catholic students have already been arranged for at Fordham University, the Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, and Boston University. Fordham, through Father Gannon, has promised unlimited scholarships. These are however, contingent on the amount raised for board, lodging and other living expenses. It is to help raise such funds that will enable students to take advantage of scholarships that the Intercollegiate Committee is organized. The Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart, though relatively small in size, is offering five full four-year scholarships. Boston University, its student committee reports, has promised five scholarships of $300 each and has arranged for the students to have free living quarters. Of the five scholarships three are earmarked, each for a Catholic, Jew and Protestant.

MANY MEMBERS GET CLASS RINGS

Sapphire and Spinel Lead as Most Popular Stones

Certain definite trends in the selection of the junior class rings have been sharply outlined insofar as the previous sales are concerned. Frank Pimpinella, chairman of the ring committee, stated that the two most popular stones selected have been the blue spinel and the sapphire. This choice shows a tendency to disregard birth stones and return to the colors of the college.

Approximately one hundred and twenty-five rings have been sold thus far, and of these, the three most popular settings out of a choice of twelve are a military finish on yellow gold, a similar finish on green gold, and a rose finish. Another instance of popularity can be seen in the selection of the 14 pennyweight as the chief weight. Behind this in the order of their importance as determined by the sales chart follow the 12 and 16 pennyweights.

The design of the Junior ring is essentially the same as that of last year. However, the stone and both the letters and the figures are more prominently raised. The sister type of ring, smaller than the regular man's ring, is quite evidently losing ground in the popularity race for orders calling for them have been in a decided minority.

Although the original contract with the company calls for a four-week fulfillment of an order, the usual amount of time required now is only three weeks.

SIMPSON HALL OPENS

Music Seminar Initiates Its Use With Concert Thursday Evening

Newly acquired Simpson Hall has been fully furnished and equipped for the various seminars which are to meet there, and will be opened for use this week.

A piano, recording machines and numerous recordings have been supplied for the room to be used by the Music Seminar. All the other rooms have been comfortably furnished with easy chairs, lamps and pictures.

As there will be no official opening of the building, completion of plans being held up by strikes in Philadelphia, the first seminar meeting held this week will unofficially inaugurate its use.

Schedules for the different meetings have not as yet been arranged but will be announced as soon as they are completed. For the present Simpson Hall will be used only for seminar purposes.

FR. TOURSHER, O.S.A. SUCCUMBS AT ALTAR AFTER ACTIVE LIFE

Librarian, Translator, Confessor, Teacher Within Year of Golden Jubilee

Rev. Frances F. Tourscher, O. S. A., teacher of Villanova College, censor of books for the Philadelphia Archdiocese, and archivist of and the outstanding authority on the Augustinian Order, died suddenly on January 30 immediately after celebrating Mass at St. Mary's Chapel, Villanova.

Father Tourscher was stricken with a heart attack but continued to the end of the Mass and had to be helped to his room where he died a short while later. Recently he had suffered an attack of pleurisy.

Father Tourscher was born at Dushore, Pa., May 10, 1870, the son of John and Louise Widheurser Tourscher. He entered Villanova and became a member of the Augustinian Order on September 19, 1895. On September 29, 1898, he was ordained a priest by the Most Reverend Sebastian Martinelli.

He taught at Villanova College for more than forty years, teaching Latin, history and theology. Father Tourscher was an authority on the writings of the patron saint of the order. He was the author of

Rev. E. V. Stanford Stresses Merits Of Small Colleges

Pennsylvania's Privately Controlled Educational Institutions Promote Good Will

The outstanding contribution which the 50 privately controlled colleges and universities of Pennsylvania make to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in the form of "good will" is not sufficiently recognized, Doctor Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova College, told members of his faculty at the opening of the second semester.

Father Stanford revealed that a recent survey shows that the colleges of the State provide educational opportunities for 82,957 young men and women. They serve their home communities, first of all, by providing educational opportunities for 43,095 young men and women. They promote understanding and "good will" among the various communities of the State by yearly bringing into their respective college communities, 24,436 young men and women from other sections of the State. They bring Pennsylvania to the favorable attention of other States, by yearly attracting to their compuses, 15,003 young men and women, representing the District of Columbia and every State in the Union. They bring Pennsylvania to the favorable attention of foreign countries, by enrolling 423 students from a total of 57 foreign countries and territories.

SCIENCE SERVICE TEST ANNOUNCED

Graduating Seniors Given Opportunity to Qualify For Junior Federal Positions

WASHINGTON.—For the first time the Civil Service Commission is offering, during the first part of March, a consolidated Civil Service examination for 20 junior professional positions in the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Graduating seniors who pass the examination will have an opportunity to qualify for appointment soon after July 1.

Roy F. Hendrickson, the Department's Director of Personnel, has announced that more than 1100 junior scientists will be needed this year because of the enlarged research program. The positions pay a starting salary of $2000 a year.

Students may obtain the announcement and application blank at the nearest Post Office, named in the examination announcement, or by writing the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C. Ask for Announcement No. 18 and Application No. 8. Applications must be on file with the Commission's office at Washington, not later than February 27, from States east of Colorado.

Successful candidates will be selected on the basis of the general examinations plus the records of completed college courses.

Mr. Hendrickson also revealed that consolidated examinations are planned for March of each year so that members of each graduating class will have an opportunity to be considered for employment in the Department during the Summer following graduation.

'They Never Learn' Staged As Campus Musical Revue

Pre-Lenten Comedy Produced by Bert Passanante; Ward and Knaphle Write Script; Villanovans Present Specially Written Melodies

DOBBINS AND LUCENTE RENDER VOCALS

By THOMAS A. SHALLOW

"They Never Learn," a three-act musical comedy, written by William J. Ward and Lawrence J. Knaphle, seniors in the Department of Education, and directed by Bert Passanante, senior in the School of Science, will be presented in the Villanova Field House, next Tuesday evening.

Ed Lucente and Bill Dobbins have the lead singing roles, while Joseph Bach, John Gallagher, Max Schwartz, Wetold I. Kryswicki and Len Flinkman have other important parts. Musical accompaniment will be supplied by the "Villanovans," and Passanante also will lead them during the performance.

A feature of the revue, jointly sponsored by the band and the Belle Masque, will be the introduction of original songs by the soloists and the "Villanovans." They have been scored by Jimmy Cook, young West Philadelphia song writer, and professionally arranged by Victor Nelson. The catchy tunes to be presented publicly for the first time are "You Us'ta Be My Queen," "I Close My Eyes," "Eileen," "This Is the One," and "Dream Girl."

The play elaborates on the student "controlism" theme but it is not a satire and is not directed against any group. Its purpose is not to point a moral but simply to supply fun. One of its highlighted scenes is a dance routine by a chorus of football men, coached by Knaphle and Ward, and designed on the military motif.

A Mardi Gras originally had been scheduled for the show, date by the Belle Masque, but Mr. Anthony J. Frane, dramatics coach, agreed to work on the musical comedy to help the band, because the pro-

NEW P K P MEMBERS FETED AT BANQUET, HUMBLED IN ORDEAL

Initiation Precedes Annual Fraternity Dinner; Guest Speakers Present

The annual initiation and banquet of Phi Kappa Phi, held last Tuesday evening, February 7, in the Villanova dining hall, was attended by members of the faculty, a large group of alumni, and the 55 new members.

Those who spoke at the affair were Paetrus F. Banmiller, registrar of the college; John Keffer, class of 1925, former president of the society, now an active engineer of the Bell Telephone Company of New Jersey; Dr. E. L. Haenish, head of the chemical engineering department of the college; Mr. William Ehmer, connected with the Riley Stoker Company; and Rev. John S. O'Leary, O. S. A., moderator of the fraternity.

Mr. Ehmer, guest speaker of the evening, spoke on the importance of realizing that engineering has a human side as well as a technical one. Father O'Leary, in his talk, stressed the fact that students should try to achieve a higher outlook even when life is serious.

Raymond Shiek, senior civil engineer, presented the prize paddle to Dennis Dunne, a junior. The paddle signified that Shiek had taken the worst "beating" of last year's initiates and that Dunne had survived the hardest treatment this year.

SENIOR ACTIVITIES CLOSE WITH DANCES

Graduating Class Concludes Week With Affairs at Benjamin Franklin, Field House

The 1939 social season was opened Friday night with the annual Belle Air Ball. In spite of the inclement weather, a large group of students and their friends were on hand to dance to the music of Will Osborne and his orchestra.

The orchestra sat on a temporary stand placed in front of the stage. In the center of the floor was an attractive display of flowers. The acoustic curtains and the false ceiling plus myriads of lamps added to the atmosphere.

The music started promptly at ten and continued till two with a few short intermissions and one-half hour intermission. The vocals were taken care of by the maestro himself and Lynn Davis. Dick Rogers added a novelty touch with an impersonation of a group of foreign dictators singing.

The orchestra gave very clever arrangement of "Danny Boy" with Will Osborne singing and the rest of the organization filling in behind him in glee club fashion. Lynn Davis followed by singing the hit "Deep Purple."

The faculty was well represented by the presence of Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., Vice President; Rev. Daniel Falvey, O. S. A., Dr. Harold Hartman and many others.

Following the half-hour intermission, the Seniors had their grand march. The march was led by William Ward, president of the class and his guest, followed by the other Seniors and their guests. The march was followed by a dance exclusively for the Seniors.

Dancing continued then until 2 A. M. when the curfew rang ending

DEDICATION

The present issue is respectfully dedicated to the memory of the Very Reverend Francis E. Tourscher, O. S. A.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

EVERY month 17,000 German refugees are entering the United States, normal quota restrictions not being enforced. France and Russia have stopped all imigration from Germany. Although England allows them to enter her country, she has made it clear that England must only be a temporary haven before they continue their journey elsewhere.

Now established in the United States are numerous agencies that secure homes and positions for these unfortunates. It is a question whether the undoubted contribution of outstanding emigrants overbalances the loss in job opportunities and consequent additions to relief rolls faced by American citizens. Is it fair that the United States bear the brunt of this emigration?

CONFUSERS CONFUSED

LAST week the so-called Loyalist forces asked for peace. Barcelona has fallen. Perhaps in the near future the mighty war of fratricide will cease and the Iberian peninsula will once more return to the victorious peace of Christ the King. The result was inevitable.

In this country a prejudiced press and stupid cacklings of so-called intellectuals in our better known universities convinced the greater part of the American people that the war was being waged between the forces of Democracy and Fascism.

These parlor pinks in their supercilious campus columns went so far as to demand that the United States withdraw her neutrality and lift the embargo on Spain. Fortunately, Franco worked faster than our rah-rah boys who would have the United States lured into a mighty war against Spain—True Spain.

Well now it is over, and we of Villanova rejoice. We tell the world that Franco's victory is our victory and the victory of all right thinking religious democratic people. Spain will return to her former Catholic glory. Christ will once more reign over all of Castile and the campus agitators had better return to the time of the raccoon coat and feathers for their brief excursion into the land of international affairs was a complete failure.

Franco, we salute you! Long live Spain. Long live Christ, the Prince of Peace.

GOOD BUSINESS?

CURRENT inflation of jingoism by press, radio, and screen is topped this week by the sponsoring of National Americanism Week by the Chambers of Commerce. The brand of Americanism achieved by high pressure advertising is an unhealthy national egotism ringing reminiscently of the preparation for the World War slaughter. The essence of Americanism, political equality, economic and social opportunity, and religious freedom, is fostered by a loyalty engendered by its benefits and obligations as experienced in day-to-day living and working—not by speeches, singing, posters, and flag waving.

MAY HIS SPIRIT LIVE ON

PIUS XI came to the Throne of Saint Peter as the able successor to Pope Benidict XV in 1922. He was greeted by the severed diplomatic relations of the Vatican and a world slowly emerging from the battlefields of the World War.

Immediately upon his ascension to the throne it was seen that the Papacy was once more to renew friendly relations with Italy. The Pope was no longer to be the "Prisoner of the Vatican." In 1929 a Concordat was signed and the Pope, after 59 years, entered the city of Rome.

Brilliant success with the pen brought, in forceful prose, 30 encyclicals, the greatest number written by any Pope in modern times. They were on timely subjects and of varied interests in the philosophy of the Church. "Render to Ceasar the things that are Ceasar's, and to God the things that are God's."

His throne he leaves in greater importance, and yet at a period unstable and threatening. His last words even now questioned "Let there be peace," or "there are so many things to be done" have merit and forethought.

SO SORRY

YOUNG ladies of neighboring collegiate institutions are utterly disappointed with the failure of our men to accept their most cordial invitations to a Valentine Festival. The proposed fete was to revive the kindergarten custom of dropping Valentine cards into a box and drawing them out in pairs, whereupon the two individuals whose cards were drawn together, would be obliged to invite one another to respective college socialS.

The Villanova P. O. has announced with regret it has had no occasion to employ extra workers. Ye Olde Sweete Shop has reported no increase in sales. Are the men of Villanova College so concerned with their studies that they dare risk their social reputations? We remind you that "Work and no play make Jack a dull boy" and sincerely hope that there will be no further occasion to bring such matters to the attention of the student body.

Life, Literature And Christ

By
Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., M. A.

Indulge me, you who read, while I begin this monologue by making what, from the standpoint of psychology is a very bad mistake.

One should never introduce in support of one's view a quotation which is not definite and pointed. Yet, for the life of me I can't think who it was who said or where it was I read what I want to tell you about my way of introduction to what I want to say. I do remember that it was said by the type of man who would be terribly hurt if he knew that someone who read what he said, forgot it was he who said it.

Anyhow, the unknown whom I quote indirectly was giving off for publication some very serious views about what the college curriculum calls "English." In stressing the oft stressed fact that English was not only for the English class, he made many of the usual pertinent remarks, laying chief emphasis on the intimate nature of the things we say or write or read. He described how our every spoken or written word is a reflection of our inner personality, how the things we read influence our thought and become elements (however infinitesimal) of that same inner personality. He played upon this relation between English and self, English and expression, English and personality, English and philosophy of life. When one writes one gives expression to the inmost products of one's mind. When one reads one communes with the deeper minds who have weighed the problems of life. "English, in short, is an intensely personal thing," he went on, "English is me."

I stopped there. I didn't quite get the point. One thing was clear, though, he surely had the "high seriousness" angle toward Life and literature. He recognized the connection between literature and philosophy of life. Nothing influences my philosophy of life so much as what I read; nothing shows it so much as what I write.

It is exactly on the question of philosophy of life that the Catholic boy in college differs from all others in college. If his philosophy of life is not different from theirs he has no good reason for not being at their kind of college All Catholic colleges have their reason for existing in the fact that the Catholic philosophy of life is well, let us say, unique: unique in the sense that it realizes the fact that no mere philosophy is enough; unique in the sense that it realizes there is more to life than philosophy. It leaves room for the superphilosophical Christ, and Redemption, and Grace.

This being understood, and taking for granted the intimate bond between life and literature as stressed by our unknown stresser two paragraphs ago, let us look at English literature as colleges know it.

Practically all universities—Oxford is one great exception—began their obligatory history of English letters (reflections of English philosophy of life, don't forget) with Chaucer. They do this prompted by a fine sense of what constitutes a unity. They realize that there are two English literatures: one, pre-Reformation; the other, post-Reformation; or, to put it bluntly, one, Catholic; the other, non-Catholic. It is the non-Catholic stuff which is prescribed for our study. The chief authors in the list do not stand for, and their writings do not spring from, an attitude of life anything like ours.

Where is Christ in Shakespeare, Milton, Dryden (in his younger days) Donne, Swift, Wordsworth, Collins, Burns, Keats, Shelley, Byron, Browning, Dickens? These men simply do not view the world with a line of vision parallel to ours. Where their views coincide with ours, it is merely a coincidence of ubiquitous meanderings crossing and recrossing a direct track. If we read (as we do) in Shakespeare, Milton, Browning, etc. some noble truth of nature breath-takingly expressed, it is because for the moment they have found our way and go along it with us for some yards, but they soon leave the mapped path and branch out again into the trackless waste of unprofitable searchings.

Shakespeare has written what has been called the Bible of Human Nature. It is not a truly Christian Bible. He never handled a theme from a Christian viewpoint. Milton wrote to "justify the ways of God to Man." He forgot that some 160 years before, some had done as much of such "justifying" as His Infinite Wisdom thought fitting. The flowering of English thought immediately after the Reformation is pagan. It has been with varying degree, pagan ever since; and, in general, the further time advances from the 16th century the more Pagan English literature, as our university English departments serve it up, becomes. It will need a complete change of philosophy of life in the nations before Crashaw is rated with Donne, Thomas More with Frances Bacon,

College Chatter

Some Try Anything:

The quiet of the Princeton campus is broken every night during studies for mid-year exams by the traditional "Poler's Recess."

The recess is inaugurated by the ringing of the curfew at 9 o'clock. This is followed by a series of firecrackers, horns, alarm clocks, and whatever vocal noises are possible. Thus studies are eliminated for about five minutes.

Food for Thought:

The number of German University students has declined from 126,000 in 1931 to 70,000 in 1938, according to the periodical "Young Germany." The survey was made before the recent ousting of the Jewish students.

Causes for this lie probably in the attractiveness of army and party careers, and the length of training period for professional careers, to which two years arms and half a year labor service have now been added. Also the compulsory restriction of the number of students, which took place at the beginning of the present regime is considered a factor.

Hey Red!

Blazing youth on the Wheaton College campus have formed a Red Head's Club. If Villanova were to start one and George Kamen was elected president (which is just what would happen), we would have the biggest Red Head Club president in the country.

Prelude to a Pun:

Foggy Mac (gazing at watch)—Gosh the minutes seem long.

Yours Truly (missing the hint)—Oh Yeah! You ought to see ours.

Attention Engineers:

Cornell University's College of Engineering will award 12 John McMullen Graduate Scholarships of an annual value of $1000 this Spring for students interested in persuing research and working for an advanced degree. The scholarships will be open to graduates of accredited schools and colleges of engineering.

Don't get me wrong. Our English literature is not to be dismissed with a supreme cavalier gesture. It is too interesting, too profitable for that. But be alive to the fact that it is a historic record of the wanderings of the unguided English mind, as it trudges its tenacious way aside from our mapped path, sometimes scaling breathless heights, at other times sprawling prone in the depths of futility. To us, Literature is not a "criticism of life." It is a record of unaided attempts to evaluate life. We have in our religious philosophy our own true criticism of life. We should learn then to follow English literature in the light of what we know the truth to be. Be skeptical of the full value of the intellectual offerings which the succession of individualists serve up to you, appreciate your own position of security. Notre Dame, Georgetown Dance to Osborne; Bull Thrower McGlade

Hi' ya, students! Here comes your dope from the local entertainment circles and news from near and far. To whom it may concern let it be known that Villanova is not the only college boasting of Will Osborne for their Ball. Both Notre Dame and Georgetown have acquired the services of the master of slide music. Quite a popular guy.

TO OPPONENTS OF SWING:

Ray Noble, one of America's foremost dance arrangers—not swing—has been heard stating that Benny Goodman's version of "Swing, Swing, Swing" contains as much good counterpoints as a classical Bach fugue. See, to Ra, swing isn't so bad technically and a lot easier on the ear than this "long hair" stuff our high tone readers appreciate (?).

BEWARE THE LIONS:

Villanova should pride herself greatly in having an aspirant to Frank Bucks' noble occupation of lion trapping enrolled right here on the campus. Harry McGlade, one of our venerable seniors, while in Virginia was driving a wagon containing a couple of lions in a cage. During the trip our trapper hit a hidden bump in the road and broke the wheels on the trailing cage. When this happened Harry became greatly alarmed for fear he hurt the poor, little (?) things and went back to investigate. Upon inspection he found the lions were not only unhurt but freed from their cage. This fine big game hunter then dashed in the cage himself until armed assistance arrived. Believe it or not fellows, this is true! Ask Harry!

COMING ATTRACTIONS:

Artie Shaw will make his appearance in Philadelphia at the Earle Theatre on February 24. Preceding his show Eddie Duchin will pound the ivories from this picture house on the 17th of the same month.

Benny Goodman has been negotiating with the Hollywood moguls in relation to him and his band making a picture named "Cavalcade in Swing."

ATTENTION DICTATORS:

Paul Whiteman, Bill Toy

prominent bandleader, when playing at the President's Birthday Ball in Washington, D. C., revealed the attitude expressed in a democracy. Upon arrival of the President, instead of playing some conventional anthem as "Hail to the Chief," White swung out to the popular dance tune Franklin D. Roosevelt Jones. If our President were a dictator, Whiteman would be head band-master for a near-by concentration camp.

Following on the heels of their announcement of "Hit and Run," Warners are also making ready to release a screen version of the "Life of Knute Rockne." All necessary permissions have been obtained and the picture is due for production soon.

ATTENTION VILLANOVA

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of any members of the G. A. R. who knew Abraham Lincoln should get in touch with Warner Brother Studios. Their assistance is being asked in the filming of a picture regarding the life of Lincoln.

Prospective Theatre Goers Note Well:

Several downtown theatres have announced a new policy of a one dollar admission to every seat in the house. Advance sales have been retained and all seats are reserved. This gives the fellows with a limited income a chance to see legitimate shows at a reasonable price. Bouquets are in order for the management for this idea.

Pix of the Week:

The Earle Theatre featuring Benny Goodman on the stage with the Camel Caravan cast and "The Return of Mr. Moto" on the screen.

Show of the Week:

"Off to Buffalo" currently being viewed at the Chestnut Street Opera House for a limited time.

Screen Players Given Swing Titles:

Dr. Matty Malneck, appearing in St. Louis Blues, gave the following titles to screen celebrities interviewed between sets:

Dorothy Lamour is a "Sultry Sue."

Lloyd Nolan is classed as a "Drum and Bugle Boy."

Tito Guizar is an "icky."

His definitions for the terms used were: an "icky" is a swingster who will make an affectionate husband or wife, the "sultry" type are subject to moodiness and the "drum and bugle" addicts are reliable and hard working.

Introducing—

By JIM HAUGHTON

Whenever the name "coal cracker" comes up in a conversation the thought naturally reverts to the idea of a charming lummox who's right at home chewing tobacco opposite an unhandsome end and tackle; or a nice husky youngster who's trying to find out what America is like.

But in the famed anthracite coal veins of Pennsylvania will also be found a few intellectuals. And these brain-trusters are well represented on the Villanova campus in the person of Jim Quigley, the Mount Carmel dreamer extrordinare.

"Front" Writer

This quiet radical only recently gathered over his thinning head of blonde hair the title of Associate Editor of The Christian Front. As one of the contributors to Villanova's gift to the sociological publications, he has come under the wing of Ridgewood anarchist, Dick Deverall. And when the Deverall spirit sneaks in, contributions and deep thought come out.

You ask how a fellow with such background could have time to pick up an intellectual background. Well he started in the local parochial schoo six years after March 30, 1918. From here he advanced into Mt. Carme Catholic high where he tossed the pigskin between debates and dramatic presentations.

Several institutions like Notre Dame, Penn State and Bucknell had "feelers" out for the Mount Carmel Playboy, but the sophistication of the Main Line attracted Quigley and he became one of the Railway Express trunk luggers in the Fall of '35.

Like all freshmen, he joined everything joinable. The list included the glee club, band and the debaters. But come the second year and he was one of the white hatted boys of the Villanova committee. And let's not forget his proud boast of having spent his best sleeping period in that year. But political blood of the Irish entered his blood in the third and he tired of being a ward heeler. So he ended up as vice-prexy of the Junior Class.

Quigley's the sort of a fellow who rarely speaks, but speaks wisdom. Thus debating was the natural outlet for his politics and wisdom. For four year he'e held a big part in this vocal forsenic league, but claims radio debating is the toughest proposition.

Naturally such an article must have a co-related helper and 323 Fedigan provides the help with Boston's Frank Castles. Both these guys argue as to who was co-captain of Father Kileys' Latin Brigade. But Quigley quickly relents the posotion as president of the Skogas to the broad A lad. But between the both of them they divide the honor as least shaven individual on the local acreage. Seems that shoes and razor's are on Jim's allergic list, but he can only do without the latter.

Last year when Benny Goodman brought his music makers to the Earle, his Camel broadcast was to eminate from the WCAU studios. but to gather the coveted ducats to the broadcast it was necessary for the applicant to dash out a slight dissertation on "Swing." Well the big timber king from the coal mines took his pen in hand and came out as one of the lucky winners for the jazz symposium. Yep even an intellectual can be a jitterbug.

Patron of the Dance

Up near Mount Carmel they've got two dance dispenserys called Mayaville and Lakewood. Both these spots gather each season the world's best music masters, and weekly they gather Jim Quigley as an earnest dancer. In fact this musical love of the modern youth brings discord into the slight office of the Christian Front. Seems Deverall goes for the haute monde of Korsikoff and Stravinsky, while Quigley will settle for Goodman and Shaw.

His educational traits are fostered in the School of Arts, but he also managed to find time to gather his necessary education credits for a major in social studies. Jim won't prophesy as to the future, but several law schools are on his favorite list.

You may recall that a few paragraphs back we mentioned about his being a timber king, but a few weekly letters take care of the lumber territory up near Williamsport. But when he cuts all his timber down he plans to have 27,000 acres and 9000 cows. So maybe you realize the worth of this quiet radical from the coal mines.

One of the fellows in Austin has been walking around mumbling to himself lately. I managed to catch a phrase that made sense and it went something like this: "And that blonde. . . . She may not be able to add, but she certainly can distract!"

They do it by degrees!

VIC COOK has started an Owl's Club on the campus. His official title is Major Hoople. JACK METZSINGER really runs things under the title of Martha. For available rooms apply to him in his domicile, 118 Austin.

One of the best descriptions of a masculine physique was given last week by one of the better known radio comedians about a friend. "His biceps are merely herds of goo and his arms, bull whips with hands on the ends."

ED HANLON announces that he will play any popular record in his repertoire for the same price as the record player in the Pie Shop. For friends and on special occasions, such as holidays, he will play them free.

Many mournful wails have been described in fiction and in fact but in my experience no wail is more mournful than that of a knock rummy player when he is on the minus side of the ledger and has just been dealt a handful of spots and face cards.

A THOUGHT

(on St. Valentine's Day)

O, Fear, (you unbegotten son of War!)
Encircling lowly man in clouds of doom,
Who shroud our earth as on dark wings you soar
And take delight in nourishing stark gloom,
With which you stifle laughter yet unborn
And stuff each flame of hope with rank despair,
Then view your prey left barren, cold, and shorn,
To sound such hellish glee from your black lair,
Ha! Today I laugh, I mock, defy
Your torturing wiles and all your ill-famed ways,
For long and loud I'll raise a jubilant cry
And sing in voice inspired of love's sweet praise.
Today your reign is through, I dare to boast;
"Long live love!" That is my toast.

DEDICATION

The present issue is respectfully dedicated to the memory of the Very Reverend Francis E. Tourscher, O. S. A.

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

EVERY month 17,000 German refugees are entering the United States, normal quota restrictions not being enforced. France and Russia have stopped all immigration from Germany. Although England allows them to enter her country, she has made it clear that England must only be a temporary haven before they continue their journey elsewhere.

Now established in the United States are numerous agencies that secure homes and positions for these unfortunates. It is a reason whether the undoubted contribution of outstanding emigrants overbalances the loss in job opportunities and consequent additions to relief rolls faced by American citizens. Is it fair that the United States bear the brunt of this emigration?

CONFUSERS CONFUSED

LAST week the so-called Loyalist forces asked for peace. Barcelona has fallen. Perhaps in the near future the mighty war of fratricide will cease and the Iberian peninsula will once more return to the victorious peace of Christ the King. The result was inevitable.

In this country a prejudiced press and stupid cacklings of so-called intellectuals in our better known universities convinced the greater part of the American people that the war was being waged between the forces of Democracy and Fascism.

These parlor pinks in their supercilious campus columns went so far as to demand that the United States withdraw her neutrality and lift the embargo on Spain. Fortunately, Franco worked faster than our rah-rah boys who would have the United States lured into a mighty war against Spain—True Spain.

Well now it is over, and we of Villanova rejoice. We tell the world that Franco's victory is our victory and the victory of all right thinking religious democratic people. Spain will return to her former Catholic glory. Christ will once more reign over all of Castile and the campus agitators had better return to the time of the raccoon coat and feathers for their brief excursion into the land of international affairs was a complete failure.

Franco, we salute you! Long live Spain. Long live Christ, the Prince of Peace.

GOOD BUSINESS?

CURRENT inflation of jingoism by press, radio, and screen is topped this week by the sponsoring of National Americanism Week by the Chambers of Commerce. The brand of Americanism achieved by high pressure advertising is an unhealthy nafietal egotism ringing reminiscently of the preparation for the World War slaughter. The essence of Americanism, political equality, economic and social opportunity, and religious freedom, is fostered by a loyalty engendered by its benefits and obligations as experienced in day-to-day living and working—not by speeches, singing, posters, and flag waving.

MAY HIS SPIRIT LIVE ON

PIUS XI came to the Throne of Saint Peter as the able successor to Pope Benidict XV in 1922. He was greeted by the severed diplomatic relations of the Vatican and a world slowly emerging from the battlefields of the World War.

Immediately upon his ascension to the throne it was seen that the Papacy was once more to renew friendly relations with Italy. The Pope was no longer to be the "Prisoner of the Vatican." In 1929 a Concordat was signed and the Pope, after 59 years, entered the city of Rome.

Brilliant success with the pen brought, in forceful prose, 30 encyclicals, the greatest number written by any Pope in modern times. They were on timely subjects and of varied interests in the philosophy of the Church. "Render to Ceasar the things that are Ceasar's, and to God the things that are God's."

His throne he leaves in greater importance, and yet at a period unstable and threatening. His last words even now questioned "Let there be peace," or "there are so many things to be done" have merit and forethought.

SO SORRY

YOUNG ladies of neighboring collegiate institutions are utterly disappointed with the failure of our men to accept their most cordial invitations to a Valentine Festival. The proposed fete was to revive the kindergarten custom of dropping Valentine cards into a box and drawing them out in pairs, whereupon the two individuals whose cards were drawn together, would be obliged to invite one another to respective college socials.

The Villanova P. O. has announced with regret it has had no occasion to employ extra workers. Ye Olde Sweete Shop has reported no increase in sales. Are the men of Villanova College so concerned with their studies that they dare risk their social reputations? We remind you that "Work and no play make Jack a dull boy" and sincerely hope that there will be no further occasion to bring such matters to the attention of the student body.

Life, Literature And Christ

By

Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., M. A.

Indulge me, you who read, while I begin this monologue by making what, from the standpoint of psychology is a very bad mistake.

One should never introduce in support of one's view a quotation which is not definite and pointed. Yet, for the life of me I can't think who it was who said or where it was I read what I want to tell you about my way of introduction to what I want to say. I do remember that it was said by the type of man who would be terribly hurt if he knew that someone who read what he said, forgot it was he who said it.

Anyhow, the unknown whom I quote indirectly was giving off for publication some very serious views about what the college curriculum calls "English." In stressing the oft stressed fact that English was not only for the English class, he made many of the usual pertinent remarks, laying chief emphasis on the intimate nature of the things we say or write or read. He described how our every spoken or written word is a reflection of our inner personality, how the things we read influence our thought and become elements (however infinitesimal) of that same inner personality. He played upon this relation between English and self, English and expression, English and personality, English and philosophy of life. When one writes one gives expression to the inmost products of one's mind. When one reads one communes with the deeper minds who have weighed the problems of life. "English, in short, is an intensely personal thing," he went on. "English is me."

I stopped there. I didn't quite get the point. One thing was clear, though, he surely had the "high seriousness" angle toward Life and literature. He recognized the connection between literature and philosophy of life. Nothing influences my philosophy of life so much as what I read; nothing shows it so much as what I write.

It is exactly on the question of philosophy of life that the Catholic boy in college differs from all others in college. If his philosophy of life is not different from theirs he has no good reason for not being at their kind of college All Catholic colleges have their reason for existing in the fact that the Catholic philosophy of life is well, let us say, unique: unique in the sense that it realizes the fact that no mere philosophy is enough; unique in the sense that it realizes there is more to life than philosophy. It leaves room for the super-philosophical Christ, and Redemption, and Grace.

This being understood, and taking for granted the intimate bond between life and literature as stressed by our unknown stresser two paragraphs ago, let us look at English literature as colleges know it.

Practically all universities—Oxford is one great exception—began their obligatory history of English letters (reflections of English philosophy of life, don't forget) with Chaucer. They do this prompted by a fine sense of what constitutes a unity. They realize that there are two English literatures: one, pre-Reformation; the other, post-Reformation; or, to put it bluntly, one, Catholic; the other, non-Catholic. It is the non-Catholic stuff which is prescribed for our study. The chief authors in the list do not stand for, and their writings do not spring from, an attitude of life anything like ours.

Where is Christ in Shakespeare, Milton, Dryden (in his younger days) Donne, Swift, Wordsworth, Collins, Burns, Keats, Shelley, Byron, Browning, Dickens? These men simply do not view the world with a line of vision parallel to ours. Where their views coincide with ours, it is merely a coincidence of ubiquitous meanderings crossing and recrossing a direct track. If we read (as we do) in Shakespeare, Milton, Browning, etc. some noble truth of nature breath-takingly expressed, it is because for the moment they have found our way and go along it with us for some yards, but they soon leave the mapped path and branch out again into the trackless waste of unprofitable searchings.

Shakespeare has written what has been called the Bible of Human Nature. It is not a truly Christian Bible. He never handled a theme from a Christian viewpoint. Milton wrote to "justify the ways of God to Man." He forgot that some 160 years before, some had done as much of such "justifying" as His Infinite Wisdom thought fitting. The flowering of English thought immediately after the Reformation is pagan. It has been with varying degree, pagan ever since; and, in general, the further time advances from the 16th century the more Pagan English literature, as our university English departments serve it up, becomes. It will need a complete change of philosophy of life in the nations before Crashaw is rated with Donne, Thomas More with Frances Bacon,

PRESS APOSTOLATE STRIVES TO RENEW CATHOLIC ACTIVITY

Philadelphia Group Hears Rev. Francis Toomey, S. J. Speak on Activities of Committee

The month of February has been designated Catholic Press Month and, keeping in line with this idea, the Catholic Press Apostolate of Villanova College has undertaken a campaign to renew interest in Catholic Action.

The immediate aim of the Press Apostolate is the combatting of deliberate anti-Catholic doctrines. In order to carry out this plan religious pamphlets are placed in racks in churches and schools so that students and lay persons may become better fortified to combat attacks on the Catholic religion. In addition they circulate periodicals on college campuses throughout the country.

A fortnight ago a Philadelphia Press Relations Committee was organized and Father Francis Toomey, S. J. the director of the New York committee addressed the group. Father Toomey explained that the committee went about its work by scrutinizing articles found in the daily papers and, if any were found which proved detrimental to Catholic doctrine, they contacted the editor of the paper and showed him his error. They did this by first rehearsing their interview in order that they might know just what they wanted to say, requesting the editor to be honest in his interpretation of news where he had stifled the objective end.

To further illustrate his point Father Toomey pointed out that the recent Gallup Poll on "How Many People Listen to Father Coughlin" was not carried by any of the New York papers. It was here the committee sought to find out the reason for this "unforeseen" error.

The Press Apostolate of Villanova is working in close affiliation with the newly formed Press Relations Committee in Philadelphia. John Harrington, a member of the local Apostolate, was among those who attended the opening meeting in this city.

18—All Request Program.

With the inception of the second semester, the music seminar has set a new precedent in releasing a complete schedule of programs covering the remainder of the school year. Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., moderator, believes that this will arouse more interest in that peculiar type of music lover who manifests interest in some classical works but on the other hand, abhors others.

A great deal of emphasis will be placed on the composers of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. Special programs will be dedicated in their entirety to the lilting melodies of Schubert, the rhythms of Ravel, the symphonies of Beethoven, and the vividly descriptive music of Sibelius.

Following the Easter vacation the seminar will present the special requests of the various members. Featured on these presentations will be some of the more popular light works such as American folk music, operettas and arias from leading operas.

Executives Favor High School Grads Above Collegians

But "Fortune" Survey Reveals Nation's Families Believe in College Men

NEW YORK CITY—Almost half of the nation's families believe a college man has the best chance for success — but executives who do the most hiring, think the experienced high school graduate is more likely to succeed.

Fortune sampled public opinion on the question: "Which do you think has a better chance of earning a living today—a high school graduate who has four years experience, or a man just out of college?" The replies were:

High school student	34.4%
College graduate	33.4%
Depends on man and/or experience	14.8%
Experienced man better at first, college man better later	9.7%
College man gets the break regardless of merit	2.8%
Don't know	4.9%

The one big difference shown in the breakdowns of answers is geographical; while the Northeast is most inclined to believe that the callow A. B. has the passport to success, only 19.8 percent of the people on the West Coast agree.

SENIOR STUDENTS AT "TOWN HALL"

Rosemont College will play host to a "Town Hall" meeting to be held Wednesday, Feb. 15, at 3:15 P. M. The Anglo-American Alliance is the topic of discussion. Invitations have been extended to students from all the Catholic colleges in this vicinity.

Villanova will be represented in the persons of James Quigley, senior arts student, who will act as chairman. Pershing Calabro, also a senior student, will read a paper opposing such an alliance.

Thomas Delate, senior arts student, has worked with Miss Helen T. McMahon, professor of history at Rosemont in arranging details. This is the third of a series of such affairs. The others have been held at Villanova and St. Joseph's.

ANNUAL RETREAT GIVEN

At the close of the first semester, Villanova College conducted its 96th annual retreat. It was opened Monday afternoon, January 30, and closed with a Mass in the College Chapel Friday morning, February 3.

Rev. Thomas J. Rogers, O. S. A., and Rev. Robert E. McGrath, O. S. A., of the Augustinian missionary band, were retreat masters. In accordance with the usual practice separate exercises were conducted for the resident and day students.

Fr. Rogers and Fr. McGrath divided the task in such a way that they spoke to each group of students every other time.

ceeds from the fifty cents admission charge will be used to improve the Band's equipment.

Rehearsals, which have been proceeding quietly for the past several weeks, now are being intensified prior to the performance. The cast of twenty has been filled and the singers, dancers, and others have been working under their coaches as units and as a whole to put finishing touches to a well-polished show.

With all the plans definitely made, Director Passanante is publicizing the play. He has contacted the city and suburban papers and will get publicity through them as well as by distributing posters.

Passanante emphasized that the show is no revival of the old Turf and Tinsel Club, but an entirely new project. Those in charge hope that its success this year will set a precedent and lead to a similar all-Villanova production every year.

STUDENTS ADVISED 'READ NEWSPAPERS'

After a lapse of two weeks, the History Seminar was resumed on Thursday, February 9, under the direction of Dr. Hartman. The topic of discussion was the part that tradition has played in historical, constitutional and political processes.

An instance was cited in the tradition of senatorial courtesy. Roosevelt appointed Floyd Roberts as a Federal District Judge but failed to consult the two senators of the State involved. In doing this the tradition was not observed. Because the two senators thought the appointment an improper one, it was rejected by the senate.

Dr. Hartman advised keeping in close mental contact with newspapers, books, radio and motion pictures to enjoy a better understanding of both domestic and European political situations.

"Pug" Williams Gets the Rabbit Foot

We were a hundred miles from home to play our biggest out-of-town game. In the afternoon practice, Snakie Jones, our star forward, was terrible.

He couldn't put a ball through a ten-foot basket—the way he was shooting. Finally he says, "I can't help it, Pug. I left my rabbit foot home."

"Don't worry!" I told him. "I'll get you one." "No use," says he. "It's got to be that rabbit foot or I can't shoot 'em."

Then I thought of Long Distance. In five minutes I had one of Snakie's fraternity brothers on the road with the lucky hunk of fuzz.

Not that I believe in that voodoo stuff, y'understand. But it certainly works on Snakie! Personally, I'd rather depend on some scientific magic—like a Long Distance call.

Swimmers Beat Fordham After Losing Two Meets

Penn and F. & M. Win From Blue; Walt Kelley Establishes New Pool Records as Relay Teams Set College Marks

DAUGHERTY OF PENN BETTERS OLD MARK

By FRANK J. CALLAHAN

Defeating Fordham 47-27, and losing to Pennsylvania and Franklin and Marshall, the Villanova swimming team has made the most difficult opponents a thing of the past.

The Fordham meet, held last Friday at the Field House, saw the Blue natators win every first place with the exception of the 200-yard backstroke event, in which Fitzmaurice, a Villanova man, finished first but was disqualified.

The Wildcats, turning in their best aquatic performance of the season, established two college records, one for the 300-yard medley relay and the second for the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Kelley

Two weeks ago, against a talented Pennsylvania squad, the Blue mermen were not as effective as they were against Fordham. Hopelessly outspashed by the Red and Blue, the Villanova lads were submerged for the initial time this season by the score of 53-32 despite the storybook efforts of Walt Kelley, who arose from a sick bed to garner two first places and also to establish a new Villanova pool record.

Kelley

Kelley, in setting the standard, covered the century in 54 seconds, and in so doing conquered the hereto fore undefeated captain of Penn, Jack Williams.

Pennsylvania's claimant to record breaking fame was Bob Daugherty, whose effort in the 200-yard event

Kirk and Duffy Named Co-Captains For Season; Schedule Released

With the elevation of Eddie Kirk to a co-captainship the boxing team began training for its meet with C. C. N. Y. in New York on Saturday, Feb. 18. Kirk shares his post with Bill Duffy, who has been captaining the team up to this point.

City College Has Good Record

The City College boys claim one of the strongest boxing squads in the United States and up until last season lost only one meet in four years. This year they lost a close four and one-half to three and one-half match to the West Virginia punchers at Morgantown. Such men as Lubansy, Klein and Abidon represent the class of New York collegiate boxers and will be out to prove their mettle on the 18th.

All the C. C. N. Y. fighters hail from the Metropolitan district and are under the wing of Yustin Sirutis. Sirutis is an N. Y. U. alumnus and boxer who is now doing some professional boxing between his graduate classes at C. C. N. Y. His close acquaintance with the game provides him with able experience in the coaching field.

OUTSTANDING ATHLETE TO BE PRESENTED WATCH

Players and Coaches to Decide Winner of Award by Detroit Villanova Club

Communications received here from Detroit, state that the Villanova club of that city will make an award to the Most Outstanding Athlete of Villanova College at their April meeting. The recipient of the prize is to be decided by a poll of all the athletes and the coaches here at Villanova.

The award is to consist of an all expense trip to the Michigan city and the presentation there—at the meeting in April—of a gold watch suitably engraved. An effort to make this an annual affair is being undertaken.

Several well-known figures representing various fields in the sports world are expected to attend the presentation. Among these are Gus Dorais—whose Detroit U. football team was stopped by the Wildcats in Shibe Park last season—Jack Adams of the Detroit Redwings, and Charlie Gehringer of baseball fame.

MAHER AND EWELL BREAK SPRINT MARK IN PENN A. C. DASH

Penn State Star Is Credited With Victory Despite Fact of Identical Time

RELAY TEAM IS SECOND

By BILL CIREY

Turning in one of the most brilliant performances of his career, sophomore Johnny Maher helped the Villanova trackmen open their indoor season at Convention Hall in Philadelphia last Friday night.

Running in the fifty-yard dash, Johnny was judged second to Penn State's Barney Ewell who established a new world's record for the event in the astounding time of 5:1 seconds. Maher, off to a good start, came pounding down the boards a scant two or three inches in front of a field that consisted of such ranking stars as Ewell, Wilson of Princeton, and Columbia's IC-4-A champion, Ben Johnson, when in the last two strides, Barney Ewell lunged ahead of him to win in a blanket finish so close that there was no distinction of time between the first and second place men.

If Villanova is to stay in "big time" basketball, more students must get behind the team. Less than one-third of the student body went to the St. John's game; and that was the largest percentage to date. One hundred and twenty-nine, or about one-seventh of the students attended the De Paul game.

When outsiders see that the students are not going to their team's games, they conclude that the team must not have much. Consequently, the outsiders do not go. You must draw good crowds to stay with the big boys.

Let's see more of you on Friday night!

—V—

A Villanova basketball team in the Eastern Conference seems like a good idea to most of the students. It has been said that one of the present members of the league intends to withdraw from it. If this should happen, or if the number of teams in the conference should be increased, we believe that the authorities should make every effort to join.

PHIL DUNN

Relationships in one sport often lead to relationship in another. Perhaps a better football schedule would result from such an action.

—V—

A game between Villanova and La Salle should be arranged to definitely determine the city championship. However, if we beat both P. M. C. and St. Joe this week, the Blue and White has a better claim to the title than the Explorers.

St. John's Overcomes Cats By Second Period Assault

51 - 37 Is Final Score After Blue and White Leads 18 - 17 at Half; Play of Lazorchak and Krutulis Stands Out

LLOYD TOPS SCORERS WITH 15 POINTS

By HARRY MAZZEI

Two spectacular shooting St. John's Redmen named John Garfinkle and Bill Lloyd, who scored 10 and 15 points respectively, combined to send Villanova's quintet down to a 51-37 defeat in the second game of Saturday night's Convention Hall doubleheader. Johnny Krutulis and Mike Lazorchak were the outstanding Wildcat netsters, with Krutulis actually taking the spotlight away from Garfinkle as a playmaker and Lazorchak again flashing his remarkable tendency for putting the ball through the hoop, this time to the tune of 14 markers.

Cats Get Lead

Villanova spurted to an early lead as "Jolting" Johnny Krutulis netted a foul and Lazorchak caged a double-decker, but Lloyd and Garfinkle shot two rapid-fire netswishers that started the Brooklyn outfit skyrocketing to a 12-6 advantage. At this juncture Krutulis and Lazorchak swung their guns into play and as a result of steady cannonading out the St. John's margin to 15-14. Then shortly before the whistle Haggerty scored for the Redmen while Yunt and Rice countered for the Main Liners to give them an 18-17 lead.

Play in the second half continued in the same fashion with the lead changing hands several times until Lloyd and Haggerty cut loose with three baskets to send the Lapchick-coached outfit out in front 27-22. Paul Nugent dropped two fouls to bring the 'Cats within calling dis-

MERULLO LEAVES SCHOOL TO JOIN CHICAGO CUBS

Varsity Shortstop Travels to Catalina Island With Team in February

Lenny Merullo, flashy shortstop of the Villanova baseball squad, left for his home in East Boston, Mass., on Jan. 30 to prepare for his trip to Catalina Island with the Chicago team of the National Professional Baseball League. The Cubs will meet in Chicago and leave for their Winter base on Feb. 22.

Before coming to Villanova, Merullo—who is 22—attended East Boston High School and St. John's Prep. He was a senior in the School of Education here. He would like to finish his education and claims he will if the opportunity presents itself.

Merullo had a very good season last year, doing a remarkable job afield and batting over .400. During the vacation he played with the Burlington club of the Northern League.

VILLANOVA QUINTET MEETS ST. JOSEPH'S

Lehigh and P. M. C. Loom as Threats to Blue Success in Active Week

By JOE BARNES

Entering upon the last lap of their 1938-39 schedule the Wildcat courtmen get down to real work this week with three battles in five nights. P. M. C.'s natty Cadets provide the opposition tonight at the Field House, followed by St. Joseph's College at Convention Hall on Friday evening, and Lehigh University's once-defeated Engineers next Saturday night in the gym.

St. Joseph's College, featuring their sensational sophomore, high-scoring Larry Kenney, provides the outstanding opponent of the week. The Crimson and Gray, notorious for their habit of "knocking off the big boys," are not trying to conceal the fact that they are pointing for Villanova. A victory over the Wildcats would be a "season saver" for the Hawks club and that is just what they are looking for.

Kenney Is Pointmaker

Larry Kenney, leading individual scorer of the Philadelphia district, has been the sensation of Philadelphia this year. In his first start as a varsity performer, lean Larry broke the Philly scoring record with 29 points. Later on in the season he smashed the Convention Hall standard with 23 points

Austin Defeats Businessmen In Intramurals

BLUES GAIN GROUND BY CLOSE VICTORIES IN TWO ENCOUNTERS

Day-Hops Stay With Leaders as Failing Gigolos Drop Into Fourth Place

BURLINGTON NEW STAR

Austin Hall's revelling rise in the ranks of Intramural basketball competition proved to be a stumbling block in the path of the pound Cats of Austin Hall as they conquered the Businessmen's quintet by a 36-29 count. Austin, who has never been known for their football, supplied the whirlwind finish by throwing in a last minute hawker, to hand the White their first loss of the second half.

Austin Leads Early

Combining a fast attack with the will-to-win, the Austin team hopped off to an early lead with Cassidy and Burlington forming the duo offense. C&F, unable to climb into their usual high-geared tactics, fell behind and at the end of the first half the score stood 20-14.

With the start of the second half, they reversed their poor showing with a better one, and closed the gap upon their opponents. Schelle and DeClark lent a helping hand and put their team in the lead. Austin then came back and tied up the score and with only one minute to play Burlington came through with the decisive basket.

C&F Had Won Five

C&F had previously beaten both Alumni and Mendel Day-hops, to extend their streak to five games. They rolled up a one-sided decision against the Greenies by beating them by 71-33. Stack and Coupe, combined to score 37 points for the White and definitely put the Alumni team out of the Intramural race. Turning back the Mendel Day-hops in their other encounter, the Businessmen put their rivals of the first half into second place, tied with Austin Hall.

Fedigan Hall, winners of the first half of the league, were sent spinning back into the second division by dropping two tilts to the Mendel Day-hops and Austin. The Day-hops beat the Maroon team by the score of 40-35, with Keating taking the scoring honors with 14 points. Austin defeated Fedigan for the first time this season with Burlington leading the 44-40 rout.

The Maroon team beat the Mendel Residents by the score of 33-31 to gain their only victory.

Day-hops Win Two

Winning two of their three games during the last two weeks the Mendel Day-hops put themselves into a tie with Austin Hall for the much disputed second place. The Grays, minus the services of Keating, who is out with an injury, lost to the C&F team by the close score of 38-36. They recorded victories over Fedigan and the last place Alumni.

Fedigan was beaten for the first time by the commuters through the fine offensive power displayed by Keating & Co. The 40-35 decision garnered by the Mendel team pushed them into the second place tie. Alumni Hall also bowed to the strong hand of Mendel but only after Abbot, the Gray's forward made the winning basket with scarcely a minute to play. Abbot was high for the night totaling 11 points while the best Alumni could do was Laskey's six points.

The Green wave of old Alumni scored their first victory of the second half by nosing out the Mendel Residents 41-40. The game was marked by many fouls and Alumni sank many of their free throws to assure a victory. Halpin was high man with nine markers.

against Colorado University. In his first ten games he scored 136 points and his average at this time is close to 15 points per game!

Other Stars

On the few nights that Kenney has bogged down, some other Hawk has starred. Early in the season it was little "Ducky" Adams and lately is has been George Huver, who played with Kenney at St. Joe Prep in Philadelphia.

Jack Loughery, a sophomore, holds down the tough spot in the Crimson line-up. He is successor to the great Matt Goukas, famed leader of the "Mighty Mites," last year's Hawk team. Ben Guziewcz and George Dambraskas complete the Hawk line-up.

The Hawks and the Wildcats first met in 1920 and relations were suspended in 1930. Between those years the two schools met eleven times with the Villanovans victorious on all but two occasions.

Cats, Meet P. M. C. Tonight

Pennsylvania Military College, 36-31 conquerors of La Salle College, promises to provide plenty of excitement at the Field House tonight. The Cadets have lost only four games this season and have piled up an impressive list of wins.

They feature tall, bashful-looking Rex Gardecki, the greatest athlete ever turned out by the Wilmington (Del.) Salesianum High School. Gardecki is one of the leading scorers in the Philadelphia district although only a freshman. Frank Spang, playing his fourth year of varsity basketball at P. M. C., is another man to be watched tonight.

Lehigh Good

Saturday's engagement with Lehigh will not be any sort of teaparty either. Up to last Monday the Engineers had lost only one game while facing the better grade of competition. The Engineers come to Villanova with an excellent record, their best team in years, and a fierce determination to square themselves for last year's defeat.

On Saturday night Lehigh stopped Swarthmore College's winning streak at 23 games when they defeated the Garnet by a 43-35 count. Feucht, Lehigh guard, amassed 16 of his team's total.

MURAL SWIMMING

The following is a summary of the events of the intramural swimming meet held in the Field House on January 19.

Yankouskas, McCabe, Dobbins and Bellew, running in that order, turned in a surprise performance by finishing second to the Georgetown team which won in the fast time of 3:29.

Leading off for the Wildcats was Pete Yankouskas who brought the baton in to McCabe a few yards behind Motzenbecker, the starter for the Hoyas, and this is where it stayed. Bill Dobbins, unable to close the gap between himself and the fleeting Hoya, however, did manage to increase his lead over Hutton who carried the baton for Catholic University, and handed the stick to anchor man Barney Bellew, who made a valiant, but vain attempt to forge ahead. Barney turned on a strong sprint to finish about thirty yards in front of the Catholic U. runner who ended up a poor third.

By creating this new record, Ewell wiped the old mark of 5.2 off the books set by J. G. Loomis at St. Louis in 1916.

Maher is hoping to avenge this hair-width defeat next Saturday night when he expects to run against Ewell again in the New York A. C. meet at Madison Square Garden. This time the dash will be sixty yards instead of fifty. Coach "Jumbo" Elliot also expects to take the mile relay team.

tance, but it was the last Blue and White bid of the evening. Within a few moments Vocke and Garfinkle led a nine-point spurge that practically gave them the ball game.

Fourth Loss of Season

From then on the boys were just going through the motions, and it was only a matter of time and what the final count would be. The 'Cats kept digging all the way, but despite their efforts were forced to go down to their fourth defeat of the year.

Earlier in the week the Blue team travelled up to Carlisle and handed the Dickinson Red Devils a 61-39 shellacking. Montgomery notched 14 points to lead the Wildcats to their highest offensive efforts of the year.

Beat Temple

Since the DePaul game, which, incidentally, saw Bobby Neu of the midwestern five set a new Convention Hall scoring mark of 24 points and also saw the Main Liners go down to a 36-29 beating, Villanova has gained victories over Catholic University, Temple, Geneva, and St. Francis. It was in the Temple game that the 'Cats reached their peak of the year, as they poured baskets through the hoops to run off with a 44-29 triumph.

In the Sportlight

THIS WEEK we give you the checker champ of Villanova the pride of North Braddock, Pa., Villanova's varsity guard, a former All-Scholastic forward, and an Education Student par-excellence. Believe it or not, fellow-Villanovans, this is all one young man, the Blond Bombshell of 125 Fedigan Hall—John Krutulis!

Johnny, the "old dependable" of Al Severance's Villanova Varsity Five (a basketball team, not an orchestra, jitterbugs!), first captured a glimpse of the solar rays on May 3, 1915. We know not much of what happened between that day and the beginning of John's high-school career, but it is safe to say that Johnny's chief occupation at that time was probably that of pulling little girls' pigtails, playing marbles, etc., just like the rest of us.

Manager Krutulis

Our "Blond Bombshell" burst upon Scott High School early in September, 1931 and immediately treked down the corridor towards the gymnasium to report to the freshman basketball team. Was John the star, you ask? No, my friends, John Krutulis, now one of the finest courtmen in the East, reported to the frosh basketballers in the capacity of MANAGER!

It wasn't until John's junior year that he became a full-fledged basketball star. Then Scott High found out what it had been missing all those years. In his first year on the team John scintillated over the courts of Pennsylvania to earn for himself a position on the All-State Scholastic team! But basketball wasn't Johnny's only activity at Scott High, for he also found time to play varsity football for the up-Staters. John's prowess on the gridiron was of the first order, but football and basketball don't mix so "Krut" forsook the gridiron and confined his activities to the court.

Graduation Day finally came (it usually does for some of us) and John bade farewell to Scott High and North Braddock. Many colleges angled for the services of this All-State courtman but John heard the call of Villanova above all. His reason for choosing V. C. for an alma mater is the Catholic environment that presents itself here.

From Boxing to Basketball

Feeling tough after taking up his abode at Villanova John reported down at the Field House and got himself a pair of gloves for fighting purposes. It seems that he was fairly successful in that year as a mittman, at least he still has a one-piece nose! But again the call to the court reached Johnny's ears so the boxing gloves were hung up for good and Johnny joined the Severance squad.

Success came immediately. Johnny was the answer to a coach's prayer. For three years he played varsity ball for the Wildcats and has earned for himself the reputation of being the most consistent man on the Villanova team. Last season he paired with little Mike Lazorchak at forward, but this season he has been at the guard post in most games. Whether it be guard or forward Johnny is always in there as the steadying influence on the Wildcat aggregation, the man who can always be depended upon when the going gets rough.

Coaches Frosh

In the Spring when the young man's fancy turns to etc. and the basketballs are put in mothballs, John turns his attention to baseball in the capacity of Chief Assistant to "Doc" Jacobs, "Krut" is head coach of the Villanova freshman nine.

John isn't the only athlete in the Krutulis family. Quite a bit of competition comes from brother Joe, who stars in football, basketball, and baseball down at Miami University.

"Krut" also has a bit of jitterbug in him, being an ardent admirer of the "swing and sway" style of Sammy Kaye's band. Jimmy Brown, Kaye's vocalist, is a close friend of Krutulis.

Wants to Trave

When Father Burns, O. S. A., gives Johnny his Bachelorship of Education this June, he, (Johnny, not Father Burns!) intends to snare a position as a combination teacher-coach. Applications for John's services are being received at 125 Fedigan. However, before settling down to humdrum existence Johnny wants to travel throughout the world and see the beautiful girls . . . or rather sights!

For further information we refer you to the sophomore giant, 'Chick' Morris, who, being Johnny's roommate, has plenty of juicy tales to tell about the North Braddock product.

was good enough to wrest the pool record from Bob Spangler, a Franklin and Marshall freestyler. The F. & M. lad was clocked last year, at 2:42.3, while Daugherty negotiated the distance in 2:41.4.

For their third meet since the mid-term exams have been completed, the Blue squad deserted their home waters a week ago and traveled to Lancaster, where they met and were defeated by Franklin and Marshall, 46-29.

Kelley

Walt "Twin-Win" Kelley missed out living up to his nickname when he was touched out by inches in the 100-yard freestyle event. Walt did however win his pet event, the 50-yard freestyle, and in so doing set a new pool standard of 24 seconds flat. Charlie Timmens, in giving a stellar performance off the board, clinched the only other first place the Villanova lads obtained.

Basketball Sidelights

By LOU DUBINO

DON HENDERSON, much talked about Temple basketball center, is to be congratulated on his fine showing of sportsmanship. After being banished for committing four personal fouls in the annual affair between Temple and Villanova, Henderson retired to his dressing room to shower and dress. After the game was ended and Villanova was the victor, he came up the Villanova dressing room and congratulated each and every member of the squad for their fine showing.

Little do people realize Henderson's predicament. He is more than bothered by bad feet, and is in agony each and every step he takes. He doesn't practice with the team but takes the opportunity to rest. If he quits the squad he will be called a quitter and f he remains, he is called a "bum" because he cannot perform in the manner he is capable of. Perfect condition of feet and legs is an essential for all athletes. Henderson lacks this. He has the ability to play fine basketball but is hampered by his injured feet.

In an interview with some of the Dickinson students I learned the cause for the poor showing so far of the Dickinson basketball team. It seems that you have to belong to a certain fraternity before you are eligible to play on the first team. Many of the students remarked about the number of good players sitting on the bench because they belonged to the wrong fraternity. For the coach's sake I hope he can garner enough players from his favorite fraternity to find a winning combination. Personally I would do away with inter-fraternity feuds, even if I had to use the co-eds to do so. On second thought perhaps we would have inter-sorority feuds. Ho Hum! the chance to coach a non-fraternity school.

HERE and THERE

By HARRY MAZZEI

IF you were among those who witnessed the last two court contests at the Main Line Field House, you are probably still wondering just what sort of athletic endeavor was taking place at the time. There are some who contend that rugby was being played, while others insist it was a game. A few lacrosse enthusiasts vehemently argued that if a net had been draped over the top of the court it could not have been anything but box lacrosse, a game that is immensely popular in Canada at this time of the year.

We hasten to assure you that it was basketball, but not the type that the Blue team is capable of playing. Before we go any further we hasten to assure our readers (Editor's Note: which may be stretching a point) that we are not lampooning the efforts of our courtsters — or for that matter their opponents.

Harry Mazzei

Both Geneva and St. Francis have fine court squads; but they, too, have played a better brand of basketball than they exhibited to the Main Line fans.

The games were played by young men, and young men taking part in athletic competition, especially in a game as strenuous as that played on the hardwood, are apt to become a bit distempered if not carefully checked. Unfortunately the gentlemen in charge of the checking were rather inept on these two nights, so the young men playing the game were rather quick to take advantage of the fact. It may seem rather strange that the play of ten boys should be noticeably hampered because two men are not doing their job, but it is very true. Even those only faintly connected with athletics will readily admit of this fact.

The most glaring flaw of the week-end (and one which stood out more than the red lights on the baskets) was committed in the St. Francis game when the following incident occurred. Villanova's Montgomery and Malfitano of the visitors were indulging in a little push and pull in the middle of the court with the ball not even within 15 feet of them, when one of the whistle-tooters perceiving their action sounded his whistle and instead of punishing the grapplers called for a jump-ball.

The officiating which we are referring to is part of the Philadelphia coaches' movement to replace age with youth in refereeing circles. This is a commendable move and one which should be highly praised; that is we should praise it, if the move is carried out judiciously. Age should be substituted for by skill, but never merely by youth. Of course, we realize that even the best of the basketball middiemen have their "off" nights, but the same sins twice in a row are not to be pardoned.

This and Data: Johnny Maher, sophomore sprint star, is finding this a far form restful Winter. Instead of hibernating during the Winter, Maher has rigged out an extensive sprint schedule for himself. The former West Catholic "Whiz" has already taken part in the Millrose games and the Penn A. C. meet, and he still has the New York A. C., the K. of C. and the indoor N. A. A. U. (National Amateur Athletic Union to you) contests coming up. All of Johnny's running, save the Penn A. C. meet, will take place on the boards of New York's Madison Square Garden.

Dan Parker of the New York Daily Mirror recently stated that Jimmy Blumenstock, Fordham's outstanding freshman gridder, was dissatisfied with the Rose Hill institution and was contemplating entering these halls of learning. We wonder!

Recently overheard: At one of the basketball games one spectator commented to another that basketeer Bill Sinnott was becoming anaemic because he did not "pink up" as quickly as usual. However, Bill responded within a few minutes and assumed his crimson exterior much to the relief of said spectator.

DISCUSS DETERMINANTS

The possibilities of holding future meetings in the newly-renovated Simpson Hall were discussed at the meeting of the Mathematics Club in Room 308 Mendel yesterday. Aside from this the main feature of the meeting was an open discussion by all the members of various mathematical problems.

Bernard Kelly read a paper on "Determinants" at the first meeting of the club since before the examinations in Room 210 Mendel on Monday afternoon, February 6. In this paper Kelly developed the subject introduced by Thomas Junker at an earlier meeting. All the club members joined in a discussion of what he had said.

"Engineering Economics" Featured Air Conditioning Discussion in Issue

The "Villanova Engineer" made its first appearance under its new staff in the January issue, with Co-Editors Joseph A. Gallagher and Clement F. Dinon, both juniors in the School of Engineering, as the leading officers.

"Engineering Economics," by Mr. John A. Oakey, M. S., Assistant Professor of Engineering, was featured, while other articles described the new Metallography Laboratory, recent developments in air conditioning, and problems encountered in sewage construction.

MECHANICS AT DINNER

The Society of Automotive Engineers held a dinner and meeting at 6:30 and 8:00 respectively last Wednesday evening, February 8, at the Engineers' Club at 1317 Spruce St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Pictures of intramural groups and various organizations will be taken for the Belle Aire if weather is favorable on Thursday, February 16. Notices of the time and place of each picture will be posted on all bulletin boards throughout the school.

Villanova In Mourning Over Passing Of His Holiness Pope Pius XI

According to the letter of the Constitution of the Augustinian Order, upon the death of a Sovereign Pontiff a Mass is to be celebrated for the repose of his soul. Following this explicit law, the clerics of Villanova College joined in offering a Solemn High Mass on Saturday, February 11, for this purpose. The Mass at 9:30 oclock followed the recitation of the Divine Office. The Very Rev. John Farrow, O. S. A., Prior of St. Mary's Hall, was the celebrant, while the Rev. B. M. Albers, O. S. A., vice president of the college, was Deacon and the Rev. M. Milanese, O. S. A., of St. Mary's Hall, was Sub-Deacon. The Master at the Mass was the Rev. J. J. Anderson, O. S. A., Master of the Professed. The College Chapel of Villanova was the ecene of this tribute to the memory of one of Catholicism's greatest figures of modern times, Pope Pius the Eleventh.

many books and magazines on the saint.

Among the other positions which he held, Father Tourscher was secretary to the American Catholic Historical Society, prior of St. Mary's Hall, the secretary of the Province of St. Thomas, and confessor and spiritual adviser to nuns in the various convents of the Archdiocese. He also held the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology.

He is survived by his sister, Mrs. John Wright, of Dushore, and three nephews.

Funeral services were held at Villanova on February 3 at 10 A. M. with Solemn Requiem Mass.

MENDEL EDITORS ASSIGN ARTICLES

"Heavy Hydogen," an article by Anthony Petril, and "A Biographical Sketch of Paul Ehrlich" written by Alfred Bongiovanni ,and Edward Steinhardt will be featured in the next issue of the Mendel Bulletin.

John H. Kolmer has prepared a treatise on the Gruber-Widall agglutination reaction. This is a famous test for the bacillus typhosus. Experiments of this type require a great deal of individual reseach and accuracy.

Bernard J. Miller, chairman of the editorial board, announced that, in keeping with the policy inaugurated this year, the articles will be written in a familiar style so as to make them at the same time both scientific and interesting.

PRIEST ADDED TO FACULTY

Services of a new teacher, Rev. Charles J. McFadden, O. S. A., were gained at the beginning of the second semester. Father McFadden is now conducting Junior Religion classes in order to give Father Boyle more time for his Chaplain duties.

Father McFadden took his A. B. at Villanova and his M. A. and Ph. D. at Catholic University in Washington. He has a dominate interest in Communism, taking his doctorate with a dissertation on Marxism. Since June he has added to the work and it will come out in the near future in book form under the title of "Philosophy of Communism."

"They Never Learn," a musical comedy written and directed by students of Villanova, will be presented at the college field house this evening at 8:30 P. M. Both play and musical score are entirely original and are being staged for the first time.

Bartholomew Passanante, together with the writers, William J. Ward and Lawrence C. Knaphle, has been directing the play in the rehearsals for the past two weeks, and a good showing is anticipated.

The play, remaining true to its name—"They Never Learn," is a comedy with an added musical touch. Several humorous situations are developed, all of which depend upon the main theme of the show—the overthrow of school officials by students who take control and run the institution as they see fit.

John Bullen, a part portrayed by Bill Dobbins. Will Doochy and Otto Kamph, enacted by Wytold Kryswicki and Joseph Bock, respectively, are the principal characters of the play. Bullen is a meek man in favor of more diplomatic means of handling affairs while Doochy and

Anglo-Americanism Collegian Topic At Rosemont 'Town Hall' Meeting

Students from the various Catholic colleges in this vicinity were entertained by Rosemont College in a "Town Hall" meeting on Wednesday afternoon, February 15, at 3:30. The topic of this conference was, "Resolved that the United States should form an alliance with Great Britain for the promotion of world peace."

Miss Shanahan, president of the debating society at Rosemont College, introduced James Quigley, Villanova, who acted as chairman for the rest of the meeting. Miss Eleanor Kenny, also of Rosemont, read a paper describing the background of the question to be discussed. Following this John Kerrigan, Saint Joseph's College, and Pershing Calabro, Villanova, read papers on the subject — presenting and analyzing the different view points which were to be considered. The former approved of the alliance, while the latter supported the negative sice of the issue.

A general discussion then ensued which enabled the remaining representatives to voice their opinions on the subject. Charles Krull, Saint Joseph's; Miss Carr, Rosemont, and several others of the same school supported the affirmative side, while Thomas Delate and John Parsons, Villanova, and Mr. Deasey, Saint Joseph's, together with Katherine Mahoney and Mary Katherine Schubert, of Chestnut Hill College, opposed the question. Foremost among these speakers were Thomas Delate, Charles Krull and Mr. Deasey.

Approximately a hundred people listened to the discussion which lasted for two hours. At its termination the negative supporters were rewarded with a decisive victory by the vote of the audience.

Librarian Suggests Books To Be Read In Lenten Season

D.; "International Relations from a Catholic Standpoint," by Joseph J. Delos; "Benjamin Franklin," by Carl Van Doren; and "A Catalogue of Novels and Tales by Catholic Writers," by Rev. Stephen J. Brown, S. J.

Recommended also are recent additions that were selected and reviewed by the "News Letter" of the Catholic Book Club. Some of these works are:

DEAN PRAISES ARTSMEN

Father Burns Records Lowest Number of Failures in Recent Years

In recognition of their scholastic work during the first semester the students and faculty of the School of Arts were recently congratulated by the Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., Dean.

This felicitation was extended in view of the fact that only four failures were recorded during the past marking period. A comparison with other years will best indicate the good work accomplished by this school during the past semester.

Beginning with the year 1934-35, and ending with 1937-38 inclusive, eleven, 21, 14, and 18 failures were recorded for each respective semester.

REPRESENTATIVES AT MASS

Five senior members of the Student Council represented Villanova at the Solemn Requiem Mass for the repose of the soul of Pope Pius XI at the Cathedral last Friday morning.

Thomas J. Carbine, A. Norman Klein, Francis J. Mozzi, Thomas J. Schaedler and William J. Ward made up the Villanova delegation.

The eulogy for the late Pope was delivered by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen, Ph. D., of the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C.

Representatives of all the local colleges, priests from every parish, and members of every religious order in the diocese were in the congregation that filled the Cathedral.

Admission was by special tickets, Monsignor John J. Bonner, Diocesan Superintendent of Schools, sending the tickets for Villanova students through Rev. E. V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college.

REVIVE OPEN HOUSE AFTER TWO YEARS; PARENTS AS GUESTS

May 1 and 2 Set as Date; Event Combined With Junior Week Activities

FEATURE STUDENT EXHIBIT

Open House will be conducted this spring, according to a decision of the administration. Monday and Tuesday, May 1 and 2 are the dates chosen for the affair. During this time the school will be entirely open to the inspection of interested persons.

Paetrus F. Banmiller, registrar, is general chairman and he has expressed the wish that "all students will co-operate to make it an outstanding success."

Further, Mr. Banmiller said, "Invitations are especially extended to all prospective students and their parents but any one interested in the college is cordially welcome." No student chairman of the activity has as yet been appointed. The activities will include practical experiments in all the laboratories, regularly scheduled concerts by the symphonic band, and recitals by the Glee Club. A display showing the construction and make up of the VILLANOVAN will be presented in the VILLANOVAN office.

Festivities will be opened with the annual Mother's Day celebration on Monday, May 1, under the direction of Robert O'Brien. The junior class will be hosts. A special program will be arranged for the guests who attend in the amphitheater in Mendel Hall. Following this they may tour the entire building at their discretion.

Mother's Day will be the first of the many activities of Junior Week and according to Chairman O'Brien they promise to be very successful.

The yearly attendance of over 2000 has always encouraged those in charge and an equal number or better should prove very gratifying.

A faculty committee will be formed to work together with Mr. Banmiller and the student committee in order to insure success.

Held in 1936 and '37 the affair attracted a yearly attendance of over 2000.

COLLEGE YEARBOOK BRIGHTENS PHOTOS FOR SENIOR SECTION

Reports From Staff Reveal Nature of Several New Features of Belle Air

An autograph in white ink engraved on each individual picture of members of the graduating class will feature the senior section of the 1939 Belle Air according to a general plan being put into effect by Bernard McHenry, editor-in-chief. This is the first time the photographs have been given such special consideration.

Another new feature is the make-up of the senior section. Pictures are arranged vertically along the outer edge of the page. On each page in addition to the three pictures are write-ups peculiar to each in separate columns. This division, pronounced by College Editor Thomas Carbine the finest ever, has been completed.

Energy of the staff is now concentrated on building the social life section. Efforts are being made also to include bigger write-ups of faculty members than in previous years.

Advertisements are expected to equal the amount of those in the past. The appointment of a business manager for the publication will be made some time this week.

DEBATE LEHIGH

Beta Gamma, which has been quite active this month, will meet only one opponent during the coming week. A debate has been scheduled with Lehigh University for Thursday in the Mendel Amphitheatre on the question of "Pump Priming." This contest will be held at 3:30.

CATHOLIC JOURNALS OPPOSE EUTHANASIA

Manhattan Meeting Endorses Statement of Opposition to Mercy Killings

NEW YORK — Speaking for 18,000 students, the Catholic College Press Association issued the following statement:

The students express their unalterable opposition to all attempts to legalize euthanasia or mercy killing By enthanasia is here understood the deliberate termination of the life of those persons suffering from incurable disease. As proposed for immediate legalization, for example, by the Nixdorff bill drafted by the Euthanasia Society of America, euthanasia would be voluntary — that is, freely sought by the patient. Ultimately to be proposed is involuntary euthanasia, that is, death imposed upon the sufferer against his will or without his foreknowledge and after petition to state authorites by relatives or physician.

We protest that mercy killing whether by public or private agent, is an assumption of power over human life that pertains to God alone. We hold that the state has not the right and should not be given the power to take the life of a person unconvicted of capital crime. We maintain that the state has no authority whatever to license murder authorizing private agents to inflict death upon the sufferer, willing or unwilling to die.

We maintain that the state has a duty to preserve and protect the life and health of its every citizen.

To entrust power over the life of human beings to individuals or

GUILD PREPARES '39 CARD PARTY

College Clerics Pledge Assistance For Annual Spring Affair

The Augustinian Guild Card Party Committee held its first formal meeting on February 15 in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. The meetings are usually held in the field house, but this one was transferred because of other activities.

Reverend Michael O'Donnell, O. S. A., chairman of this year's affair addressed the group and informed them of the duties and aims of the organization. Several important meetings are planned for the near future.

Fr. O'Donnell also spoke to the campus clerics at a meeting held in the monastery and they pledged themselves to aid in the work.

The Augustinian Guild annually conducts a card party to raise funds to provide for seminary students of the order of St. Augustine.

LENTEN SERVICES

Rev. J. I. Boyle, O. S. A., chaplain, recently announced that there would be special Lenten Services for all resident students on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6:30 P. M. Tuesday evenings will feature special sermons to be delivered by various members of the faculty. On Thursday evenings there will be Stations of the Cross. Both of these services will be followed by Solemn Benediction.

REAL CATHOLIC ACTION

IN a recent meeting of the Catholic Missionary Society in Philadelphia the most emphasized point was the great need of concentrated action on the part of the Catholic laity to teach people not accessible to clergy the doctrines of Faith. Catholic action has long been advocated by fathers of the church, but although many zealous laymen and laywomen have responded to the call, the number is not sufficient to handle the immense task.

Cities are teeming with people, named Catholic because they have been born into the Faith, who have very little knowledge of their religion. There are thousands of Catholic children who attend public schools whose religious education has been almost totally neglected. Although it is true that Sunday schools have been established in some parishes, this not enough, for after the children have received their First Holy Communion and Confirmation, too many times they are left to shift for themselves.

The non-Catholic world has been interested in problems of this sort, but such interest is purely humanitarian, not supernatural. On the other hand, since the dual scope of the Catholic program makes it more difficult, success has been slow. Splendid work is being done in various cities; for example, in Philadelphia there are approximately 250 Catholic lay teachers working in the various centers. But this number is inadequate to handle the situation for there are thousands of children and adults who will never be approached.

We, as Catholic college students, should take special pride in such work, and, if possible, enlist our aid. There are many religious centers where help is needed right in Philadelphia. It entails only a few hours of work at night or in the afternoon to help teach those unfortunates who have not been blessed with the advantage of a Catholic education.

It is fitting that Villanova students become interested in Catholic lay work. Students interested should apply to the VILLANOVAN office for information as to where such centers are located or for organizing a class on the campus to be trained in catechetical methods.

WHAT WOULD WASHINGTON SAY?

"TIMEO Danaos et donas parentes." A much-aired subject in the newspapers is the wisdom of forming an alliance with the democracies of Europe. Would we benefit in any way from such an alliance? Would democracy be safeguarded by such a compact? How have these nations treated their former allies? Would France and Britain aid if our integrity were being molested on these shores? Pertinent questions should arise in the mind of every American citizen before he allows himself to be persuaded as to the advisability of the program advocated by the administration at Washington.

France and England both urged Haile Selassie to fight against the advancing Fascists, and even while the former Emperor was striving to make peace, he had been "sold out" by them. What happened to Austria and Czechoslovakia, whose independence these countries were sworn to protect, is history. When Japan had an avaricious eye on Manchuria, France was supposed to mediate. It did. Today Manchuria is another outpost of Japan. Both these countries were rabid in their defense of the Loyalists, yet England was among the first to recognize Franco!

Therefore, judging from past actions and knowing that it would be highly improbable that they would come to our aid, is it not the better part of wisdom to refrain from entanglements with any European nation. Democracy is sacred, but it will not stand under such treatment. The United States could better advance the cause by tending to its own business and striving to make our own country a better place to live in. These overt actions to win our alliance are not wholesome to our national well-being.

The ancients had a good phrase for this type situation, we "fear the Greeks, even when they bring gifts."

BUILDING THE WAR FEVER

THE current attitude in our land that the love of country is exhibited by flag-waving and anthem-singing brings to mind the methods of the European patriots. Stifle the mind by a substitution of emotional; physical demonstrations for clear thought. Herd the thoughtless into a sty. Fatten the hog for the kill. The Europeans have used this system with reasonable success.

Whose idea was it to play the national anthem in our theaters? To produce unwieldy patriotic plays of questionable merit? To stress military preparedness in every other motion picture? Surely the public did not request these and other sign posts of a planned propaganda campaign.

The bitter results of our last patriotic attempt to make Europe safe for democracy still rankles in the memories of the thoughtful. Those thoughtful few realize that true patriotism reveals itself through the mind, not the body. The politicians know this; that is why they stimulate the physical properties of man. The sooner the statesmen discover the truth of this fact, the better.

Lingua Latina Pulchra Est

By John E. Bresnahan, O. S. A., M. A.

DEVOTEES of Latin study have been on the defensive for these several years past, though they should not have had to be. Defense, however, is a natural consequent when the claims of those in rightful possession are questioned and attacked.

If we were concerned here merely with a defense for Latin, I know that I could fairly swarm this text with favorable quotation from educators of very reputable authority. The value that lies in Latin—as a key to treasures of history and culture, for instance, or as a mental discipline or a basis for other language study—is a value that no sane educator will question. But the fact of universal education for youth of high-school age, together with the theory of adaptive (elective) curriculum, has done much toward striking Latin study a staggering blow.

Educators who do lay charge against Latin are, for the most part, those who hold only that it should not be a universal requisite of the high-schol curriculum. Latin, they say, is not the sole necessary means for obtaining those results, extrinsic to Latin itself, which are so desirable as educational achievements. Contained in such statement, of course, is the inference, that if the individual student (and how often, alas, it is "the average student!") finds the subject more of hinderance than a help, then other means for obtaining the same objectives should be open to him. . . All well and good, say I, if the theory works out. But I incline strongly towards the conviction, that we have here a case where "the longest way round is the shortest way home." Latin may be comparatively hard to master (a valuable occasion for moral discipline, by the way), and it may not be the sole means necessary for obtaining the results desired, but neither of these suppositions is contradictory to the likelihood of Latin study's being the surest—and, in the long run, even the quickest—way of attainment.

But now as I reflect on what I have written up to this point, I realize that the tone of my words may seem controversial. Really, though, I feel in no way disputatious. Content with the justice of the claims for Latin, I have tried to present the case as I see it. To say that I don't feel disappointment at the ebb of the tide of education away from the sonorous that marks the haven of Latin learning, is, however, altogether another thing: there was such a harmonious blend and reflection when the tide was flush. . . One other calamity of present-day education is to me, though, a consolation and a source of hope. See to what degree the neglect of Latin and neglect of the Liberal Arts course of the college have been identified. When the Liberal Arts are neglected, there is involved a reflection on the mentality of the age. Latin, if desolate, is in good company. And the plight of the Arts course indicates that there has to be a swing of the pendulum. So, when there is. . . Well, then maybe Latin will come into its own again.

Such statements should not leave the reader with the false impression that there is little or no enthusiasm for Latin among those, comparatively few though they be, who take it as a subject for study. Anyone who has once appreciated the sonority of the Latin word and caught the rhythm of the Ciceronian "period" can hardly fail to be enthusiastic. And besides, the blend of these two features in supporting solidity that is effected by the preference of classical latinity for "the concrete term," gives a speech product that embodies a unique art. The latinist admits that his chosen tongue has not the delicacy of the Greek or of the modern French; but, on the other hand, it has a masculinity that is not to be found in either of those other two languages. That is the peculiar genius of Latin; it is the genius of the Roman people; the genius of being uncommonly strong without being cumbrous and awkward. Much more could be said along these lines, but perhaps there is to be found in Roman architecture an instance suggestive enough to make further remark unnecessary.

Have you ever seen the Roman Pantheon? perhaps the most characteristically Roman building of them all. Well, it's an odd-looking thing, when you first look at it. It seems almost crude: it's so much of a hulk; so unusual in outline. But it's anything but crude. The judgement stifles in your throat as you realize that there is a rare grace in that mass of stone—it is beautiful! See it and judge for yourself; and realize that the beauty of the Latin language is much the same.

"Liguna latina pulchra est: sicut mel in ore et auri dulcia."
(The Latin tongue is beautiful: in the mouth 'tis like honey, and 'tis sweet to the ear.)

College Chatter

By Barney Bellew

IN view of the many apparently worthless courses offered in some of our colleges at the present time, I am quoting Dr. W. H. McHugh, head of the department of Education at Villanova, on the slighting of the liberal arts.

"Education is becoming increasingly impracticable. So much so, that in most of our large colleges and universities we have every conceivable kind of course, ranging from pie baking to sewage disposal. And all offered with the excuse that they train the student to be of service to society. Service to society! Always service to society!

"In other words the individual becomes a servant to society and for that reason the so-called practicable courses might well be called the Servile Arts, the arts worthy of the slave as opposed to the Liberal Arts, the arts worthy of the free men.

"So fixed has this philosophy become that we are in grave danger of educating a nation of social slaves. Even the students have been permeated with this philosophy. If a course is not practicable, they don't want it. The liberal subjects are despised. The mind of the average student is singularly free of intellectual curiosity concerning the Liberal Arts and more particularly literature. The average students would rather be left alone in a room with a boa constrictor than with a book of poetry.

"We are degenerating into a nation of intellectual snobs. We sneer at that knowledge that we ourselves do not possess. We have forgotten the ultimate aim of living: Goodness, Truth, and Beauty."

EXPEDITION:

David Boyd, a junior in the chemical engineering school at Washington University, has been selected camera man for the Pete French Expedition to Dutch Guiana, South America. The expedition will collect birds, snakes, and monkeys for the St. Louis Zoo.

French, a noted world traveler and a St. Louis insurance executive, chose Boyd after seeing a large collection of the student's pictures taken during an extensive trip through the western part of the United States last Summer.

COLLEGE MAN'S EVOLUTION:

Frosh—I don't know.
Sophomore—I'm not prepared.
Junior—I don't remember.
Senior—I don't believe I can add anything to what has already been said. (Alabamian.)

NO FLOWERS FOR MADAME:

Members of the student council of Michigan State College ruled corsages illegal at all parties except those given by social fraternities and sororities.

The ruling goes into effect January 15, and will be enforced by a committee composed of members of the Varsity Club. Corsages will be collected from those who do not understand the no-corsage rule and will be returned after the party.

Glenn Miller Reviewed; Bea Wain Comments On New Songs

By WILLIAM J. TOY

UPON looking at my typewriter and pondering on my weekly assignment, it suddenly dawned on me that some of my readers (if any) may wish to contribute to this weekly medium of exchange. Should such be the noble intention of anyone, just drop in the office and leave your offering. So much for that.

This week your correspondent intends to bring a new and a little more interesting element to this column. Anyone interested in popular bands may find some interest in this feature.

PLEASE! MY DIGNITY!

In a recent picture now under filming, Ann Sheridan was in the midst of a bar-room brawl when she tripped over an inert body lying on the floor. The result was she reeled around several times and found herself looking at the ceiling from a very embarrassing position. This goes to show one can't always keep one's poise and dignity. Better luck next time, Ann.

P. S. The scene stayed in the picture.

REVIEW OF THE BANDS:

It was Glenn Miller who assisted Ray Noble in getting a style for his United States band to say nothing of his aid in forming the group. Miller has also done many arrangements for Benny Goodman, both Dorsey Brothers, Glen Gray, and others. When a man can keep his orchestrations so consistently fine so as to be accepted by bands of this calibre, he must be good.

Born in Clarinda, Iowa, Glenn moved to Colorado where at the tender age of fourteen he got hold of his first trombone. Since then he's done all right by himself with this instrument. His first job was with Ben Pollack's band from which he moved on to Red Nicholes outfit where he obtained a strong musical background of experience. Miller was among the first of the real swing masters when he made records with such swing aggregations as Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa and Tommy Dorsey.

Bill Toy

Glenn, a great believer in originality in music, is able to revamp old licks into modern, up-to-date arrangements but refuses to do it. He features a novel, five man sax section in which a clarinet floats on top and a brass choir of trumpets and trombones. His band hinges on certain key musicians who are, first and foremost, himself, with "Chummy" MacGregor, pianist and ace arranger, and "Tex" on the tenor sax. Vocalists are blonde Marion Hutton, sister to Betty Hutton with Vincent Lopez, and Ray Eberly. A fine arranger and a fine band!

(Note) In next week's issue, Artie Shaw will be reviewed at length. Remember, I think he played a song called "Begin the Beguine."

ATTENTION PSYCHIATRISTS:

Recent releases have it that in the first two months of the new year these songs have been written —"Coo y Coo, Jeepers Creepers, Joobalai, Frostchai, Tattooed Lady and Mexican Jumping Bean." Either the song-writers have gone crazy or are trying to cause an epidemic of tongue-tiedness in the country. Incidentally, Bea Wain, song stylist with Larry Clinton's orchestra, has been heard stating these songs will probably lead in sales for the coming year. What a life!

ODDITIES:

Apple cider with a dash of bromo seltzer has been found to look just like beer, in fact, the Hollywood moguls were seriously contemplating using it in the Nelson Eddy picture "Let Freedom Ring" soon to be filmed, but the trouble is the actors won't drink the stuff. The real reason is this has more of a kick in a different way than real beer. Incidentally, when you see all that fine sparkling ice out in movieland, don't place too much stock in its validity. It's probably cellophane.

THE COST OF FAME:

Recently Mickey Rooney was fortunate (?) enough to receive a call from a girl fan direct from London, England. However, at the end of the month, he suddenly noted an addition to his phone bill for a call to London. The charges were reversed! This same femme had also called him several times from New York by the same system. Now Mickey thinks twice before he answers the telephone.

WHO'S WHO IN FILMLAND:

Egotism: Joan Crawford holding eight oil portraits of herself.

Myrna Loy debating whether it's too early to fill her private swimming pool. (I really wouldn't know, not owning one myself.)

Maureen O'Sullivan trying to figure out how to keep the horse she sold at the home of its new owner. If always insists on returning. Can you blame it?

Wallace Beery has 5000 hours in the air in an airplane. Quite a number of hours for any man.

Introducing

By ANDREA J. D'ANGELO

IF a timid visitor would have deigned to enter the inner sanctums of the VILLANOVAN office a few months ago, he would have been startled by the confusion reigning there. It would seem that everyone was looking for a certain person. "Where's Passanante?" the editor would shout in stentorian tones. "Where is that man?" Of course, no one knew. No one knows where he gets to when he is wanted, and invariably when he showed up, the editor would try to say something fitting, but he would be curtly interrupted by the terse, "I resign!" Thus, when I was informed of the assignment to write up the career of this student, I was somewhat nonplussed, but having been imbued with the proper journalistic spirit, by the editor, I dared to elicit from him the story of his young life.

Attends Eleven Schools

Bartholomeo A. Passanante, senior science man, first saw the light of day in Boston, Mass., on August 27, 1916, but early his parents decided to emigrate to the City of Brotherly Love, where Bert started his education. But being ambitious, he achieved the somewhat incredible record of having attended eleven grammar schools by the time he had completed the sixth grade. Some of the schools he attended are: a grammar school at 12th and Wharton Sts., Philadelphia, the Edgar Allen Poe School, school in St. Louis, two others in Trenton, and the Norwood Academy, where he completed his elementary education.

In the next ten years, Bert attended only four schools. It was at Mt. St. Joseph's College in Baltimore that he began to achieve some distinction and unfold his versatile talents. No, he didn't go to college directly after finishing grammar school; he attended the prep school there. In his freshman year he played football, not on the varsity squad, however. Being interested intensely in music, he soon joined the high school band, and during his four years with that organization he played the drums, the clarinet, acted as drum major, and in the capacity of student director. He was also associated with the symphony and jazz orchestras. To show that he was not inactive in other fields. Bert worked himself up to the position of president of the C. S. M. C. chapter in the high school.

VILLANOVANS LEADER

B. A. PASSANANTE

A year after graduating from high school, he matriculated at Villanova, in the school of science. In his freshman year he began to take an active part in the extra-curricular activities of the school. He joined the band, the Villanovans, and became a member of the VILLANOVAN staff. For two years he has been the director of the Villanovans, and on various occasions has led the college band. He was also associated with the junior prom committee, and the senior ball.

Child Prodigy

At the very tender age of six, Bert Passanante began to show signs of being a child prodigy on the piano, which instrument he studied until his last year in high school. Tonight, however, he will probably reach the peak of his musical career in college, when the band presents the three-act musical comedy, "They Never Learn," which he has produced.

Not the least among his talents is his ability to argue. He will argue on anything, with anybody, at any time, and at any place — just for the sake of arguing. This ability he used to advantage in the class elections. Known as the power behind the throne, he and Krzywicki, although not running for any office, would influence many a voter to elect "their man."

A familiar figure at all the social affairs in the college, Bert takes keen pleasure in displaying the intricacies of the Terpsichorian art on the Arcadia ballroom. His ready wit, nonchalant air, and general suavity make him a popular social asset at the dances and proms.

In those moments when he needs relaxation, he turns to bridge and pinochle for diversion. A certain member of the opposite sex in West Philadelphia rounds up the list of his extra-curricular activities.

This social lion, sometimes dubbed "social wolf" by his intimates, is somewhat of a theorist also. He and Bill Ward, the other member of the "radical" duo, often get together to expand on the evils of this and that, and then go into philosophical explanations of how they would better things to create a Utopian state.

As befits the genuine artist, Bert is temperamental, almost rabid in his attempts, when he is working on something, whether it be social, musical, scientific, or otherwise. But he will not stay at one task after it is finished, abandoning it when the mood seizes him, and attempting something else with just as much vigor and energy.

Last year he introduced the "glueckenspiel," a musical instrument, into the band for the first time, and at the Manhattan game he directed the band personally, and handed the baton to the mayor on the City Hall steps.

He prefers sweet music to swing, (definitely not a jitterbug!) but he likes intricate arrangements of songs in swing. For the real aesthetic beauty, listening to classical and operatic music is his passion. As one of his friends so aptly put it, "Bert likes classical music because it appeals to his intellect; swing appeals to his emotions."

For the present his goal is the acquirement of a medical degree, whereas music will remain as a prominent part of his hobbies.

ODDS and ENDS

By Bill Garrity

I'VE BEEN ASKED by the officers of the junior class to tell the members of the class that paying their assessments will mean a lot to them. By so doing, the committee men will be able to put forth festivities for Junior Week which have been unequaled in past years.

There has been a book making the rounds of the campus entitled "Gentlemen Aren't Sissies," by Norton Hughes Jonathon. It is really something out of the ordinary and is written in such a style that you won't put it down till you've finished. Try to get hold of a copy.

St. John's really moved to Villanova en masse for the recent basketball game. Praises were heaped high for Villanova, the fellows, the environs.

Bob O'Brien and Jim Scott have been untouchable since some unthinking lasses told them they resembled John Garfield, of motion picture fame, and Pinky Tomlin, of singing fame. If only they knew!

Wayne Hughes announces to the public that his favorite song is something named "Carry On." He is looking for a good arrangement of it so that it can be played on his trumpet. "Nippy" FitzMaurice will very ably take care of the vocal.

Bob Bond has given up; he is completely disgusted. He has removed his "lip lettuce" because it didn't make him look like Errol Flynn after all. Don't worry too much Bob; I'm sure she loves you for yourself.

George Flood and Tommy Winterbottom really have a dance team there. The way they dazzle the patrons of the Greek's is something to see.

Jerry Cassidy threatens to move out on his room-mate, "Moon" Holland, if he doesn't get rid of "Trix." "Trix" just happens to be a huge, full-blodded German police dog.

Ed Malcolm was a little on the disgusted side Thursday night. It seems that Ed was all ready to dance with a very lovely girl sitting two tables from him in the Greek's when to his chagrin, he discovered she was from Bryn Mawr and didn't do those things.

John Pholeric, the "Mighty Mite" of the swimming team, was overjoyed during the past week. He was able to refuse three cup cakes after polishing off one of Louie's steak dinners.

• • •

Bill Guiteras and "Jitterbug" Frank Fitzpatrick really have something worked out for the show, "They Never Learn." Incidentally, the production is really good, without taking into consideration the short time in which rehearsals and casting had to take place.

To Fame

By ANDREA J. D'ANGELO

TO heights unknown you lift up puny man
And raise him from the level of his birth;
You cast aside all marks of race or clan
To make some men like gods upon this earth.
With outstretched hands you make man want you so,
And drive him mad if he has not your touch,
You make him turn away from friend and foe,
Your power over creatures is as such.
Why make you such fools of helpless men?
Why do you these things, O cruel Fame?
You make men great and glad 'tis true, but then,
In truth you are as fickle as a dame,
For today they are so famous and renowned,
Unknown the morrow finds them 'neath a mound.

Would democracy be safeguarded by such a compact? How have these nations treated their former allies? Would France and Britain aid if our integrity were being molested on these shores? Pertinent questions should arise in the mind of every American citizen before he allows himself to be persuaded as to the advisability of the program advocated by the administration at Washington.

France and England both urged Haile Selassie to fight against the advancing Fascists, and even while the former Emperor was striving to make peace, he had been "sold out" by them. What happened to Austria and Czechoslovakia, whose independence these countries were sworn to protect, is history. When Japan had an avaricious eye on Manchuria, France was supposed to mediate. It did. Today Manchuria is another outpost of Japan. Both these countries were rabid in their defense of the Loyalists, yet England was among the first to recognize Franco!

Therefore, judging from past actions and knowing that it would be highly improbable that they would come to our aid, is it not the better part of wisdom to refrain from entanglements with any European nation. Democracy is sacred, but it will not stand under such treatment. The United States could better advance the cause by tending to its own business and striving to make our own country a better place to live in. These overt actions to win our alliance are not wholesome to our national well-being.

The ancients had a good phrase for this type situation, we "fear the Greeks, even when they bring gifts."

BUILDING THE WAR FEVER

THE current attitude in our land that the love of country is exhibited by flag-waving and anthem-singing brings to mind the methods of the European patriots. Stifle the mind by a substitution of emotional; physical demonstrations for clear thought. Herd the thoughtless into a sty. Fatten the hog for the kill. The Europeans have used this system with reasonable success.

Whose idea was it to play the national anthem in our theaters? To produce unwieldy patriotic plays of questionable merit? To stress military preparedness in every other motion picture? Surely the public did not request these and other sign posts of a planned propaganda campaign.

The bitter results of our last patriotic attempt to make Europe safe for democracy still rankles in the memories of the thoughtful. Those thoughtful few realize that true patriotism reveals itself through the mind, not the body. The politicians know this; that is why they stimulate the physical properties of man. The sooner the statesmen discover the truth of this fact, the better.

Lingua Latina Pulchra Est

By John E. Bresnahan, O. S. A., M. A.

DEVOTEES of Latin study have been on the defensive for these several years past, though they should not have had to be. Defense, however, is a natural consequent when the claims of those in rightful possession are questioned and attacked.

If we were concerned here merely with a defense for Latin, I know that I could fairly swarm this text with favorable quotation from educators of very reputable authority. The value that lies in Latin—as a key to treasures of history and culture, for instance, or as a mental discipline or a basis for other language study—is a value that no sane educator will question. But the fact of universal education for youth of high-school age, together with the theory of adaptive (elective) curriculum, has done much toward striking Latin study a staggering blow.

Educators who do lay charge against Latin are, for the most part, those who hold only that it should not be a universal requisite of the high-schol curriculum. Latin, they say, is not the sole necessary means for obtaining those results, extrinsic to Latin itself, which are so desirable as educational achievements. Contained in such statement, of course, is the inference, that if the individual student (and how often, alas, it is "the average student!") finds the subject more of hinderance than a help, then other means for obtaining the same objectives should be open to him. . . All well and good, say I, if the theory works out. But I incline strongly towards the conviction, that we have here a case where "the longest way round is the shortest way home." Latin may be comparatively hard to master (a valuable occasion for moral discipline, by the way), and it may not be the sole means necessary for obtaining the results desired, but neither of these suppositions is contradictory to the likelihood of Latin study's being the surest—and, in the long run, even the quickest—way of attainment.

But now as I reflect on what I have written up to this point, I realize that the tone of my words may seem controversial. Really, though, I feel in no way disputatious. Content with the justice of the claims for Latin, I have tried to present the case as I see it. To say that I don't feel disappointment at the ebb of the tide of education away from the snobbish that marks the haven of Latin learning, is, however, altogether another thing: there was such a harmonious blend and reflection when the tide was flush. . .One other calamity of present-day education is to me, though, a consolation and a source of hope. See to what degree the neglect of Latin and neglect of the Liberal Arts course of the college have been identified. When the Liberal Arts are neglected, there is involved a reflection on the mentality of the age. Latin, if desolate, is in good company. And the plight of the Arts course indicates that there has to be a swing of the pendulum. So, when there is. . . Well, then maybe Latin will come into its own again.

Such statements should not leave the reader with the false impression that there is little or no enthusiasm for Latin among those, comparatively few though they be, who take it as a subject for study. Anyone who has once appreciated the sonority of the Latin word and caught the rhythm of the Ciceronian "period" can hardly fail to be enthusiastic. And besides, the blend of these two features in supporting solidity that is effected by the preference of classical latinity for "the concrete term," gives a speech product that embodies a unique art. The latinist admits that his chosen tongue has not the delicacy of the Greek or of the modern French; but, on the other hand, it has a masculinity that is not to be found in either of those other two languages. That is the peculiar genius of Latin; it is the genius of the Roman people; the genius of being uncommonly strong without being cumbrous and awkward. Much more could be said along these lines, but perhaps there is to be found in Roman architecture an instance suggestive enough to make further remark unnecessary.

Have you ever seen the Roman Pantheon? perhaps the most characteristically Roman building of them all. Well, it's an odd-looking thing, when you first look at it. It seems almost crude: it's so much of a hulk; so unusual in outline. But it's anything but crude. The judgement stifles in your throat as you realize that there is a rare grace in that mass of stone—it is beautiful! See it and judge for yourself; and realize that the beauty of the Latin language is much the same.

"Lingua latina pulchra est: sicut mel in ore et auri dulcis."
(The Latin tongue is beautiful; in the mouth 'tis like honey, and 'tis sweet to the ear.)

College Chatter

By Barney Bellew

IN view of the many apparently worthless courses offered in some of our colleges at the present time, I am quoting Dr. W. H. McHugh, head of the department of Education at Villanova, on the slighting of the liberal arts.

"Education is becoming increasingly impracticable. So much so, that in most of our large colleges and universities we have every conceivable kind of course, ranging from pie baking to sewage disposal. And all offered with the excuse that they train the student to be of service to society. Service to society! Always service to society!

"In other words the individual becomes a servant to society and for that reason the so-called practicable courses might well be called the Servile Arts, the arts worthy of the slave as opposed to the Liberal Arts, the arts worthy of the free men.

"So fixed has this philosophy become that we are in grave danger of educating a nation of social slaves. Even the students have been permeated with this philosophy. If a course is not practicable, they don't want it. The liberal subjects are despised. The mind of the average student is singularly free of intellectual curiosity concerning the Liberal Arts and more particularly literature. The average students would rather be left alone in a room with a boa constrictor than with a book of poetry.

"We are degenerating into a nation of intellectual snobs. We sneer at that knowledge that we ourselves do not possess. We have forgotten the ultimate aim of living: Goodness, Truth, and Beauty."

EXPEDITION:

David Boyd, a junior in the chemical engineering school at Washington University, has been selected camera man for the Pete French Expedition to Dutch Guiana, South America. The expedition will collect birds, snakes, and monkeys for the St. Louis Zoo.

French, a noted world traveler and a St. Louis insurance executive, chose Boyd after seeing a large collection of the student's pictures taken during an extensive trip through the western part of the United States last Summer.

COLLEGE MAN'S EVOLUTION:

Frosh—I don't know.
Sophomore—I'm not prepared.
Junior—I don't remember.
Senior—I don't believe I can add anything to what has already been said. (Alabamian.)

NO FLOWERS FOR MADAME:

Members of the student council of Michigan State College ruled corsages illegal at all parties except those given by social fraternities and sororities.

The ruling goes into effect January 15, and will be enforced by a committee composed of members of the Varsity Club. Corsages will be collected from those who do not understand the no-corsage rule and will be returned after the party.

Glenn Miller Reviewed; Bea Wain Comments On New Songs

By WILLIAM J. TOY

UPON looking at my typewriter and pondering on my weekly assignment, it suddenly dawned on me that some of my readers (if any) may wish to contribute to this weekly medium of exchange. Should such be the noble intention of anyone, just drop in the office and leave your offering. So much for that!

This week your correspondent intends to bring a new and a little more interesting element to this column. Anyone interested in popular bands may find some interest in this feature.

PLEASE! MY DIGNITY!

In a recent picture now under filming, Ann Sheridan was in the midst of a bar-room brawl when she tripped over an inert body lying on the floor. The result was she reeled around several times and found herself looking at the ceiling from a very embarrassing position. This goes to show one can't always keep one's poise and dignity. Better luck next time, Ann.

P. S. The scene stayed in the picture.

REVIEW OF THE BANDS:

It was Glenn Miller who assisted Ray Noble in getting a style for his United States band to say nothing of his aid in forming the group. Miller has also done many arrangements for Benny Goodman, both Dorsey Brothers, Glen Gray, and others. When a man can keep his orchestrations so consistently fine so as to be accepted by bands of this calibre, he must be good.

Born in Clarinda, Iowa, Glenn moved to Colorado where at the tender age of fourteen he got hold of his first trombone. Since then he's done all right by himself with this instrument. His first job was with Ben Pollack's band from which he moved on to Red Nicholes outfit where he obtained a strong musical background of experience. Miller was among the first of the real swing masters when he made records with such swing aggregations as Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa and Tommy Dorsey.

Bill Toy

Glenn, a great believer in originality in music, is able to revamp old licks into modern, up-to-date arrangements but refuses to do it. He features a novel, five man sax section in which a clarinet floats on top and a brass choir of trumpets and trombones. His band hinges on certain key musicians who are, first and foremost, himself, with "Chummy" MacGregor, pianist and ace arranger, and "Tex" on the tenor sax. Vocalists are blonde Marion Hutton, sister to Betty Hutton with Vincent Lopez, and Ray Eberly. A fine arranger and a fine band!

(Note) In next week's issue, Artie Shaw will be reviewed at length. Remember, I think he played a song called "Begin the Beguine."

ATTENTION PSYCHIATRISTS:

Recent releases have it that in the first two months of the new year these songs have been written —"Coo y Coo, Jeepers Creepers, Joohalai, Prostchai, Tattooed Lady and Mexican Jumping Bean." Either the song-writers have gone crazy or are trying to cause an epidemic of tongue-tiedness in the country. Incidentally, Bea Wain, song stylist with Larry Clinton's orchestra, has been heard stating these songs will probably lead in sales for the coming year. What a life!

ODDITIES:

Apple cider with a dash of bromo seltzer has been found to look just like beer, in fact, the Hollywood moguls were seriously contemplating using it in the Nelson Eddy picture "Let Freedom Ring" soon to be filmed, but the trouble is the actors won't drink the stuff. The real reason is this has more of a kick in a different way than real beer. Incidentally, when you see all that fine sparkling ice out in movieland, don't place too much stock in its quality. It's probably cellophane.

THE COST OF FAME:

Recently Mickey Rooney was fortunate (?) enough to receive a call from a girl fan direct from London, England. However, at the end of the month, he suddenly noted an addition to his phone bill for a call to London. The charges were reversed! This same femme had also called him several times from New York by the same system. Now Mickey thinks twice before he answers the telephone.

WHO'S WHO IN FILMLAND:

Egotism: Joan Crawford holding eight oil portraits of herself.

Myrna Loy debating whether it's too early to fill her private swimming pool. (I really wouldn't know, not owning one myself.)

Maureen O'Sullivan trying to figure out how to keep the horse she sold at the home of its new owner. It always insists on returning. Can you blame it?

Wallace Beery has 5000 hours in the air in an airplane. Quite a number of hours for any man.

Introducing

By ANDREA J. D'ANGELO

IF a timid visitor would have deigned to enter the inner sanctums of the VILLANOVAN office a few months ago, he would have been startled by the confusion reigning there. It would seem that everyone was looking for a certain person. "Where's Passanante?" the editor would shout in stentorian tones. "Where is that man?" Of course, no one knew. No one knows where he gets to when he is wanted, and invariably when he showed up, the editor would try to say something fitting, but he would be curtly interrupted by the terse, "I resign!" Thus, when I was informed of the assignment to write up the career of this student, I was somewhat nonplussed, but having been imbued with the proper journalistic spirit, by the editor, I dared to elicit from him the story of his young life.

Attends Eleven Schools

Bartholomeo A. Passanante, senior science man, first saw the light of day in Boston, Mass., on August 27, 1916, but early his parents decided to emigrate to the City of Brotherly Love, where Bert started his education. But being ambitious, he achieved the somewhat incredible record of having attended eleven grammar schools by the time he had completed the sixth grade. Some of the schools he attended are: a grammar school at 12th and Wharton Sts., Philadelphia, the Edgar Allen Poe School, school in St. Louis, two others in Trenton, and the Norwood Academy, where he completed his elementary education.

In the next ten years, Bert attended only four schools. It was at Mt. St. Joseph's College in Baltimore that he began to achieve some distinction and unfold his versatile talents. No, he didn't go to college directly after finishing grammar school; he attended the prep school there. In his freshman year he played football, not on the varsity squad, however. Being interested intensely in music, he soon joined the high school band, and during his four years with that organization he played the drums, the clarinet, acted as drum major, and in the capacity of student director. He was also associated with the symphony and jazz orchestras. To show that he was not inactive in other fields, Bert worked himself up to the position of president of the C. S. M. C. chapter in the high school.

VILLANOVANS LEADER

B. A. PASSANANTE

A year after graduating from high school, he matriculated at Villanova, in the school of science. In his freshman year he began to take an active part in the extra-curricular activities of the school. He joined the band, the Villanovans, and became a member of the VILLANOVAN staff. For two years he has been the director of the Villanovans, and on various occasions has led the college band. He was also associated with the junior prom committee, and the senior ball.

Child Prodigy

At the very tender age of six, Bert Passanante began to show signs of being a child prodigy on the piano, which instrument he studied until his last year in high school. Tonight, however, he will probably reach the peak of his musical career in college, when the band presents the three-act musical comedy, "They Never Learn," which he has produced.

Not the least among his talents is his ability to argue. He will argue on anything, with anybody, at any time, and at any place — just for the sake of arguing. This ability he used to advantage in the class elections. Known as the power behind the throne, he and Krzywicki, although not running for any office, would influence many a voter to elect "their man."

A familiar figure at all the social affairs in the college, Bert takes keen pleasure in displaying the intricacies of the Terpsichorian art on the Arcadia ballroom. His ready wit, nonchalant air, and general suavity make him a popular social asset at the dances and proms.

In those moments when he needs relaxation, he turns to bridge and pinochle for diversion. A certain member of the opposite sex in West Philadelphia rounds up the list of his extra-curricular activities.

This social lion, sometimes dubbed "social wolf" by his intimates, is somewhat of a theorist also. He and Bill Ward, the other member of the "radical" duo, often get together to expand on the evils of this and that, and then go into philosophical explanations of how they would better things to create a Utopian state.

As befits the genuine artist, Bert is temperamental, almost rabid in his attempts, when he is working on something, whether it be social, musical, scientific, or otherwise. But he will not stay at one task after it is finished, abandoning it when the mood seizes him, and attempting something else with just as much vigor and energy.

Last year he introduced the "glockenspiel," a musical instrument, into the band for the first time, and at the Manhattan game he directed the band personally, and handed the baton to the mayor on the City Hall steps.

He prefers sweet music to swing, (definitely not a jitterbug!) but he likes intricate arrangements of songs in swing. For the real aesthetic beauty, listening to classical and operatic music is his passion. As one of his friends so aptly put it, "Bert likes classical music because it appeals to his intellect; swing appeals to his emotions."

For the present his goal is the acquirement of a medical degree, whereas music will remain as a prominent part of his hobbies.

ODDS and ENDS

By Bill Garrity

I'VE BEEN ASKED by the officers of the junior class to tell the members of the class that paying their assessments will mean a lot to them. By so doing, the committee men will be able to put forth festivities for Junior Week which have been unequaled in past years.
